START

Microfilmed By:

NORTHEAST DOCUMENT CONSERVATION CENTER
Andover, MA 01810

August 1994

Camera Operator:
Kathy Wilder

MASTER NEGATIVE NUMBER:
BSO-56-070

MICROFILMED
August 1993 - April 1994

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOK MICROFILMING PROJECT

Funded in part by

THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES

Grant No. PS-20709-93

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MICROFILMING PROJECT

A Cooperative Project Between the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives and the Boston Public Library (August 1993 - April 1994)

The Microfilming Project incorporates two collections of scrapbooks housed in two separate repositories. The first set of scrapbooks (80 volumes) resides within the Allen A. Brown Collection of the Boston Public Library (BPL) Music Department. Their call number is M.125.5. The second set of scrapbooks (132 volumes) resides within the Press Clippings collection of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (BSO) Archives. They have the designation Pres 56.

The BPL scrapbooks begin with the founding of the BSO in 1881 and continue, through 79 seasons, to 1960. Articles consist mainly of reviews and feature stories from Boston and New York newspapers. Occasionally, magazine articles and press releases are also included. The scrapbooks cover most aspects of the BSO.

The BSO scrapbooks run from 1889, the Orchestra's 9th season, to 1973. In addition to local reviews and features, the volumes contain articles culled from national and international publications. The scrapbooks document, in detail, all aspects of the BSO: The Symphony Orchestra (including subscription concerts, tours, and trips), the Boston Pops, the Tanglewood Festival, the Tanglewood Music Center, and Symphony Hall.

The two sets of scrapbooks have been filmed as two separate entities. Researchers wanting to look at specific seasons or subjects must examine both sets of films to ensure full coverage.

The scrapbooks do not represent the complete holdings of either location on the subject of the BSO.

Requests for positive microfilm copies of individual rolls, or of film sets, should be directed to the respective repository:

Music Department
Boston Public Library
Post Office Box 286
Boston, MA 02117

Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives
Symphony Hall
Boston, MA 02115

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOKS

1889 - 1973

132 VOLUMES

Source: Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives

FINDING AID

Boston Symphony Orchestra Scrapbooks (Series 56, Sub-Series 1)

Source: Press Office (Office of the Public Relations Director)

The BSO scrapbooks comprise part of one series in the BSO Archives. Series 56, Press Clippings, is divided by format into 3 sub-series: 1) Scrapbooks, 1889-1973 (132 volumes); 2) Loose Clippings, 1931-1991 (9 record cartons); and 3) Oversize Newspapers and Journals, 1919-1979 (1 oversize box). Each sub-series is arranged chronologically.

The scrapbooks contain concert notices and reviews, record reviews, and feature articles. Early scrapbooks may also contain programs, tickets, and subscription orders. Materials are organized by concert season into the following categories: BSO (including tours); Kneisel Quartet (and later Boston Symphony Chamber Players); Boston Pops (referred to in early years as Promenade concerts); and Tanglewood (including the Tanglewood Music Center, the Tanglewood Festival, Tanglewood-on-Parade, and the Fromm Festival of Contemporary Music).

Reviews and articles cover a wide range of subjects: Founder H.L. Higginson; BSO conductors, players, trustees, and other personnel; guest artists and composers; BSO and Pops performances and recordings; U.S. and overseas tours; BSO/Cecilia Society joint performances; open rehearsals; and special events connected to anniversary celebrations and fundraising.

Feature stories document changes in the size, composition, and location of the orchestra. Topics include the hiring of women and minorities; the unionization of players; controversies (such as the internment of conductor Karl Muck during World War II); the sale of the old Music Hall; and the construction of Symphony Hall and other structures (such as the Koussevitsky Music Shed at Tanglewood).

Reproductions of the materials in the collection may not be made without permission from the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives.

GUIDE TO CONTENTS

Institution: BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Series Name: PRESS CLIPPINGS
Series Number: 56
Series Dates: 1889-1991

Sub-series Name: SCRAPBOOKS
Sub-series Number: 1
Sub-series Dates: 1889-1973

VOLUME LISTING

VOL	TITLE	DATES
1	BSO	1889-1890
2	BSO
	Kneisel Quartet	1890-1891
3	BSO	1891-1892
4	Promenade (Pops)	1892
5	BSO
	Kneisel Quartet	1892-1893
6	BSO
	Kneisel Quartet	1893-1894
7	BSO
	Kneisel Quartet	1894-1895
8	BSO	1895-1896
9	Promenade (Pops)	1895-1896
10	BSO	1896-1897
11	BSO	1897-1898
12	Promenade (Pops)	1897-1898
13	BSO	1898-1899
14	BSO	1899-1900
15	Pops	1899-1900
16	BSO	1900-1901
17	BSO	1901-1902
18	Pops	1901-1903
19	BSO	1902-1903
20	BSO	1903-1904
21	BSO	1904-1905
22	Pops	1904-1905
23	BSO	1905-1906
24	BSO	1906-1907
25	BSO	1907-1908
26	BSO	1908-1909
27	BSO
	Pops	1909-1910
28	BSO
	Pops	1910-1911
29	BSO Advertisements	1910-1911
30	BSO
	Pops	1911-1912
31	BSO
	Pops	1912-1913
32	BSO
	Pops	1913-1914
33	BSO
	Pops	1914-1915
34	BSO
	Pops	1915-1916
35	BSO
	Pops	1916-1917
36	BSO
	Pops	1917-1918
37	Karl Muck	1918
38	BSO
	Pops	1918-1919
39	BSO
	Pops	1919-1920
40	BSO Advertisements	1919-1920
41	BSO
	Pops	1920-1921
42	BSO
	Pops	1921-1922
43	BSO
	BSO Advertisements
	Pops Advertisements	1922-1923
44	BSO
	Pops	1922-1924
45	BSO
	Pops	1924
46	BSO
	BSO Advertisements
	Pops Advertisements	1924-1926
47	BSO
	Pops	1925-1926
48	BSO Advertisements
	Pops Advertisements	1926-1927
49	BSO
	Pops	1926-1928
50	BSO	1928
51	BSO
	Pops	1928-1929
52	BSO
	Pops
	U.S. Tour	1929-1930
53	BSO	1930-1931
54	BSO
	Pops	1931-1932
55	BSO
	Pops	1932-1933
56	BSO	1933-1934
57	BSO	1934-1935
58	BSO	1935-1936
59	BSO	1936-1937

VOL	TITLE	DATES
60	Pops
	Tanglewood	1936-1937
61	BSO	1937
62	BSO	1937-1938
63	Pops
	Tanglewood	1938
64	BSO	1938-1939
65	Pops
	Tanglewood	1939
66	BSO	1939-1940
67	Tanglewood	1939-1941
68	BSO
	Pops	1940
69	BSO	1940-1941
70	Tanglewood	1940-1944
71	BSO	1941-1942
72	BSO	1942-1943
73	BSO	1943-1944
74	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1944-1945
75	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1945-1946
76	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1946-1947
77	Tanglewood	1947-1948
78	BSO	1947-1949
79	Tanglewood	1949-1950
80	BSO	1949-1951
81	Tanglewood	1950-1951
82	BSO
	Pops	1951-1952
83	BSO
	Pops	1952-1953
84	Tanglewood	1952-1953
85	BSO	1953-1955
86	Tanglewood	1953-1954
87	Tanglewood	1954-1955
88	BSO
	Pops	1955-1956
89	Tanglewood	1955-1956
90	Tanglewood	1955-1956
91	European Tour	1956
92	European Tour	1956-1957
93	BSO
	Pops	1956-1957
94	Tanglewood	1957
95	BSO	1957-1958
96	BSO
	Pops	1958-1959

VOL	TITLE	DATES
97	BSO	1958-1959
98	Tanglewood	1958-1959
99	Tanglewood	1959
100	BSO
	Pops	1959-1960
101	Tanglewood	1959-1960
102	Far Eastern Tour	1959-1960
103	BSO
	Pops	1960-1961
104	Tanglewood	1961
105	BSO
	Pops	1961-1962
106	Tanglewood	1962
107	BSO
	Pops	1962-1963
108	Tanglewood	1963
109	BSO
	Pops	1963-1964
110	Tanglewood	1963-1964
111	BSO
	Pops	1964-1966
112	Tanglewood	1965
113	BSO 85th Anniversary	1965
114	BSO
	Pops	1965-1966
115	Tanglewood	1966
116	BSO
	Pops	1966-1967
117	Tanglewood	1967
118	BSO
	Pops	1967-1968
119	Tanglewood	1968-1969
120	BSO
	Pops	1968-1969
121	Tanglewood	1969
122	BSO
	Pops	1969-1970
123	Tanglewood	1970
124	BSO
	Pops	1970-1971
125	Tanglewood	1971
126	BSO
	Pops	1971-1972
127	European Tour	1970-1971
128	European Tour	1971
129	Tanglewood	1972
130	BSO
	Pops	1972-1973
131	Tanglewood	1973
132	BSO
	Pops	1973-1974

MATERIALS NOT FILMED

SUB-SERIES NUMBER	SUB-SERIES NAME	SUB-SERIES DATES
2	Loose Clippings	1931-1991
3	Oversize Newspapers and Journals	1919-1979

COPYRIGHT STATEMENT

The copyright law of the Unites States - Title 17, United States Code - concerns the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or other reproduction is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research." If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that user may be liable for copyright infringement.

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copy order if, in its judgment, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of the copy-right law.

TECHNICAL DATA

IMAGE PLACEMENT: IA IB IIA IIB

REDUCTION RATIO: 14X

FILM STOCK:

REEL 70

Volumes 115-116

Tanglewood, BSO, Pops

1966-1967

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A5

A4

A3

1.0

1.1

1.25

1.4

1.6

1.8

2.0

2.2

2.5

2.8

3.2

3.6

4.0

4.5

5.0

5.6

6.3

7.1

8.0

9.0

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.0 mm

1.5 mm

2.0 mm

2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

MULTIPLE EXPOSURES DUE TO COLOR VARIATIONS

VOLUME 115

Tanglewood

1966

NATIONAL FLAT BACK SCRAP BOOKS

NATIONAL

FULL DUCK COVER, MANILA PAPER

Without Index, Ruling, Paging or Title

NUMBER	THICKNESS	SIZE
56-032	72 Leaves	12⅝ × 10¼
56-033	72 Leaves	15 × 10
56-034	100 Leaves	15 × 10
56-036	90 Leaves	16 × 11⅜
56-038	150 Leaves	16 × 11⅜
56-039	90 Leaves	18 × 13
56-041	150 Leaves	18 × 13
56-042	150 Leaves	25 × 20

To duplicate this book Order Number indicated by arrow

Made in U.S.A.

PRE-SEASON

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 175,923
FEB 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (e)
MANCHESTER, Conn.
Circ. 13,358
FEB 28 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 4,926
FEB 28 1966

Dallas Times Herald
D. 205,498 SUN. 221,016
FEB 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
FEB 26 1966

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N.Y.
D. 55,163
FEB 25 1966

The Lively Arts —

Tanglewood '66

By T. H. Parker

There is going to be more than a dash of showmanship about the Berkshire Festival this summer.

Erich Leinsdorf, musical director and conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is shaking up the format, billing new faces, and adding new acts. For example:

— The festival will open with programs by the full orchestra.

— The theme of the operation will be The Romantic Concerto.

— Five of the six guest conductors will be making their first appearance at these Tanglewood concerts.

— The Friday night concerts will begin at 9 o'clock.

— Before the Friday concerts there will be Weekend Preludes.

— And the winners of the Moscow Tschaikovsky Competition will make their American debuts at Tanglewood.

This is the general shape of things to come at Tanglewood. And fie on him who first cries "Hold, enough!" (Cf. Shakespeare.)

In more detail:

In the past, the festival has opened with Bach and Mozart programs. These will occupy the second and third weekends this time. On the first weekend, opening Saturday evening, July 2, the full orchestra will play large-scale works. And since this is the Fourth of July weekend, the programs will continue through both Sunday and Monday.

★

It is now popular to find a raison d'etre for summer programming, and in selecting The Romantic Concerto, Mr. Leinsdorf is cutting it two ways. In addition to a theme, there will be the box-office lure of a whole stable of soloists. This ploy was formerly known as One-Upmanship.

If one needs a theme, or theme song, for the roster of guest conductors, let it be that favorite, "I Wonder What Became of That Old Gang of Mine." In the past, the guest list at Tanglewood had become a veritable Establishment. But 1966 will be a summer of new faces. Included will be Sixten Ehrling of the Detroit Symphony, Seiji Ozawa of the Toronto Symphony, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski of the Minneapolis, Sir Adrian Boult, the well-known British maestro, Szymon Goldberg, who is a noted violinist, and Thomas Schippers, an alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center.

As an experiment, a later Friday-night starting hour of 9 o'clock will be tried for seven weekends to allow visitors from Boston, New York, and other cities to surmount the problems of leaving after work and still arrive on time for the regular symphony concert.

Just exactly how the other experiment of the Weekend Preludes fits in, I could not learn from the BSO news release. Mr. Leinsdorf is quoted as saying "For many years I have thought of doing such an extended or expanded concert because the composers of great variety and consequence have so many interesting compositions which do not fit a normal symphonic, recital, or chamber program. Thus these works make extremely rare appearances."

★

The news release points out that the Weekend Preludes will precede each of the seven Friday programs, and that soloists and members of the Boston Symphony in small ensembles will be heard on these events. But just what the time relationship to the main program will be other than "before," we'll have to wait to learn. Anyhow, it sounds rather mouthwatering.

At the August 13 and 14 concerts, the winners of the Moscow Tschaikovsky Competitions will be featured soloists. The prize recipients in violin, 'cello, voice, and piano will appear in their first American concerts following the competitions. The Boston Symphony Orchestra's invitation has been accepted by the competition officials. The programs will include violin and piano concerti, vocal works, and the Rococo Variations for 'cello.

In the past, Mr. Leinsdorf has ornamented the Tanglewood fare with opera in concert form. He had also dispensed with the Beethoven Ninth Symphony as a season closer. This time the customer will hit the daily double. Mr. Leinsdorf will offer a concert version of Mozart's Magic Flute, and is also restoring the Ninth to its customary niche.

These are the highlights of the 1966 Berkshire Festival. As for the regular programs, as far as I can see the fare will be pretty standard stuff. There are going to be new personalities indeed, but it looks like Old Home Week the rest of the way in.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,171
MAR 13 1966

GREENSBORO DAILY NEWS
GREENSBORO, N. C.
D. 93,567 SUN. 100,433
MAR 27 1966

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
D. [illegible]
MAR 2 [illegible]

CHICAGO DAILY NEWS
D. 494,940 SUN. 496,144
MAR 15 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 114,860
FEB 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 517,080
MAR 6 1966

Romantic Concerto Theme of '66 Tanglewood Season

The romantic concerto will be the theme of this year's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood opening on Saturday, July 2 with a concert by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Guest condutcors for this season will be Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Sir Adrian Boult, Thomas Schippers, Seiji Ozawa and Arthur Fiedler, who will lead the traditional Boston Pops appearance Aug. 3.

Soloists will include Malcolm Frager, Van Cliburn, Claude Frank, Abbey Simon, Shmuel Askenaisi, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Lillian Kallir, Leslie Parnas, Grant Johannesen, Jeanne-Marie Darre, Jorge Bolet and Mr. Goldberg.

As it has for the past several years, the festival will span eight weeks (July 2-Aug. 21) and include 24 concerts by the orchestra in the Music Shed.

Concerts this year will have an experimental starting time of 9 p.m. for seven Fridays.

The plan is to offer more time to patrons traveling to the concerts. Each of these concerts will be preceded by a weekend prelude.

★ ★ ★

THE PRELUDES will enable Tangelwood patrons to hear some of the less frequently performed music of each weekend's composer. The weekend soloists and small ensembles of Boston Symphony players will be heard at these programs.

Three concerti of Brahms will be performed on Tanglewood's opening weekend (July 2, 3, 4.)

Shmuel Ashkenaisi will be heard for the first time on July 2, performing Brahms Violin Concerto.

Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, principal cello, will play Concerto for Violin and Cello by Brahms on July 3. Abbey Simon will be soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2 the afternoon of July 4.

The festival's second and third weekend will be devoted to the music of Mozart and Bach performed by the chamber orchestra and guest artists.

★ ★ ★

ON JULY 8 pianist Malcolm Frager, returning for his fourth consecutive summer, will be soloist on Mozart's Piano Concerto in B Flat, K 450 with Erich Leinsdorf conducting. July 10 he'll play Mozart's Piano Concerto in D Major, K. 175, with Sir Adrian Boult, the summer's first guest conductor.

On the 9th Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct with Claude Frank as soloist in Mozart's Piano Concerto in C Major, K. 503.

The third weekend's program will be all Bach. Syzmon Goldberg will be guest conductor and soloist in the Violin Concerto in A Minor on July 15. The St. John Passion, with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting and Phyllis Curtin among the soloists, will be performed on the 16th. On the 17th it will be Cantata No. 55 and the Magnificat in E Flat.

On the fourth weekend guest conductor Seiji Ozawa will resume the romantic concerto theme with Mr. Ozawa, Mr. Silverstein and the orchestra performing Mendelssohn's Violin Concert on July 22.

★ ★ ★

PIANIST VAN CLIBURN will be Erich Leinsdorf's guest July 23, performing Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. On July 24, Lilian Kallir will play the Piano Concerto in F Minor by Chopin.

The festival's fifth week will be concentrated on Robert Schumann's works with Jules Eskin playing the Cello Concerto on July 29.

Miss Kallir will be heard again on the 30th in the Konzertstuck in G for Piano and Orchestra. Mr. Silverstein will play the Fantasy in C Major.

Pianist Claude Frank, who created a sensation at last year's opening concert, along with guest condutcor Thomas Schippers will perform Schumann's Piano Concerto on July 31.

Two of the Berkshire Festivals sixth week concerts will be conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony.

He will have Leslie Parnas as soloist in Saint-Saens Cello Concert on Aug. 5 and Grant Johannesen will be heard in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto on Aug. 7.

★ ★ ★

THE SEVENTH WEEK will feature the Tchaikovsky Competition's first prize winners playing the Russian composer's Violin Concerto, one of his piano concerti, Variations on a Rococo Theme for Cello and Orchestra, and music for voice and orchestar.

The final three concerts of the season will be conducted by Mr. Leinsdorf, who has invited Jeanne-Marie Darre to be his guest of Aug. 19.

Miss Darre will play two works by Liszt, the Piano Concerto No. 2 and the Totentanz.

On Aug. 20 Jorge Bolet will perform as soloist on two more Liszt compositions, Piano Concerto No. 1 and "The Ruins of Athens."

The festival will conclude on the 21st with Mr. Leinsdorf, for the first time since he became music diretcor, conducting Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

★ ★ ★

In addition to this program, a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" will be given Aug. 6. Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct the well-known opera with a large cast of singers.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
MAR 31 1966

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 49,474
MAY 25 1966

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266
MAY 21 1966

Leinsdorf Lists Programs At Tanglewood This Summer

BOSTON — Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced the complete programs for the 1966 Berkshire Festival season at Tanglewood.

Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct 17 of the season's concerts and 7 other programs will be directed by guest conductors Sir Adrian Boult, Szymon Goldberg, Sixten Ehrling, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

The opening weekend of the festival will extend through the July 4th holiday with concerts on Saturday evening at 8 and Sunday and Monday afternoons at 2:30. Concerts for the remaining seven weeks will be performed Fridays at 9, Saturdays at 8 and Sundays at 2:30.

Weekend Preludes

A weekend prelude of infrequently performed music by the weekend's principal composer at 7 p.m. will precede each of the Friday concerts. Guest artists and BSO members performing in small ensembles will be heard at the preludes. The prelude programs will be announced next month.

Tickets for the 1966 festival will go on sale Monday at the Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston. A brochure, with complete program and ticket information, is also available.

WEEK 1
Leinsdorf conducting
July
2 Wagner—Overture Tannhauser
Stravinsky—Suite from Petrouchka
Brahms—Violin Concerto
(Ashkenasi)
3 Brahms—Double Concerto
(Silverstein and Eskin)
Mahler—Symphony No. 4
(Elgar)
4 Prokofieff—Symphony No. 1, Classical Sessions—Prelude 146
(Elgar)
Strauss—Till Eulenspiegel
Brahms—Piano Concerto No. 2
(Simon)
WEEK 2
8 Mozart—Symphony No. 31, K. 297, Paris
(Mozart—Piano Concerto, in B-flat, K. 450
(Frager)
Mozart—Symphony in C major, Jupiter, K. 551
9 Mozart—Symphony No. 25, K. 201
Mozart—Piano Concerto, in C major, K. 503
(Frank)
Mozart—"Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320
Boult conducting
10 Mozart—Symphony No. 34, K. 338
Mozart—Piano Concerto, in D major, K. 175
(Frager)
Mozart—Symphony No. 39, K. 543
WEEK 3
Goldberg conducting
15 Bach—Violin Concerto in E major (Goldberg)
Bach—Suite No. 3
Bach—Four Fugues from "The Art of Fugue"
Bach—Suite No. 4
Leinsdorf conducting
16 Bach—St. John Passion
(Carringer, Curtin, Haefliger, Paul, Treigle, Wolff)
17 Bach—Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 in F major
Bach—Cantata 55, "Ich armer Mensch"
(Haefliger)
Bach—Magnificat (D major version)
(Curtin, Haefliger, Treigle, Wolff)
WEEK 4
Ozawa conducting
22 Schumann—American Festival Overture
Schubert—Symphony No. 5
Mendelssohn—Violin Concerto
(Silverstein)
Stravinsky—"Firebird" Suite
Leinsdorf conducting
23 Wagner—Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger"
Schumann—Symphony No. 2
Rachmaninoff—Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor (Graffman)
SUNDAY at 2:30
24 Beethoven—Overture, "Coriolanus"
Tchaikovsky—Symphony No. 6
Chopin—Piano Concerto in F minor
(Kallir)
WEEK 5
29 Smetana—Overture to "The Bartered Bride"
Dvorak—Three Nocturnes
Schumann—Cello Concerto
(Eskin)
Elgar—"Enigma" Variations
30 Weber—Overture "Der Freischutz"
Schumann—Konzertstuck, in G major
(Kallir)
Schumann—Fantasy in C major
(Silverstein)
Dvorak—Symphony No. 8
Schippers conducting
31 Rossini—Overture, "La Gazza Ladra"
Schumann—Piano Concerto in A minor
(Franck)
Mussorgksy-Ravel—Pictures at an Exhibition
WEEK 6
August
Skrowaczewski conducting
5 Prokofieff—"Romeo and Juliet" 2nd Suite
Saint-Saens—Cello Concerto in A minor
(Parnas)
Schumann—Symphony No. 4
Leinsdorf conducting
6 Mozart—"The Magic Flute"
(Berberian, Caballé, Castel, Elgar, Flagello, Godfrey, Jones, Marsh, Reardon, Shirley, Sills, Simon)
Skrowaczewski conducting
7 Barber—Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance
Saint-Saens—Piano Concerto No. 4, in C minor
(Johannesen)
Beethoven—Symphony No. 3 "Eroica"
WEEK 7
Ehrling conducting
12 Sibelius—Symphony No. 1
Tchaikovsky—Symphony No. 4
Leinsdorf conducting
13 Hindemith—Symphony "Mathis der Maler"
Tchaikovsky—Rococo Variations
Tchaikovsky—A Piano Concerto
(Tchaikovsky Competition Winners)
14 Prokofieff—Symphony No. 3
Tchaikovsky—An Aria
Tchaikovsky—Violin Concerto
(Tchaikovsky Competition Winners)
WEEK 8
19 Bruckner—Symphony No. 4
Liszt—Totentanz
Liszt—Piano Concerto No. 2, in A major
(Darre)
20 Brahms—Symphony No. 4
Liszt—Fantasy on "The Ruins of Athens"
Liszt—Piano Concerto No. 1, in E-flat
(Bolet)
21 Beethoven—Symphony No. 9
(Marsh, Alberts, Cassilly, Paul)

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 4,926
APR 14 1966

Festival Tickets Ready in Hub, Opens July 2

The Berkshire Festival ticket office at Symphony Hall, Boston is now receiving orders for the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. The Festival will open with a concert by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, July 2 and continue for eight weeks.

With the announcement of the opening of the Symphony Hall Festival ticket office, Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, stated: "For many years the Boston Symphony Orchestra has made a practice of offering series subscriptions to the Berkshire Festival concerts with a reduced price and the privilege of renewing seat locations for the following years. This practice has proven to be costly, time-consuming, and generally inefficient. We have decided, therefore, to abandon the series subscriptions and henceforth have only a single-concert price for tickets. This will permit increased efficiency in filling orders and will, we hope, be a welcome improvement."

The change indicated by Mr. Perry will affect Berkshire County residents in that the Friday Berkshire Nights series will also be suspended along with the regular weekend series sale. A brochure with complete program and ticket information is available from the festival ticket office, Symphony Hall, Boston.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
APR 28 1966

Tanglewood Asked To Give Up Space On Town Signboard

STOCKBRIDGE — The Selectmen Monday night wrote a letter to Supt. James F. Kiley of Tanglewood asking that Tanglewood give up its space on the town's directional signboard in the center of town.

Chairman Robert G. Williams said there is a state sign next to the town directional signs which advertises Tanglewood and said the Selectmen have been asked for space on the sign by somebody else.

The directional signboard was installed two summers ago to reduce the number of independent signs placed throughout the town by various organizations and establishments doing summer business. The signboard has been so successful that other towns, such as Lenox, have considered adopting the same solution.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 4,926
MAR 31 1966

Boston Symphony 1966 Tanglewood Brochure Prepared

A brochure with the complete program for this summer's Boston Symphony Orchestra's performances at Tanglewood in Lenox is available from the Berkshire Festival ticket office, Symphony Hall, Boston, it was announced today.

Erich Leinsdorf, music director, announced that he will conduct 17 concerts this summer and that seven will be directed by the summer's guest conductors: Sir Adrian Boult, Szymon Goldberg, Sixten Ehrling, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

He has previously announced that plans for the 1966 Festival will include as a theme the Romantic Concerto, two weeks of chamber orchestra programs, a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," and the Festival's closing concert Aug. 21, Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

The opening weekend of the Berkshire Festival, featuring three concerti by Brahms, will extend through the Fourth of July holiday with concerts on Saturday evening (July 2; 8 p.m.), Sunday and Monday afternoon (July 3 and 4; 2:30 p.m.). For the remaining seven weeks the Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be given on Fridays at 9, Saturdays at 8 and Sundays at 2:30.

Preceding each of the Friday evening concerts, will be a Weekend Prelude at 7 o'clock consisting of infrequently performed music by the weekend's principal composer.

Guest artists at the Festival and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra performing in small ensembles will be heard at the Preludes. Music for the Weekend Preludes will be announced in mid-April.

Ticket sales for the 1966 Berkshire Festival will begin on Monday, April 4 from the Festival Ticket Office, Boston, Mass.

OPERA NEWS
NEW YORK, N.Y.
23 TI. A YR. 70,700
MAR 19 1966

This summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood (Lenox, Massachusetts), which has scheduled twenty-four programs between July 2 and August 21, will offer a concert performance of Mozart's Magic Flute (8/6), conducted by Erich Leinsdorf and featuring Montserrat Caballé, Beverly Sills, Anne Elgar, George Shirley, John Reardon and Ezio Flagello.

AMERICAN BANKER
NEW YORK, N.Y.
D. 9,800
APR 29 1966

Boston Symphony's Summer Home

LENOX, Mass.—The famous Tanglewood "Shed" at the Berkshires Music Festival here is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The shed seats 6,000, but audiences numbering as many as 14,000 have been known to sprawl over the surrounding lawns of the estate.

Evening Echo
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Weekly Circ. 2,780
APR 8 1966

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,897
MAR 31 1966

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 174,850
APR 5 1966

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 175,923
APR 17 1966

KINGSTON, N.Y.
FREEMAN
D. 18,000
MAR 30 1966

BILLBOARD
NEW YORK, N.Y.
W. 50,000
APR 23 1966

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N.Y.
D. 69,614 SUN. 119,[illegible]
APR 10 1966

The Flint Journal
FLINT, MICH.
D. 105,422 SUN. 105,533
APR 3 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 4,926
APR 19 1966

Mrs. Johnson Invited To Tanglewood

Mrs. Lyndon Johnson has been invited to attend a concert at Tanglewood this summer.

[illegible] V. Geary, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, said the invitation from the conference and the Boston Symphony Orchestra was extended to President Johnson's wife by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Mr. Geary said the First Lady was asked to attend the opening concert of the 1966 season, July 2, or any other concert which might better fit her schedule.

The invitation is part of the conference program to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the BSO's affiliation with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mr. Geary said.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
APR 16 1966

BHC Invites First Lady to Tanglewood

Mrs. Lyndon Johnson has been invited to attend a concert at Tanglewood this [illegible]

[illegible] V. Geary, executive [illegible] the Berkshire [illegible] Conference, said the in[illegible] from the conference [illegible] Boston Symphony [illegible] was extended to [illegible] President John[illegible] wife re[illegible] by Sen. Edward M. [illegible]dy.

Geary said the First [illegible] was asked to attend the [illegible] concert of the 1966 [illegible] July 2, or any other [illegible] which might better [illegible] schedule.

[illegible] invitation is part of [illegible] conference program to [illegible] 30th anniver[illegible] the BSO's affiliation [illegible] the Berkshire Music [illegible]al at Tanglewood, Mr. [illegible] said.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
APR 7 1966

BSO Manager To Accept Award From Conference

Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will attend the Berkshire Hills Conference annual dinner Tuesday to accept a special award from the county tourist promotion agency.

John V. Geary, conference executive director, said Mr. Perry will accept on behalf of the BSO an award honoring the orchestra on the 30th anniversary of its affiliation with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

The dinner will be held at Eastover in Lenox. Mr. Geary said 250 already have made reservations. The deadline for reservations is tomorrow noon.

Speaker at the affair will be Harry Bowser of New York City, a representative of the All-Star Dairy Association.

7

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
MAR 31 1966

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 49,474
MAY 25 1966

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266
MAY 21 1966

Leinsdorf Lists Programs At Tanglewood This Summer

BOSTON — Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced the complete programs for the 1966 Berkshire Festival season at Tanglewood.

Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct 17 of the season's concerts and 7 other programs will be directed by guest conductors Sir Adrian Boult, Szymon Goldberg, Sixten Ehrling, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

The opening weekend of the festival will extend through the July 4th holiday with concerts on Saturday evening at 8 and Sunday and Monday afternoons at 2:30. Concerts for the remaining seven weeks will be performed Fridays at 9, Saturdays at 8 and Sundays at 2:30.

Weekend Preludes

A weekend prelude of infrequently performed music by the weekend's principal composer at 7 p.m. will precede each of the Friday concerts. Guest artists and BSO members performing in small ensembles will be heard at the preludes. The prelude programs will be announced next month.

Tickets for the 1966 festival will go on sale Monday at the Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston. A brochure, with complete program and ticket information, is also available.

WEEK 1
Leinsdorf conducting
July
2 Wagner—Overture Tannhauser
Stravinsky—Suite from Petrouchka
Brahms—Violin Concerto (Ashkenasi)
3 Brahms—Double Concerto (Silvertein and Eskin)
Mahler—Symphony No. 4 (Elgar)
4 Prokofieff—Symphony No. 1, Classical Sessions—Psalm 140 (Elgar)
Strauss—Till Eulenspiegel
Brahms—Piano Concerto No. 2 (Simon)

WEEK 2
8 Mozart—Symphony No. 31, K. 297, Paris
Mozart—Piano Concerto, in B-flat, K. 450 (Frager)
Mozart—Symphony in C major, Jupiter, K. 551
9 Mozart—Symphony No. 29, K. 201
Mozart—Piano Concerto, in C major, K. 503 (Frank)
Mozart—"Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320
Boult, conducting
10 Mozart Symphony No. 34, K. 338
Mozart Piano Concerto, in D major, K. 175 (Frager)
Mozart Symphony No. 39, K. 543

WEEK 3
Goldberg conducting
15 Bach—Violin Concerto in E major (Goldberg)
Bach—Suite No. 2
Bach—Four Fugues from "The Art of Fugue"
Bach—Suite No. 4
Leinsdorf conducting
16 Bach—St. John Passion (Carringer, Curtin, Haefliger, Paul, Treigle, Wolff)
17 Bach—Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 in F major
Bach—Cantata 55, "ich armer Mensch" (Haefliger)
Bach—Magnificat (D major version) (Curtin, Haefliger, Treigle, Wolff)

WEEK 4
Ozawa conducting
22 Schumann—American Festival Overture
Schubert—Symphony No. 5
Mendelssohn—Violin Concerto (Silverstein)
Stravinsky "Firebird" Suite
Leinsdorf conducting
23 Wagner Excerpts from Act III, "Die Meistersinger"
Schumann—Symphony No. 2
Rachmaninoff—Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor (Cliburn)

SUNDAY at 2:30
24 Beethoven—Overture, "Coriolanus"
Tchaikovsky—Symphony No. 6
Chopin—Piano Concerto in F minor (Kallir)

WEEK 5
29 Smetana—Overture to "The Bartered Bride"
Debussy—Three Nocturnes
Schumann—Cello Concerto (Eskin)
Elgar—"Enigma" Variations
30 Weber—Overture "Der Freischutz"
Schumann—Konzertstuck in G major (Kallir)
Schumann—Fantasy in C major (Silverstein)
Dvorak—Symphony No. 8
Schippers conducting
31 Rossini—Overture, "La Gazza Ladra"
Schumann—Piano Concerto in A minor (Frank)
Mussorgksy-Ravel—Pictures at an Exhibition

WEEK 6
August
Skrowaczewski conducting
5 Prokofieff—"Romeo and Juliet" 2nd Suite
Saint-Saens—Cello Concerto in A minor (Parnas)
Schumann—Symphony No. 4
Leinsdorf conducting
6 Mozart—"The Magic Flute" (Berberian, Caballe, Castel, Elgar, Flagello, Godfrey, Jones, Marsh, Reardon, Shirley, Sills, Simon
Skrowaczewski conducting
7 Barber—Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance
Saint-Saens—Piano Concerto No. 4, in C minor (Johannesen)
Beethoven—Symphony No. 3 "Eroica"

WEEK 7
Ehrling conducting
12 Sibelius—Symphony No. 1
Tchaikovsky—Symphony No. 4
Leinsdorf conducting
13 Hindemith—Symphony "Mathis der Maler"
Tchaikovsky—Rococo Variations
Tchaikovsky—A Piano Concerto (Tchaikovsky Competition Winners)
14 Prokofieff—Symphony No. 3
Tchaikovsky—An Aria
Tchaikovsky—Violin Concerto (Tchaikovsky Competition Winners)

WEEK 8
19 Bruckner—Symphony No. 4
Liszt—Totentanz
Liszt—Piano Concerto No. 2, in A major (Darre)
20 Brahms—Symphony No. 4
Liszt—Fantasy on "The Ruins of Athens"
Liszt—Piano Concerto No. 1, in E-flat (Boiet)
21 Beethoven—Symphony No. 9 (Marsh, Alberts, Cassilly, Paul)

Italian Echo
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Weekly Circ. 2,780
APR 8 1966

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,897
MAR 31 1966

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 174,850
APR 5 1966

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 175,923
APR 17 1966

KINGSTON, N.Y.
FREEMAN
D. 18,000
MAR 30 1966

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 69,614 SUN. 119,446
APR 10 1966

BILLBOARD
NEW YORK, N. Y.
W. 50,000
APR 23 1966

The Flint Journal
FLINT, MICH.
D. 105,422 SUN. 105,533
APR 3 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 4,926
APR 14 1966

Festival Tickets Ready in Hub, Opens July 2

The Berkshire Festival ticket office at Symphony Hall, Boston is now receiving orders for the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. The Festival will open with a concert by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, July 2 and continue for eight weeks.

With the announcement of the opening of the Symphony Hall Festival ticket office, Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, stated: "For many years the Boston Symphony Orchestra has made a practice of offering series subscriptions to the Berkshire Festival concerts with a reduced price and the privilege of renewing seat locations for the following years. This practice has proven to be costly, time-consuming, and generally inefficient. We have decided, therefore, to abandon the series subscriptions and henceforth have only a single-concert price for tickets. This will permit increased efficiency in filling orders and will, we hope, be a welcome improvement."

The change indicated by Mr. Perry will affect Berkshire County residents in that the Friday Berkshire Nights series will also be suspended along with the regular weekend series sale. A brochure with complete program and ticket information is available from the festival ticket office, Symphony Hall, Boston.

AMERICAN BANKER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 9,600
APR 29 1966

Boston Symphony's Summer Home

LENOX, Mass.—The famous Tanglewood "Shed" at the Berkshires Music Festival here is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The shed seats 6,000, but audiences numbering as many as 14,000 have been known to sprawl over the surrounding lawns of the estate.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 4,926
APR 19 1966

Mrs. Johnson Invited To Tanglewood

Mrs. Lyndon Johnson has been invited to attend a concert at Tanglewood this summer.

John V. Geary, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, said the invitation from the conference and the Boston Symphony Orchestra was extended to President Johnson's wife by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Mr. Geary said the First Lady was asked to attend the opening concert of the 1966 season July 2, or any other concert which might better fit her schedule.

The invitation is part of the conference program to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the BSO's affiliation with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mr. Geary said.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
APR 20 1966

Tanglewood Asked To Give Up Space On Town Signboard

STOCKBRIDGE — The Selectmen Monday night wrote a letter to Supt. James F. Kiley of Tanglewood asking that Tanglewood give up its space on the town's directional signboard in the center of town.

Chairman Robert G. Williams said there is a state sign next to the town directional signs which advertises Tanglewood and said the Selectmen have been asked for space on the sign by somebody else.

The directional signboard was installed two summers ago to reduce the number of independent signs placed throughout the town by various organizations and establishments doing summer business. The signboard has been so successful that other towns, such as Lenox, have considered adopting the same solution.

OPERA NEWS
NEW YORK, N.Y.
23 TI. A YR. 70,700
MAR 19 1966

This summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood (Lenox, Massachusetts), which has scheduled twenty-four programs between July 2 and August 21, will offer a concert performance of Mozart's Magic Flute (8/6), conducted by Erich Leinsdorf and featuring Montserrat Caballé, Beverly Sills, Anne Elgar, George Shirley, John Reardon and Ezio Flagello.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
APR 16 1966

BHC Invites First Lady to Tanglewood

Mrs. Lyndon Johnson has been invited to attend a concert at Tanglewood this summer.

John V. Geary, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, said the invitation from the conference and the Boston Symphony Orchestra was extended to President Johnson's wife recently by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Mr. Geary said the First Lady was asked to attend the opening concert of the 1966 season July 2, or any other concert which might better fit her schedule.

The invitation is part of the conference program to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the BSO's affiliation with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mr. Geary said.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 4,926
MAR 31 1966

Boston Symphony 1966 Tanglewood Brochure Prepared

A brochure with the complete program for this summer's Boston Symphony Orchestra's performances at Tanglewood in Lenox is available from the Berkshire Festival ticket office, Symphony Hall, Boston, it was announced today.

Erich Leinsdorf, music director, announced that he will conduct 17 concerts this summer and that seven will be directed by the summer's guest conductors: Sir Adrian Boult, Szymon Goldberg, Sixten Ehrling, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

He has previously announced that plans for the 1966 Festival will include as a theme the Romantic Concerto, two weeks of chamber orchestra programs, a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," and the Festival's closing concert Aug. 21, Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

The opening weekend of the Berkshire Festival, featuring three concerti by Brahms, will extend through the Fourth of July holiday with concerts on Saturday evening (July 2; 8 p.m.), Sunday and Monday afternoon (July 3 and 4; 2.30 p.m.). For the remaining seven weeks the Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be given on Fridays at 9, Saturdays at 8 and Sundays at 2.30.

Preceding each of the Friday evening concerts, will be a Weekend Prelude at 7 o'clock consisting of infrequently performed music by the weekend's principal composer.

Guest artists at the Festival and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra performing in small ensembles will be heard at the Preludes. Music for the Weekend Preludes will be announced in mid-April.

Ticket sales for the 1966 Berkshire Festival will begin on Monday, April 4 from the Festival Ticket Office, in Boston, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
APR 7 1966

BSO Manager To Accept Award From Conference

Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will attend the Berkshire Hills Conference annual dinner Tuesday to accept a special award from the county tourist promotion agency.

John V. Geary, conference executive director, said Mr. Perry will accept on behalf of the BSO an award honoring the orchestra on the 30th anniversary of its affiliation with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

The dinner will be held at Eastover in Lenox. Mr. Geary said 250 already have made reservations. The deadline for reservations is tomorrow noon.

Speaker at the affair will be Harry Bowser of New York City, a representative of the All-Star Dairy Association.

SATURDAY REVIEW
NEW YORK, N.Y.
W. 298,100

MAY 28 1966

Music Festivals U.S.A. Summer 1966

LOCATION	DATE	TITLE	TYPE OF EVENT	PERFORMANCE PATTERN
Massachusetts Lenox	July 2-August 21	Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood	Opera: Magic Flute (concert performance), with Caballé, Sills, Elgar, Shirley, Reardon, Flagello. Concerts: Boston Symphony. Soloists include Goldberg, Haefliger, Kallir, Van Cliburn, Bakin, Johannesen, Daré, Bolet, many others. Winners of Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition invited	At 9 p.m. Fridays, at 8 p.m. Saturdays, at 2:30 p.m. Sunday afternoons

Chicago Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER
D. 836,702 SUN. 1,151,995

MAY 8 1966

In the World of Music

MAY DAY is now behind us and summer begins its slow but inevitable approach, bringing with it some tempting outdoor offerings. In the light of Montserrat Caballe's recent debut with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, two should prove almost irresistible: A concert version of Mozart's "Magic Flute" at Tanglewood and an evening of Strauss "Rosenkavalier" excerpts at the new Saratoga festival, both with Miss Caballe.

The thirtieth year of Boston Symphony orchestra concerts at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will present the orchestra in 24 symphonic and a number of chamber programs, beginning July 2 and continuing thru Aug. 21. Erich Leinsdorf has invited Seiji Ozawa, Sixten Ehrling, Sir Adrian Boult, Szymon Goldberg, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, and Thomas Schippers to share conductorial duties. For Mr. Ozawa, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra's Ravinia conductor, it will be the third successive summer at Tanglewood. Interesting programming, in addition to the "Magic Flute," includes Bach's St. John Passion [with Ernst Haefliger and Phyllis Curtin], symphonies of Mahler, Bruckner and Prokofieff, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, a large sampling of Schumann and Liszt, and a number of rarely heard Mozart symphonies and concertos.

George Barrington

Less than two hours' drive from Tanglewood, the new Saratoga Performing Arts center at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., will be luring visitors with the New York City Ballet and the Philadelphia Orchestra. The first festival of the upstate New York city opens July 8 with the New York City Ballet and "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The Balanchine group will dance a good portion of its repertory in 21 performances thru July 31, with the first performance of Edward Villella's new ballet, "Narkissos," scheduled for the 21st. On Aug. 4, the Philadelphia Orchestra and Eugene Ormandy supplant the ballet for 14 symphonic and four chamber concerts. Mr. Ormandy has scheduled three Beethoven concerts [including the Ninth Symphony], and programs of Rachmaninoff and Brahms. Seiji Ozawa will be a guest on the podium August 18 and 20, with programs of Russian and 20th century music. William Steinberg will conduct a Wagner concert Aug. 7 and Thomas Schippers will conduct Aug. 12 and 14. The "Rosenkavalier" excerpts are scheduled for Aug. 23, Mr. Ormandy conducting and soloists including, besides Miss Caballe, Christa Ludwig, Hilde Gueden, and Walter Berry.

* * *

Continuing in the baroque vein established with last year's performances of Handel's "Julius Caesar," the Performing Arts Foundation of Kansas City will present a three-part homage, "A Celebration of Henry Purcell," in that city's Music Hall May 22. The program will open with "Fantasy, a Homage to an Earlier England," an orchestral tribute "in the spirit of Henry Purcell, commissioned from Virgil Thomson. Purcell's masque, "The Faerie Queen," is the basis for the second part's ballet of the same name. Margot Fonteyn and Attilio Labis, first dancer of the Paris Opera ballet, will dance the leads, with choreography by Marina Svetlova. "Dido and Aeneas," in a modern edition prepared by Margaret Laurie and Thurston Dart, will conclude. Ruza Pospinov, the Yugoslav mezzo-soprano scheduled to open the Lyric Opera season in "Boris Godounov" next fall, is listed as the Dido, with Robert Kerns as Aeneas. Betty Allen, Patricia Brooks, Norma Lynn, Rosa Rimoch, and Stanley Kolk complete the cast. The production will be staged by Ellis Rabb, artistic director of the Association of Producing Artists. Three men with impressive credits, Oliver Smith, Jean Rosenthal, and Peter Hall, will be responsible for the scenic designs, lighting, and costuming of both opera and ballet. The program, to be repeated May 29 and 31, will be conducted by Nicolo Rescigno.

OPERA CANADA
MAY 1966

One of the most important of the summer festivals in the United States is that held in Tanglewood for eight weeks (July 2 - Aug. 21) — the Berkshire Festival, Lennox, Mass. Opening with the Overture to Wagner's Tannhauser in the July 2nd concert, conducted by Erich Leinsdorf, its primarily symphonic repertoire will also include many orchestral selections from operas, plus Excerpts from Act III, Die Meistersinger (July 23), a performance of the Bach St. John Passion (July 16), and Mozart's The Magic Flute (Aug. 6) with a star-studded list of names: Berberian, Caballé, Castel, Elgar, Flagello, Godfrey, Jones, Marsh, Reardon, Shirley, Sills, Simon, and the Tanglewood Choir.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 286,021

MAY 29 1966

McLAREN HARRIS

Tanglewood Music Program Is Bright

By McLAREN HARRIS

Thirty years ago this summer, the Boston Symphony Orchestra made its first visit to the Berkshire Hills of western Massachusetts, giving three concerts at Holmwood, the former Vanderbilt estate, under the auspices of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival. The following autumn Tanglewood was presented to the orchestra as a gift, and except for a period during World War II, the orchestra has not missed a season at its summer home since then.

The annual Berkshire Festivals have been rewarding experiences for all concerned: an expanded season for Symphony members, a vital educational opportunity for students at the Berkshire Music Center, an artistic harvest for audiences and an economic boom for the communities surrounding Lenox.

NOT THAT ALL has been golden throughout each year of Tanglewood's history. There have been summers when the programming was remarkably dull, consisting largely of repeats from the Symphony's previous season in Boston, and with noticeable lapses of artistic endeavor. The former situation may have little appeal for those who neither attend Symphony Hall concerts nor read our newspapers, but the orchestra does owe an awe its first allegiance to Boston.

The outlook for this year, however, is fair at reasonably bright. Only a handful of works have been taken from the season just completed. A goodly number of instrumental and vocal artists have been engaged as soloists; three major works, Bach's St. John Passion, a concert version of Mozart's "Magic Flute" and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, are scheduled; and Friday night audiences will get more music for their money.

This summer's principal innovation concerns the "Weekend Preludes," brief chamber recitals featuring works of that weekend's composers, which will be held each Friday at 7 p.m. and are open to all the evening's ticket-holders. Accordingly, the regular Friday concert time has been pushed back to 9. Remaining weekend times are Saturday nights at 8 and Sundays at 2:30.

FOR SOME YEARS the Berkshire Festival has scheduled a pair of Bach-Mozart weekends, or at the time they were generally at the beginning of the season. Since Pops was still on the Esplanade and the music required fewer players. But as the 1966 opening coincides with the July 4 holiday, music director Erich Leinsdorf has selected works and compositions with a wide appeal: Wagner, Stravinsky, Brahms, Mahler, Prokofiev, Sessions and Strauss.

The following weekend, July 8-10, is all-Mozart; the next, July 15-17, is all-Bach; and that includes the 7 o'clock "preludes." The Bach-Mozart tradition is a fine one; yet one wonders, during three days of similar-veined artistry, whether the ear will become jaded, no matter how beatific the sounds. We shall see.

MR. LEINSDORF has chosen the Romantic Concerto as the Festival's theme, and all but three programs other than the Bach-Mozart occasions contain examples. There is, of course, an obvious factor in his decision: if one wishes to present a variety of soloists, one must look long and hard at the romantic era, for it is the favorite province of such performers as Jorge Bolet, Leonard Pennario, Van Cliburn, Lilian Kallir and Abbey Simon; as well as four unnamed winners of the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition, who will appear Aug. 13 and 14.

The third Festival of Contemporary Music Aug. 14 through 18 will present world premieres of four compositions commissioned by the Music Center in cooperation with the Koussevitzky Music Foundation of Chicago.

All in all, it looks like a pleasant summer in the Berkshires, but I am compelled to drop a candid remark about the inflation which hit food and lodging prices in the Lenox area long before the government thought of it. Right on the Tanglewood grounds a small box lunch costs $1.25 — and up. It's plainly outrageous.

NewEnglandNewsclipAgency,Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 149,058

MAY 19 1966

Tanglewood's 'Magic Flute' Cast Named

The complete cast has been announced for a concert version at Tanglewood of Mozart's "The Magic Flute." The performance will occupy the entire program, Saturday evening, Aug. 6. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony and choruses.

Tamino, the Egyptian prince, will be sung by George Shirley. The three ladies will include Judith Raskin, Joanna Simon and Sarah Godfrey. John Reardon will be heard in the role of Papageno, with Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be performed by Nico Castel. The Queen's daughter, Pamina, will be sung by Judith Raskin. Robert Jones and Ara Berberian will be heard as the two priests, and Ezio Flagello will portray Sarastro, the high priest of Isis. Anne Elgar will be Papagena. Miss Simon and Miss Raskin will be appearing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time, as will Jones and Reardon.

NewEnglandNewsclipAgency,Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331

MAY 14 1966

Wedding Plans Likely To Keep First Lady Away From Festival

PITTSFIELD—The hopes of the Berkshire Hills Conference that Mrs. Lyndon Johnson would be a guest at the opening of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox this summer have been considerably dimmed, according to the first lady's appointments secretary.

Contacted in Washington Friday, Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter said the president's wife is reserving the summer almost exclusively to prepare for the Aug. 6 wedding of her daughter, Lucy. Mrs. Carpenter said no answer to the invitation to the 30th anniversary program has been sent.

Conference Executive John V. Geary of Pittsfield, executive director of the conference, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy invited Mrs. Johnson.

NewEnglandNewsclipAgency,Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914

MAY 20 1966

pops, 8 p.m. May 22.

Season tickets for Berkshire Festival of Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, July 2 thru Aug. 21, now on sale. Write for programs to Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

Benny Goodman will again present four concerts to benefit the Stamford Museum, starring Pete Fountain, Henryk Szeryng, Joanna Simon, Charlie Byrd, Rachel Goodman, Peter Serkin, Arnold Steinhardt; ticket application at Stamford Museum; concerts in June & July.

Performing Arts Center at Saratoga, N.Y., write for rates, reservations or phone 518-584-9330. New York City Ballet, 21 performances July 8-31; Philadelphia Orchestra, 14 concerts Aug 4-24.

SATURDAY REVIEW
NEW YORK, N.Y.
W. 298,100

MAY 28 1966

Music Festivals U.S.A.: Summer 1966

LOCATION	DATE	TITLE	TYPE OF EVENT	PERFORMANCE PATTERN
Massachusetts
Lenox	July 2-August 21	Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood	OPERA: Magic Flute (concert performance), with Caballé, Sills, Elgar, Shirley, Reardon, Flagello CONCERTS: Boston Symphony. Soloists include Goldberg, Haefliger, Kallir, Van Cliburn, Eskin, Johannesen, Daré, Bolet, many others. Winners of Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition invited	At 9 p.m. Fridays, at 8 p.m. Saturdays, at 2:30 p.m. Sunday afternoons

Chicago Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER
D. 836,702 SUN. 1,151,995

MAY 8 1966

In the World of Music

MAY DAY is now behind us and summer begins its slow but inevitable approach, bringing with it some tempting outdoor offerings. In the light of Montserrat Caballe's recent debut with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, two should prove almost irresistible: A concert version of Mozart's "Magic Flute" at Tanglewood and an evening of Strauss "Rosenkavalier" excerpts at the new Saratoga festival, both with Miss Caballe.

The thirtieth year of Boston Symphony orchestra concerts at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will present the orchestra in 24 symphonic and a number of chamber programs, beginning July 2 and continuing thru Aug. 21. Erich Leinsdorf has invited Seiji Ozawa, Sixten Ehrling, Sir Adrian Boult, Szymon Goldberg, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, and Thomas Schippers to share conductorial duties. For Mr. Ozawa, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra's Ravinia conductor, it will be the third successive summer at Tanglewood. Interesting programming, in addition to the "Magic Flute," includes Bach's St. John Passion [with Ernst Haefliger and Phyllis Curtin], symphonies of Mahler, Bruckner, and Prokofieff, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, a large sampling of Schumann and Liszt, and a number of rarely heard Mozart symphonies and concertos.

George Balanchine

Less than two hours' drive from Tanglewood, the new Saratoga Performing Arts center at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., will be luring visitors with the New York City Ballet and the Philadelphia Orchestra. The first festival at the upstate New York city opens July 8 with the New York City Ballet and "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The Balanchine group will dance a good portion of its repertory in 21 performances thru July 31, with the first performance of Edward Villella's new ballet, "Narkissos," scheduled for the 21st. On Aug. 4, the Philadelphia Orchestra and Eugene Ormandy supplant the ballet for 14 symphonic and four chamber concerts. Mr. Ormandy has scheduled three Beethoven concerts [including the Ninth Symphony], and programs of Rachmaninoff and Brahms. Seiji Ozawa will be a guest on the podium August 18 and 20, with programs of Russian and 20th century music. William Steinberg will conduct a Wagner concert Aug. 7 and Thomas Schippers will conduct Aug. 12 and 14. The "Rosenkavalier" excerpts are scheduled for Aug. 23, Mr. Ormandy conducting and soloists including, besides Miss Caballe, Christa Ludwig, Hilde Gueden, and Walter Berry.

• • •

Continuing in the baroque vein established with last year's performances of Handel's "Julius Caesar," the Performing Arts Foundation of Kansas City will present a three-part homage, "A Celebration of Henry Purcell," in that city's Music hall May 27. The program will open with "Fantasy, a Homage to an Earlier England," an orchestral tribute "in the spirit of Henry Purcell, commissioned from Virgil Thomson. Purcell's masque, "The Faerie Queen," is the basis for the second part's ballet of the same name. Margot Fonteyn and Attilio Labis, first dancer of the Paris Opera ballet, will dance the leads, with choreography by Marina Svetlova. "Dido and Aeneas," in a modern edition prepared by Margaret Laurie and Thurston Dart, will conclude. Ruza Pospinov, the Yugoslav mezzo-soprano scheduled to open the Lyric Opera season in "Boris Godounov" next fall, is listed as the Dido, with Robert Kerns as Aeneas. Betty Allen, Patricia Brooks, Norma Lynn, Rosa Rimoch, and Stanley Kolk complete the cast. The production will be staged by Ellis Rabb, artistic director of the Association of Producing Artists. Three men with impressive credits, Oliver Smith, Jean Rosenthal, and Peter Hall, will be responsible for the scenic designs, lighting, and costuming of both opera and ballet. The program, to be repeated May 29 and 31, will be conducted by Nicolo Rescigno.

OPERA CANADA
MAY 1966

One of the most important of the summer festivals in the United States is that held in Tanglewood for eight weeks (July 2 - Aug. 21) — the Berkshire Festival, Lennox, Mass. Opening with the Overture to Wagner's Tannhauser in the July 2nd concert, conducted by Erich Leinsdorf, its primarily symphonic repertoire will also include many orchestral selections from operas, plus Excerpts from Act III, Die Meistersinger (July 23), a performance of the Bach St. John Passion (July 16), and Mozart's The Magic Flute (Aug. 6) with a star-studded list of names: Berberian, Caballé, Castel, Elgar, Flagello, Godfrey, Jones, Marsh, Reardon, Shirley, Sills, Simon, and the Tanglewood Choir.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 286,021

MAY 29 1966

McLAREN HARRIS

Tanglewood Music Program Is Bright

By McLAREN HARRIS

Thirty years ago this summer, the Boston Symphony Orchestra made its first visit to the Berkshire Hills of western Massachusetts, giving three concerts at Holmwood, the former Vanderbilt estate, under the auspices of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival. The following autumn Tanglewood was presented to the orchestra as a gift, and except for a period during World War II, the orchestra has not missed a season at its summer home since then.

The annual Berkshire Festivals have been rewarding experiences for all concerned: an expanded season for Symphony members, a rich educational opportunity for students at the Berkshire Music Center, an artistic harvest for audiences and an economic boom for the communities surrounding Lenox.

NOT THAT ALL has been golden throughout each year of Tanglewood's history. There have been summers when the programming was remarkably dull, consisting largely of repeats from the Symphony's previous season in Boston, and with noticeable lapses of artistic endeavor. The former situation may have little import for those who neither attend Symphony Hall concerts nor read our newspapers, but the orchestra does, after all, owe its first allegiance to Boston.

The outlook for this year, however, is just as remarkably bright. Only a handful of works have been picked from the season just completed; a goodly number of instrumental and vocal artists have been engaged as soloists; three major works, Bach's St. John Passion, a concert version of Mozart's "Magic Flute" and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, are scheduled; and Friday night audiences will get more music for their money.

This summer's principal innovation concerns the "Weekend Preludes," brief chamber recitals featuring works of that weekend's composers, which will be held each Friday at 7 p.m. and are open to all the evening's ticketholders. Accordingly, the regular Friday concert time has been pushed back to 9. Remaining weekend times are Saturday nights at 8 and Sundays at 2:30.

FOR SOME YEARS the Berkshire Festival has scheduled a pair of Bach-Mozart weekends, or the like; these were generally at the beginning of the season. Since Pops was still on the Esplanade and the music requires fewer players. But as the 1966 opening coincides with the July 4 holiday, music director Erich Leinsdorf has selected works and composers with a wide appeal: Wagner, Stravinsky, Brahms, Mahler, Prokofiev, Sessions and Strauss.

The following weekend, July 8-10, is all-Mozart; the next, July 15-17, is all-Bach; and that includes the 7 o'clock "preludes." The Bach-Mozart tradition is a fine one: yet one wonders, during three days of similar-veined artistry, whether the ear will become jaded, no matter how beatific the sounds. We shall see.

MR. LEINSDORF has chosen the Romantic Concerto as the Festival's theme, and all but three programs other than the Bach-Mozart occasions contain examples. There is, of course, an obvious factor in his decision: if one wishes to present a variety of soloists, one must look long and hard at the romantic era, for it is the favorite province of such performers as Jorge Bolet, Jeanne-Marie Darré, Van Cliburn, Lilian Kallir and Abbey Simon, as well as four unnamed winners of the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition, who will appear Aug. 13 and 14.

The third Festival of Contemporary Music Aug. 14 through 16, will present world premieres of four compositions commissioned by the Music Center in cooperation with the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago.

All in all, it looks like a pleasant summer in the Berkshires, but I feel compelled to drop a candid remark about the inflation which hit food and lodging prices in the Lenox area long before the government thought of it. Right on the Tanglewood grounds a small box lunch costs $1.25 — and up. It's plainly outrageous.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 149,058

MAY 19 1966

Tanglewood's 'Magic Flute' Cast Named

The complete cast has been announced for a concert version at Tanglewood of Mozart's "The Magic Flute." The performance will occupy the entire program, Saturday evening, Aug. 6. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony and choruses.

Tamino, the Egyptian prince will be sung by George Shirley. The three ladies will include Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Betyah Godfrey. John Reardon will be heard in the role of Papageno, with Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be performed by Nico Castel. The Queen's daughter, Pamina, will be sung by Judith Raskin. Robert Jones and Ara Berberian will be heard as the two priests, and Ezio Flagello will portray Sarastro, the high priest of Isis. Anne Elgar will be Papagena. Miss Simon and Miss Raskin will be appearing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time, as will Jones and Reardon.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331

MAY 14 1966

Wedding Plans Likely To Keep First Lady Away From Festival

PITTSFIELD—The hopes of the Berkshire Hills Conference that Mrs. Lyndon Johnson would be a guest at the opening of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox this summer have been considerably dimmed, according to the first lady's appointments secretary.

Contacted in Washington Friday, Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter said the president's wife is reserving the summer almost exclusively to prepare for the Aug. 6 wedding of her daughter, Lucy. Mrs. Carpenter said no answer to the invitation to the 30th anniversary program has been sent.

Conference Executive John V. Geary of Pittsfield, executive director of the conference, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy invited Mrs. Johnson.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914

MAY 20 1966

port, 8 p.m. May 22.

Season tickets for Berkshire Festival of Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, July 2 thru Aug. 21, now on sale. Write for programs to Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

Benny Goodman will again present four concerts to benefit the Stamford Museum, starring Pete Fountain, Henryk Szeryng, Joanna Simon, Charlie Byrd, Rachel Goodman, Peter Serkin, Arnold Steinhardt; ticket application at Stamford Museum; concerts in June & July.

Performing Arts Center at Saratoga, N.Y., write for rates, reservations or phone 518-584-9330, New York City Ballet, 21 performances July 8-31; Philadelphia Orchestra, 14 concerts Aug 4-24.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
MAY 29 1966

The Home of Music

[redacted]

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox—The summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, where for eight weeks (July 2-August 21) the orchestra presents the Berkshire Festival. The 24 concerts are given in the 5000-seat Music Shed, left, center. Visitors are invited to picnic and stroll about the grounds. Adequate free parking is available for 5000 automobiles.

(BOSTON — "A landscape that combines every variety of beauty—valleys, in the hollow of which lie small lakes, glittering like sapphires; uplands . . . hills . . . woods . . . noble masses of granite rock . . . clear mountain brooks — all this, under a cloud varied sky, such as generally canopies mountain districts, the sunset glories of which are often magnificent.")

Such is the manner in which Fanny Kemble, renowned Shakespearean actress of the 19th Century, described the Berkshires of Western Massachusetts. The same description could apply to the area today for once out of the few small cities and towns of the region one finds the mountain scenery much as it was a 100 or more years ago. At that period there resided in the Berkshires a number of 19th Century literary giants. Melville, Holmes and Longfellow were sometime residents of Pittsfield. In fact, Melville wrote his Moby Dick at "Arrowhead," still to be seen on Holmes Road, Pittsfield.

Overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, or more properly, Lake Mahkeenac, was Tanglewood, the mid-19th Century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan. At the edge of this lovely property was the little red cottage made immortal by its then struggling resident, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Today, Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as it has been for 30 summers following the 1936 gift of the property to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan.

The red cottage was destroyed by fire in the 1890's but has been rebuilt on the original foundations and now serves as studios for the orchestra's flourishing educational arm, the Berkshire Music Center which last summer celebrated its 25th anniversary.

Two years prior to the gift of Tanglewood to the Boston Symphony a series of summer concerts began in the Berkshires. These were the beginnings of today's Berkshire Festival, the best known and longest of the major music festivals in this country, by the beautiful surroundings of formal gardens, hemlock hedges, avenues of tall pines, and great lawns, the Boston Symphony Orchestra gives 24 concerts in the great Music Shed which possesses such fine natural acoustics that an equal number of patrons can be seated comfortably on the grass and easily hear the music.

For this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Music Director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the Romantic concerto as the theme. On each of six weekends with full orchestra two or three concerts will be performed by well known soloists.

The festival opens on July 2, the Saturday of the long Fourth of July weekend and continues eight weeks from the Sunday, July 3, ends August 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9. Brahms will be the featured composer during the three concerts of the opening weekend with three concerts devoted to Mozart and three to Bach on the succeeding weekends. On August 6, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and for the following weekend (August 13, 14) the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to be the soloists in several of the Russian composer's works.

Prior to each of the seven Friday evening Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts there will be a weekend prelude in which the soloists and members of the orchestra will perform lesser known works of the weekend's principal composer. The guest conductors for the summer include Sir Adrian Boult, Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will make his annual appearance at Tanglewood on August 3 for the Boston Pops at Tanglewood Pension Fund concert.

A brochure with complete program and ticket information for this summer's Berkshire Festival is available from the Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, 02115. This brochure contains some information on the variety of other cultural attractions in the Berkshires. Further details on these and on accommodations may be obtained from the Berkshire Hills Conference, 100 North St., Pittsfield, 01201. The Berkshire Festival is featured in the United States Travel Service's Festival '66 program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News
W. HARTFORD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 5,920
MAY 26 1966

Good Listening

by AMELIA ALLEN

The Berkshire Symphonic Festival began its series of concerts in the summer of 1934, under the direction of Henry Hadley. Two successful seasons indicated greater interest than anticipated, and in 1936 the 210-acre Tanglewood estate overlooking Lake Mahkeenac, between Lenox and Stockbridge, in Berkshire County, Massachusetts, was given to the Boston Symphony Orchestra by Mrs. Mary Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappen. With this gift the Festival expanded and its committee raised funds for the building of the 6037-seat Music Shed opened in 1938. The fine natural acoustics of the Music Shed were improved in 1958 with the installation of the Edmund Hawes Talbot Memorial Stage Canopy.

In the beautiful surroundings of formal gardens, hemlock hedges, avenues of tall pine, and great lawns, the Boston Symphony Orchestra not only gives a series of twenty-four concerts, the Berkshire Festivals, but also maintains the Berkshire Music Center, the Orchestra's summer educational center for the advanced study of music.

The public is invited to visit and enjoy the beauty of the Tanglewood grounds and Formal Gardens at concert time; When the Music Center is in session visitors are asked to meet at the Main Gate and go through the grounds with a Guide.

The Berkshire Festival opens on Saturday, July 2 at 8:00 p.m. with Erich Leinsdorf conducting a program opening with Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser"; Stravinsky's Suite from "Petrouchka" and the Brahms Violin Concerto, Ashkenasi, soloist.

Sunday, July 3, at 2:30 p.m. Dr. Leinsdorf will conduct the Brahms Double Concerto for violin and cello, (the soloists will be Silverstein and Eskin;) and Mahler's Symphony No. 4.

Monday, July 4, the concert will be in the afternoon also (2:30); the program includes the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, with Simon as soloist; Strauss: "Till Eulenspiegel"; Sessions: Psalm 140 and Prokrfiev: "Classical Symphony".

The remaining weeks of the Festival the orchestra concerts will be given on Friday and Satu. ay evenings and Saturday afternoons.

Open Rehearsals will be held each Saturday morning at 10:30 for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund, admission $2.00.

For this summer Mr. Leinsdorf has chosen the Romantic Concerto as a theme. Two week-ends will be devoted to the music of Bach and Mozart, performed by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, with one or two romantic composers being featured on each of the remaining five weeks-ends. Mr. Leinsdorf has invited many eminent soloists and guest conductors to appear with the Orchestra at this summer's Festival. The prize winners of the Moscow Tchaikowsky Competitions have been invited to appear during the Festival's seventh week. A concert version of Mozart's "Magic Flute" will be given on August 6 and the 1966 Festival will close on Sunday afternoon, August 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

The final Winter Chamber Music Festival program on May 23 at Millard Auditorium was given by the Hartt Woodwind Quintet. The opening Quintet, Opus 71 by Beethoven, a composition conservative in idiom and traditional in form was the least effective of the five pieces played. The tempo

(Continued on Page 4)

HIGH FIDELITY
MUSICAL AMERICA
GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS.
MONTHLY 114,100
MAY 1966

Conductors and Orchestras

Winners of the International Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow next month will appear at the Tanglewood Festival on August 13 and 14, a bonus to the [illegible] prize. Conductor Erich Leinsdorf [illegible] all through talks with cellist [illegible] during his recent Amer[illegible] tour and through correspondence [illegible] composer Shostakovich. The pian[illegible] cellist and singer who win the trip will all be heard in Tchaikov[illegible] Leinsdorf has also an[illegible] works which will have Boston Symphony premieres next sea[illegible] concerto by Elliott Carter, [illegible] and orchestra drawn [illegible] Robert Moevs, and a [illegible] and narrator with words drawn from President Kennedy's speeches by William Sydeman.

HIGH FIDELITY
MUSICAL AMERICA
GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS.
MONTHLY 114,100
MAY 1966

TANGLEWOOD (LENOX), July 2–August 21. Music director Erich Leinsdorf has planned the programs for [illegible] Tanglewood Festival around the theme of the Romantic concerto. The Boston Symphony will give concerts on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. Friday concert-goers will have a bonus of a prelude to the programs (which begin at 9.00 p.m.), consisting of some of the less frequently performed music of the weekend's principal [illegible] the soloists will [illegible] Jeanne-Marie [illegible] Ashkenasi; and [illegible] Tchaikovsky Com[illegible] and piano). Opera will be [illegible] of Mozart's The Magic Flute. Guest conductors who will join Leinsdorf at Tanglewood are Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers, and Sir Adrian Boult.

New [illegible] Agency, Inc.
Box 20[illegible]
FALL [illegible]
Circ. [illegible]
MAY 17 1966

Berkshire Fete Is to Feature Symphony

Area residents are looking forward with interest to the annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

One of the highlights of this summer's festival will be the presentation of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Erich Leinsdorff.

Casting for the concert version of the composition has been completed, Leinsdorff announced. [illegible] the performance [illegible] the entire program [illegible] concert on Satur[illegible] during the festival's [illegible]

The [illegible] Festival is usually [illegible] summer attraction [illegible] specially popular [illegible] students. Tanglewood [illegible] almost always [illegible] students who sit [illegible] lawns or on the [illegible] to the concerts [illegible] music performed by [illegible] and the orchestra.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
MAY 29 1966

The Home of Music

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox—The summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, where for eight weeks (July 2-August 21) the orchestra presents the Berkshire Festival. The 24 concerts are given in the 6000-seat Music Shed, left center. Visitors are invited to picnic and stroll about the grounds. Adequate free parking is available for 5000 automobiles.

(BOSTON — "A landscape that combines every variety of beauty—valleys, in the hollow of which lie small lakes, glittering like sapphires; uplands . . .hills. . .woods. . .noble masses of granite rock. . . clear mountain brooks — all this, under a cloud varied sky, such as generally canopies mountain districts, the sunset glories of which are often magnificent.")

Such is the manner in which Fanny Kemble, renowned Shakespearean actress of the 19th Century, described the Berkshires of Western Massachusetts. The same description could apply to the area today for once out of the few small cities and towns of the region one finds the mountain scenery much as it was a 100 or more years ago. At that period there resided in the Berkshires a number of 19th Century literary giants. Melville, Holmes, and Longfellow were sometime residents of Pittsfield. In fact, Melville wrote his Moby Dick at "Arrowhead," still to be seen on Holmes Road, Pittsfield.

Overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, or more properly, Lake Mahkeenac, was Tanglewood, the mid-19th Century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan. At the edge of this lovely property was the little red cottage made immortal by its then struggling resident, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Today, Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as it has been for 30 summers following the 1936 gift of the property to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan.

The red cottage was destroyed by fire in the 1890's but has been rebuilt on the original foundations and now serves as studios for the orchestra's flourishing educational arm, the Berkshire Music Center which last summer celebrated its 25th anniversary.

Two years prior to the gift of Tanglewood to the Boston Symphony a series of summer concerts began in the Berkshires. These were the beginnings of today's Berkshire Festival, the best known and longest of the major music festivals in this country. In the beautiful surroundings of formal gardens, hemlock hedges, avenues of tall pines, and great lawns, the Boston Symphony Orchestra gives 24 concerts in the great Music Shed which possesses such fine natural acoustics that an equal number of patrons can be seated comfortably on the grass and easily hear the music.

For this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Music Director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the Romantic concerto as the theme. On each of six weekends with full orchestra two or three concerts will be performed by well known soloists.

The festival opens on July 2, the Saturday of the long Fourth of July weekend, and concludes eight weeks later on Sunday afternoon, August 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9. Brahms will be the featured composer during the three concerts of the opening weekend with three concerts devoted to Mozart and three to Bach on the succeeding weekends. On August 6, Mr. Leindsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and for the following weekend (August 13, 14) the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to be the soloists in several of the Russian composer's works.

Prior to each of the seven Friday evening Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts there will be a weekend prelude in which the soloists and members of the orsoloists and members of thed chestra will perform lesser known works of the weekend's principal composer. The guest conductors for the summer include Sir Adrian Boult, Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will make his annual appearance at Tanglewood on August 3 for the Boston Pops at Tanglewood Pension Fund concert.

A brochure with complete program and ticket information for this summer's Berkshire Festival is available from the Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, 02115. This brochure contains some information on the variety of other cultural attractions in the Berkshires. Further details on these and on accommodations may be obtained from the Berkshire Hills Conference, 100 North St., Pittsfield, 01203. The Berkshire Festival is featured in the United States Travel Service's Festival '66 program.

NewEnglandNewsclipAgency,Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News
W. HARTFORD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 5,920
MAY 26 1966

Good Listening

by AMELIA ALLEN

The Berkshire Symphonic Festival began its series of concerts in the summer of 1934, under the direction of Henry Hadley. Two successful seasons indicated greater interest than anticipated, and in 1936 the 210-acre Tanglewood estate overlooking Lake Mahkeenac, between Lenox and Stockbridge, in Berkshire County, Massachusetts, was given to the Boston Symphony Orchestra by Mrs. Mary Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappen. With this gift the Festival expanded and its committee raised funds for the building of the 6037-seat Music Shed opened in 1938. The fine natural acoustics of the Music Shed were improved in 1958 with the installation of the Edmund Hawes Talbot Memorial Stage Canopy.

In the beautiful surroundings of formal gardens, hemlock hedges, avenues of tall pine, and great lawns, the Boston Symphony Orchestra not only gives a series of twenty-four concerts, the Berkshire Festivals, but also maintains the Berkshire Music Center, the Orchestra's summer educational center for the advanced study of music.

The public is invited to visit and enjoy the beauty of the Tanglewood grounds and Formal Gardens at concert time; When the Music Center is in session visitors are asked to meet at the Main Gate and go through the grounds with a Guide.

The Berkshire Festival opens on Saturday, July 2 at 8:00 p.m. with Erich Leinsdorf conducting a program opening with Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser"; Stravinsky's Suite from "Petrouchka" and the Brahms Violin Concerto, Ashkenasi, soloist.

Sunday, July 3, at 2:30 p.m. Dr. Leinsdorf will conduct the Brahms Double Concerto for violin and cello, (the soloists will be Silverstein and Eskin;) and Mahler's Symphony No. 4.

Monday, July 4, the concert will be in the afternoon also (2:30); the program includes the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, with Simon as soloist; Strauss: "Till Eulenspiegel"; Sessions: Psalm 140 and Prokrfiev: "Classical Symphony".

The remaining weeks of the Festival the orchestra concerts will be given on Friday and Satu. ay evenings and Saturday afternoons.

Open Rehearsals will be held each Saturday morning at 10:30 for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund, admission $2.00.

For this summer Mr. Leinsdorf has chosen the Romantic Concerto as a theme. Two week-ends will be devoted to the music of Bach and Mozart, performed by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, with one or two romantic composers being featured on each of the remaining five weeks-ends. Mr. Leinsdorf has invited many eminent soloists and guest conductors to appear with the Orchestra at this summer's Festival. The prize winners of the Moscow Tchaikowsky Competitions have been invited to appear during the Festival's seventh week. A concert version of Mozart's "Magic Flute" will be given on August 6 and the 1966 Festival will close on Sunday afternoon, August 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

The final Winter Chamber Music Festival program on May 23 at Millard Auditorium was given by the Hartt Woodwind Quintet. The opening Quintet, Opus 71 by Beethoven, a composition conservative in idiom and traditional in form was the least effective of the five pieces played. The tempo

(Continued on Page 4)

HIGH FIDELITY
MUSICAL AMERICA
GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS.
MONTHLY 114,100
MAY 1966

Conductors and Orchestras

Winners of the International Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow next month will appear at the Tanglewood Festival on August 13 and 14, a bonus to the first prize. Conductor Erich Leinsdorf arranged it all through talks with cellist Rostropovich during his recent American tour and through correspondence with composer Shostakovich. The pianist, violinist, cellist, and singer who win the trip will all be heard in Tchaikovsky works. Leinsdorf has also announced three works which will have Boston Symphony premieres next season: a piano concerto by Elliott Carter, a piece for chorus and orchestra drawn from Dante by Robert Moevs, and a work for orchestra and narrator with words drawn from President Kennedy's speeches by William Sydeman.

HIGH FIDELITY
MUSICAL AMERICA
GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS.
MONTHLY 114,100
MAY 1966

TANGLEWOOD (LENOX), July 2–August 21. Music director Erich Leinsdorf has planned the programs for this year's Tanglewood Festival around the theme of the Romantic concerto. The Boston Symphony will give concerts on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays; Friday concert-goers will have a bonus of a "Prelude" to the programs (which begin at 9.00 p.m.), consisting of some of the less frequently performed music of the weekend's principal composer. Among the soloists will be pianists Van Cliburn, Claude Frank, Jeanne-Marie Darre, Abbey Simon; violinist Shmuel Ashkenasi; and the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition (violin, cello, voice, and piano). Opera will be represented by a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute. Guest conductors who will join Leinsdorf at Tanglewood are Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers, and Sir Adrian Boult.

NewEnglandNewsclipAgency,Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Circ. 41,447
MAY 17 1966

Berkshire Fete Is to Feature Symphony

Area residents are looking forward with interest to the annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

One of the highlights of this summer's festival will be the presentation of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Erich Leinsdorff.

Casting for the concert version of the composition has been completed, Leinsdorff announced recently. The performance will occupy the entire program for the night concert on Saturday, Aug. 6, during the festival's sixth week.

The Berkshire Festival is usually a major summer attraction and is especially popular with college students. Tanglewood is almost always crowded with students who sit in folding chairs or on the grass to listen to the concerts of classical music performed by Leinsdorff and the orchestra.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
MAY 29 1966

The Home of Music

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox—The summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, where for eight weeks (July 2-August 21) the orchestra presents the Berkshire Festival. The 24 concerts are given in the 6000-seat Music Shed, left center. Visitors are invited to picnic and stroll about the grounds. Adequate free parking is available for 5000 automobiles.

(BOSTON — "A landscape that combines every variety of beauty—valleys, in the hollow of which lie small lakes, glittering like sapphires; uplands . . .hills. . .woods. . .noble masses of granite rock. . . clear mountain brooks — all this, under a cloud varied sky, such as generally canopies mountain districts, the sunset glories of which are often magnificent.")

Such is the manner in which Fanny Kemble, renowned Shakespearean actress of the 19th Century, described the Berkshires of Western Massachusetts. The same description could apply to the area today for once out of the few small cities and towns of the region one finds the mountain scenery much as it was a 100 or more years ago. At that period there resided in the Berkshires a number of 19th Century literary giants. Melville, Holmes, and Longfellow were sometime residents of Pittsfield. In fact, Melville wrote his Moby Dick at "Arrowhead," still to be seen on Holmes Road, Pittsfield.

Overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, or more properly, Lake Mahkeenac, was Tanglewood, the mid-19th Century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan. At the edge of this lovely property was the little red cottage made immortal by its then struggling resident, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Today, Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as it has been for 30 summers following the 1936 gift of the property to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan.

The red cottage was destroyed by fire in the 1890's but has been rebuilt on the original foundations and now serves as studios for the orchestra's flourishing educational arm, the Berkshire Music Center which last summer celebrated its 25th anniversary.

Two years prior to the gift of Tanglewood to the Boston Symphony a series of summer concerts began in the Berkshires. These were the beginnings of today's Berkshire Festival, the best known and longest of the major music festivals in this country. In the beautiful surroundings of formal gardens, hemlock hedges, avenues of tall pines, and great lawns, the Boston Symphony Orchestra gives 24 concerts in the great Music Shed which possesses such fine natural acoustics that an equal number of patrons can be seated comfortably on the grass and easily hear the music.

For this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Music Director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the Romantic concerto as the theme. On each of six weekends with full orchestra two or three concerts will be performed by well known soloists.

The festival opens on July 2, the Saturday of the long Fourth of July weekend, and concludes eight weeks later on Sunday afternoon, August 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9. Brahms will be the featured composer during the three concerts of the opening weekend with three concerts devoted to Mozart and three to Bach on the succeeding weekends. On August 6, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and for the following weekend (August 13, 14) the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to be the soloists in several of the Russian composer's works.

Prior to each of the seven Friday evening Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts there will be a weekend prelude in which the soloists and members of the or- soloists and members of thed chestra will perform lesser known works of the weekend's principal composer. The guest conductors for the summer include Sir Adrian Boult, Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will make his annual appearance at Tanglewood on August 3 for the Boston Pops at Tanglewood Pension Fund concert.

A brochure with complete program and ticket information for this summer's Berkshire Festival is available from the Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, 02115. This brochure contains some information on the variety of other cultural attractions in the Berkshires. Further details on these and on accommodations may be obtained from the Berkshire Hills Conference, 100 North St., Pittsfield, 01203. The Berkshire Festival is featured in the United States Travel Service's Festival '66 program.

Cole
of California
$14 to $30

COLE
of California
The name Cole contures up the most advanced fashions. Truly fabrics and treatments. Truly called "escape" swimwear!

Good Listening

(Continued from Page 6)

and intonation was good but the players failed to achieve the necessary intensity of forte.

The Villa Lobos Quintet was vibrant, the scale of dynamics under better control. In this the players evidenced a sensitive feeling for the composer's unique idiom.

Robert Schaffer, bassoon, and Charles Gigliotti, piano, gave as essentially fine performance of Vivaldi's Sonata No. 3 in A minor. Mr. Schaffer is an able bassoonist; Mr. Gigliotti failed to achieve a satisfactory blend at all times; the piano tone is foreign to that of the bassoon and was obtrusive at times, the harpsichord would have been more effective as a companion instrument.

It was in the last group that the best playing of the evening was heard; both the Trois Pieces En Quintette by Deslandres and the Finale by Reiche are compositions rich in texture, full 19th century harmony and melody. So a fine series of chamber music concerts came to an end; and we have heard five fine programs, really fine playing and a variety of musical styles.

HIGH FIDELITY
MUSICAL AMERICA
GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS.
MONTHLY 114,100
MAY 1966

Conductors and Orchestras

Winners of the International Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow next month will appear at the Tanglewood Festival on August 13 and 14, a bonus to the first prize. Conductor Erich Leinsdorf arranged it all through talks with cellist Rostropovich during his recent American tour and through correspondence with composer Shostakovich. The pianist, violinist, cellist, and singer who win the trip will all be heard in Tchaikovsky works. Leinsdorf has also announced three works which will have Boston Symphony premieres next season: a piano concerto by Elliott Carter, a piece for chorus and orchestra drawn from Dante by Robert Moevs, and a work for orchestra and narrator with words drawn from President Kennedy's speeches by William Sydeman.

HIGH FIDELITY
MUSICAL AMERICA
GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS.
MONTHLY 114,100
MAY 1966

TANGLEWOOD (LENOX), July 2–August 21. Music director Erich Leinsdorf has planned the programs for this year's Tanglewood Festival around the theme of the Romantic concerto. The Boston Symphony will give concerts on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. Friday concert-goers will have a bonus of a "Prelude" to the programs (which begin at 9.00 p.m.), consisting of some of the less frequently performed music of the weekend's principal composer. Among the soloists will be pianists Van Cliburn, Claude Frank, Jeanne-Marie Darré, Abbey Simon; violinist Shmuel Ashkenasi; and the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition (violin, cello, voice, and piano). Opera will be represented by a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute. Guest conductors who will join Leinsdorf at Tanglewood are Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers, and Sir Adrian Boult.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Circ. 41,447
MAY 17 1966

Berkshire Fete Is to Feature Symphony

Area residents are looking forward with interest to the annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

One of the highlights of this summer's festival will be the presentation of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Erich Leinsdorff.

Casting for the concert version of the composition has been completed, Leinsdorff announced recently. The performance will occupy the entire program for the night concert on Saturday, Aug. 6, during the festival's sixth week.

The Berkshire Festival is usually a major summer attraction and is especially popular with college students. Tanglewood is almost always crowded with students who sit in folding chairs or on the grass to listen to the concerts of classical music performed by Leinsdorff and the orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177

MAY 21 1966

Shirley, Sills To Head Cast of 'The Magic Flute'

BOSTON—George Shirley and Beverly Sills will lead the cast in the Boston Symphony's concert version of "The Magic Flute" by Mozart. The performance will be Saturday, Aug. 6, at Tanglewood.

Shirley, of the Metropolitan Opera will sing the role of Tamino, the Egyptian prince. The three ladies will be Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey. Miss Sills will be the Queen of Night and John Reardon will sing Papengo. The queen's daughter Pamina will be sung by the Metropolitan's Judith Raskin. Ezio Flagello will play Sarastro, the High Priest of Isis.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914

MAY 13 1966

Season tickets for Berkshire Festival of Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, July 2 thru Aug 21, now on sale. Write for programs to Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

Courier EXPRESS
BUFFALO
Western New York's Greatest Newspaper
D. 158,172 SUN. 299,377

MAY 29 1966

Chicago Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER
D. 836,702 SUN. 1,151,995

APR 3 1966

Lenox: Enchanting Place for Quiet Holiday

Massachusetts' Tanglewood Is Nearby

By Arthur Meeker

The great Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony orchestra, accommodates 6,000 music lovers inside and additional thousands on its spacious lawns for concerts of the orchestra's Berkshire festival every summer weekend for six weeks in July and August.

LENOX, Mass. — Altho it's one of the smaller communities in the Berkshires, Lenox is by all odds the most celebrated. Since 1939, when the festivals at Tanglewood began — perhaps the most popular and certainly the best known in America — the place has swarmed with music lovers, who jam available accommodations to capacity every summer week-end, diffusing an atmosphere of earnest culture not entirely consonant with its former reputation as a chic resort.

Meeker

Forty years ago, when we first knew it, the region was breathlessly exclusive. Aspirants to social success in the east were then always advised to try a season here before venturing on Southampton or Newport. Sometimes invincibly smart New Yorkers, eschewing the hordes at the fashionable beaches, fled to these tranquil mountains to enjoy life at a more reasonable tempo. Didn't Edith Wharton spend 10 summers in Lenox, where she gathered material for "Ethan Frome" from her observation of what she no doubt thought of smugly as the Massachusetts peasants?

• • •

In our youth the landscape was dotted by elaborate estates inhabited by a dying—only they didn't know it—race of innocently snobbish millionaires. [O, those Garden Club women in hats that were hats!] Not many of them, we surmised even then, cared that their well patroled reservation had known an even earlier name during the middle years of the last century. It was when Hawthorne wrote "The House of Seven Gables" in the little red house, a replica of which you may still see on the Tanglewood grounds, and when Henry Ward Beecher and the renowned English actress Fanny Kemble were regular residents.

Lenox today, we are happy to note on our latest visit, seems to have preserved a good deal of charm in spite of the rash of motels and guest houses broken out for the festival trade. A good number of fine old dwellings are left in and near the village. There, too, you may still find the pink brick Hotel Curtis, relic of the modish decades. We recall as a boy driving over from Stockbridge — which hadn't one — to patronize its barber shop. It was a good hotel then, and we're told it is yet.

• • •

Most of the big estates we remember have been sold and subdivided, but enough are left to allow the countryside to retain its gracious air of a private park. Houses here were never built too close together; originally, in fact, this wasn't a real village, just a township. The Bowl, that prettiest of alpine lakelets, has lost none of its allure as an azure cup in the green hills.

We should like nothing better than to linger here . . . not perhaps in July and August any more, tho the air on these breezy slopes over 1,000 feet above the sea is brisker by far than it is in the neighboring resorts in narrow, lower lying valleys. We'd be a bit reluctant to tangle with the crowds at Tanglewood. But in the late flowering spring or gay gold-and-scarlet autumn, could there be a more enchanting place for a quiet holiday than Lenox?

SUMMER HOME of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is Tanglewood at Lenox, Mass., where for eight weeks (July 2-Aug. 21) the orchestra presents the Berkshire Festival. The 24 concerts are given in the 6,000-seat Music Shed (left center). Visitors are invited to picnic and stroll about the grounds. Adequate free parking is available for 5,000 automobiles.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,897

MAY 24 1966

Judith Raskin in Cast

Mozart's 'Magic Flute' At Tanglewood Aug. 6

LENOX — Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced completion of casting for the concert version of Mozart's "Magic Flute" to be performed at Tanglewood Aug. 6. The performance will occupy the entire program.

Queen's Daughter

Tamino, the Egyptian prince, will be sung by George Shirley. The three ladies will include Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey. John Reardon will be heard in the role of Papageno, with Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be performed by Nico Castel.

The Queen's daughter, Pamina, will be sung by Judith Raskin. Robert Jones and Ara Berberian will be heard as the two priests, and Ezio Flagello will portray Sarastro, the high priest of Isis. Anne Elgar will be Papagena.

Miss Simon and Miss Raskin will be appearing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time as will be Jones and Reardon.

* * *

Leinsdorf Abroad

Following a 10-day State Department visit to Japan where he concluded details for the exchange of two players for next season between the Boston Symphony and the Japan Philharmonic, Leinsdorf flew to Prague for concerts with the Czech Philharmonic.

Next week he will conduct three performances of "The Marriage of Figaro" during the Metropolitan Opera Co.'s visit in Paris.

Leinsdorf next will travel to Rome to record "Un Ballo in Maschera" for RCA Victor prior to returning to this country for the opening of the Berkshire Festival.

* * *

Silverstein to Moscow

Joseph Silverstein, the Boston Symphony's concertmaster, will travel to Moscow next month to hear the Tchaikovsky Competitions. The winners of this year's competitions have been invited to appear as soloists at the Berkshire Festival concerts Aug. 13 and 14.

While in Moscow he also will talk with officials concerning the tour of the Boston Symphony Chamber Players to the Soviet Union in the spring of 1967. The players currently are on their first transcontinental tour. They now are at the Ojai Festival, Ojai, Cal.

THE BLADE
TOLEDO, OHIO
D. 180,583 SUN. 186,805
MAY 1 5 1966

A Vacation For Music Enthusiasts

By LEE STEELE
Blade Staff Writer

FOR A two-week vacation that will offer you music under the sun, as well as under the stars, consider Tanglewood—an estate of 210 acres in the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts. You need only the talent to listen — and to look.

There's dormitory living, a rustic atmosphere conducive to meditating under a tree, or hiking with classmates, and the cost is modest: $150 for two weeks, including two meals daily.

Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the home of the Berkshire Music Center, which sponsors weekend Boston Symphony concerts. For the talented music students, there are classes, rehearsals, performances, throughout the week.

Where does the listener come in? Just about anytime he wishes to wander into a rehearsal or a performance.

Vacationers may enroll in the seminar in Listening and Analysis for a minimum of two weeks to as long as eight weeks, between June 27 and Aug. 21. Registration dates are June 24-25; July 11, July 25, or August 8.

Lectures and class discussions (two-hour sessions thrice weekly) apply to the Boston Symphony repertory and other performances at the Center. This includes chamber music and choral singing activities.

For two weeks, tuition fee is $55 plus a $20 registration fee, and $75 for two meals daily and dormitory room. (Note: Bring your own bed linen and blankets and remember that it's cool in the Berkshires in the evenings.)

There are camping facilities for men at the Tanglewood lakefront, but none for women or families. However, information on housing and camping in the Berkshire area is available from Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass.

For information and application blanks write to Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

Vacationers or visitors planning to spend only a few days listening to concerts at Tanglewood may arrange to do so by becoming members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 13,202
APR 2 6 1966

Loving Care Maintains Fine Tanglewood Lawn

By mid-June most well cared for New England lawns take on the appearance of carefully vacuumed green carpets and tend to remain that way, barring drought, through the summer.

BUT consider such a lawn after hundreds of thousands of feet had tramped over it in the course of the "hot" months of July and August — would it still be lush, green and soft at the end of such merciless treatment?

It is a difficult question to answer but seeing is believing and it is recommended that one cast a discerning eye over the great lawns at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home at Tangelwood in Lenox.

In the lovely time of late spring-early summer it is probably one of the most verdant of New England lawns and following the eight weeks of the Berkshire Festival (which last summer drew over 240,000 visitors) though not quite at its June peak the Tanglewood lawn confounds many who wonder how it can look so well after such harsh treatment.

Planned Program

The answer is simply that the 20 acres of Tanglewood lawn appears as it does from a planned program of intense care which could well be adapted by many home-owners who fret over their lawns.

The original problem at Tanglewood was compaction, too much thatch, and lack of root system. To combat the compaction the lawns are aerified several times in the spring and fall. During the summer months when the thousands of visitors are walking daily on the grass, a slicing machine is used every seven to ten days. Both of these processes allow water, fertilizer and air to reach the root system, developing and maintaining it.

In the spring and fall before fertilizing, an aero-thatch machine is used to remove thatch or dead grass. Also in the fall approximately 22 yards of top dressing are applied to the most heavily trampled areas.

Lawns Fertilized

After being aerified in September the lawns are heavily fertilized. This helps to establish a healthy root system while the growing season is still in progress. A lighter application of fertilizer is also applied when spring growth is well underway, approximately six weeks after the first mowing. In August soil samples are collected and tested for fertility and acidity. If lime is needed (to reduce acidity), it is applied during the winter when the ground is frozen.

As with any lawn weeds and pests are always a problem and these are disposed of in the early spring by application of insecticides and weed killers from a tank sprayer.

James Kiley, the superintendent of Tanglewood and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's grass expert, maintains that religiously following this program has brought the Tanglewood lawns to their present excellent condition, but none of these methods of lawn care would be of any value without sufficient water.

Irrigation System

During the last few years of severe drought in the northeast when water was not available from normal sources, the Orchestra under Kiley's supervision installed an irrigation system which draws water from a spring-fed man-made pond on the Tanglewood property. Since the great lawn is a vital part of Tanglewood providing space for thousands of concert goers the Orchestra could ill afford to lose the grass or the thousands of dollars that would be required to replace the lawn.

It is not recommended that the homeowner with lawn problems rush out and order 22 yards of top dressing, but these methods properly scaled down to home lawn size can produce gratifying results even when the lawn is subject to the children's hard treatment.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4000
Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,179
JUN 2 5 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 2,363
JUN 2 3 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4000
Independent
AGAWAM, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 2,558
JUN 2 3 1966

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1966 Berkshire Festival at its summer home in Tanglewood (Lenox, Massachusetts) will open its 29th season with a concert by the full orchestra under the direction of Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf on Saturday evening, July 2. There will be an eight week season with the Romantic Concerto as the theme of the Festival. There will be 24 concerts by the Orchestra in the Music Shed and added to this year's weekend schedule wil lbe Weekend Preludes be-added to this year's weekend schedule will be Weekend Preludes be-

Featured works during this Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood will be the Bach St. John Passion on July 16, Mozart's "The Magic Flute" on August 6 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 for the final concert of the season on August 21.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 18,000
JUNE 1 8 1966

Eight Week Festival For Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. —Three concerts given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's (July 2; 8 p. m.) program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Schmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p. m.) Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4; 2:30) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer gave two during World War 2.

THE NATIONAL OBSERVER
WASHINGTON, D. C.
W. 205,878
JUN 2 7 1966

Berkshire Festival (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.; July 2 through Aug. 21). The Boston Symphony and conductor Erich Leinsdorf are back at their usual stand for the nation's best-known summer music festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUN 3 1966

p.m. Signs of The Zodiac.

Musical Events

Season tickets for Berkshire Festival of Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, July 2 thru Aug 21, now on sale. Write for programs to Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

Benny Goodman will again present four concerts to benefit the Stamford Museum, starring Pete Fountain, Henryk Szeryng, Joanna Simon, Charlie Byrd, Rachel Goodman, Peter Serkin, Arnold Steinhardt; ticket application at Stamford Museum; concerts in June & July.

Performing Arts Center at Purchase, N.Y. seeks for

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUN 2 3 1966

Tanglewood Theme, Romantic Concerti

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1966 Berkshire Festival at its summer home, Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.) will open with a concert by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Saturday evening, July 2. As it has for the past several years the Festival will span eight weeks (July 2 — August 21) and include 24 concerts by the Orchestra in the Music Shed.

In announcing his plans for Tanglewood, Mr. Leinsdorf stated a musical theme would be the Romantic concerto with one or two composers being featured on each of the eight weekends. The summer festival lends itself to certain musical ideas not practical in a more rigid winter schedule, and taking advantage of this Mr. Leinsdorf has arranged for seven Weekend Preludes before each of the Berkshire Festival Friday evenings.

Weekend Preludes

To enable patrons traveling the distances between the metropolitan area and Tanglewood in more comfortable time, and to allow more leisurely pre-concert dining the Festival will experiment this summer with a starting hour of 9:00 p.m. for the seven Friday evenings. Carrying this experiment to the musical side of the Festival, a dividend in the form of Weekend Preludes will be provided at no additional cost prior to each Friday concert.

Fourth of July Weekend

The opening days of the Festival will be extended over the Fourth of July with concerts on Saturday evening (July 2; 8:00 p.m.), Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4; 2:30 p.m.). For each of the Festival's remaining weeks the Orchestra's programs will be given on Fridays (9:00 p.m.), and Sundays (2:30 p.m.).

Romantic Concerti

Three concerti of Brahms will be performed at Tanglewood's opening weekend (July 2, 3, 4). Shmuel Ashkenaisi will be heard for the first time at the Berkshire Festival on July 2, performing Brahms Violin Concerto. Two principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, principal cello, will play the Concerto for Violin and Cello by Brahms on Sunday afternoon (July 3) and Pianist Abbey Simon will be soloist Monday afternoon (July 4) in Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUN 24 1966

Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concerts each week-end July 2 thru Aug. Ticket office open 9 a.m. 6 p.m. daily except Sundays p.m., phone 413-637-1600. Write Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 240 for programs.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUN 1 0 1966

Season tickets for Berkshire Festival of Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, July 2 thru Aug 21, now on sale. Write for programs to Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

THE BLADE
TOLEDO, OHIO
D. 180,5[illegible]
MAY 1 5 1966

A Vacation For Music Enthusiasts

By LEE STEELE
Blade Staff Writer

FOR A two-week vacation that will offer you music under the sun, as well as under the stars, consider Tanglewood—an estate of 210 acres in the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts. You need only the talent to listen — and to look.

There's dormitory living, a rustic atmosphere conducive to meditating under a tree, or hiking with classmates, and the cost is modest: $150 for two weeks, including two meals daily.

Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the home of the Berkshire Music Center, which sponsors weekend Boston Symphony concerts. For the talented music students, there are classes, rehearsals, performances, throughout the week.

Where does the listener come in? Just about anytime he wishes to wander into a rehearsal or a performance.

Vacationers may enroll in the seminar in Listening and Analysis for a minimum of two weeks to as long as eight weeks, between June 27 and Aug. 21. Registration dates are June 24-25; July 11, July 25, or August 8.

Lectures and class discussions (two-hour sessions thrice weekly) apply to the Boston Symphony repertory and other performances at the Center. This includes chamber music and choral singing activities.

For two weeks, tuition fee is $55 plus a $20 registration fee, and $75 for two meals daily and dormitory room. (Note: Bring your own bed linen and blankets and remember that it's cool in the Berkshires in the evenings.)

There are camping facilities for men at the Tanglewood lakefront, but none for women or families. However, information on housing and camping in the Berkshire area is available from Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass.

For information and application blanks write to Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

Vacationers or visitors planning to spend only a few days listening to concerts at Tanglewood may arrange to do so by becoming members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUN 2 4 1966

[illegible] Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concerts [illegible]ch week-end July 2 thru Aug [illegible] Ticket office open 9 a.m. [illegible] 6 p.m. daily except Sundays [illegible] p.m., phone 413-637-1600. [illegible]rite Festival Ticket Office, [illegible]anglewood, Lenox, Mass., [illegible]240 for programs.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 13,202
APR 2 6 1966

Loving Care Maintains Fine Tanglewood Lawn

By mid-June most well cared for New England lawns take on the appearance of carefully vacuumed green carpets and tend to remain that way, barring drought, through the summer.

BUT consider such a lawn after hundreds of thousands of feet had tramped over it in the course of the "hot" months of July and August — would it still be lush, green and soft at the end of such merciless treatment?

It is a difficult question to answer but seeing is believing and it is recommended that one cast a discerning eye over the great lawns at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home at Tangelwood in Lenox.

In the lovely time of late spring-early summer it is probably one of the most verdant of New England lawns and following the eight weeks of the Berkshire Festival (which last summer drew over 240,000 visitors) though not quite at its June peak the Tanglewood lawn confounds many who wonder how it can look so well after such harsh treatment.

Planned Program

The answer is simply that the 20 acres of Tanglewood lawn appears as it does from a planned program of intense care which could well be adapted by many home-owners who fret over their lawns.

The original problem at Tanglewood was compaction, too much thatch, and lack of root system. To combat the compaction the lawns are aerified several times in the spring and fall. During the summer months when the thousands of visitors are walking daily on the grass, a slicing machine is used every seven to ten days. Both of these processes allow water, fertilizer and air to reach the root system, developing and maintaining it.

In the spring and fall before fertilizing, an aero-thatch machine is used to remove thatch or dead grass. Also in the fall approximately 22 yards of top dressing are applied to the most heavily trampled areas.

Lawns Fertilized

After being aerified in September the lawns are heavily fertilized. This helps to establish a healthy root system while the growing season is still in progress. A lighter application of fertilizer is also applied when spring growth is well underway, approximately six weeks after the first mowing. In August soil samples are collected and tested for fertility and acidity. If lime is needed (to reduce acidity), it is applied during the winter when the ground is frozen.

As with any lawn weeds and pests are always a problem and these are disposed of in the early spring by application of insecticides and weed killers from a tank sprayer.

James Kiley, the superintendent of Tanglewood and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's grass expert, maintains that religiously following this program has brought the Tanglewood lawns to their present excellent condition, but none of these methods of lawn care would be of any value without sufficient water.

Irrigation System

During the last few years of severe drought in the northeast when water was not available from normal sources, the Orchestra under Kiley's supervision installed an irrigation system which draws water from a spring-fed man-made pond on the Tanglewood property. Since the great lawn is a vital part of Tanglewood providing space for thousands of concert goers, the Orchestra could ill afford to lose the grass or the thousands of dollars that would be required to replace the lawn.

It is not recommended that the homeowner with lawn problems rush out and order 22 yards of top dressing, but these methods properly scaled down to home lawn size can produce gratifying results even when the lawn is subject to the children's hard treatment.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 18,000
JUNE 1 8 1966

Eight Week Festival For Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. —Three concerts given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's (July 2; 8 p. m.) program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Schmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p. m.) Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon, (July 4; 2:30) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War 2.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUN 1 0 1966

Season tickets for Berkshire Festival of Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, July 2 thru Aug 21, now on sale. Write for programs to Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,179
JUN 2 5 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 2,363
JUN 2 3 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Independent
AGAWAM, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 2,558
JUN 2 3 1966

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1966 Berkshire Festival at its summer home in Tanglewood (Lenox, Massachusetts) will open its 29th season with a concert by the full orchestra under the direction of Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf on Saturday evening, July 2. There will be an eight week season with the Romantic Concerto as the theme of the Festival. There will be 24 concerts by the Orchestra in the Music Shed and added to this year's weekend schedule wil lbe Weekend Preludes be- added to this year's weekend schedule will be Weekend Preludes be-

Featured works during this Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood will be the Bach St. John Passion on July 16, Mozart's "The Magic Flute" on August 6 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 for the final concert of the season on August 21.

THE NATIONAL OBSERVER
WASHINGTON, D. C.
W. 205,873
JUN 2 7 1966

Berkshire Festival (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.; July 2 through Aug. 21). The Boston Symphony and conductor Erich Leinsdorf are back at their usual stand for the nation's best-known summer music festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUN 2 3 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUN 3 1966

[illegible] Signs of The Zodiac.

Musical Events

Season tickets for Berkshire Festival of Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, July 2 thru Aug 21, now on sale. Write for programs to Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

Benny Goodman will again present four concerts to benefit the Stamford Museum, starring Pete Fountain, Henryk Szeryng, Joanna Simon, Charlie Byrd, Rachel Goodman, Peter Serkin, Arnold Steinhardt; ticket application at Stamford Museum; concerts in June & July.

Performing Arts Center at Saratoga, N.Y., write for [illegible]

Tanglewood Theme, Romantic Concerti

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1966 Berkshire Festival at its summer home, Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.) will open with a concert by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Saturday evening, July 2. As it has for the past several years the Festival will span eight weeks (July 2 — August 21) and include 24 concerts by the Orchestra in the Music Shed.

In announcing his plans for Tanglewood, Mr. Leinsdorf stated a musical theme would be the Romantic concerto with one or two composers being featured on each of the eight weekends. The summer festival lends itself to certain musical ideas not practical in a more rigid winter schedule, and taking advantage of this Mr. Leinsdorf has arranged for seven Weekend Preludes before each of the Berkshire Festival Friday evenings.

Weekend Preludes

To enable patrons traveling the distances between the metropolitan area and Tanglewood in more comfortable time, and to allow more leisurely preconcert dining the Festival will experiment this summer with a starting hour of 9:00 p.m. for the seven Friday evenings. Carrying this experiment to the musical side of the Festival, a dividend in the form of Weekend Preludes will be provided at no additional cost prior to each Friday concert.

Fourth of July Weekend

The opening days of the Festival will be extended over the Fourth of July with concerts on Saturday evening (July 2; 8:00 p.m.), Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4; 2:30 p.m.). For each of the Festival's remaining weeks the Orchestra's programs will be given on Fridays (9:00 p.m.), and Sundays (2:30 p.m.).

Romantic Concerti

Three concerti of Brahms will be performed at Tanglewood's opening weekend (July 2, 3, 4). Shmuel Ashkenaisi will be heard for the first time at the Berkshire Festival on July 2, performing Brahms Violin Concerto. Two principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, principal cello, will play the Concerto for Violin and Cello by Brahms on Sunday afternoon (July 3) and Pianist Abbey Simon will be soloist Monday afternoon (July 4) in Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 55,425
JUN 18 1966

Tanglewood Berkshire Festival

Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. July 2-Aug. 21, Fridays at 9 p.m., Saturdays at 8 p.m., and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Open rehearsals Saturdays at 10:30 a.m. Weekend Preludes at 7 p.m. Friday

July 2: Erich Leinsdorf conducting. Shmuel Ashkenasi, violin. Wagner's Overture from Tannhauser, Stravinsky's Suite from Petroushka, and Brahms' Violin Concerto.

July 3: Leinsdorf conducting. Joseph Silverstein, piano; Jules Eskin, cello; Anne Elgar, soprano. Brahms' Double Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 4.

July 4: Leinsdorf conducting. Anne Elgar, soprano; Joanne Simon, mezzo-soprano. Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 (Classical), Sessions' Psalm 140, Strauss Till Eulenspiegel, and Brahm's Piano Concerto No. 2.

July 8: Leinsdorf conducting. Mozart program. Malcom Frager, piano. March No. 3 in C, Sympphony No. 31 (Paris), Piano Concerto in B flat, and Sypmphony in C major (Jupiter).

Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m.: Mozart's Scatological Canons with the Tanglewood choir and Sonata for Two Pianos, Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir, pianist.

July 9: Leinsdorf conducting. Mozart program. Claude Frank piano. Symphony No. 29, Piano Concerto in C major, and Posthorn Serenade.

July 10: Sir Adrian Boult conducting. Mozart program. Malcolm Frager, piano. Symphony No. 34, Piano Concerto in D major, and Symphony No. 39.

July 15: Szymon Goldberg conducting. Bach program. Szymon Goldberg, violin. Violin Concerto in E major, Suite No. 2, Four Fugues from the Art of Fugue, and Suite No. 4. Weekend Prelude at 7p.m.: Bach's Brandenberg Concerto No. 6 and Brandenberg Concerto No. 3.

July 16: Leinsdorf conducting. Walter Carringer, tenor; Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Ernst Haefliger, tenor; Thomas Paul, bass; Norman Treigle, bass, Beverly Wolff, mezzo-soprano; and the Tanglewood Choir. Bach's St. John Passion.

July 17: Leinsdorf conducting. Bach program. Curtin, soprano; Haefliger, tenor; Treigle, bass; Wolff, mezzo-soprano; and the Tanglewood Choir. Brandenberg Concerto No. 1 in F major, Cantata 55 (Ich armer Mensch) and the Magnificat.

July 22: Seiji Ozawa conducting. Joseph Silverstein, violin. Overture, Schubert's Symphony No. 5, Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, and Stravinsky's Firebird Suite. Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m.: Chopin's piano Trio in G minor, Op. 8, and the Tanglewood Choir, songs of Mendelssohn and Rachmaninoff.

July 23: Leinsdorf conducting. Van Cliburn, piano. Wagner's Excerpts from Act 3 of Die Meistersinger, Schumann's Symphony No. 2, and Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

July 24: Leinsdorf conducting. Beethoven's Overture to Coriolanus, Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 6, and Chopin's Concerto in F minor with Lilian Kallir at the piano.

July 29: Leinsdorf conducting. Jules Eskin, cello. Smetana's Overture to the Bartered Bride, Debussy's Three Nocturnes, Schumann's Cello Concerto, and Elgar's Enigma Variations. Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m.: Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir, piano. Schumann's Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, and Horn, Op. 46, and Lieder.

July 30: Leinsdorf conducting. Lillian Kallir, piano; Joseph Silverstein, violin. Weber's Overture Der Freischutz, Schumann Konzertstuck in G major and Fantasy in C major, and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

July 31: Thomas Schippers conducting Claude Frank, piano. Rossini's Overture La Gazza Ladra, Schumann's Piano Concerto, and Mussorgsky-Ravel's Pictures at an Exhibition.

Aug. 5: Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting. Leslie Parnas, cello. Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet 2nd Suite, Saint-Saen's cello Concerto, and Schumann's Symphony No. 4. Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m.: Mozart's Songs for Soprano and Piano and Organ Fantasia in F minor.

Aug. 6: Leinsdorf conducting Mozart's Magic Flute, with the Tanglewood Choir.

Aug. 7: Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting. Barber's Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance, Saint-Saen's Piano Concerto No. 4, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

Aug. 12: Sixten Ehrling conducting. Sibellus' Symphony No. 1 and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4. Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m.: Tchaikovsky's Trio for Piano, Violin, and Cello.

Aug. 13: Leinsdorf conducting. The Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition Winners have been invited to be soloists Aug. 13-14 Hindemith's Mathis der Maler, Tchaikovsky's Rocco Variations and A Piano Concerto.

Aug. 14: Leinsdorf conducting. Prokofiev's Symphony No. 3, Tchaikovsky's An Aria and Vilin Concerto.

Aug. 19: Leinsdorf conducting. Jeanne-Marie Darre, piano. certo No. 2. Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m.: Liszt's Piano Transcriptions with Jorge Bolet, pianist.

Aug. 20: Leinsdorf conducting. Jorge Bolet, piano. Brahms' Symphony No. 4, Liszt's Fantasy on The Ruins of Athens, and Piano Concerto No. 1.

Aug. 21: Leinsdorf conducting. Eunice Alberts, contralto; Richard Cassilly, tenor; Jane Marsh, soprano; Thomas Paul, bass; and the Festival Chorus. Verdi's Te Deum and Beethoven Symphony No. 9.

Chamber Music

Berkshire Festival Chamber Music Concerts, Tuesdays at 8 p.m. in the teater at Tanglewood, July 5-Aug. 16.

July 5: Boston Symphony Chamber Players. Claude Frank piano. Mozart's Piano Quartet, Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon, and Piano, Villa Lobos' Duo for Flute and Bassoon, and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin Cello, and Piano Op, 99.

July 12: Guarneri Quartet. Mozart's Quartet, Webern's Five Pieces, and Beethoven's Quartet in E-flat, Op. 127.

July 19: Roman Totenberg, violin. Beethoven Sonatas.

July 26: Boston Symphony Chamber Players. Claude Frank piano. Mzart's Flute Quartet, Colgrass' Variations for Four Drums and Villa, Haieff's Duo for Oboe and Bassoon, and Brahms' Trio for Piano, Vilon and Horn, Op. 40.

Aug. 2: Phyllis Curtin, soprano.

Aug. 9: Lenox Quartet. Haydn's Quartet in G minor, Bartok's Quartet No. 5, and Beethoven's Quartet in E minor, Op. 59, No. 2.

Aug. 16: Composers Quartet. Festival of Contemporary Music in Cooperation with Fromm Music Foundation.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Circ. 5,172
JUN 23 1966

Many Summer Music Festivals Offer Much For Music Lovers

By IRENE JARRY

The Berkshire Tanglewood Festival at Lenox, Mass., under the baton of Erich Leinsdorf, is starting its annual 8-week concerts next week (July 2-August 21) with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Besides having the best and most varied music American can offer, Tanglewood is known for its scenic country setting. It is considered as high in artistic level as any festival in Europe.

As I have said every year it is there that the principals of the orchestra together with a distinguished faculty including some of the best composers of America and Europe hold the annual session of the Berkshire Music Center, a school for "Living and working in Music." New composers and compositions are born there. They have a large choral group, forums, chamber music, opera, and every other type of musical activity. It is the final roster for talent. One encounters artists, actors, writers, and personalities. People are invaried departments and the music vited to visit the school with its store with its many scores and books.

This year because of the holiday Leinsdorf has selected for the first week end a mixture of romantic and modern music with solo artists playing a different concerto at each performance. The second week is devoted to Mozart and the third to Bach. Starting July 22 are their regular varied concerts of old and new composers and soloist. You can get a full program from Boston Symphony Hall.

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MONTHLY 885,000
JUN 1966

The best-known festival in the country occurs each year at Tanglewood, a 200-acre estate of meticulously cultivated elms, pines, and boxwood hedges at the edge of Lake Mahkeenac in the Berkshires. Here in Massachusetts, at first under the leadership of Serge Koussevitzky, then Charles Munch, and now Erich Leinsdorf, the Boston Symphony Orchestra performs masterpieces for audiences often as large as 6,000.

"Little did I think," said Koussevitzky, "that my own early dream of a Music and Art Center in Moscow, in the heart of Russia, would find its realization in the heart of New England a quarter of a century later. Indeed, miracles cannot be accounted for."

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Circ. 15,882
JUN 20 1966

Live Tanglewood Broadcasts

TANGLEWOOD — Richard L. Kaye, Vice President and station manager of WCRB (AM & FM), announces the station will carry the Saturday evening concerts of the Boston Symphmy Orchestra live from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, beginning Saturday, July 2.

The eight Saturday programs, in monophonic sound on AM and FM, will begin at 8 p.m. instead of the customary 8:30 p.m. broadcast time. WCRB is the only full time AM & FM concert music station in the Greater Boston area. The live Berkshire Festival concerts will be produced in cooperation with educational station WGBH which will also carry them.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600
JUN 26 1966

B.S.O. Concerts

For the first time in the history of the Berkshire Music Festival all Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be broadcast live from Tanglewood on WGBH-FM.

Beginning with the inaugural concert Saturday, July 2 at 8 p.m., every major event at this year's festival will be heard direct from Lenox, Mass.

Chronicle Sun
CAMBRIDGE, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 12,845
JUN 23 1966

Tanglewood on FM

For the first time in the history of the Berkshire Music Festival all Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be broadcast live from Tanglewood on WGBH-FM, beginning with the inaugural concert Saturday, July 2 at 8 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUN 23 1966

Tanglewood Ticket Office Now Open

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. — The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that its Festival Ticket Office at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. opened for the 1966 Berkshire Festival on June 20. Until July 2, the Ticket Office will be open daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. with the exception of Sunday, June 26, when the hours will be 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will open the 1966 Berkshire Festival with a concert under the direction of Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Saturday evening, July 2. Concerts will be given each weekend throughout the eight week Festival which closes Sunday, August 21. The Berkshire Music Center, the Orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will open on Sunday afternoon, June 26.

Once the Festival concerts have begun the daily hours for the Festival Ticket Office will remain 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on concert nights through intermission. Sunday hours will be 10 a.m. through intermission of the afternoon concert.

Information pertaining to Berkshire Festival tickets and programs may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240 or by calling Tanglewood (413) 637-1600.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
WOBURN, Mass.
Circ. 7,950
JUN 28 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Record-American (m) (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 411,789
JUN 22 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 5,168
JUN 21 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 13,202
JUN 24 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
JUN 20 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186
JUN 30 1966

Tanglewood To Be On FM

WFCR-FM (88.5 MC), Four-College Radio in Amherst, will be broadcasting live every major concert to take place at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. Beginning July 2, these special programs six times a week, in the first three weeks of August, these live broadcasts will be heard every day.

All the weekend Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be broadcast, so will chamber music programs by world-famous ensembles on Tuesday evenings. On Wednesday and Thursday, the talented students at the Berkshire Music Center will perform. (Monday nights WFCR will continue broadcasting the weekly Cleveland Orchestra concerts).

The first program from Tanglewood (Saturday, July 2, at 8 o'clock) will feature Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser," the Suite from "Petrouchka," by Stravinsky, and Brahms' Violin Concerto with soloist Shumel Ashkenasi.

The schedule for July Tanglewood Concerts to be broadcast live over WFCR (88.5 FM) is as follows: Sundays, 2:30 to 4:30; Tuesdays, 8 to 10; Wednesdays, 8 to 10; Thursdays, 8 to 10; Fridays, 9 to 11 (starting July 8); Saturdays, 8 to 10.

The Cleveland Orchestra Concerts, Mondays nights, are from 8 to 10.

WFCR is the non-commercial educational radio station operated by Amherst, Mount Holyoke, and Smith Colleges, and the University of Massachusetts. WFCR is a member of the Eastern Educational Radio Radio Network.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 55,425
JUN 18 1966

Tanglewood Berkshire Festival

Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. July 2-Aug. 21, Fridays at 9 p.m., Saturdays at 8 p.m., and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Open rehearsals Saturdays at 10:30 a.m. Weekend Preludes at 7 p.m. Friday

July 2: Erich Leinsdorf conducting. Shmuel Ashkenasi, violin. Wagner's Overture from Tannhauser, Stravinsky's Suite from Petroushka, and Brahms' Violin Concerto.

July 3: Leinsdorf conducting. Joseph Silverstein, piano; Jules Eskin, cello; Anne Elgar, soprano. Brahms' Double Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 4.

July 4: Leinsdorf conducting. Anne Elgar, soprano; Joanne Simon, mezzo-soprano. Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 (Classical), Sessions' Psalm 140, Strauss Till Eulenspiegel, and Brahm's Piano Concerto No. 2.

July 8: Leinsdorf conducting. Mozart program. Malcom Frager, piano. March No. 3 in C, Sympphony No. 31 (Paris), Piano Concerto in B flat, and Sypmphony in C major (Jupiter).

Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m.: Mozart's Scatological Canons with the Tanglewood choir and Sonata for Two Pianos, Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir, pianist.

July 9: Leinsdorf conducting. Mozart program. Claude Frank piano. Symphony No. 29, Piano Concerto in C major, and Posthorn Serenade.

July 10: Sir Adrian Boult conducting. Mozart program. Malcolm Frager, piano. Symphony No. 34, Piano Concerto in D major, and Symphony No. 39.

July 15: Szymon Goldberg conducting. Bach program. Szymon Goldberg, violin. Violin Concerto in E major, Suite No. 2, Four Fugues from the Art of Fugue, and Suite No. 4. Weekend Prelude at 7p.m.: Bach's Brandenberg Concerto No. 6 and Brandenberg Concerto No. 3.

July 16: Leinsdorf conducting. Walter Carringer, tenor; Phylis Curtin, soprano; Ernst Haefliger, tenor; Thomas Paul, bass; Norman Treigle, bass, Beverly Wolff, mezzo-soprano; and the Tanglewood Choir. Bach's St. John Passion.

July 17: Leinsdorf conducting. Bach program. Curtin, soprano; Haefliger, tenor; Treigle, bass; Wolff, mezzo-soprano; and the Tanglewood Choir. Brandenberg Concerto No. 1 in F major, Cantata 55 (Ich armer Mensch) and the Magnificat.

July 22: Seiji Ozawa conducting. Joseph Silverstein, violin. Overture, Schubert's Symphony No. 5, Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, and Stravinsky's Firebird Suite. Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m.: Chopin's piano Trio in G minor, Op. 8, and the Tanglewood Choir, songs of Mendelssohn and Rachmaninoff.

July 23: Leinsdorf conducting. Van Cliburn, piano. Wagner's Excerpts from Act 3 of Die Meistersinger, Schumann's Symphony No. 2, and Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

July 24: Leinsdorf conducting. Beethoven's Overture to Coriolanus, Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 6, and Chopin's Concerto in F minor with Lilian Kallir at the piano.

July 29: Leinsdorf conducting. Jules Eskin, cello. Smetana's Overture to the Bartered Bride, Debussy's Three Nocturnes, Schumann's Cello Concerto, and Elgar's Enigma Variations. Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m.: Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir, piano. Schumann's Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, and Horn, Op. 46, and Lieder.

July 30: Leinsdorf conducting. Lillian Kallir, piano; Joseph Silverstein, violin. Weber's Overture Der Freischutz, Schumann Koncertstuck in G major and Fantasy in C major, and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

July 31: Thomas Schippers conducting Claude Frank, piano. Rossini's Overture La Gazza Ladra, Schumann's Piano Concerto, and Mussorgsky-Ravel's Pictures at an Exhibition.

Aug. 5: Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting. Leslie Parnas, cello. Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet 2nd Suite, Saint-Saen's cello Concerto, and Schumann's Symphony No. 4. Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m.: Mozart's Songs for Soprano and Piano and Organ Fantasia in F minor.

Aug. 6: Leinsdorf conducting Mozart's Magic Flute, with the Tanglewood Choir.

Aug. 7: Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting. Barber's Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance, Saint-Saen's Piano Concerto No. 4, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

Aug. 12: Sixten Ehrling conducting. Sibelius' Symphony No. 1 and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4. Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m.: Tchaikovsky's Trio for Piano, Violin, and Cello.

Aug. 13: Leinsdorf conducting. The Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition Winners have been invited to be soloists Aug. 13-14 Hindemith's Mathis der Maler, Tchaikovsky's Rocco Variations and A Piano Concerto.

Aug. 14: Leinsdorf conducting. Prokofiev's Symphony No. 3, Tchaikovsky's An Aria and Vilin Concerto.

Aug. 19: Leinsdorf conducting. Jeanne-Marie Darre, piano. certo No. 2. Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m.: Liszt's Piano Transcriptions with Jorge Bolet, pianist.

Aug. 20: Leinsdorf conducting, Jorge Bolet, piano. Brahms' Symphony No. 4, Liszt's Fantasy on The Ruims of Athens, and Piano Concerto No. 1.

Aug. 21: Leinsdorf conducting. Eunice Alberts, contralto; Richard Cassilly, tenor; Jane Marsh, soprano; Thomas Paul, bass; and the Festival Chorus. Verdi's Te Deum and Beethoven Symphony No. 9.

Chamber Music

Berkshire Festival Chamber Music Concerts, Tuesdays at 8 p.m. in the teater at Tanglewood, July 5-Aug. 16.

July 5: Boston Symphony Chamber Players. Claude Frank piano. Mozart's Piano Quartet, Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon, and Piano, Villa Lobos' Duo for Flute and Bassoon, and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin Cello, and Piano Op. 99.

July 12: Guarneri Quartet. Mozart's Quartet, Webern's Five Pieces, and Beethoven's Quartet in E-flat, Op. 127.

July 19: Roman Totenberg, violin. Beethoven Sonatas.

July 26: Boston Symphony Chamber Players. Claude Frank piano. Mzart's Flute Quartet, Colgrass' Variations for Four Drums and Villa, Haieff's Duo for Oboe and Bassoon, and Brahms' Trio for Piano, Vilon and Horn, Op. 40.

Aug. 2: Phyllis Curtin, soprano.

Aug. 9: Lenox Quartet. Haydn's Quartet in G minor, Bartok's Quartet No. 5, and Beethoven's Quartet in E minor, Op 59, No. 2.

Aug. 16: Composers Quartet. Festival of Contemporary Music in Cooperation with Fromm Music Foundation.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUN 23 1966

Tanglewood Ticket Office Now Open

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. — The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that its Festival Ticket Office at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. opened for the 1966 Berkshire Festival on June 20. Until July 2, the Ticket Office will be open daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. with the exception of Sunday, June 26, when the hours will be 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will open the 1966 Berkshire Festival with a concert under the direction of Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Saturday evening, July 2. Concerts will be given each weekend throughout the eight week Festival which closes Sunday, August 21. The Berkshire Music Center, the Orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will open on Sunday afternoon, June 26.

Once the Festival concerts have begun the daily hours for the Festival Ticket Office will remain 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on concert nights through intermission. Sunday hours will be 10 a.m. through intermission of the afternoon concert.

Information pertaining to Berkshire Festival tickets and programs may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240 or by calling Tanglewood (413) 637-1600.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
WOBURN, Mass.
Circ. 7,950
JUN 28 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Record-American (m) (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 411,789.
JUN 22 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 5,168
JUN 21 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 13,202
JUN 24 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
JUN 20 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Circ. 5,172
JUN 23 1966

Many Summer Music Festivals Offer Much For Music Lovers

By IRENE JARRY

The Berkshire Tanglewood Festival at Lenox, Mass., under the baton of Erich Leinsdorf, is starting its annual 8-week concerts next week (July 2-August 21) with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Besides having the best and most varied music American can offer, Tanglewood is known for its scenic country setting. It is considered as high in artistic level as any festival in Europe.

As I have said every year it is there that the principals of the orchestra together with a distinguished faculty including some of the best composers of America and Europe hold the annual session of the Berkshire Music Center, a school for "Living and working in Music." New composers and compositions are born there. They have a large choral group, forums, chamber music, opera, and every other type of musical activity. It is the final roster for talent. One encounters artists, actors, writers, and personalities. People are invaried departments and the music vited to visit the school with its store with its many scores and books.

This year because of the holiday Leinsdorf has selected for the first week end a mixture of romantic and modern music with solo artists playing a different concerto at each performance. The second week is devoted to Mozart and the third to Bach. Starting July 22 are their regular varied concerts of old and new composers and soloist. You can get a full program from Boston Symphony Hall.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186
JUN 30 1966

Tanglewood To Be On FM

WFCR-FM (88.5 MC), Four-College Radio in Amherst, will be broadcasting live every major concert to take place at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. Beginning July 2, WFCR will air these special programs six times a week, in the first three weeks of August, these live broadcasts will be heard every day.

All the weekend Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be broadcast; so will chamber music programs by world-famous ensembles on Tuesday evenings. On Wednesday and Thursday, the talented students at the Berkshire Music Center will perform. (Monday nights WFCR will continue broadcasting the weekly Cleveland Orchestra concerts).

The first program from Tanglewood (Saturday, July 2, at 8 o'clock) will feature Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser," the Suite from "Petrouchka," by Stravinsky, and Brahms' Violin Concerto with soloist Shumel Ashkenasi.

The schedule for July Tanglewood Concerts to be broadcast live over WFCR (88.5 FM) is as follows: Sundays, 2:30 to 4:30; Tuesdays, 8 to 10; Wednesdays, 8 to 10; Thursdays, 8 to 10; Fridays, 9 to 11 (starting July 8); Saturdays, 8 to 10.

The Cleveland Orchestra Concerts, Mondays nights, are from 8 to 10.

WFCR is the non-commercial educational radio station operated by Amherst, Mount Holyoke, and Smith Colleges, and the University of Massachusetts. WFCR is a member of the Eastern Educational Radio Radio Network.

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MONTHLY 885,000
JUN 1966

The best-known festival in the country occurs each year at Tanglewood, a 200-acre estate of meticulously cultivated elms, pines, and boxwood hedges at the edge of Lake Mahkeenac in the Berkshires. Here in Massachusetts, at first under the leadership of Serge Koussevitzky, then Charles Munch, and now Erich Leinsdorf, the Boston Symphony Orchestra performs masterpieces for audiences often as large as 6,000.

"Little did I think," said Koussevitzky, "that my own early dream of a Music and Art Center in Moscow, in the heart of Russia, would find its realization in the heart of New England a quarter of a century later. Indeed, miracles cannot be accounted for."

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Circ. 15,882
JUN 20 1966

Live Tanglewood Broadcasts

TANGLEWOOD — Richard L. Kaye, Vice President and station manager of WCRB (AM & FM), announces the station will carry the Saturday evening concerts of the Boston Symphmy Orchestra live from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Massachusetts, beginning Saturday, July 2.

The eight Saturday programs, in monophonic sound on AM and FM, will begin at 8 p.m. instead of the customary 8:30 p.m. broadcast time. WCRB is the only full time AM & FM concert music station in the Greater Boston area. The live Berkshire Festival concerts will be produced in cooperation with educational station WGBH which will also carry them.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600
JUN 26 1966

B.S.O. Concerts

For the first time in the history of the Berkshire Music Festival all Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be broadcast live from Tanglewood on WGBH-FM.

Beginning with the inaugural concert Saturday, July 2 at 8 p.m., every major event at this year's festival will be heard direct from Lenox, Mass.

Chronicle Sun
CAMBRIDGE, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 12,845
JUN 23 1966

Tanglewood on FM

For the first time in the history of the Berkshire Music Festival all Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be broadcast live from Tanglewood on WGBH-FM, beginning with the inaugural concert Saturday, July 2 at 8 p.m.

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,619

JUN 30 1966

WAMC Plans Series From Tanglewood

ALBANY—FM station WAMC (90.3 mc.) begins its exclusive "live" coverage of the 1966 Berkshire Music Festival on Saturday, July 2, at 8 p.m. with a broadcast of the opening concert of the season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Erich Leinsdorf, the orchestra's music director, will conduct the premier concert, which consists of Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser," Suite from "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky, and Brahms' Violin Concerto, with Shmuel Ashkenasi as soloist.

On Sunday, WAMC's microphones will be at the Tanglewood Music Shed for a concert beginning at 2:30 p.m. Leinsdorf's program consists of Brahms' Double Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 4. Violinist Joseph Silverstein and cellist Jules Eskin will be soloists in the Brahms, and soprano Anne Elgar will have the solo role in the Mahler Symphony.

The concluding concert of WAMC's weekend coverage will begin at 2:30 p.m. on Monday, July 4. Leinsdorf will be on the podium for the four-work program: Prokofiev, Symphony No. 1 ("Classical); Sessions, Psalm 140; Strauss, Till Eulenspiegel; and Brahms, Piano Concerto No. 2 Abbey Simons will be soloist in the Brahms Concerto, and Miss Elgar will have the solo role in the Sessions' work.

WAMC is the non-commercial voice of Albany Medical College. The station will carry Tanglewood concerts daily through Aug. 25, including chamber concerts and concerts of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra. The Tanglewood concerts are being carried on WAMC through the facilities of the Eastern Educational Radio Network.

16 TORONTO DAILY STAR, Sat., June 11, 1966

Discover this New England on your way to the sea

IT'S THE SEASIDE—Cape Cod, Old Orchard Beach, Hampton Beach—that lures most Canadians to New England. And that's as it should be because they're justly famous playgrounds which seem to wear better than any others.

But there's much more than the seaside to New England and many lesser known areas which will reward a visit as you head for the coast. You can take a couple of them in and still make it to the sea in any easy two day's drive from Toronto.

The Berkshires, for one, will hold a special interest for Torontonians this year. These foothills in the western part of Massachusetts are the site of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, longest and perhaps the most famous in North America.

This summer the TSO's Seiji Ozawa will be one of the guest conductors at the festival which is presented each weekend from July 2 to August 21. It's set amid the nineteenth century splendor of formal gardens, hemlock hedges and tall pines of an estate overlooking Lake Mahkeenac.

RICH TRADITION

The estate was left to the Boston Symphony Orchestra as a summer home in 1936. It is situated in an area with a rich cultural tradition. Herman Melville wrote "Moby Dick" at nearby Pittsfield where you can still see his home "Arrowhead."

Longfellow also lived there during its 19th century literary heyday.

Concert tickets for Tanglewood cost anywhere from $3.50 to $7 for inside seating. But you can enter the grounds for $2 and sit outside on the lawn and listen to Bach and Beethovan. The acoustics aren't as good out there but the scenery is a lot better. Ozawa makes his appearance July 22.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 7,764

JUN 25 1966

FM Listeners To Get Music From Tanglewood

Tanglewood really will be a summer music festival for area FM radio listeners.

The entire Tanglewood season—from chamber quartets to orchestral concerts — will be broadcast live by WAMC (90.3mc.), FM station of the Albany Medical College.

Dr. Frank M. Woolsey Jr., director of the station, said the management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra had invited WAMC to provide exclusive area radio coverage of the 1966 Tanglewood season in the belief that "it will stimulate interest as well as attendance at this summer's Berkshire Music Festival."

Dr. Woolsey added, "We are grateful to the orchestra's management for giving us the opportunity to bring this outstanding musical and cultural event to our listeners. To broadcast the entire proram of America's most distinguished summer music festival is a rare privilege.

WAMC will broadcast music from Tanglewood every day from July 2 through Aug. 25.

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 5,168

JUN 16 1966

Tanglewood Broadcasts Planned

ALBANY — The entire Tanglewood season — from chamber quartets to orchestral concerts — will be broadcast live by WAMC (90.3 mc), FM station of the Albany Medical College, station director, Frank M. Woolsey Jr., announced Wednesday.

This is believed to be the first time in the 30-year history of the Festival at Lenox, Mass., that any radio station has won the right to carry the entire program on a live basis.

WAMC will broadcast music from Tanglewood every day from July 2 through August 25. To bring its listeners all of the concerts, the station will inaugurate Saturday broadcasting, something it has never done before.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 55,425

JUN 16 1966

WAMC-FM to Broadcast All Tanglewood Events

WAMC-FM, the radio station of the Albany Medical College, will broadcast, live, the entire season of Tanglewood concerts, both chamber and full orchestra, this summer.

Dr. Frank M. Woolsey, Jr., director of the station and associate dean of the college, announced that the Boston Symphony Orchestra had invited WAMC (90.3 mc.) to provide exclusive area radio coverage of the 1966 Tanglewood season in the belief that "it will stimulate interest as well as attendance at this summer's Berkshire Music Festival."

This will be the first time in the 30-year history of the festival at Lenox, Mass., that any radio station has won the right to carry the entire Tanglewood program on a live basis.

WAMC will broadcast from Tanglewood every day from July 2 through Aug. 25, causing the station to begin Saturday broadcasting, something it has never done before.

The broadcasts will begin at 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and Saturday, 9 p.m. on Fridays and 2:30 p.m. on Sundays.

★ ★ ★

IN ADDITION to the featured concerts of the Boston Symphony the broadcasts will include a four-concert festival of contemporary American music, a series of seven Tuesday night chamber concerts and the concerts of the young student musicians who make up the Berkshire Music Center orchestra.

The theme at Tanglewood this year is the Romantic Concerto. Aiding Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston orchestra will be soloists such as pianist Van Cliburn, violinists Shmuel Ashkenasi and Szymon Goldberg, cellists Jules Eskin and Leslie Parnas.

A production (concert form) of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" will be one of the highlights of the season and will feature Montserrat Caballe among others.

Sir Adrian Boult, Seiji Ozawa and Thomas Shippers will be guest conductors throughout the season.

★ ★ ★

THE OPENING concert and WAMC broadcast will begin at 8 p.m. on July 2 with Mr. Ashkenasi as soloist in the featured work, the Brahms Violin Concerto. Also on the program is Wagner's "Tannhauser" overture and the suite from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka." Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct.

Mr. Leinsdorf will also conduct on July 3 beginning at 2:30 p.m. with violinist Joseph Silverstein and cellist Jules Eskin featured in Brahms Double Concerto. In the other performance of the afternoon soprano Anne Elgar and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard in Mahler's Symphony No. 4.

The July 4 broadcast beginning at 2:30 p.m. will have Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1; Miss Elgar will sing the solo in Sessions' "Psalm 140" and Abbey Simon will be soloist in Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2. Also on the program is Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel."

The broadcasting is being undertaken as a service of the Eastern Educational Television Network which consists of WGBH in Boston, WFCR in Amherst and WAMC in Albany.

WAMC, the only FM outlet affiliated with a medical school, is a 10,000 watt educational station and carries no commercials. Its transmitter is located on top of Mt. Greylock in the northwest corner of Massachusetts, near New York and Vermont.

The station was built with funds granted the medical college by the Rockefeller Foundation and studios and offices are located at the medical college, 47 New Scotland Avenue.

Albert P. Fredette is general manager and Robert K. Wallace, program director.

DR. FRANK M. WOOLSEY

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177

JUN 16 1966

WAMC To Air BSO Concerts

Radio Station WAMG-FM (90.3) of the Albany Medical College has announced plans to produce "live" broadcasts of the entire program of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood this summer.

Each concert will be broadcast in its entirety from the festival. On Mondays, when there is no concert at Tanglewood, WAMC-FM will rebroadcast the Sunday Baroque concert from tape. All other shows will be "live."

Mr. Albert P. Fredette, the station's manager, emphasized in an interview yesterday that the broadcasts are no substitute for actual attendance at the festival concerts, but are meant to stimulate interest and to serve those who are unable to attend the programs in person.

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,615

JUN 30 1966

WAMC Plans Series From Tanglewood

ALBANY—FM station WAMC (90.3 mc.) begins its exclusive "live" coverage of the 1966 Berkshire Music Festival on Saturday, July 2, at 8 p.m. with a broadcast of the opening concert of the season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Erich Leinsdorf, the orchestra's music director, will conduct the premier concert, which consists of Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser," Suite from "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky, and Brahms' Violin Concerto, with Shmuel Ashkenasi as soloist.

On Sunday, WAMC's microphones will be at the Tanglewood Music Shed for a concert beginning at 2:30 p.m. Leinsdorf's program consists of Brahms' Double Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 4. Violinist Joseph Silverstein and cellist Jules Eskin will be soloists in the Brahms, and soprano Anne Elgar will have the solo role in the Mahler Symphony.

The concluding concert of WAMC's weekend coverage will begin at 2:30 p.m. on Monday, July 4. Leinsdorf will be on the podium for the four-work program: Prokofiev, Symphony No. 1 ("Classical); Sessions, Psalm 140; Strauss, Till Eulenspiegel; and Brahms, Piano Concerto No. 2 Abbey Simons will be soloist in the Brahms Concerto, and Miss Elgar will have the solo role in the Sessions' work.

WAMC is the non-commercial voice of Albany Medical College. The station will carry Tanglewood concerts daily through Aug. 25, including chamber concerts and concerts of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra. The Tanglewood concerts are being carried on WAMC through the facilities of the Eastern Educational Radio Network.

16 TORONTO DAILY STAR, Sat., June 11, 1966

Discover this New England on your way to the sea

IT'S THE SEASIDE—Cape Cod, Old Orchard Beach, Hampton Beach—that lures most Canadians to New England. And that's as it should be because they're justly famous playgrounds which seem to wear better than any others.

But there's much more than the seaside to New England and many lesser known areas which will reward a visit as you head for the coast. You can take a couple of them in and still make it to the sea in any easy two day's drive from Toronto.

The Berkshires, for one, will hold a special interest for Torontonians this year. These foothills in the western part of Massachusetts are the site of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, longest and perhaps the most famous in North America.

This summer the TSO's Seiji Ozawa will be one of the guest conductors at the festival which is presented each weekend from July 2 to August 21. It's set amid the nineteenth century splendor of formal gardens, hemlock hedges and tall pines of an estate overlooking Lake Mahkeenac.

RICH TRADITION

The estate was left to the Boston Symphony Orchestra as a summer home in 1936. It is situated in an area with a rich cultural tradition. Herman Melville wrote "Moby Dick" at nearby Pittsfield where you can still see his home "Arrowhead."

Longfellow also lived there during its 19th century literary heyday.

Concert tickets for Tanglewood cost anywhere from $3.50 to $7 for inside seating. But you can enter the grounds for $2 and sit outside on the lawn and listen to Bach and Beethovan. The acoustics aren't as good out there but the scenery is a lot better. Ozawa makes his appearance July 22.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 7,764

JUN 25 1966

FM Listeners To Get Music From Tanglewood

Tanglewood really will be a summer music festival for area FM radio listeners.

The entire Tanglewood season—from chamber quartets to orchestral concerts — will be broadcast live by WAMC (90.3mc.), FM station of the Albany Medical College.

Dr. Frank M. Woolsey Jr., director of the station, said the management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra had invited WAMC to provide exclusive area radio coverage of the 1966 Tanglewood season in the belief that "it will stimulate interest as well as attendance at this summer's Berkshire Music Festival."

Dr. Woolsey added, "We are grateful to the orchestra's management for giving us the opportunity to bring this outstanding musical and cultural event to our listeners. To broadcast the entire proram of America's most distinguished summer music festival is a rare privilege.

WAMC will broadcast music from Tanglewood every day from July 2 through Aug. 25.

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 5,168

JUN 16 1966

Tanglewood Broadcasts Planned

ALBANY — The entire Tanglewood season — from chamber quartets to orchestral concerts — will be broadcast live by WAMC (90.3 mc), FM station of the Albany Medical College, station director, Frank M. Woolsey Jr., announced Wednesday.

This is believed to be the first time in the 30-year history of the Festival at Lenox, Mass., that any radio station has won the right to carry the entire program on a live basis.

WAMC will broadcast music from Tanglewood every day from July 2 through August 25. To bring its listeners all of the concerts, the station will inaugurate Saturday broadcasting, something it has never done before.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 55,425

JUN 16 1966

WAMC-FM to Broadcast All Tanglewood Events

WAMC-FM, the radio station of the Albany Medical College, will broadcast, live, the entire season of Tanglewood concerts, both chamber and full orchestra, this summer.

Dr. Frank M. Woolsey, Jr., director of the station and associate dean of the college, announced that the Boston Symphony Orchestra had invited WAMC (90.3 mc.) to provide exclusive area radio coverage of the 1966 Tanglewood season in the belief that "it will stimulate interest as well as attendance at this summer's Berkshire Music Festival."

This will be the first time in the 30-year history of the festival at Lenox, Mass., that any radio station has won the right to carry the entire Tanglewood program on a live basis.

WAMC will broadcast from Tanglewood every day from July 2 through Aug. 25, causing the station to begin Saturday broadcasting, something it has never done before.

The broadcasts will begin at 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and Saturday, 9 p.m. on Fridays and 2:30 p.m. on Sundays.

★ ★ ★

IN ADDITION to the featured concerts of the Boston Symphony the broadcasts will include a four-concert festival of contemporary American music, a series of seven Tuesday night chamber concerts and the concerts of the young student musicians who make up the Berkshire Music Center orchestra.

The theme at Tanglewood this year is the Romantic Concerto. Aiding Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston orchestra will be soloists such as pianist Van Cliburn, violinists Shmuel Ashkenasi and Szymon Goldberg, cellists Jules Eskin and Leslie Parnas.

A production (concert form) of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" will be one of the highlights of the season and will feature Montserrat Caballe among others.

Sir Adrian Boult, Seiji Ozawa and Thomas Shippers will be guest conductors throughout the season.

★ ★ ★

THE OPENING concert and WAMC broadcast will begin at 8 p.m. on July 2 with Mr. Ashkenasi as soloist in the featured work, the Brahms Violin Concerto. Also on the program is Wagner's "Tannhauser" overture and the suite from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka." Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct.

Mr. Leinsdorf will also conduct on July 3 beginning at 2:30 p.m. with violinist Joseph Silverstein and cellist Jules Eskin featured in Brahms Double Concerto. In the other performance of the afternoon soprano Anne Elgar and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard in Mahler's Symphony No. 4.

The July 4 broadcast beginning at 2:30 p.m. will have Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1; Miss Elgar will sing the solo in Sessions' "Psalm 140" and Abbey Simon will be soloist in Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2. Also on the program is Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel."

The broadcasting is being undertaken as a service of the Eastern Educational Television Network which consists of WGBH in Boston, WFCR in Amherst and WAMC in Albany.

WAMC, the only FM outlet affiliated with a medical school, is a 10,000 watt educational station and carries no commercials. Its transmitter is located on top of Mt. Greylock in the northwest corner of Massachusetts, near New York and Vermont.

The station was built with funds granted the medical college by the Rockefeller Foundation and studios and offices are located at the medical college, 47 New Scotland Avenue.

Albert P. Fredette is general manager and Robert K. Wallace, program director.

DR. FRANK M. WOOLSEY

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177

JUN 16 1966

WAMC To Air BSO Concerts

Radio Station WAMC-FM (90.3) of the Albany Medical College has announced plans to produce "live" broadcasts of the entire program of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood this summer.

Each concert will be broadcast in its entirety from the festival. On Mondays, when there is no concert at Tanglewood, WAMC-FM will rebroadcast the Sunday Baroque concert from tape. All other shows will be "live."

Mr. Albert P. Fredette, the station's manager, emphasized in an interview yesterday that the broadcasts are no substitute for actual attendance at the festival concerts, but are meant to stimulate interest and to serve those who are unable to attend the programs in person.

DAYTON DAILY NEWS
DAYTON, OHIO
D. 155,541 SUN. 203,904

JUN 1 9 1966

Wooded Expanse of Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Lure Music Fans to Berkshire Festival

Have Your Country and Music, Too

By BETTY A. DIETZ
Fine Arts Editor

IF YOU can survive the paperwork ordeal of getting passports and visas, the summertime hop, skip and jump around the world may be a real joy for the music aficionado.

For Ohioans, especially opera buffs, the first stop will be the Cincinnati Zoo Opera season which begins Wednesday with a new production of Gounod's Faust. Opera fans come from all over the country, but the bulk of the listeners are drawn from a five-state area.

Starring in the Faust will be Beverly Sills, Robert Moulson and Norman Treigle. The opera will be repeated Saturday. Curtain time has been advanced to 8 p.m. this year.

Second work of the season will be an English language performance of Mozart's Cosi Fan Tutte Friday and Sunday. Heading the cast are Phyllis Curtin, Elaine Bonazzi, John McCollum and Theodore Uppman.

Chicago's Grand Park series of 33 concerts starts Saturday with a program including Schoenberg's Gurrelieder and Prokofieff's Alexander Nevsky cantata. Between then and the closing Aug. 20 and 21 with the Berlioz Requiem, programs will range from the four symphonies of Brahms to concert versions of Il Trovatore and La Cenerentola. Soloists showing up during the season will include Judith Raskin, Leopold Simoneau, Sherrill Milnes and Martina Arroyo.

RAVINIA, that bosky musical dell in Highland Park, a Chicago suburb, will bring in professional repertory theater Aug. 23 to Sept. 18.

Workmen are still putting the finishing touches on the new Performing Arts center amphitheater in Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

"We don't even have a good photograph yet," sighed a spokesman for the tremendous 1,500-acre complex there.

The New York City Ballet with George Balanchine and Lincoln Kirstein at the helm will open the eight-week season with 21 performances starting

Music and Art

July 8. Saratoga will also be the permanent summer home of the Philadelphia orchestra and Eugene Ormandy. Names like Van Cliburn, Leontyne Price, Thomas Schippers, Rudolph Firkusny liven the advance notices.

The much-touted Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood gets under way the Fourth of July week end with Erich Leinsdorf conducting the first of 17 concerts by the Boston Symphony. Seven others will be directed by guest conductors.

FOLLOWING some of the most popular soloists around may take track shoes with wings. Here again, will be Phyllis Curtin, Norman Treigle, Van Cliburn, Beverly Sills, Grant Johannesen. Spain's pride and joy, Monserrate Caballe, will be at Tanglewood on Aug. 6 for the concert version of The Magic Flute.

The same names show up, understandably, along with countless others, on the roster of the artists performing in the Metropolitan Opera's outdoor concerts at Lewisohn stadium in New York, June 28 through Aug. 13.

If music of the Renaissance and the Middle Ages is your dish, head for the Summer Collegium in Early Music from Aug. 1-26 at Windham college in Putney, Vt.

Aspen's popular festival starts June 29 and runs through Aug. 28. Chamber music, soloists and special events featuring such performers as guitarist Carlos Montoya and harpsichordist Fernando Valenti are slated.

Not so far from home is the annual Shakespeare festival at Stratford in Ontario each summer. Now an opera company has been added and a series of 15 concerts are being planned starting July 10. Soloists will include Leon Fleisher, Leonard Rose and Jose Iturbi. Oh, yes—Phyllis Curtin, as if you couldn't guess.

SCHENECTADY UNION STAR
Monday, June 20, 1966

Culture Or The Mets?

CAPITAL DISTRICT RESIDENTS who own FM as well as AM radio receiving sets will have an opportunity this summer to show whether "the public" prefers "culture" to "sports," or vice versa. Station WAMC (90.3 mc.) will broadcast live the Tanglewood programs, the first time any radio station has been given that right. The broadcasts will be aired each weekday evening and Sunday afternoons. Thus the programs will, many times, come at the same time as the Mets baseball games on AM over WGY. Of course there will be other AM and FM competition, but that directly with major league baseball games is something of a specific test of public taste—or that of a small segment of it.

At any rate, we're certain many music lovers who cannot or do not get to Tanglewood will be grateful for and appreciative of the FM broadcasts, provided by Albany Medical College of Union University.

10

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766

JUN 16 1966

WAMC Will Broadcast All of Tanglewood Series

Station WAMC of the Albany Medical College of Union University at Albany announced plans yesterday to carry the entire Tanglewood season, opening July 2 and running through Aug. 21, in a live broadcast series on its WAMC (90.3 mc.) FM station.

Dr. Frank M. Woolsey Jr., director of the station, made the announcement at a press conference at the Petit Paris in Albany with Louis Speyer, English horn member of the Boston Symphony, as the guest of honor.

Dr. Woolsey said that the management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has invited WAMC to provide exclusive area radio coverage of the Tanglewood season in the belief that "it will stimulate interest as well as attendance at this summer's Berkshire Music Festival."

This is believed to be the first time in the 30-year history of the Festival at Lenox, Mass., that any radio station has won the right to carry its entire program on a live basis. The broadcasts will begin at 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and on Saturday; at 9 p.m. on Fridays and at 2:30 p.m. on Sundays.

In addition to the featured concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the WAMC Tanglewood broadcasts will include a four-concert festival of contemporary American music, a series of seven Tuesday night chamber concerts and the concerts of the outstanding young musicians who comprise the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

Stellar soloists assisting Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, this summer include pianists Jorge Bolet and Van Cliburn; violinists Shmuel Ashkenasi and Szymon Goldberg; 'cellists Jules Eskin and Leslie Parnas; and more than a score of the nation's most accomplished singers. Guest conductors this season will include Sir Adrian Boult, Seiji Ozawa and Thomas Schippers.

Leinsdorf will conduct all of the opening weekend concerts.

Dr. Woolsey stated that the Albany Medical Center station "is grateful to the orchestra's management for giving us the opportunity to bring this outstanding musical and cultural event to our listeners. To broadcast the entire program of America's most distinguished summer music festival is a rare privilege indeed."

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607

JUN 16 1966

Berkshire Music Festival Due For Live Coverage by WAMC-FM

By JOAN SIMMONS

Tanglewood is coming to the Capital District.

For the first time in its 30 years of summer residency at the Berkshire Music Festival the Boston Symphony Orchestra has consented to have all of its programs — chamber concerts to orchestral concerts — broadcast live.

WAMC, FM station of the Albany Medical College, will provide exclusive area radio coverage of the 1966 Tanglewood season in the belief that "it will stimulate interest as well as attendance at this summer's Berkshire Music Festival," according to Dr. Frank M. Woolsey, director of the station.

Dr. Woolsey added, "We are grateful to the orchestra's management for giving us the opportunity to bring this outstanding musical and cultural event to our listeners. To broadcast the entire program of America's most distinguished summer music festival is a rare privilege indeed."

ERICH LEINSDORF

WAMC will broadcast music from Tanglewood every day from July 2 through Aug. 25, inaugurating Saturday broadcasting for the first time. Broadcasts will begin at 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and on Saturday, at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday and at 9 p.m. on Friday in keeping with the new policy of later Friday concerts to accommodate weekend commuters.

The radio station is an educational service and carries no commercials.

In addition to the featured concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Tanglewood broadcasts will include a four-concert festival of contemporary American music, a series of seven Tuesday evening chamber music concerts and the concerts of the outstanding young musicians who comprise the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

The "Romantic Concerto" has been chosen as the theme of this year's festival by Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Guest soloists who will appear with the orchestra include pianists Jorge Bolet and Van Cliburn, violinists Shmuel Ashkenasi and Szymon Goldberg, cellists Jules Eskin and Leslie Parnas and more than 20 of the country's most accomplished singers.

Guest conductors for the season include Sir Adrian Boult, Seiji Ozawa and Thomas Schippers.

SECTION 1 NEWARK SUNDAY NEWS, JUNE 26, 1966

Berkshire Festival

Cultural Opportunity

"A landscape that combines every variety of beauty—valleys, in the hollow of which lie small lakes, glittering like sapphires; uplands . . . hills . . . woods . . . noble masses of granite rock . . . clear mountain brooks—all this, under a cloud varied sky, such as generally canopies mountain districts, the sunset glories of which are often magnificent."

Such is the manner in which Fanny Kemble, renowned Shakespearean actress of the 19th century, described the Berkshires of western Massachusetts. The same description could apply to the area today for once out of the few small cities and towns of the region one finds the mountain scenery much as it was 100 or more years ago. At that period there resided in the Berkshires a number of 19th century literary giants. Melville, Holmes, and Longfellow were sometime residents of Pittsfield. In fact, Melville wrote his "Moby Dick" at "Arrowhead," still to be seen on Holmes Rd., Pittsfield.

Overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, or more properly, Lake Mahkeenac, was Tanglewood, the mid-19th century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan. At the edge of this lovely property was the little red cottage made immortal by its then struggling resident, Nathaniel Hawthorne. Today, Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as it has been for 30 summers following the 1936 gift of the property to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan. The red cottage was destroyed by fire in the 1890's but has been rebuilt on the original foundations and now serves as studios for the orchestra's flourishing educational arm, the Berkshire Music Center which last summer celebrated its 25th anniversary.

Two years prior to the gift of Tanglewood to the Boston Symphony a series of summer concerts began in the Berkshires. These were the beginnings of today's Berkshire Festival, the best known and longest of the major music festivals in this country. In the beautiful surroundings of formal gardens, hemlock hedges, avenues of tall pines, and great lawns, the Boston Symphony Orchestra gives 24 concerts in the great Music Shed, which possesses such fine natural acoustics that an equal number of patrons can be seated comfortably on the grass and easily hear the music. Many vactioner to this area take advantage of this cultural opportunity.

LENOX, MASS.—This is Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as seen from the air. From July 2 through Aug. 21 the orchestra present the famed Berkshire Festival. The 24 concerts are given in the Music Shed, left center. Visitors are invited to picnic and stroll about the grounds. Parking is available.

For this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Music Director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the Romantic concerto as the theme. On each of six weekends with full orchestra two or three concerts will be performed by well-known solists. The festival opens on July 2, the Saturday of the long Fourth of July weekend, and concludes eight weeks later on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9. Brahms will be the featured composer during the three concerts of the opening weekend with three concerts devoted to Mozart and three to Bach on the succeeding weekends. On Aug. 6 Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and for the following weekend (Aug. 13, 14) the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to be the soloists in several of the Russian composer's works.

Prior to each of the seven Friday evening Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts there will be a weekend prelude in which the soloists and members of the orchestra will perform lesser known works of the weekend's principal composer.

10

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766

JUN 16 1966

WAMC Will Broadcast All of Tanglewood Series

Station WAMC of the Albany Medical College of Union University at Albany announced plans yesterday to carry the entire Tanglewood season, opening July 2 and running through Aug. 21, in a live broadcast series on its WAMC (90.3 mc.) FM station.

Dr. Frank M. Woolsey Jr., director of the station, made the announcement at a press conference at the Petit Paris in Albany with Louis Speyer, English horn member of the Boston Symphony, as the guest of honor.

Dr. Woolsey said that the management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has invited WAMC to provide exclusive area radio coverage of the Tanglewood season in the belief that "it will stimulate interest as well as attendance at this summer's Berkshire Music Festival."

This is believed to be the first time in the 30-year history of the Festival at Lenox, Mass., that any radio station has won the right to carry its entire program on a live basis. The broadcasts will begin at 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and on Saturday; at 9 p.m. on Fridays and at 2:30 p.m. on Sundays.

In addition to the featured concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the WAMC Tanglewood broadcasts will include a four-concert festival of contemporary American music, a series of seven Tuesday night chamber concerts and the concerts of the outstanding young musicians who comprise the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

Stellar soloists assisting Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, this summer include pianists Jorge Bolet and Van Cliburn; violinists Shmuel Ashkenasi and Szymon Goldberg; 'cellists Jules Eskin and Leslie Parnas; and more than a score of the nation's most accomplished singers. Guest conductors this season will include Sir Adrian Boult, Seiji Ozawa and Thomas Schippers.

Leinsdorf will conduct all of the opening weekend concerts.

Dr. Woolsey stated that the Albany Medical Center station "is grateful to the orchestra's management for giving us the opportunity to bring this outstanding musical and cultural event to our listeners. To broadcast the entire program of America's most distinguished summer music festival is a rare privilege indeed."

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607

JUN 16 1966

Berkshire Music Festival Due For Live Coverage by WAMC-FM

By JOAN SIMMONS

Tanglewood is coming to the Capital District.

For the first time in its 30 years of summer residency at the Berkshire Music Festival the Boston Symphony Orchestra has consented to have all of its programs — chamber concerts to orchestral concerts — broadcast live.

WAMC, FM station of the Albany Medical College, will provide exclusive area radio coverage of the 1966 Tanglewood season in the belief that "it will stimulate interest as well as attendance at this summer's Berkshire Music Festival," according to Dr. Frank M. Woolsey, director of the station.

Dr. Woolsey added, "We are grateful to the orchestra's management for giving us the opportunity to bring this outstanding musical and cultural event to our listeners. To broadcast the entire program of America's most distinguished summer music festival is a rare privilege indeed."

ERICH LEINSDORF

WAMC will broadcast music from Tanglewood every day from July 2 through Aug. 25, inaugurating Saturday broadcasting for the first time. Broadcasts will begin at 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and on Saturday, at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday and at 9 p.m. on Friday in keeping with the new policy of later Friday concerts to accommodate weekend commuters.

The radio station is an educational service and carries no commercials.

In addition to the featured concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Tanglewood broadcasts will include a four-concert festival of contemporary American music, a series of seven Tuesday evening chamber music concerts and the concerts of the outstanding young musicians who comprise the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

The "Romantic Concerto" has been chosen as the theme of this year's festival by Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Guest soloists who will appear with the orchestra include pianists Jorge Bolet and Van Cliburn, violinists Shmuel Ashkenasi and Szymon Goldberg, cellists Jules Eskin and Leslie Parnas and more than 20 of the country's most accomplished singers.

Guest conductors for the season include Sir Adrian Boult, Seiji Ozawa and Thomas Schippers.

SECTION 1 NEWARK SUNDAY NEWS, JUNE 26, 1966

Berkshire Festival

Cultural Opportunity

"A landscape that combines every variety of beauty—valleys, in the hollow of which lie small lakes, glittering like sapphires; uplands . . . hills . . . woods . . . noble masses of granite rock . . . clear mountain brooks—all this, under a cloud varied sky, such as generally canopies mountain districts, the sunset glories of which are often magnificent."

Such is the manner in which Fanny Kemble, renowed Shakespearean actress of the 19th century, described the Berkshires of western Massachusetts. The same description could apply to the area today for once out of the few small cities and towns of the region one finds the mountain scenery much as it was 100 or more years ago. At that period there resided in the Berkshires a number of 19th century literary giants. Melville, Holmes, and Longfellow were sometime residents of Pittsfield. In fact, Melville wrote his "Moby Dick" at "Arrowhead," still to be seen on Holmes Rd., Pittsfield.

Overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, or more properly, Lake Mahkeenac, was Tanglewood, the mid-19th century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan. At the edge of this lovely property was the little red cottage made immortal by its then struggling resident, Nathaniel Hawthorne. Today, Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as it has been for 30 summers following the 1936 gift of the property to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan. The red cottage was destroyed by fire in the 1890's but has been rebuilt on the original foundations and now serves as studios for the orchestra's flourishing educational arm, the Berkshire Music Center which last summer celebrated its 25th anniversary.

Two years prior to the gift of Tanglewood to the Boston Symphony a series of summer concerts began in the Berkshires. These were the beginnings of today's Berkshire Festival, the best known and longest of the major music festivals in this country. In the beautiful surroundings of formal gardens, hemlock hedges, avenues of tall pines, and great lawns, the Boston Symphony Orchestra gives 24 concerts in the great Music Shed, which possesses such fine natural acoustics that an equal number of patrons can be seated comfortably on the grass and easily hear the music. Many vactioner to this area take advantage of this cultural opportunity.

LENOX, MASS.—This is Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as seen from the air. From July 2 through Aug. 21 the orchestra present the famed Berkshire Festival. The 24 concerts are given in the Music Shed, left center. Visitors are invited to picnic and stroll about the grounds. Parking is available.

For this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Music Director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the Romantic concerto as the theme. On each of six weekends with full orchestra two or three concerts will be performed by well-known solists. The festival opens on July 2, the Saturday of the long Fourth of July weekend, and concludes eight weeks later on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9. Brahms will be the featured composer during the three concerts of the opening weekend with three concerts devoted to Mozart and three to Bach on the succeeding weekends. On Aug. 6 Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and for the following weekend (Aug. 13, 14) the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to be the soloists in several of the Russian composer's works.

Prior to each of the seven Friday evening Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts there will be a weekend prelude in which the soloists and members of the orchestra will perform lesser known works of the weekend's principal composer.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUN 30 1966

Records in Review

A First Tanglewood Preview

By WILLIAM A. STORRER

Those readers of this column fortunate enough to possess tickets to some of the weekend concerts this summer at Tanglewood may wish to brush up on the items being played before the concert. Some may want to preserve on disc a particular work after they hear it one of these weekends. This article will direct readers to this critic's choice: CC, or ACD when the work is listed in the Advocate Classical Discography; to the Boston Symphony Orchestra recording; BSO/conductor; to a recording by that week's guest conductor: WGC; and/or to a recording by Erich Leinsdorf if not with the BSO: EL.

July 2. WAGNER, Tannhauser Overture, EL on Capitol. STRAVINSKY, Petrouchka Suite, best get the complete ballet, ACD with Ansermet on London. BRAHMS, Violin Concerto, Heifetz/Reiner/Chicago is the ACD choice on RCA; soloist Ashkenasi has not recorded the work.

July 3. BRAHMS, Double Concerto, ACD is Francescatti, Fournier/Walter on Columbia. MAHLER, Symphony No. 4, new ACD is Reskin/Szell/Cleveland on Columbia.

July 4. PROKOFIEV, Classical Symphony, the ACD listing is Ormandy/Philadelphia on Columbia. Perhaps EL will add this to the Prokofiev series before long. SESSIONS, Psalm 140, not recorded. STRAUSS, Till Eulenspiegel, ACD listing is Reiner/Vienna Philharmonic on Victrola, BSO/Munch on RCA. BRAHMS, Second Piano Concerto, ACD is Fleisher/Szell on Epic. EL with Richter is RCA. The soloist has not recorded the work.

MOZART WEEKEND

July 8. MOZART, Symphony No. 31,K.297 "Paris," CC is Klemperer on Angel. EL is with the Royal Philharmonic on Westminster. Piano Concerto No. 15, K.450, CC is Frankl on Turnabout. "Jupiter" Symphony, ACD is Karajan/Vienna Philharmonic on London. BSO/EL is on RCA. EL is also represented with the Royal Philharmonic on Westminster, but this is not representative of his current attitude towards the work.

July 9. MOZART, Symphony 29, K.201, ACD is Barshai/Moscow Chamber Orchestra on Artia. EL with the Royal Philharmonic is on Westminster (with "Paris" of July 8). Piano Concerto No. 25, K.503, CC choice is Fleisher/Szell on Epic. Posthorn Serenade, K-320, CC choice is Desarzens/Lausanne Chamber orchestra on Westminster.

July 10. MOZART, Symphony No. 34, CC is Klemperer on Angel. WGC Boult has not recorded the work. Piano Concerto No. 5,K.175, only recording is on Renaissance X-39. Symphony No. 39, ACD is either Szell/Cleveland on Epic, or Walter/Columbia on Columbia.

BACH WEEKEND

July 15. BACH, Violin Concerto No. 2,S.1042, ACD choice is Menuhin with the Masters Chamber Orchestra on Capitol. Orchestral Suites Nos. 2 & 4, S.1067 & 1069, CC is, in order of descending price, the Richter on Archive, the Menuhin on Capitol, and the Kehr on Vox. The Four Fugues from the Art of the Fugue, S.1080, should be sampled according to one's taste; organ only on Archive, chamber orchestra on Westminster (2 discs) or chamber ensemble on Concert Discs. The weekend prelude is the Brandenberg Concerti Nos. 3 and 6 for strings only; the ACD choice for all six is the Menuhin/Bath Festival Orchestra collaboration on Capitol.

July 16. BACH, St. John Passion, though a lesser work than the St. Matthew, is still one of the great choral works of all time and is heard to fine advantage on at lease two sets; the Archive set with Richter and his Munich Bach forces is very stylish (3 discs). The Westminster set with Scherchen in Vienna is perhaps more exciting and a little more mannered (3 discs).

July 17. BACH, Brandenberg Concerto No. 1, see July 15 for ACD. Cantata No. 55 is not available on disc. Magnificat, is ACD by Prohaska with Vienese performers on Bach Guild, but I would also recommend the Richter/Munich Bach Orchestra Choir on Archive.

FOURTH WEEK

July 22. SCHUMAN, American Festival Overture, recorded once by the American Recording Society, now on Desto (do not get electronic stereo). SCHUBERT, Symphony No. 5, ACD with either Beecham on Capitol or Klemperer on Angel. MENDELSSOHN, Violin Concerto, ACD is Milstein on Angel. STRAVINSKY, Firebird Suite is ACD by Szell/Cleveland on either Epic BC.1149 or 1280. BSO/EL is RCA. Guest conductor Ozawa is one of the young greats, but is sparsely represented on disc.

July 23. WAGNER, Meistersinger Act III excerpts and no disc will exactly supply Erich Leinsdorf chooses. SCHUMANN, Symphony No. 2, CC choice is Szell/Cleveland on Epic. RACHMANINOFF, Piano Concerto No. 3, is ACD with BSO/Munch and Byron Janis on Victrola. Soloist Van Cliburn may be heard with Kyril Kondrashin on RCA.

July 24. BEETHOVEN, Coriolanus Overture, BSO/Munch is Victrola with the Ninth Symphony, 2 discs. TCHAIKOVSKY, Symphony No. 6 "Pathetique," is ACD with BSO/Munch on RCA. BSO/Monteux is Victrola but among bargain versions the Barbirolli is to be preferred, Vanguard Everyman.

On July 21 this column will consider the final four weeks of Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
JUN 22 1966

BSO Musicians Play Tanglewood

After Arthur Fiedler conducts the final concert of the 8th season of the Boston Pops a week from today, his Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will head from Symphony Hall to Tanglewood.

There they will take part in the opening of the Berkshire Festival on Saturday, July 2. On Tuesday, July 5, at 8:30 p.m., the major segment of the musicians 8will be 8back in Boston for the two weeks of free outdoor Esplanade Concerts at the Hatch Memorial Shell off Storrow Drive.

This series will continue nightly, with the exception of Sunday, July 10, through Saturday, July 16. On 8Wednesday mornings, July 6 and 13, Children's Concerts will be given for an hour starting at 10:15.

Contributions for the Esplanade Concerts Fund are accepted at the New England Merchants National Bank, located in Copley Square.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 13,202
JUN 29 1966

Tanglewood Live On UM Radio

AMHERST — WFCR - FM (88.5 MC), four college radio in Amherst, will be broadcasting live every major concert at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

Beginning Saturday WFCR will air these special programs six times a week. In the first three weeks of August, these live broadcasts will be heard every day.

All weekend Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be broadcast; so will chamber music programs by world-famous ensembles on Tuesday evenings. On Wednesday and Thursday, the talented students at the Berkshire Music Center will perform. On Monday nights, WFCR will continue broadcasting the weekly Cleveland Orchestra concerts.

The first program from Tanglewood, Saturday at 8 p.m. will feature Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser", the Suite from "Petrouchka", by Stravinsky, and Brahms' Violin Concerto with soloist Shemuel Ashkenasi.

The schedule for July Tanglewood concerts broadcast live over WFCR follows: Sundays, 2:30 to 4:30; Tuesdays, 8 to 10; Wednesdays, 8 to 10; Thursdays, 8 to 10; Fridays, 9 to 11, starting July 2, and Saturdays, 8 to 10.

The Cleveland Orchestra concerts Monday nights are from 8 to 10.

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON, D. C.
JUN 12 1966

Summer Swathed In Music

By Thomas Putnam

IT USED TO BE Saratoga, N.Y., for the races and Daytona Beach, Fla., for the sand, but now these places, like so many across the country, are homes for summer music festivals.

As musicians gain year-round employment it is less likely that the concert-goer will sink into a summer retreat of silence and contemplation. Instead, whether he goes north or south, he's seldom out of earshot of a tent or auditorium filled with warm weather music.

Here, then, is a somewhat sketchy idea of what festivals are being offered around the country this summer.

THE FIRST annual festival in the new Saratoga Performing Arts Center will feature the New York City Ballet in 21 performances, from July 8 to 31, and the Philadelphia Orchestra in 14 performances, August 4-24. Along with Eugene Ormandy, music director of the orchestra, guest conductors will include William Steinberg, Thomas Schippers and Seiji Ozawa.

Soloists with the orchestra will include Van Cliburn, Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price and duo-pianists Gold and Fizdale. In addition, a chamber music series by members of the orchestra will be held on the first four Monday nights in August.

Practically next door is the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass. Music director Erich Leinsdorf will share the podium with Sir Adrian Boult, Szymon Goldberg, Sixten Ehrling, Seija Ozawa, Thomas Schippers and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski in the eight-week festival that opens July 2. There will be a Mozart weekend starting July 8 and a Bach weekend starting July 15.

Since Friday concerts will begin at 9 p.m., there will be a special "Weekend Prelude," beginning at 7 p.m., before the seven Friday concerts. There will be chamber music throughout the festival and a Festival of Contemporary American Music Aug. 14 through 18. Gunther Schuller will make a guest appearance in this festival within a festival.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
BROOKLYN HEIGHTS PRESS-
W. 4,200
JUN 9 1966

Academy of Music Will Hold Annual Tangelwood Excursion

The Brooklyn Academy of Music's 10th Annual Excursion to Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will take place July 24. The public is invited to spend Sunday in the Berkshires, enjoying a concert inside the Music Shed at Tanglewood, for the low price of $15.00.

These excursions organized by the Academy of Music are one of the great summer fun bargains. Included in the price of the ticket are round trip transportation via air conditioned, rest room equipped buses of the Campus Coach Lines, a box lunch at Tanglewood, and a supper snack on the way home.

Each year the Academy of Music is the host to hundreds of Brooklynites who have made this trip a regular part of their summer schedule. Last year nine buses were filled to capacity for the run to Tanglewood.

The reservation deadline is Tuesday, July 19 at 5 p.m. at the Membership Office (third floor) of the Academy. You may make your reservation by mail (postmarked no later than July 15) or in person.

Mrs. Monroe D. Stein is the Chairman of this year's Tanglewood Excursion Committee of the Women's Committee for the Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts in Brooklyn.

For further information call Mrs. Sarah Walder at STerling 3-6700.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUN 30 1966

Records in Review

A First Tanglewood Preview

By WILLIAM A. STORRER

Those readers of this column fortunate enough to possess tickets to some of the weekend concerts this summer at Tanglewood may wish to brush up on the items being played before the concert. Some may want to preserve on disc a particular work after they hear it one of these weekends. This article will direct readers to this critic's choice: CC, or ACD when the work is listed in the Advocate Classical Discography; to the Boston Symphony Orchestra recording: BSO/conductor; to a recording by that week's guest conductor: WGC; and/or to a recording by Erich Leinsdorf if not with the BSO: EL.

July 2. WAGNER, Tannhauser Overture, EL on Capitol. STRAVINSKY, Petrouchka Suite, best get the complete ballet, ACD with Ansermet on London. BRAHMS, Violin Concerto, Heifetz/Reiner/Chicago is the ACD choice on RCA; soloist Ashkenasi has not recorded the work.

July 3. BRAHMS, Double Concerto, ACD is Francescatti, Fournier/Walter on Columbia. MAHLER, Symphony No. 4, new ACD is Raskin/Szell/Cleveland on Columbia.

July 4. PROKOFIEV, Classical Symphony, the ACD listing is Ormandy/Philadelphia on Columbia. Perhaps EL will add this to the Prokofiev series before long. SESSIONS, Psalm 140, not recorded. STRAUSS, Till Eulenspiegel, ACD listing is Reiner/Vienna Philharmonic on Victrola, BSO/Munch on RCA. BRAHMS, Second Piano Concerto, ACD is Fleisher/Szell on Epic. EL with Richter is RCA. The soloist has not recorded the work.

MOZART WEEKEND

July 8. MOZART, Symphony No. 31,K.297 "Paris," CC is Klemperer on Angel. EL is with the Royal Philharmonic on Westminster. Piano Concerto No. 15, K.450, CC is Frankl on Turnabout. "Jupiter" Symphony, ACD is Karajan/Vienna Philharmonic on London. BSO/EL is on RCA. EL is also represented with the Royal Philharmonic on Westminster, but this is not representative of his current attitude towards the work.

July 9. MOZART. Symphony 29, K.201, ACD is Barshai/Moscow Chamber Orchestra on Artia. EL with the Royal Philharmonic is on Westminster (with "Paris" of July 8). Piano Concerto No. 25, K.503, CC choice is Fleisher/Szell on Epic. Posthorn Serenade, K.-320, CC choice is Desarzens/Lausanne Chamber orchestra on Westminster.

July 10. MOZART. Symphony No. 34, CC is Klemperer on Angel. WGC Boult has not recorded the work. Piano Concerto No. 5,K.175, only recording is on Renaissance X-29. Symphony No. 39, ACD is either Szell/Cleveland on Epic, or Walter/Columbia on Columbia.

BACH WEEKEND

July 15. BACH. Violin Concerto No. 2,S.1042, ACD choice is Menuhin with the Masters Chamber Orchestra on Capitol. Orchestral Suites Nos. 2 & 4, S.1067 & 1069, CC is, in order of descending price, the Richter on Archive, the Menuhin on Capitol, and the Kehr on Vox. The Four Fugues from the Art of the Fugue, S.1080, should be sampled according to one's taste; organ only on Archive, chamber orchestra on Westminster (2 discs) or chamber ensemble on Concert Discs. The weekend prelude is the Brandenberg Concerti Nos. 3 and 6 for strings only; the ACD choice for all six is the Menunin/Bath Festival Orchestra collaboration on Capitol.

July 16. BACH. St. John Passion, though a lesser work than the St. Matthew, is still one of the great choral works of all time and is heard to fine advantage on at lease two sets; the Archive set with Richter and his Munich Bach forces is very stylish (3 discs). The Westminster set with Scherchen in Vienna is perhaps more exciting and a little more mannered (3 discs).

July 17. BACH. Brandenberg Concerto No. 1, see July 15 for ACD. Cantata No. 55 is not available on disc. Magnificat, is ACD by Prohaska with Vienese performers on Bach Guild, but I would also recommend the Richter/Munich Bach Orchestra Choir on Archive.

FOURTH WEEK

July 22. SCHUMAN, American Festival Overture, recorded once by the American Recording Society, now on Desto (do not get electronic stereo). SCHUBERT, Symphony No. 5, ACD with either Beecham on Capitol or Klemperer on Angel. MENDELSSOHN, Violin Concerto, ACD is Milstein on Angel. STRAVINSKY, Firebird Suite is ACD by Szell/Cleveland on either Epic BC.1149 or 1290. BSO/EL is RCA. Guest conductor Ozawa is one of the young greats, but is sparsely represented on disc.

July 23. WAGNER, Meistersinger Act III excerpts and no disc will exactly supply Erich Leinsdorf chooses. SCHUMANN, Symphony No. 2, CC choice is Szell/Cleveland on Epic. RACHMANINOFF, Piano Concerto No. 3, is ACD with BSO/Munch and Byron Janis on Victrola. Soloist Van Cliburn may be heard with Kyril Kondrashin on RCA.

July 24. BEETHOVEN, Coriolanus Overture, BSO/Munch is Victrola with the Ninth Symphony, 2 discs. TCHAIKOVSKY, Symphony No. 6 "Pathetique," is ACD with BSO/Munch on RCA. BSO/Monteux is Victrola but among bargain versions the Barbirolli is to be preferred, Vanguard Everyman.

On July 21 this column will consider the final four weeks of Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
JUN 22 1966

BSO Musicians Play Tanglewood

After Arthur Fiedler conducts the final concert of the 31st season of the Boston Pops a week from today, his Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will head from Symphony Hall to Tanglewood.

There they will take part in the opening of the Berkshire Festival on Saturday, July 2. On Tuesday, July 5, at 8:30 p.m., the major segment of the musicians will be back in Boston for the two weeks of free outdoor Esplanade Concerts at the Hatch Memorial Shell off Storrow Drive.

This series will continue nightly, with the exception of Sunday, July 10, through Saturday, July 16. On Wednesday mornings, July 6 and 13, Children's Concerts will be given for an hour starting at 10:15.

Contributions for the Esplanade Concerts Fund are accepted at the New England Merchants National Bank, located in Copley Square.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 13,202
JUN 29 1966

Tanglewood Live On UM Radio

AMHERST — WFCR - FM (88.5 MC), four college radio in Amherst, will be broadcasting live every major concert at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

Beginning Saturday WFCR will air these special programs six times a week. In the first three weeks of August, these live broadcasts will be heard every day.

All weekend Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be broadcast; so will chamber music programs by world-famous ensembles on Tuesday evenings. On Wednesday and Thursday, the talented students at the Berkshire Music Center will perform. On Monday nights, WFCR will continue broadcasting the weekly Cleveland Orchestra concerts.

The first program from Tanglewood, Saturday at 8 p.m. will feature Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser", the Suite from "Petrouchka", by Stravinsky, and Brahms" Violin Concerto with soloist Shemuel Ashkenasi.

The schedule for July Tanglewood concerts broadcast live over WFCR follows: Sundays, 2:30 to 4:30; Tuesdays, 8 to 10; Wednesdays, 8 to 10; Thursdays, 8 to 10; Fridays, 9 to 11, starting July 2, and Saturdays, 8 to 10.

The Cleveland Orchestra concerts Monday nights are from 8 to 10.

Summer Swathed In Music

By Thomas Putnam

IT USED TO BE Saratoga, N.Y., for the races and Daytona Beach, Fla., for the sand, but now these places, like so many across the country, are homes for summer music festivals.

As musicians gain year-round employment it is less likely that the concert-goer will sink into a summer retreat of silence and contemplation. Instead, whether he goes north or south, he's seldom out of earshot of a tent or auditorium filled with warm weather music.

Here, then, is a somewhat sketchy idea of what festivals are being offered around the country this summer.

THE FIRST annual festival in the new Saratoga Performing Arts Center will feature the New York City Ballet in 21 performances from July 8 to 31, and the Philadelphia Orchestra in 14 performances, August 4-24. Along with Eugene Ormandy, music director of the orchestra, guest conductors will include William Steinberg, Thomas Schippers and Seiji Ozawa.

Soloists with the orchestra will include Van Cliburn, Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price and duo-pianists Gold and Fizdale. In addition, a chamber music series by members of the orchestra will be held on the first four Monday nights in August.

Practically next door is the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass. Music director Erich Leinsdorf will share the podium with Sir Adrian Boult, Szymon Goldberg, Sixten Ehrling, Seija Ozawa, Thomas Schippers and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski in the eight-week festival that opens July 2. There will be a Mozart weekend starting July 8 and a Bach weekend starting July 15.

Since Friday concerts will begin at 9 p.m., there will be a special "Weekend Prelude," beginning at 7 p.m., before the seven Friday concerts. There will be chamber music throughout the festival and a Festival of Contemporary American Music Aug. 14 through 18. Gunther Schuller will make a guest appearance in this festival within a festival.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
BROOKLYN HEIGHTS
PRESS-
W. 4,200
JUN 9 1966

Academy of Music Will Hold Annual Tangelwood Excursion

The Brooklyn Academy of Music's 10th Annual Excursion to Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will take place July 24. The public is invited to spend Sunday in the Berkshires, enjoying a concert inside the Music Shed at Tanglewood, for the low price of $15.00.

These excursions organized by the Academy of Music are one of the great summer fun bargains. Included in the price of the ticket are round trip transportation via air conditioned, rest room equipped buses of the Campus Coach Lines, a box lunch at Tanglewood, and a supper snack on the way home.

Each year the Academy of Music is the host to hundreds of Brooklynites who have made this trip a regular part of their summer schedule. Last year nine buses were filled to capacity for the run to Tanglewood.

The reservation deadline is Tuesday, July 19 at 5 p.m. at the Membership Office (third floor) of the Academy. You may make your reservation by mail (postmarked no later than July 15) or in person.

Mrs. Monroe D. Stein is the Chairman of this year's Tanglewood Excursion Committee of the Women's Committee for the Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts in Brooklyn.

For further information call Mrs. Sarah Walder at STerling 3-6700.

The Philadelphia Inquirer
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
D. 522,941 SUN. 956,206
JUN 12 1966

Tanglewood music in the air

By S. R. SISTARE

BOSTON — In the Berkshires of western Massachusetts, overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, or more properly, Lake Mahkeenac, is Tanglewood, the mid-19th century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan and now the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

It has been the orchestra's home for 30 summers, following a gift of the property to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan.

A red cottage on the property, destroyed by fire in the 1890s, has been rebuilt on original foundations and now serves as studios for the orchestra's flourishing educational arm, the Berkshire Music Center, which this summer celebrated its 25th anniversary.

Two years prior to the gift of Tanglewood to the Boston Symphony, a series of summer concerts began in the Berkshires. These were the beginnings of today's Berkshire Festival.

In the beautiful surroundings of formal gardens, hemlock hedges, [illegible] of tall pines and great lawns, the orchestra gives 24 concerts in the Music Shed.

This structure possesses such fine natural acoustics that an equal number of patrons can be seated comfortably on the grass and easily hear the music.

LEINSDORF DIRECTOR

For this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, music director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the romantic concerto as the theme. On each of six weekends with full orchestra, two or three concerti will be performed by well-known soloists.

The festival opens on July 2 and concludes eight weeks later on Aug. 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Brahms will be the featured composer during the three concerts of the opening weekend, with three concerts devoted to Mozart and three to Bach on succeeding weekends.

On Aug. 6 Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and for the following weekend (Aug. 13-14) the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to be the soloists in several of the Russian composer's works.

WEEKEND PRELUDES

Prior to each of the seven Friday evening concerts, there will be a Weekend Prelude in which the soloists and members of the orchestra will perform lesser known works of the weekend's principal composer.

The guest conductors for the summer include Sir Adrian Boult, Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Arthur Fiedler will make his annual appearance at Tanglewood on Aug. 3 for the Boston Pops at a Tanglewood Pension Fund concert.

A brochure on this summer's Berkshire Festival is available from the Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 02115. Further details may be obtained from the Berkshire Hills Conference, 100 North St., Pittsfield, Mass. 01203.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUN 19 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600
JUN 19 1966

New England Music Dates

MASSACHUSETTS

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL (Lenox)—July 2-August 21, Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Erich Leinsdorf.

Tanglewood Concerts

WCRB will broadcast the Saturday evening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood beginning Saturday, July 2. Eight programs, in monophonic sound on AM and FM, will begin at 8 p.m., instead of the customary 8:30 p.m. time. The live Berkshire Festival concerts will be produced in cooperation with WGBH-FM, which will carry all the broadcasts.

Erich Leinsdorf is scheduled to conduct all the Saturday concerts, which include the complete Bach St. John Passion July 16; Van Cliburn's performance of the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3, July 23; Mozart's "The Magic Flute" on Aug. 6 and winners of the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition on Aug. 13.

San Jose Mercury-News
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA
SUN. 153,213
JUN 19 1966

"When's that big outdoor music festival they have every summer in Massachusetts?"

Guess you mean the Berkshire Festival, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer program. Begins July 2 this year, continues through Aug. 21, with performances Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. The place is Tanglewood, a handsome 19th Century country estate between Lenox and Stockbridge in the Berkshire hills.

You sit on the grass. Acoustics are just about perfect. Admission is fairly steep ($3.50 to $7), but the Saturday morning rehearsals are a bargain—only $2. You can get a brochure with complete program information by writing Berkshire Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, Massachusetts 02115.

LEE TAYLOR

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
JUN 21 1966

Tanglewood Tickets Being Sold in Lenox

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that its ticket office at Tanglewood, Lenox, is open for the 1966 Berkshire Festival. Until July 2, the ticket office will be open daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. with the exception of Sunday, June 26, when the hours will be 1 to 5.

The orchestra will open the 1966 Festival with a concert under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Saturday evening, July 2. Concerts will be given each weekend throughout the eight-week festival, which closes on Sunday, Aug. 21. The Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will open on Sunday afternoon.

Once the festival concerts have begun the daily hours for the ticket office will remain 9 to 6 and on concert nights through intermission. Sunday hours will be 10 a.m. through intermission of the afternoon concert.

Information may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240; or by calling Tanglewood, (413) 637-1600.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277
JUN 26 1966

MUSIC SUNDAYS

The New Haven has scheduled seven "Music Sunday" excursions to the Berkshire Festival, July 10 through Aug. 21. The ticket price of $8.95 for adults and $6.50 for children includes all transportation and admission to Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 94,357
JUN 28 1966

Precedents Scrapped

Tanglewood Plans Changes in Format

By JOHN F. KYES
Gazette Music Critic

LENOX — With the Berkshire Music Center for advanced young musicians in full swing, things are ready for the opening of Tanglewood to the concert public this coming weekend. But don't make the mistake of thinking that details are like past years. Erich Leinsdorf and his associates have added fascinatingly novel touches. Listen carefully.

For a big "boom" on the holiday weekend, precedents have been scrapped, and the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will appear. The opening concert will be Saturday, not Friday, and this 8 p.m. event will be followed by 2:30 afternoon concerts on July 3 and 4. The "romantic concerto" theme of this year will bring Brahms for the opening weekend, Ashkenasi's violin, Silverstein's violin and Eskin's cello in the Double Concerto, and Simon's piano.

Tradition Returns

Tradition will take over for seven Tuesday evenings, beginning July 5, with chamber music in the theater.

But novelty creeps in again on Friday, July 8. Each Friday evening the main concert will begin at 9 p.m., allowing time for people to come from considerable distances. For those nearby, there's a bonus: A "weekend prelude" starting at 7 p.m. This is less familiar music of famed composers, presented by soloists or ensembles from the Tanglewood roster. I suspect this will change the Friday attendance pattern noticeably; and so what cut rates and committee work have found difficult.

There are no "preludes" on Saturdays or Sundays, which continue in the accepted vein, at 8 and 2:30 respectively.

A fine array of guest conductors is offered this year, four on Fridays, three on Sundays, and soloists are spread generously and impartially through every concert of the Festival.

Chamber Music

The second and third weekends of concerts will be given by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, devoting one weekend exclusively to Mozart, the next to Bach. The remaining five weekends will revert to the full orchestra, with miscellaneous programs, still stressing the romantic concerto.

High points in the summer include a complete concert version of Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute" on August 6, with a superb cast. August 13 and 14 will bring as soloists winners from the Moscow Tchaikovsky competition held this month.

The Festival's finale on August 21 offers the Verdi "Te Deum" and Beethoven Ninth Symphony in a choral orchestral climax.

Wednesday events include the Boston "Pops" on August 3 under Arthur Fiedler for the benefit of the Pension Fund and the Gala Evening for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center on August 17. There is also a festival within a festival presenting Contemporary American Music, August 14-18.

Many student programs are open to Friends of the Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUN 12 1966

A FEATURE of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer, will be a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute." The performance, on Saturday evening, Aug. 6, is to be conducted by Erich Leinsdorf with the following cast: Judith Raskin (Pamina), George Shirley (Tamino), Beverly Sills (Queen of the Night), Ezio Flagello (Sarastro), Anne Elgar (Papagena), John Reardon (Papageno), Nicolai Gedda (Monostatos), [illegible] Castel (Journeymen), Simon [illegible], Marais, Godfrey (the three ladies), Berry and Robert [illegible] and [illegible] Berberian (the two priests).

New England Newsclip Agency
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742
Journal (e)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Circ. 9,157
JUN 8 1966

Trips And Tour Visit Tanglewoo

The YWCA Trips and club will make a trip to t kshire Music Festival co Tanglewood, Lenox, Ma August 14. Those registe reminded that payment this week, so tickets n sent for. A few places on are still available.

The bus will leave the parking lot at 10 a.m., in time for lunch at the c or a picnic on the groun group will stop for dinner way home.

There are a few openi the scheduled trip to the nual Blueberry Festival chester, July 30. The gro leave at 10 a.m., and on home will stop at Farmi see the Stanley-Whitman and gardens and the So vian Gift Shop.

Further information a servations may be obtained at the YW office.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277
JUN 26 1966

RESORTS EXPECT A BOOM SEASON

From Maine to New Jersey, Owners of Most Summer Hotels Are Optimistic

RECORDS ARE FORECAST

Berkshires and Atlantic City Operators Are Predicting Their Busiest Summer

By THOMAS W. ENNIS

Vacation resort business is booming from Maine to New Jersey. Owners of motels, hotels,, guest houses and cottage colonies anticipate a summer season equal to any past prosperous ones.

Resort owners in two major vacation centers, Atlantic City and New England's Berkshire Hills, are looking forward to the best season in their history.

Maine's Department of Economic Development believes that the state's tourist business this summer will even be better than last year's, which was exceptionally good. Motel chains are building throughout the state. Rates at motels during the vacation season run from $8 a day on a single basis up to about $30 daily for two persons. Sporting lodges are filling up with and are charging $12 to $28 a day on the American Plan for each person. The lodges have individual cabins and a central dining room.

Martha's Vineyard, too, will have its best season ever, according to Benjamin Morton, head of the island's chamber of commerce. Inquiries about reservations are coming earlier than usual and the volume is heavy. Rates run from $6 a night on single basis to $40 a night on the European plan, which does not include meals, for two persons in one of the island's top hotels.

About 150 summer homes were built on the island last winter. Other developments include the rebuilding by the Woods Hole-Martha's Vineyard-Nantucket Steamship Authority of the Oaks Bluff Wharf that burned down last year. The Authority also has increased its daily trips from Woods Hole from 10 to 16.

Nantucket Sees Banner Season

A banner season is expected on Nantucket, whose Chamber of Commerce has been receiving 40 to 50 letters a day asking where to stay. Most of the letter writers prefer guest houses where rates average $8 to $10 a night on a single basis. Cottages are renting well, but reservations for these are generally made long before the season starts. Cottage rentals run $100 to $200 weekly, with the average at $125. Quite a few houses were built on the island last winter, and Sherburne Associates, headed by Walter Beinecke Jr., has completed a development of several stores between Old South Wharf and Straight Wharf.

The vacationers' interest in Cape Cod this year is "fantastic," according to the local chamber of commerce. Inquiries so far total 102,000, about 40 per cent ahead of last year. Rates run from $8 daily for two persons in a guest house to $50 a day in a top hotel or motel, on a double basis. Cottages are renting from $85 to $300 weekly depending on size and location.

Berkshires Expect 400,000

The Cape has four new motels from Falmouth to Truro, and about 50 resorts have increased room capacity since last summer. The American Plan, which includes meals in the daily rate, is dying out on the Cape. Only six resorts offer the full American Plan with breakfast, lunch and dinner, and three offer a modified plan with only breakfast and dinner.

The Berkshire Hills Confer-

Continued on Page 8, Column 1

The Philadelphia Inquirer
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
D. 522,941 SUN. 956,206

JUN 1 2 1966

Tanglewood music in the air

By S. R. SISTARE

BOSTON — In the Berkshires of western Massachusetts, overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, or more properly, Lake Mahkeenac, is Tanglewood, the mid-19th century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan and now the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

It has been the orchestra's home for 39 summers, following a 1936 gift of the property to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan.

A red cottage on the property, destroyed by fire in the 1890s, has been rebuilt on the original foundations and now serves as studios for the orchestra's flourishing educational arm, the Berkshire Music Center, which last summer celebrated its 25th anniversary.

Two years prior to the gift of Tanglewood to the Boston Symphony, a series of summer concerts began in the Berkshires. These were the beginnings of today's Berkshire Festival.

In the beautiful surroundings of formal gardens, hemlock hedges, avenues of tall pines and great lawns, the orchestra gives 24 concerts in the great Music Shed.

This structure possesses such fine natural acoustics that an equal number of patrons can be seated comfortably on the grass and easily hear the music.

LEINSDORF DIRECTOR

For this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, music director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the romantic concerto as the theme. On each of six weekends with full orchestra, two or three concerti will be performed by well-known soloists.

The festival opens on July 2 and concludes eight weeks later on Aug. 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Brahms will be the featured composer during the three concerts of the opening weekend, with three concerts devoted to Mozart and three to Bach on succeeding weekends.

On Aug. 6 Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and for the following weekend (Aug. 13-14) the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to be the soloists in several of the Russian composer's works.

WEEKEND PRELUDES

Prior to each of the seven Friday evening concerts, there will be a Weekend Prelude in which the soloists and members of the orchestra will perform lesser known works of the weekend's principal composer.

The guest conductors for the summer include Sir Adrian Boult, Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Arthur Fiedler will make his annual appearance at Tanglewood on Aug. 3 for the Boston Pops at a Tanglewood Pension Fund concert.

A brochure on this summer's Berkshire Festival is available from the Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 02115. Further details may be obtained from the Berkshire Hills Conference, 100 North st., Pittsfield, Mass. 01203.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737

JUN 1 9 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600

JUN 1 9 1966

Tanglewood Concerts

WCRB will broadcast the Saturday evening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood beginning Saturday, July 2. Eight programs, in monophonic sound on AM and FM, will begin at 8 p.m., instead of the customary 8:30 p.m. time. The live Berkshire Festival concerts will be produced in cooperation with WGBH-FM, which will carry all the broadcasts.

Erich Leinsdorf is scheduled to conduct all the Saturday concerts, which include the complete Bach St. John Passion July 16; Van Cliburn's performance of the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3, July 23; Mozart's "The Magic Flute" on Aug. 6 and winners of the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition on Aug. 13.

New England Music Dates

MASSACHUSETTS

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL (Lenox)—July 2-August 21, Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Erich Leinsdorf.

San Jose Mercury-News
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA
SUN. 183,213

JUN 1 9 1966

"When's that big outdoor music festival they have every summer in Massachusetts?"

LEE TAYLOR

Guess you mean the Berkshire Festival, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer program. Begins July 2 this year, continues through Aug. 21, with performances Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. The place is Tanglewood, a handsome 19th Century country estate between Lenox and Stockbridge in the Berkshire hills.

You sit on the grass. Acoustics are just about perfect. Admission is fairly steep ($3.50 to $7), but the Saturday morning rehearsals are a bargain—only $2. You can get a brochure with complete program information by writing Berkshire Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, Massachusetts 02115.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 94,357

JUN 28 1966

Precedents Scrapped

Tanglewood Plans Changes in Format

By JOHN F. KYES
Gazette Music Critic

LENOX — With the Berkshire Music Center for advanced young musicians in full swing, things are ready for the opening of Tanglewood to the concert public this coming weekend. But don't make the mistake of thinking that details are like past years. Erich Leinsdorf and his associates have added fascinatingly novel touches. Listen carefully.

For a big "boom" on the holiday weekend, precedents have been scrapped, and the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will appear. The opening concert will be Saturday, not Friday, and this 8 p.m. event will be followed by 2:30 afternoon concerts on July 3 and 4. The "romantic concerto" theme of this year will bring Brahms for the opening weekend, Ashkenasi's violin, Silverstein's violin and Eskin's cello in the Double Concerto, and Simon's piano.

Tradition Returns

Tradition will take over for seven Tuesday evenings, beginning July 5, with chamber music in the theater.

But novelty creeps in again on Friday, July 8. Each Friday evening the main concert will begin at 9 p.m., allowing time for people to come from considerable distances. For those nearby, there's a bonus: A "weekend prelude" starting at 7 p.m. This is less familiar music of famed composers, presented by soloists or ensembles from the Tanglewood roster. I suspect this will change the Friday attendance pattern noticeably, and do what cut rates and committee work have found difficult.

There are no "preludes" on Saturdays or Sundays, which continue in the accepted vein, at 8 and 2:30 respectively.

A fine array of guest conductors is offered this year, four on Fridays, three on Sundays, and soloists are spread generously and impartially through every concert of the Festival.

Chamber Music

The second and third weekends of concerts will be given by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, devoting one weekend exclusively to Mozart, the next to Bach. The remaining five weekends will revert to the full orchestra, with miscellaneous programs, still stressing the romantic concerto.

High points in the summer include a complete concert version of Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute" on August 6, with a superb cast. August 13 and 14 will bring as soloists winners from the Moscow Tchaikovsky competition held this month.

The Festival's finale on August 21 offers the Verdi "Te Deum" and Beethoven Ninth Symphony in a choral - orchestral climax.

Wednesday events include the Boston "Pops" on August under Arthur Fiedler for the benefit of the Pension Fund and the Gala Evening for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center on August 17. There also a festival within a festival presenting Contemporary American Music, August 14-18.

Many student programs are open to Friends of the Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508

JUN 2 1 1966

Tanglewood Tickets Being Sold in Lenox

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that its ticket office at Tanglewood, Lenox, is open for the 1966 Berkshire Festival. Until July 2, the ticket office will be open daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. with the exception of Sunday, June 26, when the hours will be 1 to 5.

The orchestra will open the 1966 Festival with a concert under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Saturday evening, July 2. Concerts will be given each weekend throughout the eight-week festival, which closes on Sunday, Aug. 21. The Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will open on Sunday afternoon.

Once the festival concerts have begun the daily hours for the ticket office will remain 9 to 6 and on concert nights through intermission. Sunday hours will be 10 a.m. through intermission of the afternoon concert.

Information may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240; or by calling Tanglewood, (413) 637-1600.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277

JUN 2 6 1966

MUSIC SUNDAYS

The New Haven has scheduled seven "Music Sunday" excursions to the Berkshire Festival, July 10 through Aug. 21. The ticket price of $8.95 for adults and $6.50 for children includes all transportation and admission to Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737

JUN 1 2 1966

A FEATURE of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer, will be a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute." The performance, on Saturday evening, Aug. 6, is to be conducted by Erich Leinsdorf with the following cast: Judith Raskin (Pamina), George Shirley (Tamino), Beverly Sills (Queen of the Night), Ezio Flagello (Sarastro), Anne Elgar (Papagena), John Reardon (Papagano), Nico Castel (Monostatos), [illegible] Marsh, Joanna Simon [illegible] Batya Godfrey (the three ladies), and Robert Jones and Ara Berberian (the two priests).

New England Newsclip Agency
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-

Journal (e)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Circ. 9,157

JUN 8 1966

Trips And Tour Visit Tanglewoo

The YWCA Trips and club will make a trip to t kshire Music Festival co Tanglewood, Lenox, Ma August 14. Those registe reminded that payment this week, so tickets n sent for. A few places on are still available.

The bus will leave the parking lot at 10 a.m., in time for lunch at the c or a picnic on the groun group will stop for dinner way home.

There are a few openi the scheduled trip to the nual Blueberry Festival chester, July 30. The gro leave at 10 a.m., and on home will stop at Farmi see the Stanley-Whitman and gardens and the So vian Gift Shop.

Further information a servations may be obtained at the YW office.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277

JUN 2 6 1966

RESORTS EXPECT A BOOM SEASON

From Maine to New Jersey, Owners of Most Summer Hotels Are Optimistic

RECORDS ARE FORECAST

Berkshires and Atlantic City Operators Are Predicting Their Busiest Summer

By THOMAS W. ENNIS

Vacation resort business is booming from Maine to New Jersey. Owners of motels, hotels,, guest houses and cottage colonies anticipate a summer season equal to any past prosperous ones.

Resort owners in two major vacation centers, Atlantic City and New England's Berkshire Hills, are looking forward to the best season in their history.

Maine's Department of Economic Development believes that the state's tourist business this summer will even be better than last year's, which was exceptionally good. Motel chains are building throughout the state. Rates at motels during the vacation season run from $8 a day on a single basis up to about $30 daily for two persons. Sporting lodges are filling up with and are charging $12 to $28 a day on the American Plan for each person. The lodges have individual cabins and a central dining room.

Martha's Vineyard, too, will have its best season ever, according to Benjamin Morton, head of the island's chamber of commerce. Inquiries about reservations are coming earlier than usual and the volume is heavy. Rates run from $6 a night on single basis to $40 a night on the European plan, which does not include meals, for two persons in one of the island's top hotels.

About 150 summer homes were built on the island last winter. Other developments include the rebuilding by the Woods Hole-Martha's Vineyard-Nantucket Steamship Authority of the Oaks Bluff Wharf that burned down last year. The Authority also has increased its daily trips from Woods Hole from 10 to 16.

Nantucket Sees Banner Season

A banner season is expected on Nantucket, whose Chamber of Commerce has been receiving 40 to 50 letters a day asking where to stay. Most of the letter writers prefer guest houses where rates average $8 to $10 a night on a single basis. Cottages are renting well, but reservations for these are generally made long before the season starts. Cottage rentals run $100 to $200 weekly, with the average at $125. Quite a few houses were built on the island last winter, and Sherburne Associates, headed by Walter Beinecke Jr., has completed a development of several stores between Old South Wharf and Straight Wharf.

The vacationers' interest in Cape Cod this year is "fantastic," according to the local chamber of commerce. Inquiries so far total 102,000, about 40 per cent ahead of last year. Rates run from $8 daily for two persons in a guest house to $50 a day in a top hotel or motel, on a double basis. Cottages are renting from $85 to $300 weekly depending on size and location.

Berkshires Expect 400,000

The Cape has four new motels from Falmouth to Truro, and about 50 resorts have increased room capacity since last summer. The American Plan, which includes meals in the daily rate, is dying out on the Cape. Only six resorts offer the full American Plan with breakfast, lunch and dinner, and three offer a modified plan with only breakfast and dinner.

The Berkshire Hills Confer-

Continued on Page 8, Column 1

The Philadelphia Inquirer
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
D. 522,941 SUN. 956,206
JUN 12 1966

Tanglewood music in the air

By S. R. SISTARE

BOSTON — In the Berkshires of western Massachusetts, overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, or more properly, Lake Mahkeenac, is Tanglewood, the mid-19th century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan and now the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

It has been the orchestra's home for 33 summers, following a 1936 gift of the property to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan.

A red cottage on the property, destroyed by fire in the 1890s, has been rebuilt on the original foundations and now serves as studios for the orchestra's flourishing educational arm, the Berkshire Music Center, which last summer celebrated its 25th anniversary.

Two years prior to the gift of Tanglewood to the Boston Symphony, a series of summer concerts began in the Berkshires. These were the beginnings of today's Berkshire Festival.

In the beautiful surroundings of formal gardens, hemlock hedges, avenues of tall pines and great lawns, the orchestra gives 24 concerts in the great Music Shed.

This structure possesses such fine natural acoustics that an equal number of patrons can be seated comfortably on the grass and easily hear the music.

LEINSDORF DIRECTOR

For this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, music director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the romantic concerto as the theme. On each of six weekends with full orchestra, two or three concerti will be performed by well-known soloists.

The festival opens on July 2 and concludes eight weeks later on Aug. 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Brahms will be the featured composer during the three concerts of the opening weekend, with three concerts devoted to Mozart and three to Bach on succeeding weekends.

On Aug. 6 Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and for the following weekend (Aug. 13-14) the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to be the soloists in several of the Russian composer's works.

WEEKEND PRELUDES

Prior to each of the seven Friday evening concerts, there will be a Weekend Prelude in which the soloists and members of the orchestra will perform lesser known works of the weekend's principal composer.

The guest conductors for the summer include Sir Adrian Boult, Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Arthur Fiedler will make his annual appearance at Tanglewood on Aug. 3 for the Boston Pops at a Tanglewood Pension Fund concert.

A brochure on this summer's Berkshire Festival is available from the Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 02115. Further details may be obtained from the Berkshire Hills Conference, 100 North st., Pittsfield, Mass. 01203.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUN 19 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600
JUN 19 1966

New England Music Dates

MASSACHUSETTS

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL (Lenox)—July 2-August 21, Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Erich Leinsdorf.

Tanglewood Concerts

WCRB will broadcast the Saturday evening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood beginning Saturday, July 2. Eight programs, in monophonic sound on AM and FM, will begin at 8 p.m., instead of the customary 8:30 p.m. time. The live Berkshire Festival concerts will be produced in cooperation with WGBH-FM, which will carry all the broadcasts.

Erich Leinsdorf is scheduled to conduct all the Saturday concerts, which include the complete Bach St. John Passion July 16; Van Cliburn's performance of the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3, July 23; Mozart's "The Magic Flute" on Aug. 6 and winners of the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition on Aug. 13.

San Jose Mercury-News
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA
SUN. 153,218
JUN 19 1966

LEE TAYLOR

"When's that big outdoor music festival they have every summer in Massachusetts?"

Guess you mean the Berkshire Festival, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer program. Begins July 2 this year, continues through Aug. 21, with performances Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. The place is Tanglewood, a handsome 19th Century country estate between Lenox and Stockbridge in the Berkshire hills.

You sit on the grass. Acoustics are just about perfect. Admission is fairly steep ($3.50 to $7), but the Saturday morning rehearsals are a bargain—only $2. You can get a brochure with complete program information by writing Berkshire Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, Massachusetts 02115.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 94,357
JUN 28 1966

Precedents Scrapped

Tanglewood Plans Changes in Format

By JOHN F. KYES
Gazette Music Critic

LENOX — With the Berkshire Music Center for advanced young musicians in full swing, things are ready for the opening of Tanglewood to the concert public this coming weekend. But don't make the mistake of thinking that details are like past years. Erich Leinsdorf and his associates have added fascinatingly novel touches. Listen carefully.

For a big "boom" on the holiday weekend, precedents have been scrapped, and the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra will appear. The opening concert will be Saturday, not Friday, and this 8 p.m. event will be followed by 2:30 afternoon concerts on July 3 and 4. The "romantic concerto" theme of this year will bring Brahms for the opening weekend, Ashkenasi's violin, Silverstein's violin and Eskin's cello in the Double Concerto, and Simon's piano.

Tradition Returns

Tradition will take over for seven Tuesday evenings, beginning July 5, with chamber music in the theater.

But novelty creeps in again on Friday, July 8. Each Friday evening the main concert will begin at 9 p.m., allowing time for people to come from considerable distances. For those nearby, there's a bonus: A "weekend prelude" starting at 7 p.m. This is less familiar music of famed composers, presented by soloists or ensembles from the Tanglewood roster. I suspect this will change the Friday attendance pattern noticeably, and do what cut rates and committee work have found difficult.

There are no "preludes" on Saturdays or Sundays, which continue in the accepted vein, at 8 and 2:30 respectively.

A fine array of guest conductors is offered this year, four on Fridays, three on Sundays, and soloists are spread generously and impartially through every concert of the Festival.

Chamber Music

The second and third weekends of concerts will be given by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, devoting one weekend exclusively to Mozart, the next to Bach. The remaining five weekends will revert to the full orchestra, with miscellaneous programs, still stressing the romantic concerto.

High points in the summer include a complete concert version of Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute" on August 6, with a superb cast. August 13 and 14 will bring as soloists winners from the Moscow Tchaikovsky competition held this month.

The Festival's finale on August 21 offers the Verdi "Te Deum" and Beethoven Ninth Symphony in a choral - orchestral climax.

Wednesday events include the Boston "Pops" on August 3 under Arthur Fiedler for the benefit of the Pension Fund, and the Gala Evening for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center on August 17. There is also a festival within a festival, presenting Contemporary American Music, August 14-18.

Many student programs are open to Friends of the Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
JUN 21 1966

Tanglewood Tickets Being Sold in Lenox

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that its ticket office at Tanglewood, Lenox, is open for the 1966 Berkshire Festival. Until July 2, the ticket office will be open daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. with the exception of Sunday, June 26, when the hours will be 1 to 5.

The orchestra will open the 1966 Festival with a concert under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Saturday evening, July 2. Concerts will be given each weekend throughout the eight-week festival, which closes on Sunday, Aug. 21. The Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will open on Sunday afternoon.

Once the festival concerts have begun the daily hours for the ticket office will remain 9 to 6 and on concert nights through intermission. Sunday hours will be 10 a.m. through intermission of the afternoon concert.

Information may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240; or by calling Tanglewood, (413) 637-1600.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277
JUN 26 1966

MUSIC SUNDAYS

The New Haven has scheduled seven "Music Sunday" excursions to the Berkshire Festival, July 10 through Aug. 21. The ticket price of $8.95 for adults and $6.50 for children includes all transportation and admission to Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUN 12 1966

A FEATURE of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer, will be a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute." The performance, on Saturday evening, Aug. 6, is to be conducted by Erich Leinsdorf with the following cast: Judith Raskin (Pamina), George Shirley (Tamino), Beverly Sills (Queen of the Night), Ezio Flagello (Sarastro), Anne Elgar (Papagena), John Reardon (Papageno), Nicolai Gedda (Monostatos), [illegible] Marsh, Joanna Simon [illegible] Batya Godfrey (the three ladies), and Robert Jones and [illegible] Berberian (the two priests).

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal (e)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Circ. 9,157
JUN 8 1966

Trips And Tours To Visit Tanglewood

The YWCA Trips and Tours club will make a trip to the Berkshire Music Festival concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on August 14. Those registered are reminded that payment is due this week, so tickets may be sent for. A few places on the bus are still available.

The bus will leave the YWCA parking lot at 10 a.m., arriving in time for lunch at the cafeteria or a picnic on the grounds. The group will stop for dinner on the way home.

There are a few openings for the scheduled trip to the 17th annual Blueberry Festival at Winchester, July 30. The group will leave at 10 a.m., and on the way home will stop at Farmington to see the Stanley-Whitman House and gardens and the Scandinavian Gift Shop.

Further information and reservations may be obtained at the YW office.

...rk Times
...Y.
...277
Buffalo

...ND EXPECT A BOOM SEASON

Continued From Page 1

ence, established 41 years ago to develop tourism in the Berkshire Hills, estimates that 400,000 vacationers will visit the area this summer. Many of them will be attracted by music at Tanglewood, modern dance at Jacob's Pillow, and summer stock at the Berkshire Drama Festival and the Williamstown Theater.

Space in motels is virtually impossible to obtain without an advance reservation. Motel rates average $18 to $22 a day on a double basis. Hotels offer a modified American Plan at $22 a day for a single person, but require a minimum three-day stay. Rustic lodges or inns charge about $10 a day on a single basis, without meals.

New resort construction includes a 100-room motel underway in Great Barrington and a $6-million hotel planned in Pittsfield by the Berkshire Life Insurance Company, near an 86-acre urban renewal area.

Inquiries received by the Lake George Chamber of Commerce are also running ahead of last year. American Plan rates, with two meals, around Lake George proper are about $75 to $125 on a single basis. These resorts are the cottage type, with a central, family-style dining room. Housekeeping motels are very popular with vacationers in the area and their rates from about $85 to $250 weekly, providing space for an entire family.

COLUMBUS, GA.
LEDGER-ENQUIRER
SUN. 57,500

JUNE 5 1966 Buffaller

13

Especially for Music Lovers

Tanglewood, Daytona and Greece Offer Elaborate Summer Festivals

Some musically "In" places.

Of course, year after year, the leading one is Tanglewood, that melodic jewel in the cultural crown of the Massachusetts' Berkshire Hills. It also is the summer home of the Boston Symphony, being given to the orchestra in 1936.

Tanglewood was originally the mid-19th Century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan. At the end of his lovely property was a little red cottage made immortal by its then struggling resident, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

(In fact, before the Tanglewood area was known for its music, it was known for its literary giants. Melville, Holmes and Longfellow were sometime residents of nearby Pittsfield, and in fact, Melville wrote his immortal "Moby Dick" at Arrowhead, still to be seen on the Holmes Road at Pittsfield.)

Two years prior to the gift of Tanglewood, a series of summer concerts began in the Berkshires. These were the beginning of today's festival, the best known and the longest of the major music festivals in this country. The Boston Symphony gives 24 concerts in the great music show, surrounded by the formal gardens, hemlock hedges, and avenues of tall pines.

Nearer to home — in fact in a city that for many Columbus people seems like a second home — there will be a major music festival (for the first time in the Southeast) at Daytona Beach!

The London Symphony Orchestra — one of the world's greatest — will live and work at Daytona Beach for the four weeks of the festival, beginning July 28, through Aug. 21. There will be 16 concerts, each with a noted soloist and-or guest conductor.

Additionally, the LSO's chamber players will give three concerts; there will be open rehearsals and a music institute in association with Stetson University for gifted students 15 and older, with the LSO forming the nucleus of the faculty. College credit is offered for qualified students and interested laymen may audit.

Soloists and conductors will include Aaron Copland, Jaime Laredo, John Ogdon, Janos Starker and Richard Burgin.

Imagine all that great music, combined with the usual summer resort package that Daytona offers, miles of beach, fine fishing, golf, tennis, boating, etc.

And then for that really lucky person who is going abroad this summer, certainly one of the most "In" countries is Greece.

And Greece is a summer festival.

Full schedules have not been reported in yet, however, information available to date leads the observer to conclude that something along the lines of a total national festival, perhaps the first such ambitious and far-reaching effort in the history of Europe, is going to constitute the "splendor that IS Greece" this summer.

In Athens some 40 groups — musical as well as theatrical, offering everything from "Oedipus Rex" to Stravinski — will present a bold array of performances that will stretch, virtually consecutively, from early June through late September.

In other sections of the country, 20-odd groups performing from the farthest reaches of Macedonia to some of the more obscure Greek islands, will contribute another 170 cultural and artistic performances through the summer months.

It all began with the Athens festival itself. The idea was to fuse the golden past of Greece with the cultural aspects of the present day. Once the idea had been firmly planted — this year's festival marks the 12th anniversary of the program — a move got underway to spread the cultural wealth through the hinterland and provinces.

The golden past of Greece and the present — these were the two pillars of the program from the start. This summer, a third pillar will be added.

In the village of Mystras, eight kilometers away from Sparta and 280 kilometers from Athens, a series of performances will be given to honor the Byzantine past, one of the more creative periods in post-Golden Age Greek history.

DAYTONA BEACH SLATES LONDON SYMPHONY
David Gray, Principal First Horn, Among Noted Artists

TANGLEWOOD IN THE BERKSHIRES IS FAMOUS MUSIC CENTER
World-Famous Berkshire Festival With Boston Symphony Attracts Thousands

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Record (m)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Circ. 19,458
JUN 1 1966

Deadline Set For Arts Club Tanglewood Trip

The Adventure in the Arts Club of the YWCA is sponsoring a trip to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. on Sunday, Aug. 14, to hear the Boston Symphony under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf. Miss Marguerite Bedigie, advisor, announces that all reservations and payments must be in by June 10 as tickets must be purchased well in advance.

The chartered bus will leave the YWCA parking lot at 10 a.m. and should arrive at Tanglewood in time for a snack at the cafeteria, or one may bring a box lunch which can be enjoyed on the spacious grounds. Lunch may be followed by a tour of the grounds before the concert, which will start at 2:30 p.m. After the performance the group will stop for dinner on the way home.

Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is a on a beautiful 200-acre estate on Hawthorne Road. From early July through August it is the scene of the nationally renowned Berkshire Music Festival. Seating capacity in the music shed is 6,000, but crowds which more than double that number have been accommodated easily on the lawns.

Hawthorne Cottage is on the Tanglewood grounds. Here Hawthorne wrote and collected material for Tanglewood Tales. It was destroyed by fires in 1891 and rebuilt in 1948.

The program to be heard on August 14 will include the Symphony No. 3 by Prokofiev and the Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto.

Reservations for this trip may be made at the YWCA office by June 10. YWCA membership is required.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald
CRANSTON, R. I.
Weekly Circ. 5,498
JUN 2 3 1966

WCRQ To Carry Berkshire Festival Concerts Live

John P. Donofrio, Vice President and Manager of WCRQ in Providence has announced that the station will carry the Saturday evening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra live from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, serves the greater part of Rhode Island and portions of Southeastern Massachusetts with concert music feature programs as affiliate of the CRB Network. The live Berkshire Festival concerts will be produced by Network key station WCRB in cooperation with educational station WGBH, both of which serve the Greater Boston area.

WCQR Page 10

Mr. Donoffrio pointed out that the live broadcasts would include such exciting events as the complete St. John Passion by Bach July 16, Van Cliburn's performance of Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto #3, July 23, Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute" August 6 and the winners of the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow as soloists August 13. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct all eight Saturday broadcast concerts.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 41,720

JUN 4 1966 Buffaller

Tanglewood Opens 30th Season Saturday, July 2

LENOX, Mass. — Overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, or more properly, Lake Mahkeenac, was Tanglewood, the mid-nineteenth century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan. At the edge of this lovely property was the little red cottage made immortal by its then struggling resident, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Today Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as it has been for thirty sumers after the 1936 gift of the property to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan.

The red cottage was destroyed by fire in the 1890's but has been rebuilt on the original foundations and now serves as studios for the orchestra's flourishing educational arm, the Berkshire Music Center which last summer celebrated its 25th anniversary.

For this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the Romantic concerto as the theme. On each of six weekends with full orchestra two or three concerts will be performed by well known soloists.

The Festival opens on July 2 and concludes eight weeks later on Sunday, Aug. 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Brahms will be the featured composer during the three concerts of the opening weekend with three concerts devoted to Mozart and three to Bach on the succeeding weekends. On Aug. 6 Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute and for the following weekend (Aug. 13, 14) the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to be the soloists in several of the Russian composer's works.

Prior to each of the seven Friday evening orchestra concerts there will be a Weekend Prelude in which the soloists and members of the orchestra will perform lesser known works of the weekend's principal composer.

The guest conductors for the summer include Sir Adrian Boult, Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Arthur Fiedler will make his annual appearance at Tanglewood on Aug. 3 for the Boston Pops at Tanglewood Pension Fund concert.

COLUMBUS, GA.
LEDGER-ENQUIRER
SUN. 57,500

JUNE 5 1966

13

Especially for Music Lovers

Tanglewood, Daytona and Greece Offer Elaborate Summer Festivals

Some musically "In" places.

Of course, year after year, the leading one is Tanglewood, that melodic jewel in the cultural crown of the Massachusetts' Berkshire Hills. It also is the summer home of the Boston Symphony, being given to the orchestra in 1936.

Tanglewood was originally the mid-19th Century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan. At the end of his lovely property was a little red cottage made immortal by its then struggling resident, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

(In fact, before the Tanglewood area was known for its music, it was known for its literary giants. Melville, Holmes and Longfellow were sometime residents of nearby Pittsfield, and in fact, Melville wrote his immortal "Moby Dick" at Arrowhead, still to be seen on the Holmes Road at Pittsfield.)

DAYTONA BEACH SLATES LONDON SYMPHONY
David Gray, Principal First Horn, Among Noted Artists

Two years prior to the gift of Tanglewood, a series of summer concerts began in the Berkshires. These were the beginning of today's festival, the best known and the longest of the major music festivals in this country. The Boston Symphony gives 24 concerts in the great music show, surrounded by the formal gardens, hemlock hedges and avenues of tall pines.

Nearer to home — in fact in a city that for many Columbus people seems like a second home — there will be a major music festival (for the first time in the Southeast) at Daytona Beach!

The London Symphony Orchestra — one of the world's greatest — will live and work at Daytona Beach for the four weeks of the festival, beginning July 28, through Aug. 21. There will be 16 concerts, each with a noted soloist and-or guest conductor.

Additionally, the LSO's chamber players will give three concerts; there will be open rehearsals and a music institute in association with Stetson University for gifted students 15 and older, with the LSO forming the nucleus of the faculty. College credit is offered for qualified students and interested laymen may audit.

Soloists and conductors will include Aaron Copland, Jaime Laredo, John Ogdon, Janos Starker and Richard Burgin.

Imagine all that great music, combined with the usual summer resort package that Daytona offers, miles of beach, fine fishing, golf, tennis, boating, etc.

And then for that really lucky person who is going abroad this summer, certainly one of the most "In" countries is Greece.

And Greece is a summer festival.

Full schedules have not been reported in yet, however, information available to date leads the observer to conclude that something along the lines of a total national festival, perhaps the first such ambitious and far-reaching effort in the history of Europe, is going to constitute the "splendor that IS Greece" this summer.

In Athens some 40 groups — musical as well as theatrical, offering everything from "Oedipus Rex" to Stravinski — will present a bold array of performances that will stretch, virtually consecutively, from early June through late September.

In other sectors of the country, 20-odd groups performing from the farthest reaches of Macedonia to some of the more obscure Greek islands, will contribute another 170 cultural and artistic performances through the summer months.

It all began with the Athens festival itself. The idea was to fuse the golden past of Greece with the cultural aspects of the present day. Once the idea had been firmly planted — this year's festival marks the 12th anniversary of the program — a move got underway to spread the cultural wealth through the hinterland and provinces.

The golden past of Greece and the present — these were the two pillars of the program from the start. This summer, a third pillar will be added.

In the village of Mystras, eight kilometers away from Sparta and 280 kilometers from Athens, a series of performances will be given to honor the Byzantine past, one of the more creative periods in post-Golden Age Greek history.

TANGLEWOOD IN THE BERKSHIRES IS FAMOUS MUSIC CENTER
World-Famous Berkshire Festival With Boston Symphony Attracts Thousands

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Record (m)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Circ. 19,458

JUN 1 1966

Deadline Set For Arts Club Tanglewood Trip

The Adventure in the Arts Club of the YWCA is sponsoring a trip to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. on Sunday, Aug. 14, to hear the Boston Symphony under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf. Miss Marguerite Bedigie, advisor, announces that all reservations and payments must be in by June 10 as tickets must be purchased well in advance.

The chartered bus will leave the YWCA parking lot at 10 a.m. and should arrive at Tanglewood in time for a snack at the cafeteria, or one may bring a box lunch which can be enjoyed on the spacious grounds. Lunch may be followed by a tour of the grounds before the concert, which will start at 2:30 p.m. After the performance the group will stop for dinner on the way home.

Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is a on a beautiful 200-acre estate on Hawthorne Road. From early July through August it is the scene of the nationally renowned Berkshire Music Festival. Seating capacity in the music shed is 6,000, but crowds which more than double that number have been accommodated easily on the lawns.

Hawthorne Cottage is on the Tanglewood grounds. Here Hawthorne wrote and collected material for Tanglewood Tales. It was destroyed by fires in 1891 and rebuilt in 1948.

The program to be heard on August 14 will include the Symphony No. 3 by Prokofiev and the Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto.

Reservations for this trip may be made at the YWCA office by June 10. YWCA membership is required.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Herald
CRANSTON, R. I.
Weekly Circ. 5,498
JUN 23 1966

WCRQ To Carry Berkshire Festival Concerts Live

John P. Donofrio, Vice President and Manager of WCRQ in Providence has announced that the station will carry the Saturday evening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra live from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, serves the greater part of Rhode Island and portions of Southeastern Massachusetts with concert music feature programs as affiliate of the CRB Network. The live Berkshire Festival concerts will be produced by Network key station WCRB in cooperation with educational station WGBH, both of which serve the Greater Boston area.

WCQR Page 10

Mr. Donoffrio pointed out that the live broadcasts would include such exciting events as the complete St. John Passion by Bach July 16, Van Cliburn's performance of Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto #3, July 23, Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute" August 6 and the winners of the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow as soloists August 13. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct all eight Saturday broadcast concerts.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 41,720

JUN 4 1966

Tanglewood Opens 30th Season Saturday, July 2

LENOX, Mass. — Overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, or more properly, Lake Mahkeenac, was Tanglewood, the mid-nineteenth century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan. At the edge of this lovely property was the little red cottage made immortal by its then struggling resident, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Today Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as it has been for thirty sumers after the 1936 gift of the property to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan.

The red cottage was destroyed by fire in the 1890's but has been rebuilt on the original foundations and now serves as studios for the orchestra's flourishing educational arm, the Berkshire Music Center which last summer celebrated its 25th anniversary.

For this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the Romantic concerto as the theme. On each of six weekends with full orchestra two or three concerts will be performed by well known soloists.

The Festival opens on July 2 and concludes eight weeks later on Sunday, Aug. 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Brahms will be the featured composer during the three concerts of the opening weekend with three concerts devoted to Mozart and three to Bach on the succeeding weekends. On Aug. 6 Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute and for the following weekend (Aug. 13, 14) the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to be the soloists in several of the Russian composer's works.

Prior to each of the seven Friday evening orchestra concerts there will be a Weekend Prelude in which the soloists and members of the orchestra will perform lesser known works of the weekend's principal composer.

The guest conductors for the summer include Sir Adrian Boult, Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Arthur Fiedler will make his annual appearance at Tanglewood on Aug. 3 for the Boston Pops at Tanglewood Pension Fund concert.

COLUMBUS, GA.
LEDGER-ENQUIRER
SUN. 57,500

JUNE 5 1966

13

Especially for Music Lovers

Tanglewood, Daytona and Greece Offer Elaborate Summer Festivals

Some musically "In" places.

Of course, year after year, the leading one is Tanglewood, that melodic jewel in the cultural crown of the Massachusetts' Berkshire Hills. It also is the summer home of the Boston Symphony, being given to the orchestra in 1936.

Tanglewood was originally the mid-19th Century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan. At the end of his lovely property was a little red cottage made immortal by its then struggling resident, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

(In fact, before the Tanglewood area was known for its music, it was known for its literary giants. Melville, Holmes and Longfellow were sometime residents of nearby Pittsfield, and in fact, Melville wrote his immortal "Moby Dick" at Arrowhead, still to be seen on the Holmes Road at Pittsfield.)

Two years prior to the gift of Tanglewood, a series of summer concerts began in the Berkshires. These were the beginning of today's festival, the best known and the longest of the major music festivals in this country. The Boston Symphony gives 24 concerts in the great music show, surrounded by the formal gardens, hemlock hedges, and avenues of tall pines.

Nearer to home — in fact in a city that for many Columbus people seems like a second home — there will be a major music festival (for the first time in the Southeast) at Daytona Beach!

The London Symphony Orchestra — one of the world's greatest — will live and work at Daytona Beach for the four weeks of the festival, beginning July 28, through Aug. 21. There will be 16 concerts, each with a noted soloist and-or guest conductor.

Additionally, the LSO's chamber players will give three concerts; there will be open rehearsals and a music institute in association with Stetson University for gifted students 15 and older, with the LSO forming the nucleus of the faculty. College credit is offered for qualified students and interested laymen may audit.

Soloists and conductors will include Aaron Copland, Jaime Laredo, John Ogdon, Janos Starker and Richard Burgin.

Imagine all that great music, combined with the usual summer resort package that Daytona offers, miles of beach, fine fishing, golf, tennis, boating, etc.

And then for that really lucky person who is going abroad this summer, certainly one of the most "In" countries is Greece.

And Greece is a summer festival.

Full schedules have not been reported in yet, however, information available to date leads the observer to conclude that something along the lines of a total national festival, perhaps the first such ambitious and far-reaching effort in the history of Europe, is going to constitute the "splendor that IS Greece" this summer.

In Athens some 40 groups — musical as well as theatrical, offering everything from "Oedipus Rex" to Stravinski — will present a bold array of performances that will stretch, virtually consecutively, from early June through late September.

In other sectors of the country, 20 odd groups performing from the farthest reaches of Macedonia to some of the more obscure Greek islands, will contribute another 170 cultural and artistic performances through the summer months.

It all began with the Athens festival itself. The idea was to fuse the golden past of Greece with the cultural aspects of the present day. Once the idea had been firmly planted — this year's festival marks the 12th anniversary of the program — a move got underway to spread the cultural wealth through the hinterland and provinces.

The golden past of Greece and the present — these were the two pillars of the program from the start. This summer, a third pillar will be added.

In the village of Mystras, eight kilometers away from Sparta and 280 kilometers from Athens, a series of performances will be given to honor the Byzantine past, one of the more creative periods in post-Golden Age Greek history.

AYTONA BEACH SLATES LONDON SYMPHONY avid Gray, Principal First Horn, Among Noted Artists

TANGLEWOOD IN THE BERKSHIRES IS FAMOUS MUSIC CENTER
World-Famous Berkshire Festival With Boston Symphony Attracts Thousands

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Record (m)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Circ. 19,458
JUN 1 1966

Deadline S
for Arts C
Tanglewood

The Adventure in Club of the YWCA is a trip to the Berks Festival at Tanglew nox, Mass. on Sund to hear the Bostor
under the directi
Leinsdorf. Miss Marguerite Bedigie, advisor, announces that all reservations and payments must be in by June 10 as tickets must be purchased well in advance.

The chartered bus will leave the YWCA parking lot at 10 a.m. and should arrive at Tanglewood in time for a snack at the cafeteria, or one may bring a box lunch which can be enjoyed on the spacious grounds. Lunch may be followed by a tour of the grounds before the concert, which will start at 2:30 p.m. After the performance the group will stop for dinner on the way home.

Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is a on a beautiful 200-acre estate on Hawthorne Road. From early July through August it is the scene of the nationally renowned Berkshire Music Festival. Seating capacity in the music shed is 6,000, but crowds which more than double that number have been accommodated easily on the lawns.

Hawthorne Cottage is on the Tanglewood grounds. Here Hawthorne wrote and collected material for Tanglewood Tales. It was destroyed by fires in 1891 and rebuilt in 1948.

The program to be heard on August 14 will include the Symphony No. 3 by Prokofiev and the Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto.

Reservations for this trip may be made at the YWCA office by June 10. YWCA membership is required.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
742-4200
N, R. I.
Circ. 5,498
2 3 1966

8-65

WCRQ

3

(Continued from Page 1)

Massachusetts, beginning Saturday, July 2, 1966. The eight Saturday programs, in monophonic sound, will begin at 8:00 p.m. instead of the customary 8:30 p.m. broadcast time. WCRQ-FM serves the greater part of Rhode Island and portions of Southeastern Massachusetts with concert music feature programs as affiliate of the CRB Network. The live Berkshire Festival concerts will be produced by Network key station WCRB in cooperation with educational station WGBH, both of which serve the Greater Boston area.

Mr. Donoffrio pointed out that the live broadcasts would include such exciting events as the complete St. John Passion by Bach July 16, Van Cliburn's performance of Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto #3, July 23, Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute" August 6 and the winners of the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow as soloists August 13. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct all eight Saturday broadcast concerts.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 41,720

JUN 4 1966

Tanglewood Opens 30th Season Saturday, July 2

LENOX, Mass. — Overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, or more properly, Lake Mahkeenac, was Tanglewood, the mid-nineteenth century gentleman's estate of William Aspinwall Tappan. At the edge of this lovely property was the little red cottage made immortal by its then struggling resident, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Today Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as it has been for thirty sumers after the 1936 gift of the property to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan.

The red cottage was destroyed by fire in the 1890's but has been rebuilt on the original foundations and now serves as studios for the orchestra's flourishing educational arm, the Berkshire Music Center which last summer celebrated its 25th anniversary.

For this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the Romantic concerto as the theme. On each of six weekends with full orchestra two or three concerts will be performed by well known soloists.

The Festival opens on July 2 and concludes eight weeks later on Sunday, Aug. 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Brahms will be the featured composer during the three concerts of the opening weekend with three concerts devoted to Mozart and three to Bach on the succeeding weekends. On Aug. 6 Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute and for the following weekend (Aug. 13, 14) the winners of this June's Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to be the soloists in several of the Russian composer's works.

Prior to each of the seven Friday evening orchestra concerts there will be a Weekend Prelude in which the soloists and members of the orchestra will perform lesser known works of the weekend's principal composer.

The guest conductors for the summer include Sir Adrian Boult, Sixten Ehrling, Szymon Goldberg, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Arthur Fiedler will make his annual appearance at Tanglewood on Aug. 3 for the Boston Pops at Tanglewood Pension Fund concert.

Tanglewood Tale

Hawthorne was only the first artist to thrive amid the Berkshires

by Florence Stevenson

In 1960, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood (near Lenox, Massachusetts) discontinued its fine opera workshop to concentrate on the training of young instrumentalists and composers. Yet, opera being dear to the heart of Erich Leinsdorf, now music director of the Boston Symphony and for many years a leading Metropolitan Opera conductor, he could not resist programing a complete concert version of Lohengrin for the Music Shed in 1965. The three final performances of the season were devoted to one act of this musical tapestry each day, presented in its entirety for the first time in the Western Hemisphere. Though the serialization of the Wagner epic did not meet with all the acclaim anticipated, Leinsdorf is not discouraged. He has scheduled Mozart's Magic Flute for the 1966 season, and profiting from previous experience he has decreed that the Flute shall be complete within one evening (August 6), thus eliminating the main hazard of the Lohengrin endeavor—sustaining excitement through night-long intermissions.

If Lohengrin lacked total involvement for its audiences, its effect on the performers was in tune with what experts are wont to call the "festival experience." Subjected to a fortnight of Leinsdorf's meticulous artistry, Lucine Amara, last season's Elsa, could sigh over two orchestral rehearsals a day but still relish the attention to musical detail and the chance to sing a role she would not dare attempt all in one evening. Calvin Marsh, the Herald, praised his opportunity of hearing so much of the orchestration, stating that in staged opera singers can hear only

Music-lovers stretch across the lawn in front of the Music Shed

NEW YORK
AND BROOKLYN DAILY
D. 31,450

JUN 9 1966

Brooklyn Academy Offers Excursion To Tanglewood

The Brooklyn Academy of Music's Tenth Annual Excursion to Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will take place July [illegible]th. The public is invited to spend Sunday in the Berkshires, enjoying a concert inside the Music shed at Tanglewood.

These excursions [illegible] by the Academy of [illegible] one of the great summ[illegible] festivals. Included in [illegible] of the ticket are round-trip transportation via air conditioned, rest room equipped buses of the Campus Coach Lines, a truly delicious box lunch at Tanglewood and a supper snack on the way home.

The reservation deadline is Tuesday, July 19th at 5:00 p.m. at the Membership Office (third floor) of the Academy. You may make you rreservation by mail (postmarked no later than July 15th) or in person.

Mrs. Monroe D. Stein is the Chairman of this year's Tanglewood Excursion Committee of the Women's Committee for the Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts in Brooklyn.

For further information call Mrs. Sarah Walder at ST 3-6700

Tenor of the House

That a Jewish cantor, American-born and American-trained, should win recognition as an opera singer "more Italiano than the Italians" presents a mixture wondrous to contemplate. Among Richard Tucker's proudest moments have been the recent decoration of "Commendatore" in the Order of Merit of the Italian Republic and the first honorary degree conferred on a singer by the University of Notre Dame. That one of the foremost Catholic universities should so honor a Jew who never graduated from high school brings him great joy.

Yet honors from afar do not detract from the satisfaction that Tucker takes in his singular position as "tenor of the house" at the Metropolitan. Now in his twenty-second season, he returned in January from his first European tour in seven years. Professionally, the Metropolitan spells home, though he himself might well designate it as his place of business. Viewing the world of opera with the same realism as he did the cloak-and-suit industry, in which he was engaged before his opera career, he has pursued a single-minded philosophy: "To produce and earn, you must work. The more roles, the more money." But he is also a homebody; not really interested in travel, he has had no special desire to become the international celebrity he is, even resisting European engagements.

Always in leading roles from his start (as Enzo in La Gioconda, January 25, 1945), Tucker has sung twenty-seven to date at the Metropolitan. All but two—Alfredo in La Traviata and Calaf in Turandot—have been for the first time on its stage, a record in itself. Altogether he has chalked up well past 300 performances in the house and over 150 on tour.

When he celebrated his twentieth anniversary by singing Radames in Aida last season, he had waited since 1949 to sing it onstage. It was a big moment in his life to have Toscanini select him for the NBC broadcast of Aida back then, but Tucker considered his voice too light for the role. His particular favorite is Des Grieux in Manon Lescaut. The one he has sung more than any other is Don José in Carmen; Rodolfo in La Bohème is a close second. His great ambition is to sing Eléazar in La Juive.

This role was the last in which Enrico Caruso appeared. Through the years Tucker has forged close links to Caruso, literally inheriting the earlier singer's mantle, for Gloria Caruso presented him with the brown leather jacket her father wore in the world premiere of La Fanciulla del West at the Metropolitan in 1910. Tucker also appeared at a Lincoln Center gala in the costume Caruso wore in Pagliacci. While at a preliminary fitting he donned the suit readily, he found that he more than filled Caruso's shoes. Accordingly, these were stretched so that Tucker could walk comfortably in his predecessor's footsteps—but he has yet to sing the role of Canio onstage. Ten years ago Rudolf Bing said, "Caruso, Caruso, that's all you hear! I have an idea we're going to be proud someday to tell people we heard Richard Tucker."

Rare is the tenor who can move comfortably and successfully from Radames to Ferrando in Così Fan Tutte, as Tucker did within a single week last season. Few tenors could maintain vocal equilibrium year after year while singing so energetically and fervently. His ability to blend robustness and suavity, combined with the fact that he loves to sing, provides the secret. Still an ordained cantor, he has always refused opera and concert engagements twice a year to return to the ministry for the Jewish Holy Days each fall and the traditional Passover Seder Service each spring. He has even officiated at the Sabbath morning services at the Great Synagogue in Tel-Aviv. Devoutly religious, he believes in predestination and daily prayers. At Friday-night gatherings in his home he observes the age-old rituals of his faith.

Away from the opera house, Tucker tends to divorce himself from the artistic world. He draws his intimate friends from his home neighborhood of Great Neck, Long Island, or from the garment center, where he still enjoys eating in a favorite dairy restaurant. He believes in the convivial life and loves parties on a grand scale. When he feels at his best after a performance, his wife never knows "whether the entire court of Mantua or all of Puccini's hungry Bohemians will troop in for late supper."

Family life means as much to him as his career, if not more. He leads a quiet, average suburban existence with his wife, Sara, proud of his three sons and more worried about them than about his operatic roles. As befits the relationship symbolized in the license plate of their car, which reads "RST-3," he works primarily for his family. While his wife appreciates his reputation as a tenor, she loves him for being a solid citizen and family man.

Fate decreed that on the last day of opera at the old Metropolitan, Tucker should sing La Bohème in the afternoon and take part in the Gala Farewell that evening. What could have been more appropriate for the tenor of the house?

MILES KASTENDIECK

THE ESSENTIAL TUCKER: twenty-third in a series of portraits for OPERA NEWS by the distinguished photographer Hiro appeared at a Lincoln Center gala in the costume Caruso wore in Pagliacci. While at a preliminary fitting he donned the suit readily, he found that he more than filled Caruso's shoes. Accordingly, these were stretched so that Tucker could walk comfortably in his predecessor's footsteps—but he has yet to sing the role of Canio onstage. Ten years ago Rudolf Bing said, "Caruso, Caruso, that's all you hear! I have an idea we're going to be proud someday to tell people we heard Richard Tucker."

OR OF THE HOUSE

Rare is the tenor who can move convincingly and successfully from Radames to Ferrando in Trovatore, as Tucker did within a single week last season. Year after year, his ability to blend with the fact that he could maintain vocal equilibrium and fervently. His ability to blend with the fact that he singing so energetically and suavity, combined with the fact that he robustness and concert engagements twice provides the secret. Still an ordained cantor, loves to sing, provides the ministry for the Jewish Holy Days has always refused opera and Seder Service each to return to the ministry for the Sabbath morning and the traditional Passover Service at the Sabbath morning is even officiated at the Great Synagogue in Tel-Aviv. Devoutly in predestination and daily prayers. Great Synagogue in his home he observes the ings in his home he observes the

Tucker tends to divorce
He draws his intimate Great Neck, Long
he still enjoys lieves in the le. When never of

born and American-as an opera singer "more resents a mixture wondrous Richard Tucker's proudest mo-ecent decoration of "Commenda-ferit of the Italian Republic and conferred on a singer by the one of the foremost Cath-lew who never graduat Joy.
n the satisfac-
as tenor of second ean

Eugene Cook

at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Massachusetts

NEW YORK
AND BROOKLYN DAILY
D. 31,450

JUN 9 1966

Brooklyn Academy Offers Excursion To Tanglewood

The Brooklyn Academy of Music's Tenth Annual Excursion to Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will take place July [illegible]th. The public is invited to spend Sunday in the Berkshires, enjoying a concert [illegible] the Music shed at Tanglewood.

These excursions [illegible] by the Academy of [illegible] one of the great summer [illegible] events. Included in [illegible] of the ticket are round trip transportation via air conditioned, rest room equipped buses of the Campus Coach Lines, a truly delicious box lunch at Tanglewood and a supper snack on the way home.

The reservation deadline is Tuesday, July 19th at 5:00 p.m. at the Membership Office (third floor) of the Academy. You may make you reservation by mail (postmarked no later than July 15th) or in person.

Mrs. Monroe D. Stein is the Chairman of this year's Tanglewood Excursion Committee of the Women's Committee for the Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts in Brooklyn.

For further information call Mrs. Sarah Walder at ST 3-6700

RIGHT: near an old cottage, a young musician learns a score while taking the sunshine; BELOW: members of the student chorus rehearse their parts

ABOVE: pretty scholars enjoy a respite and study class schedule; LEFT: in practice room, instrumentalists prepare a new piece of chamber music

ent of the music. And Jerome Hines, a vet-henry, rhapsodized over another element in ewood tale—"the quaint little houses, the lovely
's wonderful country!"

s combination of stimulating music, ideal conditions soul-satisfying atmosphere is, in essence, what Tangleood h ome to mean to performer and audience. The beauties o the site have an almost lyrical effect upon the senses. Most visitors—the festival welcomes some 250,000 each summer—take at least half a day to wander about the 210-acre estate that the Tappan family deeded to the Boston Symphony in 1936. They stream from the three main gates, past a narrow barricade of offices, a glass enclosed reception room, with its adjacent bookstore and cafeteria, to the broad green grounds, exclaiming over the numerous trees or standing in awe before a view of the mountain-shadowed lake nearby. At night, when pilgrims are seated in the Music Shed or scattered across the lawn on camp chairs and blankets, Tanglewood's beauty is revealed by starlight.

Tanglewood has long attracted artists. In 1850 Nathaniel Hawthorne occupied a small red cottage there, playing host to Longfellow, Emerson, Melville and Holmes, and writing Tanglewood Tales, A Wonder Book and The House of the Seven Gables. Not far from the Tappan boundary is the Wheatleigh chateau, now a hotel but once the abode of an eccentric countess who headed her own religious cult and held sunset services in the woods. Just over the hill stands Lenox, a small New England town of neat stores, red brick buildings with immaculate white columns and a few sprawling "cottages," reminders that it was once a summer resort for newly rich millionaires.

For the fortunate who dwell in Tanglewood glades each summer, it is indeed Parnassus. Day and night, the grounds seethe with musical activity. In addition to rehearsals in the music shed or in the tiny shell allocated to chamber music, instrumentalists, like Pan, sit beneath shady trees to practice. Most of these are young residents of the Berkshire Music Center; each wins a $450-$700 fellowship. Many have the opportunity to join the nation's top orchestras when conductors come to the festival scouting for players. Tan-glewood alumni include Leonard Bernstein and Lukas
Foss, members of Koussevitzky's first conducting class in 1940. There are still opportunities for the Center's handful of vocal scholars to emulate such predecessors as Mario Lanza, Phyllis Curtin, Claire Watson, Paula Lenchner,
Frank Guarrera, Morley Meredith, McHenry Boatwright,
Rosalind Elias, Leontyne Price and George Shirley.

Opera took root officially in Tanglewood's first season, in the summer of 1940, with Handel's Acis and Galatea (in the open air) and Hindemith's Hin und Zurück (played under an improvised tent). The following summer, when an opera theater had been added to the festival's facilities,
Cosi Fan Tutte was chosen to inaugurate it. The Merry Wives of Windsor followed in 1942, and after the war the American premiere of Peter Grimes took place there. The head of the workshop from the beginning was Boris Goldovsky, whose colleagues at various times included Herbert Graf, Jan Popper, Frederic Cohen, Felix Wolfes, Leo van Witsen and Sarah Caldwell. The tireless Goldovsky produced another U.S. premiere in 1947, this time Mozart's Idomeneo, and the following year he and Miss Caldwell produced their painstaking reconstruction of a rare Rossini opera, Il Turco in Italia. Ensuing summers found Tan-glewood's theater harboring such diverse guests as Strauss' Ariadne auf Naxos, Bernstein's Trouble in Tahiti and Milhaud's Abandon d'Ariane, but the dream longest in fulfillment was Pique Dame. Koussevitzky had wanted to conduct it since 1942; when it was finally staged, nine years later, Goldovsky regretfully had to take the baton and lead the Tchaikovsky work in Koussevitzky's memory.

Both Goldovsky and Miss Caldwell have since gone on to head their own respective companies, and the opera theater at Tanglewood has lately been devoted to instrumental music. (Five composers were commissioned to write for last season's Festival of Contemporary American Music there.) From the opera-lover's point of view, however, there are heartening signs that this policy may not remain permanent. In 1962, Leinsdorf—a man as much of opera as of concert—succeeded Charles Munch with the Boston
Symphony, automatically becoming head of the Berkshire Music Center. With the efficiency for which he has long been noted, he made significant changes: the Center is now divided into a Fellowship Program and the Tanglewood Institute.

The former is composed of fellowship students, of whom last season seventy comprised the resident orchestra, seven were keyboard players, eight were singers and four were conductors. These participated in the annual gala evening, the chamber concerts, the Contemporary Festival. The Tanglewood Institute is headed by pianist Victor Babin, director of the Cleveland Institute of Music. Under his direction, music teachers, choirmasters, laymen and those interested in the support and operation of musical groups attended eight seminars in choral music, listening and analysis, contemporary music for music educators, conducting and instrumental teaching.

In the well-defined complex that Leinsdorf aims to create, it is not unreasonable to suspect that he will turn his sights more and more on opera. Last season, in addition to Lohengrin, there was a concert performance of Ravel's Enfant et les Sortilèges, and Act IV of Carmen was presented during a gala evening. It is right in line with management policy to present opera at Tanglewood, for—the training of young musicians aside—the festival is devoted to performing music the public wants to hear.
Though critics and some members of last season's audience tended to be critical of Lohengrin, people did drive all the way from Boston and New York (and even further) to hear it; at each evening they shouted themselves hoarse. The same thing may well happen on August 6 with The Magic Flute.

NEW YORK
AND BROOKLYN DAILY
D. 31,450

JUN 9 1966

Brooklyn Academy Offers Excursion To Tanglewood

The Brooklyn Academy of Music's Tenth Annual Excursion to Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will take place July 24th. The public is invited to spend Sunday in the Berkshires, enjoying a concert under the Music shed at Tanglewood.

These excursions [illegible] by the Academy of M[illegible] one of the great sum[illegible] [illegible] Included in [illegible] of the ticket are round-trip transportation via air conditioned, rest room equipped buses of the Campus Coach Lines, a truly delicious box lunch at Tanglewood and a supper snack on the way home.

The reservation deadline is Tuesday, July 19th at 5:00 p.m. at the Membership Office (third floor) of the Academy. You may make you reservation by mail (postmarked no later than July 15th) or in person.

Mrs. Monroe D. Stein is the Chairman of this year's Tanglewood Excursion Committee of the Women's Committee for the Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts in Brooklyn.

For further information call Mrs. Sarah Walder at ST 3-8700

ent of the music. And Jerome Hines, a vet-
Henry, rhapsodized over another element in ewood tale—"the quaint little houses, the lovely
's wonderful country!"

is combination of stimulating music, ideal conditions soul-satisfying atmosphere is, in essence, what Tangleood h ome to mean to performer and audience. The beauties o the site have an almost lyrical effect upon the senses. Most visitors—the festival welcomes some 250,000 each summer—take at least half a day to wander about the 210-acre estate that the Tappan family deeded to the Boston Symphony in 1936. They stream from the three main gates, past a narrow barricade of offices, a glass-enclosed reception room, with its adjacent bookstore and cafeteria, to the broad green grounds, exclaiming over the numerous trees or standing in awe before a view of the mountain-shadowed lake nearby. At night, when pilgrims are seated in the Music Shed or scattered across the lawn on camp chairs and blankets, Tanglewood's beauty is revealed by starlight.

Tanglewood has long attracted artists. In 1850 Nathaniel Hawthorne occupied a small red cottage there, playing host to Longfellow, Emerson, Melville and Holmes, and writing Tanglewood Tales, A Wonder Book and The House of the Seven Gables. Not far from the Tappan boundary is the Wheatleigh chateau, now a hotel but once the abode of an eccentric countess who headed her own religious cult and held sunset services in the woods. Just over the hill stands Lenox, a small New England town of neat stores, red brick buildings with immaculate white columns and a few sprawling "cottages," reminders that it was once a summer resort for newly rich millionaires.

For the fortunate who dwell in Tanglewood glades each summer, it is indeed Parnassus. Day and night, the grounds seethe with musical activity. In addition to rehearsals in the music shed or in the tiny shell allocated to chamber music, instrumentalists, like Pan, sit beneath shady trees to practice. Most of these are young residents of the Berkshire Music Center; each wins a $450-$700 fellowship. Many have the opportunity to join the nation's top orchestras when conductors come to the festival scouting for players. Tanglewood alumni include Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss, members of Koussevitzky's first conducting class in 1940. There are still opportunities for the Center's handful of vocal scholars to emulate such predecessors as Mario Lanza, Phyllis Curtin, Claire Watson, Paula Lenchner, Frank Guarrera, Morley Meredith, McHenry Boatwright, Rosalind Elias, Leontyne Price and George Shirley.

Opera took root officially in Tanglewood's first season, in the summer of 1940, with Handel's Acis and Galatea (in the open air) and Hindemith's Hin und Zurück (played under an improvised tent). The following summer, when an opera theater had been added to the festival's facilities, Così Fan Tutte was chosen to inaugurate it. The Merry Wives of Windsor followed in 1942, and after the war the American premiere of Peter Grimes took place there. The head of the workshop from the beginning was Boris Goldovsky, whose colleagues at various times included Herbert Graf, Jan Popper, Frederic Cohen, Felix Wolfes, Leo van Witsen and Sarah Caldwell. The tireless Goldovsky produced another U.S. premiere in 1947, this time Mozart's Idomeneo, and the following year he and Miss Caldwell produced their painstaking reconstruction of a rare Rossini opera, Il Turco in Italia. Ensuing summers found Tanglewood's theater harboring such diverse guests as Strauss' Ariadne auf Naxos, Bernstein's Trouble in Tahiti and Milhaud's Abandon d'Ariane, but the dream longest in fulfillment was Pique Dame. Koussevitzky had wanted to conduct it since 1942; when it was finally staged, nine years later, Goldovsky regretfully had to take the baton and lead the Tchaikovsky work in Koussevitzky's memory.

Both Goldovsky and Miss Caldwell have since gone on to head their own respective companies, and the opera theater at Tanglewood has lately been devoted to instrumental music. (Five composers were commissioned to write for last season's Festival of Contemporary American Music there.) From the opera-lover's point of view, however, there are heartening signs that this policy may not remain permanent. In 1962, Leinsdorf—a man as much of opera as of concert—succeeded Charles Munch with the Boston Symphony, automatically becoming head of the Berkshire Music Center. With the efficiency for which he has long been noted, he made significant changes: the Center is now divided into a Fellowship Program and the Tanglewood Institute.

The former is composed of fellowship students, of whom last season seventy comprised the resident orchestra, seven were keyboard players, eight were singers and four were conductors. These participated in the annual gala evening, the chamber concerts, the Contemporary Festival. The Tanglewood Institute is headed by pianist Victor Babin, director of the Cleveland Institute of Music. Under his direction, music teachers, choirmasters, laymen and those interested in the support and operation of musical groups attended eight seminars in choral music, listening and analysis, contemporary music for music educators, conducting and instrumental teaching.

In the well-defined complex that Leinsdorf aims to create, it is not unreasonable to suspect that he will turn his sights more and more on opera. Last season, in addition to Lohengrin, there was a concert performance of Ravel's Enfant et les Sortilèges, and Act IV of Carmen was presented during a gala evening. It is right in line with management policy to present opera at Tanglewood, for—the training of young musicians aside—the festival is devoted to performing music the public wants to hear. Though critics and some members of last season's audience tended to be critical of Lohengrin, people did drive all the way from Boston and New York (and even further) to hear it; at each evening they shouted themselves hoarse. The same thing may well happen on August 6 with The Magic Flute.

NEW YORK
AND BROOKLYN DAILY
D. 31,450

JUN 9 1966

Brooklyn Academy Offers Excursion To Tanglewood

The Brooklyn Academy of Music's Tenth Annual Excursion to Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will take place July 24th. The public is invited to spend Sunday in the Berkshires, enjoying a concert inside the Music shed at Tanglewood.

These excursions organized by the Academy of Music are one of the great summer fun bargains. Included in the price of the ticket are round trip transportation via air conditioned, rest room equipped buses of the Campus Coach Lines, a truly delicious box lunch at Tanglewood and a supper snack on the way home.

The reservation deadline is Tuesday, July 19th at 5:00 p.m. at the Membership Office (third floor) of the Academy. You may make you rreservation by mail (postmarked no later than July 15th) or in person.

Mrs. Monroe D. Stein is the Chairman of this year's Tanglewood Excursion Committee of the Women's Committee for the Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts in Brooklyn.

For further information call Mrs. Sarah Walder at ST 3-6700

15

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 146,293

JUN 30 1966

Josh White Concert At Castle Hill Postponed

By PEGGY BROWN
Society Editor

Fourth of July weekend is upon us, with its picnics and parties, beaching and boating.

And, of course, there are the summer theaters and music festivals to add glamour and culture to vacationers' social life.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gets into its opening week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox with Erich Leinsdorf conducting concerts Saturday evening and Sunday and Monday afternoons.

But folks who planned to picnic on the terrace of the Great House at Castle Hill and then hear Judy Collins and Josh White in the opening concert of the Castle Hill Festival this weekend will have to wait a week.

Since illness forced opera singer Rosalind Elias to cancel her concerts on July 8 and 9, the schedule of the Festival

Socially Speaking

held in the Italian Garden of the former Crane estate in Ipswich, has been revised.

Instead of opening on the holiday weekend, folksingers Josh and Judy will give the first performance in the series on July 8 and 9.

OBSERVER DISPATCH
Sunday, June 26, 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Item (e)
WAKEFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 6,620

JUN 22 1966

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 18,000

JUNE 20 1966

Eight Week Festival to Open at Tanglewood Next Weekend; Boston Symphony Will Play

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass.—Three concerts given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's (July 2: 8:00 p. m.) program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to TANNHAUSER and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahm's Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p. m.). Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4; 2:30 p. m.) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autum of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

Showbeat: Star Whirl On Parade

By PETER CALISCH

BREAKING TRADITION: For the first time in 17 years, announcer Ralph Allinger and his red jacket will be missing from the Civic Band opener July 4 at the Parkway. Allinger family to vacation on Cape Cod. Fellow radioman Frank Davis to club. . . SWITCH: Kathy Meyers, Civic Musical Society's girl Friday, has taken similar assignment with associate dean at Utica College, effective Tuesday.

STARTING TODAY: Berkshire Music Center begins 26th year; Boston Symphony opens 31st season at Tanglewood July 2. . . FOR PIANISTS: Second Van Cliburn quadrennial competition to run Sept. 29 - Oct. 9 in Fort Worth, Tex., $10,000 to the winner.

The Item Hears

That three concerts given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, over the July 4 weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf, will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival. The concerts this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936.

THE CATHOLIC NEWS
NEW YORK'S WEEKLY
CATHOLIC NEWSPAPER
W. 82,500

JUN 30 1966

Theater, Fishing, Dancing Headline Berkshire Summer

PITTSFIELD, Mass. — Tourist operators in Western Massachusetts' Berkshire Hills are prepared for a banner 1966 summer season.

As any native of these hills can tell you, the area known as Konkapot is a lovely trout stream in the southern reaches of Berkshire County, and Bed Bug Hollow is a section in the Northern Berkshire town of Adams.

The Konkapot has to share with the area's many other streams the reputation for a good producer of trout, but Adams is unique. Not only is Adams the only community here to have a Bed Bug Hollow, but it holds the state's highest mountain — Mount Greylock — and is the birthplace of Susan B. Anthony, one of the numerous spots of historic interest in the Berkshires' 32 communities.

NEW THEATER FESTIVAL

A new feature of the Berkshire summer this year will be the Berkshire Theatre Festival in Stockbridge. The festival will be located in what since 1928 has been the Berkshire Playhouse.

More than the name has been changed. With assistance and leadership from some of the theater's ranking professionals, the old Playhouse is being physically and culturally rearranged.

Leading the new venture in Stockbridge is William Gibson, author of "Two for the Seesaw," and "The Miracle Worker," and a year-round resident of Stockbridge.

FAMOUS ACTRESS

Other Stockbridge residents active in the Berkshire Theater Festival are Arthur Penn, who directed the opening performance of "The Skin of Our Teeth," and George Tabori and his wife, actress Viveca Lindfors, its artistic directors.

One of the productions this summer will be a "community gala" which will feature amateur actors and actresses from the Berkshires, supported in secondary parts by Broadway performers. The amateurs are being trained in a workshop program already under way.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its eight-week 1966 season at Tanglewood in Lenox on Saturday. This year marks the 30th anniversary of the BSO's participation in the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

In the Berkshires the dance capital is, of course, Ted Shawn's Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Becket. The Pillow's 34th season opened June 23 and will run for 10 weeks.

Two other regulars in the Berkshires' summer family also are looking forward to a banner season — The Williamstown Theatre in Williamstown and the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox.

The Hartford Times
Saturday, June 25, 1966
24

The Arts

Tanglewood Season Opens With Holiday Schedule

THREE concerts in the Tanglewood Music Shed at Lenox, Mass., over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under its music director, Erich Leinsdorf, will open the eight week Berkshire Festival, the 30th since the property was given to the orchestra. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because July 4 falls on Monday, the opening weekend concerts will be given on Saturday evening and Sunday and Monday afternoons. Thereafter, festival concerts will be given each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through Aug. 21.

* * *

Saturday's program at 8 p.m. will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra in Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser" and include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two Boston Symphony principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello July 3 at 2:30 p.m. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the 2:30 p.m. July 4 concert with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1. It will be followed by Roger Sessions' Psalm 140 with soprano Anne Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem "Till Eulenspiegel" and pianist Abbey Simon in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms will complete the program.

The first Saturday morning open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund will take place at 10:30 a.m. July 3. Ticket information on concerts and rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

Tomorrow at 3 p.m. the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer center for advanced study of music, will hold its traditional opening exercises in the Tanglewood Theater, open to the public.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766

JUN 28 1966

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

The big event of this week is the opening on Saturday night of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under Erich Leinsdorf will present three concerts at 8 p.m. Saturday; and Sunday and at 2:30 p.m. Monday. After this weekend Tanglewood concerts will be presented on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school which the Boston Symphony conducts annually on the Tanglewood grounds, opened Sunday afternoon for its season, which runs concurrently with that of the Tanglewood concert season.

* * *

For those persons who find it impossible to get over to Tanglewood for all of the concerts this season, WAMC (90.3mc), FM station of Albany Medical College, will broadcast them live. In addition to featured concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the WAMC Tanglewood broadcasts will include a four-concert festival of contemporary American music, a series of seven Tuesday night chamber concerts, and concerts by the outstanding young musicians who comprise the Berkshire Music Centers Orchestra.

* * *

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 146,293

JUN 30 1966

Josh White Concert At Castle Hill Postponed

By PEGGY BROWN
Society Editor

Fourth of July weekend is upon us, with its picnics and parties, beaching and boating.

And, of course, there are the summer theaters and music festivals to add glamour and culture to vacationers' social life.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gets into its opening week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox with Erich Leinsdorf conducting concerts Saturday evening and Sunday and Monday afternoons.

But folks who planned to picnic on the terrace of the Great House at Castle Hill and then hear Judy Collins and Josh White in the opening concert of the Castle Hill Festival this weekend will have to wait a week.

Since illness forced opera singer Rosalind Elias to cancel her concerts on July 8 and 9, the schedule of the Festival held in the Italian Garden of the former Crane estate in Ipswich, has been revised.

Socially Speaking

Instead of opening on the holiday weekend, folksingers Josh and Judy will give the first performance in the series on July 8 and 9.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

OBSERVER DISPATCH
Sunday, June 26, 1966

Showbeat: Star Whirl On Parade

By PETER CALISCH

BREAKING TRADITION: For the first time in 17 years, announcer Ralph Allinger and his red jacket will be missing from the Civic Band opener July 4 at the Parkway. Allinger family to vacation on Cape Cod. Fellow radioman Frank Davis to sub. . . SWITCH: Kathy Meyers, Civic Musical Society's girl Friday, has taken similar assignment with associate dean at Utica College, effective Tuesday.

STARTING TODAY: Berkshire Music Center begins 26th year; Boston Symphony opens 31st season at Tanglewood July 2. . . . FOR PIANISTS: Second Van Cliburn quadrennial competition to run Sept. 26 - Oct. 9 in Fort Worth, Tex., $10,000 to the winner.

Item (e)
WAKEFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 6,620

JUN 22 1966

The Item Hears

That three concerts given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, over the July 4 weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf, will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival. The concerts this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 18,000

JUNE 20 1966

Eight Week Festival to Open at Tanglewood Next Weekend; Boston Symphony Will Play

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass.—Three concerts given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's (July 2: 8:00 p. m.) program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to TANNHAUSER and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahm's Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p. m.). Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4; 2:30 p. m.) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autum of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

THE CATHOLIC NEWS
NEW YORK'S WEEKLY
CATHOLIC NEWSPAPER
W. 82,500

JUN 30 1966

Theater, Fishing, Daneing Headline Berkshire Summer

PITTSFIELD, Mass. — Tourist operators in Western Massachusetts' Berkshire Hills are prepared for a banner 1966 summer season.

As any native of these hills can tell you, the area known as Konkapot is a lovely trout stream in the southern reaches of Berkshire County, and Bed Bug Hollow is a section in the Northern Berkshire town of Adams.

The Konkapot has to share with the area's many other streams the reputation for a good producer of trout, but Adams is unique. Not only is Adams the only community here to have a Bed Bug Hollow, but it holds the state's highest mountain — Mount Greylock — and is the birthplace of Susan B. Anthony, one of the numerous spots of historic interest in the Berkshires' 32 communities.

NEW THEATER FESTIVAL

A new feature of the Berkshire summer this year will be the Berkshire Theatre Festival in Stockbridge. The festival will be located in what since 1928 has been the Berkshire Playhouse.

More than the name has been changed. With assistance and leadership from some of the theater's ranking professionals, the old Playhouse is being physically and culturally rearranged.

Leading the new venture in Stockbridge is William Gibson, author of "Two for the Seesaw," and "The Miracle Worker," and a year-round resident of Stockbridge.

FAMOUS ACTRESS

Other Stockbridge residents active in the Berkshire Theater Festival are Arthur Penn, who directed the opening performance of "The Skin of Our Teeth," and George Tabori and his wife, actress Viveca Lindfors, its artistic directors.

One of the productions this summer will be a "community gala" which will feature amateur actors and actresses from the Berkshires, supported in secondary parts by Broadway performers. The amateurs are being trained in a workshop program already under way.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its eight-week 1966 season at Tanglewood in Lenox on Saturday. This year marks the 30th anniversary of the BSO's participation in the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

In the Berkshires the dance capital is, of course, Ted Shawn's Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Becket. The Pillow's 34th season opened June 23 and will run for 10 weeks.

Two other regulars in the Berkshires' summer family also are looking forward to a banner season — The Williamstown Theatre in Williamstown and the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox.

The Hartford Times
Saturday, June 25, 1966
24

The Arts

Tanglewood Season Opens With Holiday Schedule

THREE concerts in the Tanglewood Music Shed at Lenox, Mass., over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under its music director, Erich Leinsdorf, will open the eight week Berkshire Festival, the 30th since the property was given to the orchestra. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because July 4 falls on Monday, the opening weekend concerts will be given on Saturday evening and Sunday and Monday afternoons. Thereafter, festival concerts will be given each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through Aug. 21.

* * *

Saturday's program at 8 p.m. will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra in Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser" and include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two Boston Symphony principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello July 3 at 2:30 p.m. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the 2:30 p.m. July 4 concert with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1. It will be followed by Roger Sessions' Psalm 140 with soprano Anne Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem "Till Eulenspiegel" and pianist Abbey Simon in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms will complete the program.

The first Saturday morning open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund will take place at 10:30 a.m. July 3. Ticket information on concerts and rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

Tomorrow at 3 p.m. the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer center for advanced study of music, will hold its traditional opening exercises in the Tanglewood Theater, open to the public.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766

JUN 28 1966

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

The big event of this week is the opening on Saturday night of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under Erich Leinsdorf will present three concerts at 8 p.m. Saturday; and Sunday and at 2:30 p.m. Monday. After this weekend Tanglewood concerts will be presented on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school which the Boston Symphony conducts annually on the Tanglewood grounds, opened Sunday afternoon for its season, which runs concurrently with that of the Tanglewood concert season.

* * *

For those persons who find it impossible to get over to Tanglewood for all of the concerts this season WAMC (90.3mc), FM station of Albany Medical College, will broadcast them live. In addition to featured concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the WAMC Tanglewood broadcasts will include a four-concert festival of contemporary American music, a series of seven Tuesday night chamber concerts, and concerts by the outstanding young musicians who comprise the Berkshire Music Centers Orchestra.

* * *

16

Buffalo Evening News
D. 279,780 SAT. 292,741
JUN 25 1966

Berkshire Programs Will Stress Art, Variety of Romantic Era

BOSTON Symphony Orchestra, conductor Erich Leinsdorf, will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival next week-end, with many noted soloists and a season-long program theme—the art and variety of the Romantic concerto. The opening programs:

July 2, 8 PM—Violinist Shmuel Ashkenasi in the Brahms Violin Concerto, the artist's Berkshire debut; Wagner "Tannhauser" Overture and Stravinsky "Petrouchka."

July 3, 2:30 PM—Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein and cellist Jules Eskin in the Brahms Double Concerto; Mahler Symphony No. 4 with soloist Anne Elgar.

July 4, 2:30 PM—Pianist Abbey Simon, Brahms Concerto No. 2; Psalm 140 of Roger Sessions, soloist Miss Elgar; Strauss "Till Eulenspiegel."

ERICH LEINSDORF
Boston Symphony Conductor

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Circ. 3,797
JUN 30 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Bi-Weekly Circ. 1,200
JUN 23 1966

Berkshire Festival To Open Eight Week Season on Saturday

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. — Three concerts given in the Music shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony orchestra under music director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, festival concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on Aug. 21.

Saturday's 8 p. m. program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser" and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday at 2:30 p. m. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday at 2:30 p. m. with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

Tanglewood

The eight week Berkshire Festival opens in Tanglewood, July 2 with three concerts given that weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf. The concerts will be Saturday evening and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 2, 3, 4).

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUN 26 1966

Tanglewood Opens Weekend of July 4

LENOX (UPI)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood with three concerts over the Fourth of July weekend.

The holiday weekend concerts begin the 27th year that the orchestra, now under conductor Erich Leinsdorf, has held the festival at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,179
JUN 25 1966

Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. —Three concerts given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival.

In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon thru the final program on August 21.

Saturday's (July 2; 8:00 p.m.) program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

GREENVILLE, N. Y.
LOCAL
W. 500
JUNE 29 1966

Tanglewood Opens This Week End

Three concerts given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p. m.) Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4; 2:30) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at Holmwood in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War 2.

The first Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held Saturday morning (July 3) at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season. Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachsetts 01240.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Free Press
BOSTON, Mass.
Monthly Circ. 3,800
JUN 1966

Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer season program

Several weeks ago the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf, indicated his musical plans for the 1966 Berkshire Festival at the Orchestra's summer home, Tanglewood (Lenox, Massachusetts), would include as a theme The Romantic Concerto, two weeks of chamber orchestra programs, a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," and for the Festival's closing concert, August 21, Beethoven's Symphony No. 9. Mr. Leinsdorf has announced the music to be performed at each of the seventeen concerts he will conduct and the seven to be directed by the summer's guest conductors: Sir Adrian Boult, Szymon Goldberg, Sixten Ehrling, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

The opening weekend of the Berkshire Festival, featuring three concerti by Brahms, will extend through the Fourth of July holiday with concerts on Saturday evening (July 2; 8:00 p.m.), Sunday and Monday afternoon (July 3 and 4; 2:30 p.m.). For the remaining seven weeks the Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be given on Fridays at 9:00, Saturdays at 8:00 and Sundays at 2:30. Preceding each of the Friday evening concerts, will be a Weekend Prelude at seven o'clock consisting of infrequently performed music by the weekend's principal composer.

Courier EXPRESS
BUFFALO
Western New York's Greatest Newspaper
D. 158,172 SUN. 299,377
JUN 19 1966

Tanglewood Season Opens Next Sunday

LENOX, Mass.—The Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will begin its 26th session here next Sunday with opening exercises at 3 in the theater. During the week some 250 musicians will register for the 8-week session here in conjunction with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival.

Two innovations at the Music Center this summer will bring the total enrollment to more than 400 as students affiliated with Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will take part in programs at Tanglewood. These include music courses for college credit at the Berkshire Music Center and a Boston University theater program carried on in association with the Berkshire Theater Festival.

Erich Leinsdorf will deliver the principal address at Sunday's exercises.

The program will include the traditional singing of Randall Thompson's Alleluia. This work, written especially for the opening of the Music Center in 1940 and subsequently sung each year, will be conducted by Paul Calloway, organist and choirmaster of the Washington Cathedral and a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty for the past two summers.

Also joining in the opening exercises will be Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager.

Faculty members Joseph Silverstein and Gunther Schuller will occupy new positions this summer. Silverstein is the new chairman of the faculty and Schuller is the head of contemporary music activities. Louis Speyer continues as assistant director of the Music Center with Victor Babin returning as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute.

100 Have Fellowships

Of the Music Center's total enrollment, 100 will be members of the Fellowship Program. Each of the participants in this program receive a fellowship stipend, and the program is designed to emphasize chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers, and composers. The Tanglewood Institute, consisting of seven seminars, provides a program for the musical laymen, teacher, student, and non-performing musician in an environment which may broaden his musical horizons.

Throughout the summer the participants in the Music Center will take part in more than 30 concerts and programs which are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
JUN 27 1966

Notes and Footnotes

ROLLING STONES: Such a coincidence! Just as the Berkshires' Tanglewood season is about to start, Levitt & Sons announce their newest community which likewise is called Tanglewood. It is on Long Island, but we cannot imagine it bears much resemblance to the Berkshires, though if it resembles most Levitt communities, it probably will be about as crowded as a festival weekend.

Buffalo Evening News
D. 279,780 SAT. 292,741
JUN 25 1966

Berkshire Programs Will Stress Art, Variety of Romantic Era

BOSTON Symphony Orchestra, under Erich Leinsdorf, will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival next week-end, with many noted soloists and a season-long program theme—the art and variety of the Romantic concerto. The opening programs:

July 2, 8 PM—Violinist Shmuel Ashkenasi in the Brahms Violin Concerto, the artist's Berkshire debut; Wagner "Tannhauser" Overture and Stravinsky "Petrouchka."

July 3, 2:30 PM—Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein and cellist Jules Eskin in the Brahms Double Concerto, Mahler Symphony No. 4 with soloist Anne Elgar.

July 4, 2:30 PM—Pianist Abbey Simon, Brahms Concerto No. 2; Psalm 140 of Roger Sessions, soloist Miss Elgar; Strauss "Till Eulenspiegel."

ERICH LEINSDORF
Boston Symphony Conductor

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Circ. 3,797
JUN 30 1966

Berkshire Festival To Open Eight Week Season on Saturday

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. — Three concerts given in the Music shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony orchestra under music director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, festival concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on Aug. 21.

Saturday's 8 p. m. program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser" and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday at 2:30 p. m. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday at 2:30 p. m. with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

GREENVILLE, N. Y.
LOCAL
W. 500
JUNE 29 1966

Tanglewood Opens This Week End

Three concerts given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p. m.) Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4; 2:30) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War 2.

The first Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held Saturday morning (July 3) at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season. Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachsetts 01240.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Bi-Weekly Circ. 1,200
JUN 23 1966

Tanglewood

The eight week Berkshire Festival opens in Tanglewood, July 2 with three concerts given that weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf. The concerts will be Saturday evening and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 2, 3, 4).

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUN 26 1966

Tanglewood Opens Weekend of July 4

LENOX (UPI)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood with three concerts over the Fourth of July weekend.

The holiday weekend concerts begin the 27th year that the orchestra, now under conductor Erich Leinsdorf, has held the festival at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,179
JUN 25 1966

Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. —Three concerts given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival.

In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon thru the final program on August 21.

Saturday's (July 2; 8:00 p.m.) program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Free Press
BOSTON, Mass.
Monthly Circ. 3,800
JUN 1966

Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer season program

Several weeks ago the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf, indicated his musical plans for the 1966 Berkshire Festival at the Orchestra's summer home, Tanglewood (Lenox, Massachusetts), would include as a theme The Romantic Concerto, two weeks of chamber orchestra programs, a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," and for the Festival's closing concert, August 21, Beethoven's Symphony No. 9. Mr. Leinsdorf has announced the music to be performed at each of the seventeen concerts he will conduct and the seven to be directed by the summer's guest conductors: Sir Adrian Boult, Szymon Goldberg, Sixten Ehrling, Seiji Ozawa, Thomas Schippers, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

The opening weekend of the Berkshire Festival, featuring three concerti by Brahms, will extend through the Fourth of July holiday with concerts on Saturday evening (July 2; 8:00 p.m.), Sunday and Monday afternoon (July 3 and 4; 2:30 p.m.). For the remaining seven weeks the Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be given on Fridays at 9:00, Saturdays at 8:00 and Sundays at 2:30. Preceding each of the Friday evening concerts, will be a Weekend Prelude at seven o'clock consisting of infrequently performed music by the weekend's principal composer.

Courier EXPRESS
BUFFALO
Western New York's Greatest Newspaper
D. 158,172 SUN. 299,377
JUN 19 1966

Tanglewood Season Opens Next Sunday

LENOX, Mass.—The Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will begin its 26th session here next Sunday with opening exercises at 3 in the theater. During the week some 250 musicians will register for the 8-week session held in conjunction with the Orchestra's Berkshire Festival.

Two innovations at the Music Center this summer will bring the total enrollment to more than 400 as students affiliated with Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will take part in programs at Tanglewood. These include music courses for college credit at the Berkshire Music Center and a Boston University theater program carried on in association with the Berkshire Theater Festival.

Erich Leinsdorf will deliver the principal address at Sunday's exercises.

The program will include the traditional singing of Randall Thompson's Alleluia. This work, written especially for the opening of the Music Center in 1940 and subsequently sung each year, will be conducted by Paul Calloway, organist and choirmaster of the Washington Cathedral and a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty for the past two summers.

Also joining in the opening exercises will be Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager.

Faculty members Joseph Silverstein and Gunther Schuller will occupy new positions this summer. Silverstein is the new chairman of the faculty and Schuller is the head of contemporary music activities. Louis Speyer continues as assistant director of the Music Center with Victor Babin returning as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute.

100 Have Fellowships

Of the Music Center's total enrollment, 100 will be members of the Fellowship Program. Each of the participants in this program receive a fellowship stipend, and the program is designed to emphasize chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers, and composers. The Tanglewood Institute, consisting of seven seminars, provides a program for the musical laymen, teacher, student, and non-performing musician in an environment which may broaden his musical horizons.

Throughout the summer the participants in the Music Center will take part in more than 30 concerts and programs which are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
JUN 27 1966

Notes and Footnotes

ROLLING STONES: Such a coincidence! Just as the Berkshires' Tanglewood season is about to start, Levitt & Sons announce their newest community which likewise is called Tanglewood. It is on Long Island, but we cannot imagine it bears much resemblance to the Berkshires, though if it resembles most Levitt communities, it probably will be about as crowded as a festival weekend.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUN 26 1966

Tanglewood Time

Before this week is gone the Berkshire Festival concerts will have begun again. Opening exercises at Tanglewood are to take place today. The Bach-Mozart programs usually presented during the first two weeks have been set back this year in favor of more diversified attractions over the holiday period, and other innovations will be interwoven with Tanglewood traditions during the next eight weeks.

Also for the first time each of the seven Friday-night concerts is to be preceded by a brief "prelude" of works by one or two of that weekend's composers, and open to that evening's ticketholders: Of this year's six guest conductors five — Sir Adrian Boult, Sixten Ehrling, Thomas Schippers, Szymon Goldberg and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski—are new to the Berkshire Festival, only Seiji Ozawa returning. There's no standing still at Tanglewood.

With the "romantic" concerto as this year's central theme, no less than 18 compositions in this form are to be heard, 11 for piano and orchestra, including one on each of the three all-Mozart programs. Guest pianists will be Jorge Bolet, Van Cliburn, Jeanne-Marie Darre, Malcolm Frager, Claude Frank, Grant Johannesen, Lilian Kallir and Abbey Simon. Four violin concertos, two for cello and the Brahms double concerto for both those instruments will provide variety.

Thirty years have passed since the Boston Symphony Orchestra made its first summer appearance in the Berkshires, though not at Tanglewood until the following season. Personnel has often changed, while new leadership, as Serge Koussevitzky was succeeded by Charles Munch and he by Erich Leinsdorf, has brought alterations in style and interpretation, but the Boston Symphony remains one of the world's best orchestras.

The Berkshire Music Center has grown increasingly instructional and educational in recent years. Thousands who attend the polished performances in the Music Shed probably have no contact with or conception of the aims and accomplishments of the new Fellowship Program for the encouragement and rendition of chamber music or the Tanglewood Institute with its seminars for the musical layman. Other advanced music courses for students are again available.

In 30 years many goals envisioned by maestro Koussevitsky have been achieved, and the less ambitious if not less lofty hopes of Col. Henry Lee Higginson, founder of the Boston Symphony 85 years ago, exceeded. Meanwhile new generations continue to delight in the music. "On a darkling plain swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight," music so abundantly supplied at Tanglewood, is a solace, a restorative and a saving grace.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 41,630
JUN 27 1966

'66 Season Prepared At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. — Three concerts to be given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdolf, will open at eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on Aug. 21.

Saturday's (July 2; 8 p.m.) program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut if Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert wil begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p.m.). Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4; 2:30) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark 30 years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

The first Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held on Saturday morning (July 3) at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season. Tickets information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,221
JUL 14 1966

Berkshire Music Festival with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists, through Aug. 22, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Newark Sunday News
NEWARK, N. J.
SUN. 427,240
JUL 3 1966

The Berkshire Music Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from the music center at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will be broadcast over Station WQXR Saturday from 7:07 to 9 p.m. starting this week. There will be 13 concerts in this broadcast series extending through Saturday, Oct. 1.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 13,202
JUN 24 1966

Tanglewood Will Open 26th Season On Sunday

LENOX — The Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will begin its 26th session at Tanglewood here Sunday with opening exercises at 3 p.m. in the theatre.

During the week some 250 musicians registered for the eight-week session in conjunction with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival.

Two innovations at the Music Center this summer will bring the total enrollment to more than 400 as students affiliated with Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will take part in summer programs at Tanglewood.

These include music courses for college credit at the Berkshire Music Center and a Boston University theatre program carried on in association with the Berkshire Theatre Festival.

Erich Leinsdorf will deliver the principal address at Sunday's exercises which include the traditional singing of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia". This work, written especially for the opening of the Music Center in 1940 and subsequently sung each year, will be conducted by Paul Calloway, organist and choirmaster of the Washington Cathedral and a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty for two summers. Also joining in the opening exercises will be Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager.

Long time faculty members Joseph Silverstein and Gunther Schuller will occupy new positions this summer. Silverstein is the new chairman of the faculty and Schuller is the head of contemporary music activities. Louis Speyer continues as assistant director of the music center with Victor Babin returning as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute.

Of the Music Center's total enrollment 100 will be members of the Fellowship Program. Each of the participants in this program receive a fellowship stipend, and the program is designed to emphasize chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers, and composers.

The Tanglewood Institute consisting of seven seminars, each with an informational focus for its members, provide a program for the musical laymen, teacher, student, and non-performing musician an environment which he may broaden his musical horizons.

Throughout the summer Music Center participants will take part in more than 30 concerts and programs open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the center activities.

Sunday's exercises are open to the public and tea will be served in the Tanglewood garden following the ceremonies.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUL 22 1966

Sept 3.

Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concerts each week-end July 2 thru Aug 21. Ticket office open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Sundays 1-5 p.m., phone 413-637-1600. Write Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240 for programs.

Performing Arts Center at Saratoga, N.Y., write for dates, reservations or phone 518-584-9330; New York City Ballet, 21 performances July 3-31; Philadelphia Orchestra 14 concerts Aug 4-24.

Norfolk Concert Series of Yale School of Music in Music Shed on Ellen Battell Stoeckel Estate, Norfolk, phone KI 2-5719, KI 2-5551 on concert nights, or New Haven 787-3131 ext 410; at junction Rte 44 & Conn 272.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186
JUN 27 1966

Tanglewood Opens Saturday, July 2

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, — Three concerts given in the music shed over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on Aug. 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abby Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

KINGSTON FREEMAN
Monday, June 20, 1966

Eight Week Festival to Open at Tanglewood Next Weekend; Boston Symphony Will Play

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass.—Three concerts given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's (July 2; 8:00 p. m.) program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to TANNHAUSER and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahm's Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p. m.). Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4; 2:30 p. m.) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autum of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266
JUL 23 1966

'Live' Berkshire

WFCR-FM (88.5 MC), Four-College Radio in Amherst, Mass., is broadcasting "live" every major concert to take place at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JUL 5 1966

The Boston Symphony is offering "bonus" concerts to its weekend subscribers in the form of an early concert at 7 p.m. each Friday in addition to the regular concert at 9 p.m., Friday nights only. The later hour of 9 p.m. is thought to give commuting weekenders a bit of extra time to get from urban centers to the Tanglewood grounds. In addition the early concert is holding an extra incentive to those near enough to get there at that hour. The first of these preludes will be held this Friday and this arrangement will continue throughout this season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 6,975
JUL 21 1966

Tanglewood Weekend

Did you know that weekends at Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.) begin with an innovation new this year to the music festival? Prior to the regularly scheduled concerts at 9 p.m. Friday nights, a Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. is presented at no extra cost for those holding tickets to the Friday Boston Symphony Orchestra concert. It's a good idea to come early and have a bought or brought box dinner out on the grass. Dinner may be purchased right on the grounds.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 7,626
JUN 18 1966

Tanglewood Opens Saturday, July 2

Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open Saturday, July 2, at 8 p.m. with a concert which will include: Wagner's Overture of Tannhauser, Stravinsky's Suite from Petrouchka, and Brahms' Violin Concerto.

A number of Troy Area residents go at least once each summer to hear a rehearsal of the orchestra. They are held each Saturday at 10:30 a.m. The small admission goes to the orchestra's pension fund.

(Additional programs will be announced later.)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUN 26 1966

Tanglewood Time

Before this week is gone the Berkshire Festival concerts will have begun again. Opening exercises at Tanglewood are to take place today. The Bach-Mozart programs usually presented during the first two weeks have been set back this year in favor of more diversified attractions over the holiday period, and other innovations will be interwoven with Tanglewood traditions during the next eight weeks.

Also for the first time each of the seven Friday-night concerts is to be preceded by a brief "prelude" of works by one or two of that weekend's composers, and open to that evening's ticketholders: Of this year's six guest conductors five — Sir Adrian Boult, Sixten Ehrling, Thomas Schippers, Szymon Goldberg and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski—are new to the Berkshire Festival, only Seiji Ozawa returning. There's no standing still at Tanglewood.

With the "romantic" concerto as this year's central theme, no less than 18 compositions in this form are to be heard, 11 for piano and orchestra, including one on each of the three all-Mozart programs. Guest pianists will be Jorge Bolet, Van Cliburn, Jeanne-Marie Darre, Malcolm Frager, Claude Frank, Grant Johannesen, Lilian Kallir and Abbey Simon. Four violin concertos, two for cello and the Brahms double concerto for both those instruments will provide variety.

Thirty years have passed since the Boston Symphony Orchestra made its first summer appearance in the Berkshires, though not at Tanglewood until the following season. Personnel has often changed, while new leadership, as Serge Koussevitzky was succeeded by Charles Munch and he by Erich Leinsdorf, has brought alterations in style and interpretation, but the Boston Symphony remains one of the world's best orchestras.

The Berkshire Music Center has grown increasingly instructional and educational in recent years. Thousands who attend the polished performances in the Music Shed probably have no contact with or conception of the aims and accomplishments of the new Fellowship Program for the encouragement and rendition of chamber music or the Tanglewood Institute with its seminars for the musical layman. Other advanced music courses for students are again available.

In 30 years many goals envisioned by maestro Koussevitsky have been achieved, and the less ambitious if not less lofty hopes of Col. Henry Lee Higginson, founder of the Boston Symphony 85 years ago, exceeded. Meanwhile new generations continue to delight in the music. "On a darkling plain swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight," music, so abundantly supplied at Tanglewood, is a solace, a restorative and a saving grace.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266
JUL 23 1966

'Live' Berkshire

WFCR-FM (88.5 MC), Four-College Radio in Amherst, Mass., is broadcasting "live" every major concert to take place at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 41,630
JUN 27 1966

'66 Season Prepared At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. — Three concerts to be given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdolf, will open at eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on Aug. 21.

Saturday's (July 2; 8 p.m.) program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut if Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert wil' begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p.m.). Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4; 2:30) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark 30 years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

The first Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held on Saturday morning (July 3) at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season. Tickets information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,221
JUL 14 1966

Berkshire Music Festival with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists, through Aug. 22, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Newark Sunday News
NEWARK, N. J.
SUN. 427,240
JUL 3 1966

The Berkshire Music Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from the music center at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will be broadcast over Station WQXR Saturday from 7:07 to 9 p.m. starting this week. There will be 13 concerts in this broadcast series extending through Saturday, Oct. 1.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 13,202
JUN 24 1966

Tanglewood Will Open 26th Season On Sunday

LENOX — The Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will begin its 26th session at Tanglewood here Sunday with opening exercises at 3 p.m. in the theatre.

During the week some 250 musicians registered for the eight-week session in conjunction with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival.

Two innovations at the Music Center this summer will bring the total enrollment to more than 400 as students affiliated with Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will take part in summer programs at Tanglewood.

These include music courses for college credit at the Berkshire Music Center and a Boston University theatre program carried on in association with the Berkshire Theatre Festival.

Erich Leinsdorf will deliver the principal address at Sunday's exercises which include the traditional singing of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia". This work, written especially for the opening of the Music Center in 1940 and subsequently sung each year, will be conducted by Paul Calloway, organist and choirmaster of the Washington Cathedral and a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty for two summers. Also joining in the opening exercises will be Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager.

Long time faculty members Joseph Silverstein and Gunther Schuller will occupy new positions this summer. Silverstein is the new chairman of the faculty and Schuller is the head of contemporary music activities. Louis Speyer continues as assistant director of the music center with Victor Babin, returning as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute.

Of the Music Center's total enrollment 100 will be members of the Fellowship Program. Each of the participants in this program receive a fellowship stipend, and the program is designed to emphasize chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers, and composers.

The Tanglewood Institute consisting of seven seminars, each with an informational focus for its members, provide a program for the musical laymen, teacher, student, and non-performing musician an environment which he may broaden his musical horizons.

Throughout the summer Music Center participants will take part in more than 30 concerts and programs open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the center activities.

Sunday's exercises are open to the public and tea will be served in the Tanglewood garden following the ceremonies.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUL 22 1966

Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concerts each week-end July 2 thru Aug 21. Ticket office open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Sundays 1-5 p.m., phone 413-637-1600. Write Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240 for programs.

Performing Arts Center at Saratoga, N.Y., write for dates, reservations or phone 518-584-9330, New York City Ballet, 21 performances July 3-31; Philadelphia Orchestra 14 concerts Aug 4-24.

Norfolk Concert Series of Yale School of Music in Music Shed on Ellen Battell Stoeckel Estate, Norfolk, phone KI 2-5719, KI 2-5551 on concert nights, or New Haven 787-3131 ext 410; at junction Rte 44 & Conn 272.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186
JUN 27 1966

Tanglewood Opens Saturday, July 2

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, — Three concerts given in the music shed over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on Aug. 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abby Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

KINGSTON FREEMAN
Monday, June 20, 1966

Eight Week Festival to Open at Tanglewood Next Weekend; Boston Symphony Will Play

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass.—Three concerts given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's (July 2: 8:00 p. m.) program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to TANNHAUSER and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahm's Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p. m.). Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4; 2:30 p. m.) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autum of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JUL 5 1966

The Boston Symphony is offering "bonus" concerts to its weekend subscribers in the form of an early concert at 7 p.m. each Friday in addition to the regular concert at 9 p.m., Friday nights only. The later hour of 9 p.m. is thought to give commuting weekenders a bit of extra time to get from urban centers to the Tanglewood grounds. In addition the early concert is offering an extra incentive to those near enough to get there at that hour. The first of these preludes will be held this Friday and this arrangement will continue throughout this season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 6,975
JUL 21 1966

Tanglewood Weekend

Did you know that weekends at Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.) begin with an innovation new this year to the music festival? Prior to the regularly scheduled concerts at 9 p.m. Friday nights, a Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. is presented at no extra cost for those holding tickets to the Friday Boston Symphony Orchestra concert. It's a good idea to come early and have a bought or brought box dinner out on the grass. Dinner may be purchased right on the grounds.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
JUN 18 1966

Tanglewood Opens Saturday, July 2

Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open Saturday, July 2, at 8 p.m. with a concert which will include: Wagner's Overture of Tannhauser, Stravinsky's Suite from Petrouchka, and Brahms' Violin Concerto.

A number of Troy Area residents go at least once each summer to hear a rehearsal of the orchestra. They are held each Saturday at 10:30 a.m. The small admission goes to the orchestra's pension fund.

(Additional programs will be announced later.)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Reporter
SPRINGFIELD, Vt.
Circ. 16,100
JUL 2 1966

ERICH LEINSDORF, DIRECTOR

Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. -- Thirty years ago this summer the Boston Symphony Orchestra made its first appearance in the Berkshires giving three concerts under the auspices of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival at the former Vanderbilt estate, "Holmwood." With the exception of a period during World War II the Orchestra has given concerts each summer in the Berkshires which has been its permanent summer home since the gift of Tanglewood in the autumn of 1936.

Now in its Eighty-fifth season the Boston Symphony Orchestra has provided for a number of years year-round concerts for the public. The winter and spring seasons in Symphony Hall include the period from late September through June with the last two months devoted to the concerts by the Boston Pops Orchestra. The summer season includes two weeks of free open air concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston in addition to the eight-week Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

For his fourth summer at Tanglewood Music Director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the Romantic Concerto as a theme. Two weekends will be devoted to the music of Bach and Mozart, performed by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players, with one or two romantic composers being featured on each of the remaining five on each of the remaining five weekends. Mrs. Leinsdorf has invited many eminent soloists and guest conductors to appear with the Orchestra at this summer's Festival. The prize winners of the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to appear during the Festival's Seventh Week. A concert version of Mozart's "Magic Flute" will be given on August 6 and the 1966 Berkshire Festival will close on Sunday afternoon, August 21 with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Preceding each of the nine o'clock Friday evening Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be a Weekend Prelude consisting of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. The weekend soloists and members of the Orchestra in small ensembles will perform on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the nine o'clock concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUN 24 1966

Berkshire County, Southern Vt. Boast Many Cultural Events

By ROBERT GILLMORE

THE BERKSHIRE HILLS combine with southern Vermont to provide a wealth of summer cultural attractions that include at least four music centers, four theaters, eight art galleries and one well-known dance festival.

Tanglewood, Summer home of The Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens next Saturday for an eight-week season ending Aug. 21. Its highlight will be a July 23 appearance of Van Cliburn who will play Rachmanioffs' Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor in a program that will also include excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger von Nurmburg (Act III.) and Schumann's Symphony No. 2.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Erich Leinsdorf throughout most of the season.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JUL 5 1966

The Tuesday Evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs opens at 8 tonight in the Tanglewood Theater at Lenox, Mass. The program will be presented by the Chamber Players, formed from the principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 19644, with Claude Franke as pianist. It will consist of Mozart's "Piano Quarter, K. 478"; Poulenc's "Trio for Oboe, Bassoon and Piano (1926)"; the "Duo for Flute and Bassoon" by Villa Lobos, and Schubert's "Trio number 1 for violin, 'cello and piano, opus 99."

Newsday
GARDEN CITY, N. Y.
D. 4[illegible]
JUL 5 1966

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099
JUN 26 1966

Music Too, Takes to Country

PAGE ONE!

By McLAREN HARRIS

Can it be, one may wonder while wandering through the woods this summer, that the nightingales have really learned to sing "William Tell"? Or that birds and chipmunks have finally mastered the "Kreutzer" sonata? Or that cows can turn out a pretty fair "Shepherd on the Rock?"

Not very likely. It just may appear that way because a goodly number of the nation's musicians are departing the cities and will be waiting among the trees when the rest of us get around to escaping our urban confinement.

Not every summer music festival forsakes the metropolis, of course, but whatever the locality the pilgrimage is definitely to the out-of-doors. Saturday night the Boston Symphony opens the Berkshire Festival, an eight-week series of concerts at its 30-year home, Tanglewood, in Lenox; the schedule brings a train of conductors and soloists in orchestral, chamber, choral and concert-opera programs, plus the annual Contemporary Music Festival-within-a-festival.

CAIRO HERALD,
Thursday, June 30, 1966

Tanglewood Opens This Week End

Three concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. Overture to Tannhauser and also include Strawinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petroushka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p. m.) Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4; 2:30) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War 2.

The first Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held Saturday morning (July 3) at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season. Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachsetts 01240.

Special Touch Added By a Couple of Smiths

Howard K. Smith interviews Jack Smith on the front in Vietnam for ABC Scope Saturday night. Jack Smith, a GI, was seriously wounded in a recent battle, of which he says: "It's still a nightmare and always will be. It's the most horrible thing I think a human being can go through."

Jack Smith is Howard K. Smith's son.

The program, "A Father, a Son and War" is scheduled for 7 PM on Ch. 7 and 12:30 PM Sunday on Ch. 8.

* * *

ABC has another prize sports package on Saturday and Sunday, July 23 and 24. The U.S.-Russian Track meet will be televised live both days from the Los Angeles Coliseum, preceded by the Professional Golfers Association final rounds. ABC covered the U.S.-Russian meet last year live from Kiev, the only event ever to be televised live from the USSR to the U.S.

* * *

Air Lines. The Berkshire Music Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony from Tanglewood will be broadcast by WQXR on 13 consecutive Saturdays from 7:07 to 9 PM beginning July 9 . . . The Emile Griffith-Joey Archer fight is on Chs. 9 and 3, July 14 . . . Agnes Moorehead is replacing Bette Davis in the upcoming NBC "Alice Through the Looking Glass," Nov. 6. Miss Davis, after a week of rehearsals, was ordered to rest by her doctor, according to the network.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Circ. 77,285
JUL 3 1966

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.—Opening the eight-week Berkshire Festival today at 2:30 p.m. in the Music Shed will be Erich Leinsdorf conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a Brahms concerto; Tomorrow's concert opens at 2:30 p.m. with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1; Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony next weekend, Friday at 9 p.m., Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2:30 p.m.; The first of a new series of musical offerings, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Friday evening concert. Each of these preludes, to be presented each Friday for the remainder of the season, will begin at 7 p.m. and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer; The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will open the Tuesday evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Tanglewood Theater; Two concerts this week will be given by Friends of the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 10 a.m. both in the Tanglewood Theater; the open rehearsals, for the benefit of the Boston Symphony pension fund, will take place each Saturday throughout the season. Information may be obtained by writing the ticket office.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUL 8 1966

Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concerts each week-end July 2 thru Aug 21. Ticket office open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Sundays 1-5 p.m., phone 413-637-1600. Write Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240 for programs.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUL 15 1966

thru Sept 4.

Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concerts each week-end July 2 thru Aug 21. Ticket office open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Sundays 1-5 p.m., phone 413-637-1600. Write Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240 for programs.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Reporter
SPRINGFIELD, Vt.
Circ. 16,100
JUL 2 1966

ERICH LEINSDORF, DIRECTOR

Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. -- Thirty years ago this summer the Boston Symphony Orchestra made its first appearance in the Berkshires giving three concerts under the auspices of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival at the former Vanderbilt estate, "Holmwood." With the exception of a period during World War II the Orchestra has given concerts each summer in the Berkshires which has been its permanent summer home since the gift of Tanglewood in the autumn of 1936.

Now in its Eighty-fifth season, the Boston Symphony Orchestra has provided for a number of years year-round concerts for the public. The winter and spring seasons in Symphony Hall include the period from late September through June with the last two months devoted to the concerts by the Boston Pops Orchestra. The summer season includes two weeks of free open air concerts on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston in addition to the eight-week Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

For his fourth summer at Tanglewood Music Director Erich Leinsdorf has chosen the Romantic Concerto as a theme. Two weekends will be devoted to the music of Bach and Mozart, performed by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players, with one or two romantic composers being featured on each of the remaining five on each of the remaining five weekends. Mrs. Leinsdorf has invited many eminent soloists and guest conductors to appear with the Orchestra at this summer's Festival. The prize winners of the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions have been invited to appear during the Festival's Seventh Week. A concert version of Mozart's "Magic Flute" will be given on August 6 and the 1966 Berkshire Festival will close on Sunday afternoon, August 21, with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Preceding each of the nine o'clock Friday evening Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will be a Weekend Prelude consisting of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. The weekend soloists and members of the Orchestra in small ensembles will perform on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the nine o'clock concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUN 24 1966

Berkshire County, Southern Vt. Boast Many Cultural Events

By ROBERT GILLMORE

THE BERKSHIRE HILLS combine with southern Vermont to provide a wealth of summer cultural attractions that include at least four music centers, four theaters, eight art galleries and one well-known dance festival.

Tanglewood, Summer home of The Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens next Saturday for an eight-week season ending Aug. 21. Its highlight will be a July 23 appearance of Van Cliburn who will play Rachmanioffs' Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor in a program that will also include excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger von Nurmburg (Act III.) and Schumann's Symphony No. 2.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Erich Leinsdorf throughout most of the season.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JUL 5 1966

The Tuesday Evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs opens at 8 tonight in the Tanglewood Theater at Lenox, Mass. The program will be presented by the Chamber Players, formed from the principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 19644, with Claude Franke as pianist. It will consist of Mozart's "Piano Quarter, K. 478"; Poulenc's "Trio for Oboe, Bassoon and Piano (1926)"; the "Duo for Flute and Bassoon" by Villa Lobos, and Schubert's "Trio number 1 for violin, 'cello and piano, opus 99."

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099
JUN 26 1966

Music Too, Takes to Country

PAGE ONE

By McLAREN HARRIS

Can it be, one may wonder while wandering through the woods this summer, that the nightingales have really learned to sing "William Tell"? Or that birds and chipmunks have finally mastered the "Kreutzer" sonata? Or that cows can turn out a pretty fair "Shepherd on the Rock?"

Not very likely. It just may appear that way because a goodly number of the nation's musicians are departing the cities and will be waiting among the trees when the rest of us get around to escaping our urban confinement.

Not every summer music festival forsakes the metropolis, of course, but whatever the locality the pilgrimage is definitely to the out-of-doors. Saturday night the Boston Symphony opens the Berkshire Festival, an eight-week series of concerts at its 30-year home, Tanglewood, in Lenox; the schedule brings a train of conductors and soloists in orchestral, chamber, choral and concert-opera programs, plus the annual Contemporary Music Festival-within-a-festival.

CAIRO HERALD,
Thursday, June 30, 1966

Tanglewood Opens This Week End

Three concerts will be in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p. m.) Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4; 2:30) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War 2.

The first Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held Saturday morning (July 3) at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season. Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachsetts 01240.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Circ. 77,285
JUL 3 1966

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.—Opening the eight-week Berkshire Festival today at 2:30 p.m. in the Music Shed will be Erich Leinsdorf conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a Brahms concerto; Tomorrow's concert opens at 2:30 p.m. with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1; Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony next weekend, Friday at 9 p.m., Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2:30 p.m.; The first of a new series of musical offerings, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Friday evening concert. Each of these preludes, to be presented each Friday for the remainder of the season, will begin at 7 p.m. and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer; The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will open the Tuesday evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Tanglewood Theater; Two concerts this week will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 10 a.m. both in the Tanglewood Theater; the open rehearsals, for the benefit of the Boston Symphony pension fund, will take place each Saturday throughout the season. Information may be obtained by writing the ticket office.

Special Touch Added By a Couple of Smiths

Howard K. Smith interviews Jack Smith on the front in Vietnam for ABC Scope Saturday night. Jack Smith, a GI, was seriously wounded in a recent battle, of which he says: "It's still a nightmare and always will be. It's the most horrible thing I think a human being can go through."

Jack Smith is Howard K. Smith's son.

The program, "A Father, a Son and War" is scheduled for 7 PM on Ch. 7 and 12:30 PM Sunday on Ch. 8.

* * *

ABC has another prize sports package on Saturday and Sunday, July 23 and 24. The U.S.-Russian Track meet will be televised live both days from the Los Angeles Coliseum, preceded by the Professional Golfers Association final rounds. ABC covered the U.S.-Russian meet last year live from Kiev, the only event ever to be televised live from the USSR to the U.S.

* * *

Air Lines. The Berkshire Music Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony from Tanglewood will be broadcast by WQXR on 13 consecutive Saturdays from 7:07 to 9 PM beginning July 9 . . . The Emile Griffith-Joey Archer fight is on Chs. 9 and 3, July 14 . . . Agnes Moorehead is replacing Bette Davis in the upcoming NBC "Alice Through the Looking Glass," Nov. 6. Miss Davis, after a week of rehearsals, was ordered to rest by her doctor, according to the network.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUL 8 1966

Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concerts each week-end July 2 thru Aug 21. Ticket office open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Sundays 1-5 p.m., phone 413-637-1600. Write Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240 for programs.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUL 15 1966

thru Sept 4

Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concerts each week-end July 2 thru Aug 21. Ticket office open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Sundays 1-5 p.m., phone 413-637-1600. Write Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240 for programs.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Circ. 44,619
JUL 2 1966

Music

Symphony Opens Its Berkshire Festival

By Alfred Burke

LOWELL—The Boston Symphony orchestra's 1966 Berkshire festival at its summer home in Tanglewood will open this evening with a concert by the full orchestra under the direction of Music Director Erich Leinsdorf. As it has for the past several years, the festival will span eight weeks, July 2 to Aug. 23, and also included will be 24 concerts by the orchestra in the music shed.

Plans for this season call for a musical theme as represented by the Romantic Concerto, this to be observed on each of the weekends, and featuring pieces by one or two composers. Dr. Leinsdorf in formulating such an idea has always felt that a summer festival lends itself well to certain musical ideas not practical in a more frigid winter schedule. With this in mind, the Orchestra's musical director has arranged for seven Week-end Preludes before each of the Berkshire Festival Friday evenings.

Van Cliburn

To enable patrons traveling the distance between the metropolitan areas and Tanglewood in more comfortable time, the Festival will experiment this summer with a starting time of 9 p. m., for the seven Friday evenings. Carrying this experiment to the musical side of the Festival, a dividend in the form of Week-end Preludes will be provided at no additional cost prior to each Friday concert.

An excellent guest artist list of instrumentalists and singers has been announced by the music director, and a seasonal highlight is expected during the program of Saturday evening, July 23, when pianist Van Cliburn, will perform Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

During the seventh week of the Berkshire Festival, on Saturday, Aug. 13, the Boston Symphony will pass a significant milestone. On that day in 1936 the Orchestra under its then music director, Serge Koussevitsky, gave its first summer concert in the Berkshires at the former Vanderbilt estate, "Holmwood" (presently Foxhollow School). With the exception of an interruption during World War II, the Boston Symphony orchestra has appeared in the area where it has since established its summer home.

ON AUG. 13 AND 14 the winners of the Moscow Tchaikovsky competitions will be featured soloists. The prize recipients in violin, cello, voice and piano will appear in their first American concerts following the competitions at the two Boston Symphony orchestra concerts conducted by Erich Leinsdorf. The orchestra's invitation for the appearance of the winners at Tanglewood has been accepted by the competition's officials.

A concert version of Mozart's "Magic Flute" will be given on Saturday, Aug. 6. Dr. Leinsdorf will conduct and included in the cast will be such gifted artists as Ara Berberian, Montserrat Caballe, Nico Castel, Anne Elgar, Ezio Flagello, Batyah Godfrey, Jane Marsh, John Reardon, George Shirley and Beverly Sills.

Five of this summer's six guest conductors will be making their first Berkshire Festival appearances and three, Sixten Erhling, Szymon Goldberg, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, will be appearing for the first time with the BSO. Sir Adrian Boult, in his initial performance, will conduct the Mozart program of Sunday, July 10. Thomas Schippers and Seija Ozawa, alumni of the Music Center, are scheduled for the concerts of July 31 and July 22, respectively. Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at the Tanglewood Pension fund concert on Wednesday, Aug. 3.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (e)
MANCHESTER, Conn.
Circ. 13,681
JUL 1 1966

Tanglewood Time

Before this week is gone the Berkshire Festival concerts will have begun again. Opening exercises at Tanglewood are to take place today. The Bach-Mozart programs usually presented during the first two weeks have been set back this year in favor of more diversified attractions over the holiday period, and other innovations will be interwoven with Tanglewood traditions during the next eight weeks.

Also for the first time each of the seven Friday-night concerts is to be preceded by a brief "prelude" of works by one of two of that weekend's composers, and open to that evening's ticketholders. Of this year's six guest conductors five—Sir Adrian Boult, Sixten Ehrling, Thomas Schippers, Szymon Goldberg and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski—are new to the Berkshire Festival, only Seiji Ozawa returning. There's no standing still at Tanglewood.

With the "romantic" concerto as this year's central theme, no less than 18 compositions in this form are to be heard, 11 for piano and orchestra, including one on each of the three all-Mozart programs. Guest pianists will be Jorge Bolet, Van Cliburn, Jeanne-Marie Darre, Malcolm Frager, Claude Frank, Grant Johannesen, Lilian Kallir and Abbey Simon. Four violin concertos, two for cello and the Brahms double concerto for both those instruments will provide variety.

Thirty years have passed since the Boston Symphony Orchestra made its first summer appearance in the Berkshires, though not at Tanglewood until the following season. Personnel has often changed, while new leadership, as Serge Koussevitzky was succeeded by Charles Munch and he by Erich Leinsdorf, has brought alterations in style and interpretation, but the Boston Symphony remains one of the world's best orchestras.

The Berkshire Music Center has grown increasingly instructional and educational in recent years. Thousands who attend the polished performances in the Music Shed probably have no contact with or conception of the aims and accomplishments of the new Fellowship Program for the encouragement and rendition of chamber music or the Tanglewood Institute with its seminars for the musical layman. Other advanced music courses for students are again available.

In 30 years many goals envisioned by maestro Koussevitzky have been achieved, and the less ambitious if not less lofty hopes of Col. Henry Lee Higginson, founder of the Boston Symphony 35 years ago, exceeded. Meanwhile new generations continue to delight in the music. "On a darkling plain swept with confused alarms of struggle and light," music, so abundantly supplied at Tanglewood, is a solace, a restorative and a saving grace. —SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266
JUL 2 1966

Extra Friday Concerts To Start at Tanglewood

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at next weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts.

British conductor Sir Adrian Boult will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the Orchestra July 10 at 2:30. Malcolm Frager will be piano soloist for that concert as with music director Erich Leinsdorf July 8 at 9 p.m. As piano soloist for Saturday at 8 p.m. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place at 7 p.m. in advance of each Friday concert. The Preludes will consist of infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform. The programs will be provided at no extra cost to those holding Friday evening concert tickets.

Friday's 9 p.m. all - Mozart program will inlude March No. 3, in C, K. 408; Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris;" the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, with Malcolm Frager and the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The Prelude program will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir directed by Alfred Nash Patterson, and Mozart's sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir. Saturday at 8 p.m. Frank will be soloist in Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201 and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend Sunday at 2:30 with Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

The regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will take place at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the Music Shed.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will open the Tuesday evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs in the Tanglewood Theater with Mozart's Piano Quartet, K. 478, with Frank as soloist; Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon, and Piano (1926); the Duo for Flute and Bassoon by Villa Lobos; and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin, Cello and Piano, Op. 99.

Erich Leinsdorf tomorrow at 2:30 will conduct Brahms' Double Concerto with Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin as soloists and Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soprano soloist. The Fourth of July 2:30 program will include Prokofiev's Classical Symphony, Roger Sessions' Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist, Richard Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel and Abbey Simon performing Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 56,740
JUN 26 1966

Boston Symphony Due At Tanglewood July 4

LENOX (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood with three concerts over the July 4 weekend.

The holiday weekend concerts begin the 27th year that the orchestra, now under conductor Erich Leinsdorf, has held the festival at Tanglewood.

220

PRE-SEASON - B.M.C.

JUNIOR KEYNOTES
WORCESTER, MASS.
5 TI. A YR. - CIRC. N. AVAIL.

JAN 1966

THE ROVIN' REPORTER REMINISCES

by Ada Holding Miller

Another Star in The Crown of The Junior Division!!

Those of you who read the little article in the last Junior Keynotes know that this story was but one of many which could be told of the very great love Dr. Serge Koussevitsky had for young people.

You know too that this year is the Silver Anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center and Festivals. You will think of the little Red House at Tanglewood used for teaching studios, of the famous concerts of the Boston Symphony and the Student Orchestra, of the great joy the students experience in playing together, and of our scholarships given to gifted students (and let me tell you right here, that almost all of the scholarships given through the National Federation of Music Clubs have gone West of the Mississippi River).

You may already know of the composers' studios to be built on the beautiful grounds of the Koussevitsky estate called Seranak. The purpose of these studios will be to commission struggling composers who have had one work published but not performed. The candidates will come from all parts of the world and will not be limited to Americans only. The composers whose works are accepted will be assured of a premiere by the Boston Symphony!

Our national organization has agreed to help raise the needed sum of $10,000 toward the whole cost of $25,000. You will hear all about this plan from Mrs. Ronald Dougan who is Chairman of "Who's Who in the N.F.M.C." This brings us to the crux of the whole plan and here again you will receive all details from your National, State and Club Counselors.

Thinking back over the years we recall the wonderful work of the Juniors in establishing and maintaining MacDowell's gravesite. This was done through the collection of pennies only! What a bright and shining star this has proven to be in the crown of the whole Junior Dept.! We want you to follow that star to Tanglewood where we hope to realize another dream for the Junior Dept. We want each and every Junior to give the little sum of twenty-five cents only, one penny for each of the 25 years! You will be informed of the details of this plan by your National Junior Counselor Mrs. Walter T. Swink. In our dream we see a beautiful plaque over the door of a studio which will read something like this: "This studio given by the Junior Division of the National Federation of Music Clubs in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitsky." How proud we shall be on that day of dedication! Will you help by adding one more jewel to the Junior Crown of Achievement?

THE WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
D. 212,455 SUN. 167,952

FEB 28 1966

To Tanglewood

Paul Callaway, Washington Cathedral's organist and choirmaster, will be a member of the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Music Center faculty at Tanglewood for the second consecutive summer. He will head the seminar in choral conducting at repertoire.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 55,163

FEB 22 1966

Berkshire Music Center Plans New Summer Program

The Berkshire Music Center and the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood will begin their second quarter century with opening exercises on June 26, a day earlier than last year.

For the first time this year the Berkshire Music Center will be joined by the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory with both offering college-level work.

Erich Leinsdorf, in his fourth year as director of the Center, has announced that the two major divisions—Fellowship Program and the Tanglewood Institute, formed last summer—again will be the principal program in this summer's session.

ERICH LEINSDORF

Fellowship Program emphasizes chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers, composers and conductors while the Tanglewood Institute comprises a number of seminars for the musical layman, teachers, students and non-performing musicians.

Joseph Silverstein is chairman of the faculty at the center and Gunther Schuller, head of the contemporary music activities, each succeeding Aaron Copland who retired last year but continues as emeritus chairman of the faculty.

Composers in residence will include Roger Sessions and George Rochberg.

Fellowships will be offered to 65 instrumentalists, 8 composers, 6 keyboard players, and 24 singers. The basic stipend for the program is $450 with supplemental allowances for dependents and travel.

Further information on the Fellowship Program or the Tanglewood Institute is available by writing Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass., 02115.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 18,000

FEB 22 1966

PRE-SEASON - B.M.C.

JUNIOR KEYNOTES
WORCESTER, MASS.
5 TI. A YR. - CIRC. N. AVAIL.

JAN 1966

THE ROVIN' REPORTER REMINISCES

by Ada Holding Miller

Another Star in The Crown of The Junior Division!!

Those of you who read the little article in the last Junior Keynotes know that this story was but one of many which could be told of the very great love Dr. Serge Koussevitsky had for young people.

You know too that this year is the Silver Anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center and Festivals. You will think of the little Red House at Tanglewood used for teaching studios, of the famous concerts of the Boston Symphony and the Student Orchestra, of the great joy the students experience in playing together, and of our scholarships given to gifted students (and let me tell you right here, that almost all of the scholarships given through the National Federation of Music Clubs have gone West of the Mississippi River).

You may already know of the composers' studios to be built on the beautiful grounds of the Koussevitsky estate called Seranak. The purpose of these studios will be to commission struggling composers who have had one work published but not performed. The candidates will come from all parts of the world and will not be limited to Americans only. The composers whose works are accepted will be assured of a premiere by the Boston Symphony!

Our national organization has agreed to help raise the needed sum of $10,000 toward the whole cost of $25,000. You will hear all about this plan from Mrs. Ronald Dougan who is Chairman of "Who's Who in the N.F.M.C." This brings us to the crux of the whole plan and here again you will receive all details from your National, State and Club Counselors.

Thinking back over the years we recall the wonderful work of the Juniors in establishing and maintaining MacDowell's gravesite. This was done through the collection of pennies only! What a bright and shining star this has proven to be in the crown of the whole Junior Dept.! We want you to follow that star to Tanglewood where we hope to realize another dream for the Junior Dept. We want each and every Junior to give the little sum of twenty-five cents only, one penny for each of the 25 years! You will be informed of the details of this plan by your National Junior Counselor Mrs. Walter T. Swink. In our dream we see a beautiful plaque over the door of a studio which will read something like this: "This studio given by the Junior Division of the National Federation of Music Clubs in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitsky." How proud we shall be on that day of dedication! Will you help by adding one more jewel to the Junior Crown of Achievement?

THE WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS
WASHINGTON, D. C.
D. 212,455 SUN. 167,952

FEB 28 1966

To Tanglewood

Paul Callaway, Washington Cathedral's organist and choirmaster, will be a member of the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Music Center faculty at Tanglewood for the second consecutive summer. He will head the seminar in choral conducting at repertoire.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 55,163

FEB 22 1966

Berkshire Music Center Plans New Summer Program

The Berkshire Music Center and the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood will begin their second quarter century with opening exercises on June 26, a day earlier than last year.

For the first time this year the Berkshire Music Center will be joined by the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory with both offering college-level work.

Erich Leinsdorf, in his fourth year as director of the Center, has announced that the two major divisions—Fellowship Program and the Tanglewood Institute, formed last summer—again will be the principal program in this summer's session.

ERICH LEINSDORF

Fellowship Program emphasizes chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers, composers and conductors while the Tanglewood Institute comprises a number of seminars for the musical layman, teachers, students and non-performing musicians.

Joseph Silverstein is chairman of the faculty at the center and Gunther Schuller, head of the contemporary music activities, each succeeding Aaron Copland who retired last year but continues as emeritus chairman of the faculty.

Composers in residence will include Roger Sessions and George Rochberg.

Fellowships will be offered to 65 instrumentalists, 8 composers, 6 keyboard players, and 24 singers. The basic stipend for the program is $450 with supplemental allowances for dependents and travel.

Further information on the Fellowship Program or the Tanglewood Institute is available by writing Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass., 02115.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 18,000

FEB 22 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
FEB 26 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 114,860
FEB 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 517,080
FEB 27 1966

College Credits To Be Offered At the Berkshire Music Center

The Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which operates in conjunction with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, will be joined in its program this summer by two other Boston institutions.

The Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will each offer college-level course work at Tanglewood, according to director Erich Leinsdorf. Mr. Leinsdorf, who will be in his fourth year as director, also announced that the Fellowship Program and Tanglewood Institute, formed last summer, will again be the principal programs in this summer's session.

Chamber Music

The Fellowship Program will continue to emphasize chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers, composers and conductors. This portion of the music center's offering is designed to meet the needs of young musicians who have completed their training and are active performers. Prospective students who have not completed an equivalent of two years of college training will not be considered for the Fellowship Program, but are urged to consider the seminars in the Tanglewood Institute. Fellowships will be awarded to approximately 65 instrumentalists, 8 composers, 6 keyboard players and 24 singers. The basic stipend is $450 with supplemental allowances for dependents and travel. The minimum age in this program is 21 and the maximum 35.

The Tanglewood Institute comprises a number of seminars providing for the musical layman, teacher, student and nonperforming musician an environment in which he may broaden his musical horizons. The institute seminars, ranging from two to six weeks, are conducted by outstanding musicians in their fields, many of whom have served on the music center's faculty for several years. The seminars include: Choral conducting and repertoire, Paul Calloway, chairman; piano, Victor Babin, chairman; music teachers, Louis Krasner, chairman; voice teaching and performance, Phyllis Curtin, chairman; listening and analysis, Peter Gram Swing, chairman; conducting, Richard Woitach, coordinator, with Erich Leinsdorf, Sir Adrian Boult and Gunther Schuller; and orchestral playing and chamber music, Louis Speyer, chairman. Minimum age for the Tanglewood Institute is 16.

B.U. Program

The Boston University program at this summer's session will include course work in applied music and chamber music, composition and orchestration, and piano pedagogy and literature. Students successfully completing any of these programs will receive credit from the university. A separate program for high school students will also be included in the Boston University program. Those wishing further information should write Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts, Berkshire Music Center Program, 855 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, 02215.

The New England Conservatory will offer work in applied music, choral conducting, composition, and vocal pedagogy. Students seeking entry in this program must qualify by audition and interview and should write for further information to Office of the President, New England Conservatory, Berkshire Music Center Program, 290 Huntington Ave., Boston, 02115.

Commenting on the addition of the Boston University and New England Conservatory programs to the Berkshire Music Center's offerings, Mr. Leinsdorf said: "This collaboration we hope will be just the first step in an ever-increasing mutual appreciation and service among musical education institutions. It is our hope we may all be able to offer an environment of challenge to an increased number of talented professional and amateur musicians."

At the conclusion of last summer's 25th anniversary session of the music center, Mr. Leinsdorf announced the appointment of Joseph Silverstein as chairman of the faculty, and Mr. Schuller as head of the contemporary music activities, each succeeding Aaron Copland, who held both posts and presently continues as chairman of the faculty emeritus. Mr. Babin, director of the Cleveland Institute of Music, returns as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute. Sir Adrian Boult, who will be a guest conductor at one of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts at Tanglewood, will also serve on the music center's faculty for a portion of the summer. Composers in residence will include the distinguished American composers Roger Sessions and George Rochberg. In addition to Mr. Silverstein, the other principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will also serve on the music center's faculty.

Those wishing further information on the Fellowship Program or the Tanglewood Institute should write to the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, 02115. Applicants for admission to either program are required to audition or submit tape recordings of their playing. Auditions will be held in the following cities:

Boston—Symphony Hall, March 17, 1-4 p.m. New York—Carnegie Hall Studio 856, March 3, 1-4 p.m.—woodwinds; March 4, 1-4 p.m.—strings and brass; March 5, 10-3 p.m.—instrumentalists, vocalists, pianists; April 13, 1-4 p.m.—strings; April 14, 1-4 p.m.—woodwinds; April 15, 1-4 p.m.—brass; April 16, 10-3 p.m. — instrumentalists, vocalists, pianists.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 4,926
FEB 28 1966

Staten Island Advance
STATEN ISLAND, N. Y.
D. 57,308 SUN. 51,993
MAR 6 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 114,860
MAR 6 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 49,474
MAR 5 1966

Tanglewood Time

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center will open its 26th session at Tanglewood June 26. BSO conductor Erich Leinsdorf will be director of the center for the fourth year. Auditions for admission to the Fellowship Program will be held in Boston March 17, 1-4 p.m., in Symphony Hall. More information on auditions may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
MAR 5 1966

Noted Musicians To Take Part In Tanglewood's Summer Program

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center, operating concurrently with the Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, will begin its second quarter century with opening exercises at Tanglewood, Lenox, June 26.

Erich Leinsdorf, who will be in his fourth year as director of the center, has announced that the two major divisions — Fellowship Program and the Tanglewood Institute — formed last summer will again be the principal programs in this summer's session. Leinsdorf also said this year the Berkshire Music Center will be joined by two other Boston institutions with the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory each offering college-level course work at Tanglewood.

Chamber Music

At this summer's session the fellowship program will continue to emphasize chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers, composers, and conductors.

Prospective students who have not completed an equivalent of two years college training will not be considered for the Fellowship program. They are urged to consider the seminars in the Tanglewood Institute. Fellowships will be awarded to approximately 65 instrumentalists, eight composers, six keyboard players and 24 singers.

The Tanglewood Institute comprises a number of seminars providing for the musical layman, teacher, student and non-performing musician. The Institute seminars ranging from two to six weeks are conducted by outstanding musicians in their fields, many of whom have served on the Music Center's faculty for several years.

The Boston University program at this summer's session of the Berkshire Music Center will include course work in applied music and chamber music; composition and orchestration, piano pedagogy and literature. Students successfully completing any of these programs will receive credit from the University. A separata program for high school students will also be included.

The New England Conservatory will offer work in applied music, choral conducting, composition and vocal pedagogy.

At the conclusion of last summer's 25th anniversary session of the Berkshire Music Center Mr. Leinsdorf announced the appointment of Joseph Silverstein as chairman of the faculty, and Gunther Schuller as head of the contemporary music activities each succeeding Aaron Copland who held both posts and presently continues as chairman of the faculty, emeritus.

This summer Victor Babin, director of the Cleveland Institute of Music, returns as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute. Sir Adrian Boult, who will be a guest conductor at one of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts at Tanglewood, will also serve on the Center's faculty for a portion of the summer. Composers in residence will include American composers Roger Sessions and George Rochberg. In addition to Silverstein the other principals of the Boston Symphony orchestra will also serve on the Music Center's faculty.

The Denver Post
The Voice of the Rocky Mountain Empire
D. 257,481 SUN. 347,033
MAR 20 1966

Schuller Named

GUNTHER SCHULLER has been named to head contemporary music activities and the composition department at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, replacing Aaron Copland who assumed the post in 1940.

The announcement was made by Erich Leinsdorf, director of the center and music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at the close of the summer season at Tanglewood, following a chamber music concert honoring Copland for his 25 years of service to the center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
FEB 26 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 114,860
FEB 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 517,080
FEB 27 1966

College Credits To Be Offered At the Berkshire Music Center

The Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which operates in conjunction with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, will be joined in its program this summer by two other Boston institutions.

The Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will each offer college-level course work at Tanglewood, according to director Erich Leinsdorf. Mr. Leinsdorf, who will be in his fourth year as director, also announced that the Fellowship Program and Tanglewood Institute, formed last summer, will again be the principal programs in this summer's session.

Chamber Music

The Fellowship Program will continue to emphasize chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers, composers and conductors. This portion of the music center's offering is designed to meet the needs of young musicians who have completed their training and are active performers. Prospective students who have not completed an equivalent of two years of college training will not be considered for the Fellowship Program, but are urged to consider the seminars in the Tanglewood Institute. Fellowships will be awarded to approximately 65 instrumentalists, 8 composers, 6 keyboard players and 24 singers. The basic stipend is $450 with supplemental allowances for dependents and travel. The minimum age in this program is 21 and the maximum 35.

The Tanglewood Institute comprises a number of seminars providing for the musical layman, teacher, student and nonperforming musician an environment in which he may broaden his musical horizons. The institute seminars, ranging from two to six weeks, are conducted by outstanding musicians in their fields, many of whom have served on the music center's faculty for several years. The seminars include: Choral conducting and repertoire, Paul Calloway, chairman; piano, Victor Babin, chairman; music teachers, Louis Krasner, chairman; voice teaching and performance, Phyllis Curtin, chairman; listening and analysis, Peter Gram Swing, chairman; conducting, Richard Woitach, coordinator, with Erich Leinsdorf, Sir Adrian Boult and Gunther Schuller; and orchestral playing and chamber music, Louis Speyer, chairman. Minimum age for the Tanglewood Institute is 16.

B.U. Program

The Boston University program at this summer's session will include course work in applied music and chamber music, composition and orchestration, and piano pedagogy and literature. Students successfully completing any of these programs will receive credit from the university. A separate program for high school students will also be included in the Boston University program. Those wishing further information should write Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts, Berkshire Music Center Program, 855 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, 02215.

The New England Conservatory will offer work in applied music, choral conducting, composition, and vocal pedagogy. Students seeking entry in this program must qualify by audition and interview and should write for further information to Office of the President, New England Conservatory, Berkshire Music Center Program, 290 Huntington Ave., Boston, 02115.

Commenting on the addition of the Boston University and New England Conservatory programs to the Berkshire Music Center's offerings, Mr. Leinsdorf said: "This collaboration we hope will be just the first step in an ever-increasing mutual appreciation and service among musical education institutions. It is our hope we may all be able to offer an environment of challenge to an increased number of talented professional and amateur musicians."

At the conclusion of last summer's 25th anniversary session of the music center, Mr. Leinsdorf announced the appointment of Joseph Silverstein as chairman of the faculty, and Mr. Schuller as head of the contemporary music activities, each succeeding Aaron Copland, who held both posts and presently continues as chairman of the faculty emeritus. Mr. Babin, director of the Cleveland Institute of Music, returns as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute. Sir Adrian Boult, who will be a guest conductor at one of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts at Tanglewood, will also serve on the music center's faculty for a portion of the summer. Composers in residence will include the distinguished American composers Roger Sessions and George Rochberg. In addition to Mr. Silverstein, the other principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will also serve on the music center's faculty.

Those wishing further information on the Fellowship Program or the Tanglewood Institute should write to the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, 02115. Applicants for admission to either program are required to audition or submit tape recordings of their playing. Auditions will be held in the following cities:

Boston—Symphony Hall, March 17, 1-4 p.m. New York—Carnegie Hall Studio 856, March 3, 1-4 p.m.—woodwinds; March 4, 1-4 p.m.—strings and brass; March 5, 10-3 p.m.—instrumentalists, vocalists, pianists; April 13, 1-4 p.m.—strings; April 14, 1-4 p.m.—woodwinds; April 15, 1-4 p.m.—brass; April 16, 10-3 p.m. — instrumentalists, vocalists, pianists.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 4,926
FEB 28 1966

Staten Island Advance
STATEN ISLAND, N. Y.
D. 57,308 SUN. 51,993
MAR 6 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 114,860
MAR 6 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 49,474
MAR 5 1966

Tanglewood Time

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center will open its 26th session at Tanglewood June 26. BSO conductor Erich Leinsdorf will be director of the center for the fourth year. Auditions for admission to the Fellowship Program will be held in Boston March 17, 1-4 p.m., in Symphony Hall. More information on auditions may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.,
Circ. 26,771
MAR 5 1966

Noted Musicians To Take Part In Tanglewood's Summer Program

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center, operating concurrently with the Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, will begin its second quarter century with opening exercises at Tanglewood, Lenox, June 26.

Erich Leinsdorf, who will be in his fourth year as director of the center, has announced that the two major divisions — Ftllowship Program and the Tanglewood Institute — formed last summer will again be the principal programs in this summer's session. Leinsdorf also said this year the Berkshire Music Center will be joined by two other Boston institutions with the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory each offering college-level course work at Tanglewood.

Chamber Music

At this summer's session the fellowship program will continue to emphasize chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers, composers, and conductors.

Prospective students who have not completed an equivalent of two years college training will not be considered for the Fellowship program. They are urged to consider the seminars in the Tanglewood Institute. Fellowships will be awarded to approximately 65 instrumentalists, eight composers, six keyboard players and 24 singers.

The Tanglewood Institute comprises a number of seminars providing for the musical layman, teacher, student and non-performing musician. The Institute seminars ranging from two to six weeks are conducted by outstanding musicians in their fields, many of whom have served on the Music Center's faculty for several years.

The Boston University program at this summer's session of the Berkshire Music Center will include course work in applied music and chamber music; composition and orchestration, piano pedagogy and literature. Students successfully completing any of these programs will receive credit from the University. A separata program for high school students will also be included.

The New England Conservatory will offer work in applied music, choral conducting, composition and vocal pedagogy.

At the conclusion of last summer's 25th anniversary session of the Berkshire Music Center Mr. Leinsdorf announced the appointment of Joseph Silverstein as chairman of the faculty, and Gunther Schuller as head of the contemporary music activities each succeeding Aaron Copland who held both posts and presently continues as chairman of the faculty, emeritus.

This summer Victor Babin, director of the Cleveland Institute of Music, returns as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute. Sir Adrian Boult, who will be a guest conductor at one of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts at Tanglewood, will also serve on the center's faculty for a portion of the summer. Composers in residence will include American composers Roger Sessions and George Rochberg. In addition to Silverstein the other principals of the Boston Symphony orchestra will also serve on the Music Center's faculty.

The Denver Post
The Voice of the Rocky Mountain Empire
D. 257,481 SUN. 347,033
MAR 20 1966

Schuller Named

GUNTHER SCHULLER has been named to head contemporary music activities and the composition department at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, replacing Aaron Copland who assumed the post in 1940.

The announcement was made by Erich Leinsdorf, director of the center and music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at the close of the summer season at Tanglewood, following a chamber music concert honoring Copland for his 25 years of service to the center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 517,080
APR 10 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 133,310
APR 9 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
MAR 28 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,171
APR 3 1966

Leinsdorf Announces Awards

Erich Leinsdorf, director of the Berkshire Music Center, has announced the award of four commissions by the Music Center.

The new works will receive their premieres at the annual Festival of Contemporary American Music held in conjunction with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood (Lenox, Massachusetts).

[illegible] Fromm, prominent [illegible] businessman, also [illegible] that the Fromm [illegible] Foundation would par[illegible] with the Music Cen[illegible] in the five-day "festival within a festival." Since 1957 the Fromm Foundation has taken an active role in the commissioning and performance of new music at Tanglewood. The recipients of the Berkshire Music Center-Fromm commissions, all Berkshire Music Center alumni, are Michael Colgrass, Douglas Leedy, Roger Reynolds, and Henry Weinberg.

Michael Colgrass, 34, who now resides in New York city, is a graduate of the University of Illinois and has studied with Eugene Weigle, Wallingford Riegger, and Ben Weber. He attended the Berkshire Music Center in 1954, [illegible] a Guggenheim Fellowship to Copenhagen in 1964-1965, and is the composer of "Light Spirit," performed at last Summer's Contemporary Festival. The Boston Symphony Chamber Players are playing his "Duo for Viola and Four Drums" during this season. His commission is for an orchestral work.

Douglas Leedy, 26, a native of Portland, Ore., is presently in Warsaw on a joint United States-Polish government grant studying contemporary Polish Music and performance. A graduate of Pomona College where he studied with Karl Kohn, Mr. Leedy also attended the Music Center studying with Lukas Foss. He is on the editorial staff of the New Berlioz Complete Works (London) and his commission for this Summer is awarded for a work of instrumental chamber music.

Roger Reynolds, 32, currently in Japan under the auspices of the Institute of Current World Affairs, earned a degree in Engineering Physics from the University of Michigan. He has studied with Ross Lee Finney and later with Roberto Gerhard at Tanglewood. He was a Guggenheim Fellow in 1964 and the following year received a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. For this Summer's Festival of Contemporary American Music he will write a work for mixed chorus with brass accompaniment.

Henry Weinberg, 35, is from Philadelphia and studied at the University of Pennsylvania and Princeton University with Milton Babbit, Luigi Dallapiccola, and George Rochberg and Roger Sessions, who will be composers in residence at Tanglewood this Summer. Mr. Weinberg attended the Berkshire Music Center in 1958 and in 1960-1961 he resided in Florence under a grant from the American and Italian governments. He teaches at Queens College, New York, and will write a work of instrumental chamber music under the terms of this commission.

Each of the four young composers will have an additional work performed at the Festival of Contemporary American Music which will be held during the final week (August 14-18) of the Berkshire Festival. Erich Leinsdorf will open his Summer's Festival on July 2 with the first week-end's concerts extending through July 4. The Berkshire Music Center's Twenty-sixth Session will begin on June 26 and the Summer programs of both the Festival and the Music Center will conclude on Sunday, August 21.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 4,926
MAR 23 1966

Music

Berkshire Center Courses Set

By RAMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

The most significant news at Tanglewood this summer may be made by the Berkshire Music Center's Fellowship Program and Taglewood Institute.

Operating concurrently with the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Music Festival, the center will begin its second quarter-century with opening exercises on June 26.

Erich Leinsdorf, in his fourth year as director of the center and conductor of the Boston Symphony, announced that the center will be joined by two Boston institutions, Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will each offer college-level course work at Tanglewood.

Fellowships

Fellowships are offered to approximately 65 instrumentalists, eight composers, six keyboard players and 24 singers. The basic stipend for the Fellowship Program is $450, with supplemental allowances for dependents and travel. The minimum age in this program is 21 and the maximum 35.

The Tanglewood Institute comprises a number of seminars for the musical laymen, teacher, student and nonperforming musician providing an environment in which he may broaden his musical horizons.

These courses range from two to six weeks.

Therefore, the approximately 100 musicians enrolled in the Fellowship Program are selected on a competitive basis and paid. Those enrolled in the institute pay tuition.

Faculty Members

Two distinguished members of this summer's center faculty are Sir Adrian Boult, who will be guest conductor at one of the Boston Symphony concerts, and composer in residence, Roger Sessions.

At the conclusion of last summer's 25th anniversary session of the center, Leinsdorf announced the appointment of Joseph Silverstein (Boston Symphony concertmaster) as chairman of the faculty, and composer Gunther Schuller as head of contemporary music activities.

They succeed Aaron Copland, who held both posts, and presently continues as chairman of the faculty, emeritus.

Speaking of contemporary music, Roger Reynolds' "[illegible] Are the Months of Earth" [illegible] one of the most colorful commentaries [illegible] in Carnegie Recital Hall [illegible] the Contemporary Chamber Ensemble.

New York Herald Tribune's William Bender described it as one "... a 16-minute piece that was intriguing for the glistening, mooing, squeaking, sliding, Ivesian, Bartokian, and mood-filled sounds it spun."

Richard D. Freed, reviewer for the New York Time, added: "... provocative, tintinnabulations from such sources as stroked piano wires, a mouth organ, and jazz vibes, punctuated by occasional thunders from the substantial percussion battery."

All of which sounds like a dulcet lullaby compared to some of the chaotic goulash of sounds we have heard at the Berkshire Center during the past several summers.

There are no more stringent requirements than those of the Johann Sebastian Bach International Competition for Young pianists with finals on Nov. 27, [illegible] Georgetown University, Washington, D.C.

Each contestant must play Bach's [illegible] Musical Offering No. 1 Ricercar in three voices and aria variata Alla Maneira Italiana (aria and 10 variations in the Italian style).

As a relaxation, he also has a choice of playing one of the following three partitas: No. III in A minor, No. IV in D major or No. V in G major.

[illegible] prizes are [illegible] $500 and [illegible] financial rewards may be modest by comparison with [illegible] (for example, the van Cliburn competition first prize of $10,000), but the musical status is definitely "big league."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,897
MAR 23 1966

NEW YORK
Herald Tribune
D. 307,674 SUN. 385,268
MAR 30 1966

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 652,135 SUN. 1,355,614
MAR 30 1966

SCHOOL MUSIC NEWS
ONEONTA, N. Y.
MONTHLY 6,050
APR 1966

WE ARE PLEASED to learn about a new program which will be inaugurated this summer — Boston University will "be at" the Berkshire Music Center. The Berkshire Music Center is a project of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and in order to expand the educational and cultural offerings at the Center, Boston University has been invited to establish course work in applied music, chamber music, composition and orchestration, piano pedagogy and literature. Also, there will be a special program for high school juniors in applied music, music theory, and chamber music. In addition to the supervised course work, all students will have the opportunity to attend rehearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other programs and activities at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 171,536
APR 27 1966

Auditions set for Friday for Tanglewood singers

Erich Leinsdorf, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, announces that several vocal fellowships are still available for the 1966 summer session. Final auditions will be held at Symphony Hall this Friday afternoon from 1 to 3 o'clock. The minimum age is 21, the maximum, 35.

There is no tuition fee and a basic stipend of $450 is paid shortly after arrival at Tanglewood. Additional stipends are provided for married Fellows, for children who accompany them to Tanglewood, and for aid in travel expenses. The Fellowship Program continues to emphasize chamber music for advanced singers, instrumentalists, and composers, and is designed to meet the needs of young musicians who have completed their training and are active performers.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 171,361
APR 27 1966

Vocal Fellowships At Tanglewood Still Available

Erich Leinsdorf, director of Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, said several vocal fellowships are available for the 1966 summer session. Final auditions for these fellowships will be in Symphony Hall Friday afternoon from 1 to 3 p.m. Applications will be received at the stage entrance. Minimum age for applicants is 21; the maximum, 35.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 517,080
APR 10 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 133,310
APR 9 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
APR 28 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,171
APR 3 1966

Leinsdorf Announces Awards

Erich Leinsdorf, director of the Berkshire Music Center, has announced the award of four commissions by the Music Center.

The new works will receive their premieres at the annual Festival of Contemporary American Music held in conjunction with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood (Lenox, Massachusetts).

Paul Fromm, prominent Chicago businessman, also announced that the Fromm Music Foundation would participate with the Music Center in the five-day "festival within a festival." Since 1957 the Fromm Foundation has taken an active role in the commissioning and performance of new music at Tanglewood. The recipients of the Berkshire Music Center-Fromm commissions, all Berkshire Music Center alumni, are Michael Colgrass, Douglas Leedy, Roger Reynolds, and Henry Weinberg.

Michael Colgrass, 34, who now resides in New York city, is a graduate of the University of Illinois and has studied with Eugene Weigle, Wallingford Riegger, and Ben Weber. He attended the Berkshire Music Center in 1954, had a Guggenheim Fellowship in Copenhagen in 1964-1965, and is the composer of "Light Spirit" performed at last Summer's Contemporary Festival. The Boston Symphony Chamber Players are playing his "Duo for Viola and Four Drums" during this season. His commission is for an orchestral work.

Douglas Leedy, 28, a native of Portland, Ore., is presently in Warsaw on a joint United States - Polish government grant studying contemporary Polish Music and performance. A graduate of Pomona College where he studied with Karl Kohn, Mr. Leedy also attended the Music Center studying with Lukas Foss. He is on the editorial staff of the New Berlioz Complete Works (London) and his commission for this Summer is awarded for a work of instrumental chamber music.

Roger Reynolds, 32, currently in Japan under the auspices of the Institute of Current World Affairs, earned a degree in Engineering Physics from the University of Michigan. He has studied with Ross Lee Finney and later with Roberto Gehard at Tanglewood. He was a Guggenheim Fellow in 1964 and the following year received a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. For this Summer's Festival of Contemporary American Music he will write a work for mixed chorus with brass accompaniment.

Henry Weinberg, 35, is from Philadelphia and studied at the University of Pennsylvania and Princeton University with Milton Babbit, Luigi Dallapiccola, and George Rochberg and Roger Sessions, who will be composers in residence at Tanglewood this Summer. Mr. Weinberg attended the Berkshire Music Center in 1958 and in 1960-1961 he resided in Florence under a grant from the American and Italian governments. He teaches at Queens College, New York, and will write a work of instrumental chamber music under the terms of this commission.

Each of the four young composers will have an additional work performed at the Festival of Contemporary American Music which will be held during the final week (August 14-18) of the Berkshire Festival. Erich Leinsdorf will open his Summer's Festival on July 2 with the first week-end's concerts extending through July 4. The Berkshire Music Center's Twenty-sixth Session will begin on June 26 and the Summer programs of both the Festival and the Music Center will conclude on Sunday, August 21.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 4,926
MAR 23 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,897
MAR 23 1966

NEW YORK Herald Tribune
D. 307,674 SUN. 385,268
MAR 30 1966

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 652,135 SUN. 1,365,614
MAR 30

Music

Berkshire Center Courses Set

By RAMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

The most significant news at Tanglewood this summer may be made by the Berkshire Music Center's Fellowship Program and Taglewood Institute.

Operating concurrently with the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Music Festival, the center will begin its second quarter-century with opening exercises on June 26.

Erich Leinsdorf, in his fourth year as director of the center and conductor of the Boston Symphony, announced that the center will be joined by two Boston institutions. Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will each offer college-level course work at Tanglewood.

Fellowships

Fellowships are offered to approximately 65 Instrumentalists, eight composers, six keyboard players and 24 singers. The basic stipend for the Fellowship Program is $450, with supplemental allowances for dependents and travel. The minimum age in this program is 21 and the maximum 35.

The Tanglewood Institute comprises a nmber of seminars for the musical laymen, teacher, student and nonperforming musician providing an environment in which he may broaden his musical horizons.

These courses range from two to six weeks.

Therefore, the approximately 100 musicians enrolled in the Fellowship Program are selected on a competitive basis and paid. Those enrolled in the institute pay tuition.

Faculty Members

Two distinguished members of this summer's center faculty are Sir Adrian Boult, who will be guest conductor at one of the Boston Symphony concerts, and composer in residence, Roger Sessions.

At the conclusion of last summer's 25th-anniversary session of the center, Leinsdorf announced the appointment of Joseph Silverstein (Boston Symphony concertmaster) as chairman of the faculty, and composer Gunther Schuller as head of contemporary music activities.

They succeed Aaron Copland, who held both posts and presently continues as chairman of the faculty, emeritus.

Speaking of contemporary music, Roger Reynolds' "Quick Are the Mouths of Earth" received some of the season's most colorful comments after its premiere in Carnegie Recital Hall by the Contemporary Chamber Ensemble.

New York Herald Tribune's William Bender described it as "... a 16-minute piece that was intriguing for the glistening, mooing, squaking, sliding, Ivesian, Bartokian, and mood-filled sounds it spun."

Richard D. Freed, reviewer for the New York Time, added: "... provocative, tintinnabulations from such sources as stroked piano wires, a mouth organ, and jazz vibes, punctuated by occasional thunders from the substantial percussion battery."

All of which sounds like a dulcet lullaby compared to some of the chaotic goulash of sounds we have heard at the Berkshire Center during the past several summers.

There are no more stringent requirements than those of the Johann Sebastian Bach International Competition for young pianists, with finals on Nov. 27, 1966, at Georgetown University, Washington, D.C.

Each contestant must play Bach's The Musical Offering' No. 1 Ricercar in three voices and Aria Variata Alla Maneira Italiana (aria and 10 variations in the Italian style).

As relaxation, he also has a choice of playing one of the following three partitas: No. III in A minor, No. IV in D major or No. V in G major.

Prizes are $1000, $500 and $250.

Financial rewards may be modest by comparison with some (for example, the van Cliburn competition first prize of $10,000), but the musical status is definitely "big league."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 171,536
APR 27 1966

Auditions set for Friday for Tanglewood singers

Erich Leinsdorf, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, announces that several vocal fellowships are still available for the 1966 summer session. Final auditions will be held at Symphony Hall this Friday afternoon from 1 to 3 o'clock. The minimum age is 21, the maximum, 35.

There is no tuition fee and a basic stipend of $450 is paid shortly after arrival at Tanglewood. Additional stipends are provided for married Fellows, for children who accompany them to Tanglewood, and for aid in travel expenses. The Fellowship Program continues to emphasize chamber music for advanced singers, instrumentalists, and composers, and is designed to meet the needs of young musicians who have completed their training and are active performers.

SCHOOL MUSIC NEWS
ONEONTA, N. Y.
MONTHLY 6,050
APR 1966

WE ARE PLEASED to learn about a new program which will be inaugurated this summer — Boston University will "be at" the Berkshire Music Center. The Berkshire Music Center is a project of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and in order to expand the educational and cultural offerings at the Center, Boston University has been invited to establish course work in applied music, chamber music, composition and orchestration, piano pedagogy and literature. Also, there will be a special program for high school juniors in applied music, music theory, and chamber music. In addition to the supervised course work, all students will have the opportunity to attend rehearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other programs and activities at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 171,361
APR 27 1966

Vocal Fellowships At Tanglewood Still Available

Erich Leinsdorf, director of Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center at Tandlewood, said several vocal fellowships are available for the 1966 summer session. Final auditions for these fellowships will be in Symphony Hall Friday afternoon from 1 to 3 p.m. Applicants will be received at the stage entrance. Minimum age for applicants is 21; the maximum, 35.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
APR 30 1966

Unique Venture

BU Plans Playwright Seminar With Local Theatre Festival

BOSTON—A laboratory for playwrights, the first of its kind in the nation, will work in close collaboration with the Berkshire Theatre Festival this summer. Boston University, sponsors of the writing school, made the announcement today.

Harold Clurman, eminent director, critic and theater editor for the Nation magazine, will direct a symposium for four or five writers at Windsor Mountain School from July 5 to Aug. 1. The group will work on plays its invited members have written in meetings with Clurman and a faculty drawn from the Theatre Festival.

Participating in the formal and informal sessions will be William Gibson, author of "The Miracle Worker" and president of the festival corporation; George Tabori, artistic director of the festival; Gene Frankel, who will direct "Waiting for Godot" at the Berkshire Playhouse; Elliot Norton, theater critic for the Boston Record American; and Alvin Epstein, actor and assistant artistic director with Tabori.

Student Seminar

A second program will be run concurrently under the direction of John Ransford Watts, assistant professor of theater arts at BU, for about 20 students. Applicants need two years of college study, theatrical training or similar experience, according to the university.

The student group will work closely with the theater writing seminar, whose plays will be staged by actors from the festival company during the course of the summer. The presentations are not expected to be open to the public.

The new venture will also be coordinated with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. Participants in the playwrights' seminar and the student program will be invited to performances and rehearsals of the Boston Symphony during the summer months.

The cooperation between the BTF and the university project was brought about principally by Barry Hyams, consultant to the festival, and by the national theater service department of the American National Theater and Academy (ANTA) and its director Miss Jean Guest.

A Unique Effort

Miss Guest, who has helped regional theaters all over the country get started, said the coordinated effort is unique.

A measure of the enthusiasm of the visiting participants in the new program is a comment by Tabori, author of "Flight Into Egypt" and "The Emperor's Clothes."

"Theater without dramatists is an engine without gas. If the theater is to break the stalemate of Broadway, it must return to its origins and engage in a truly collective collaboration between playwright and acting company.

Friedman-Abeles

Harold Clurman

"To my knowledge, this is the first time in this country that a playwrights' laboratory will function in an integrated program with a professional theater company. This may be the first green shoot of a hopeful beginning. Given time, it may flourish," Tabori said.

Clurman acclaimed the symposium. He said, "It is not often that playwrights can engage in their preparatory work under such favorable conditions.

Plays in Action

"They will be able to test portions of their plays in performance under professional actors and directors of the Berkshire Theatre Festival and they will have, in addition, a select number of students from the seminar in theater offered by Boston University as eager and knowledgeable auditors."

Erich Leinsdorf, director of the Berkshire Music Festival and conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, praised the new cooperative venture.

"It seems fitting indeed that the Berkshires, which have inspired such literary luminaries in the past and which we hope will again exert their influence on literary creativity, should be the place where we initiate this program of cooperation among the arts."

Leinsdorf recently announced another cooperative project with Boston University whereby the university will offer college credit courses in music this

Seminar
Continued on Page 11

DAYTONA BEACH, FLA.
JOURNAL
D. 35,000
MAY 31 1966

New Orleans Critic Says:

Daytona Beach Changing Image With Summer Music Festival

PAGE ONE

The appearance of the London Symphony Orchestra here this Summer during the Florida International Music Festival, July 27-Aug. 21, is attracting favorable comment all over the nation. Here is what Frank Gagnard, Music critic of the News Orleans Times-Picayune, had to say recently.

By FRANK GAGNARD

We admire the honesty of the Daytona Beach, Fla., authorities who admit that they are starting a music festival to erase an unfavorable image of "sex, sand and suds."

Local News

It seems that in past summers Daytona Beach has been beset by "college students, racing crowds and other local troubles," resulting in the heady combination quoted in the above paragraph. Obviously, "a cultural counterattack" has to be prepared to combat the city's unfavorable publicity.

A little research into a possible solution convinced the worriers that music was the answer. It was discovered, among other facts, that the Southeast has no major music festival, either in existence or in the planning stage; that there is "a severe lack of opportunity" in the region for serious music students, particularly among "members of minority groups," and that professional musicians and teachers "had no place to go where they could sharpen their musical skill and receive college credits at the same time."

A method was found to combine the symphonic establishment and the academy. The London Symphony Orchestra was engaged for a series of 16 concerts, and the school of music of nearby (to Daytona Beach) Stetson University agreed to put up students and bestow earned college credits. The endeavor will extend from July 28 to Aug. 21, and will be called the Florida International Music Festival.

Apparently patterned after the Boston Symphony's summer camp at the Berkshire Music Center, the plan will engage the services of Richard Burgin, a chief mover at the Tanglewood, Mass., center and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony. Burgin is to help establish the school part of the project.

The London Symphony will give eight pairs of concerts and various members of the orchestra will play three chamber music concerts. Open rehearsals will be held.

If these musical goodies do not sway Florida visitors from sand, suds, etc., the brochure for the festival also advises that dog racing and jai alai are available nightly.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177

APR 30 1966

Unique Venture

BU Plans Playwright Seminar With Local Theatre Festival

BOSTON—A laboratory for playwrights, the first of its kind in the nation, will work in close collaboration with the Berkshire Theatre Festival this summer. Boston University, sponsors of the writing school, made the announcement today.

Harold Clurman, eminent director, critic and theater editor for the Nation magazine, will direct a symposium for four or five writers at Windsor Mountain School from July 5 to Aug. 1. The group will work on plays its invited members have written in meetings with Clurman and a faculty drawn from the Theatre Festival.

Participating in the formal and informal sessions will be William Gibson, author of "The Miracle Worker" and president of the festival corporation; George Tabori, artistic director of the festival; Gene Frankel, who will direct "Waiting for Godot" at the Berkshire Playhouse; Elliot Norton, theater critic for the Boston Record American; and Alvin Epstein, actor and assistant artistic director with Tabori.

Student Seminar

A second program will be run concurrently under the direction of John Ransford Watts, assistant professor of theater arts at BU, for about 20 students. Applicants need two years of college study, theatrical training or similar experience, according to the university.

The student group will work closely with the theater writing seminar, whose plays will be staged by actors from the festival company during the course of the summer. The presentations are not expected to be open to the public.

The new venture will also be coordinated with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. Participants in the playwrights' seminar and the student program will be invited to performances and rehearsals of the Boston Symphony during the summer months.

The cooperation between the BTF and the university project was brought about principally by Barry Hyams, consultant to the festival, and by the national theater service department of the American National Theater and Academy (ANTA) and its director Miss Jean Guest.

A Unique Effort

Miss Guest, who has helped regional theaters all over the country get started, said the coordinated effort is unique.

A measure of the enthusiasm of the visiting participants in the new program is a comment by Tabori, author of "Flight Into Egypt" and "The Emperor's Clothes."

"Theater without dramatists is an engine without gas. If the theater is to break the stalemate of Broadway, it must return to its origins and engage in a truly collective collaboration between playwright and acting company.

"To my knowledge, this is the first time in this country that a playwrights' laboratory will function in an integrated program with a professional theater company. This may be the first green shoot of a hopeful beginning. Given time, it may flourish," Tabori said.

Friedman-Abeles

Harold Clurman

Clurman acclaimed the symposium. He said, "It is not often that playwrights can engage in their preparatory work under such favorable conditions.

Plays in Action

"They will be able to test portions of their plays in performance under professional actors and directors of the Berkshire Theatre Festival and they will have, in addition, a select number of students from the seminar in theater offered by Boston University as eager and knowledgeable auditors."

Erich Leinsdorf, director of the Berkshire Music Festival and conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, praised the new cooperative venture.

"It seems fitting indeed that the Berkshires, which have inspired such literary luminaries in the past and which we hope will again exert their influence on literary creativity, should be the place where we initiate this program of cooperation among the arts."

Leinsdorf recently announced another cooperative project with Boston University whereby the university will offer college credit courses in music this

Seminar
Continued on Page 11

DAYTONA BEACH, FLA.
JOURNAL
D. 35,000

MAY 31 1966

New Orleans Critic Says:

Daytona Beach Changing Image With Summer Music Festival

PAGE ONE

The appearance of the London Symphony Orchestra here this Summer during the Florida International Music Festival, July 27-Aug. 21, is attracting favorable comment all over the nation. Here is what Frank Gagnard, Music critic of the News Orleans Times-Picayune, had to say recently.

By FRANK GAGNARD

We admire the honesty of the Daytona Beach, Fla., authorities who admit that they are starting a music festival to erase an unfavorable image of "sex, sand and suds."

Local News

It seems that in past summers Daytona Beach has been beset by "college students, racing crowds and other local troubles," resulting in the heady combination quoted in the above paragraph. Obviously, "a cultural counterattack" has to be prepared to combat the city's unfavorable publicity.

A little research into a possible solution convinced the worriers that music was the answer. It was discovered, among other facts, that the Southeast has no major music festival, either in existence or in the planning stage; that there is "a severe lack of opportunity" in the region for serious music students, particularly among "members of minority groups," and that professional musicians and teachers "had no place to go where they could sharpen their musical skill and receive college credits at the same time."

A method was found to combine the symphonic establishment and the academy. The London Symphony Orchestra was engaged for a series of 16 concerts, and the school of music of nearby (to Daytona Beach) Stetson University agreed to put up students and bestow earned college credits. The endeavor will extend from July 28 to Aug. 21, and will be called the Florida International Music Festival.

Apparently patterned after the Boston Symphony's summer camp at the Berkshire Music Center, the plan will engage the services of Richard Burgin, a chief mover at the Tanglewood, Mass., center and associate conductor of the Boston Symphony. Burgin is to help establish the school part of the project.

The London Symphony will give eight pairs of concerts and various members of the orchestra will play three chamber music concerts. Open rehearsals will be held.

If these musical goodies do not sway Florida visitors from sand, suds, etc., the brochure for the festival also advises that dog racing and jai alai are available nightly.

24

The News American
BALTIMORE, MD.
D. 211,932 SUN. 310,264
MAY 2 2 1966

Dramaturgy Symposium

BOSTON — A symposium for promising playwrights will be offered by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts in cooperation with the Berkshire Music Center and the recently organized Berkshire Theater Festival. It will extend from [illegible] through Aug. 1 at the [illegible] Mountain School near Lenox and Stockbridge.

Harold Clurman, eminent director and critic, will direct the symposium.

STATE TIMES
BATON ROUGE, LA.
D. 36,461
MAY 2 6 1966

[illegible] PERFORM AT FESTIVAL — Miss Jo[illegible] Barr, instructor of music at the western Louisiana College, has been awarded a fellowship as a piano accompanist at the Berkshire Music Festival this summer. He was auditioned here earlier this month by Joseph Silverstein, concert master of the Boston Symphony. Miss Barr will accompany students of soprano soloist Phyllis Curtin at the festival.

THE PLAIN DEALER
CLEVELAND, OHIO
D. 370,499 SUN. 522,391
MAY 2 2 1966

Voice Student Wins Fellowship

Jo Ann Lanier, a voice student at the Cleveland Institute of Music and a pupil of George Vassos, will receive her bachelor of music degree in June at the institute.

She has just received a $450 vocal fellowship to coach with Phyllis Curtin and to perform in contemporary music, chamber music, cantatas, etc. JO ANN LANIER

The fellowship is for the 1966 session of the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass., which lasts for eight weeks.

Miss Lanier, who has appeared in Karamu operas as well as in opera productions at the institute, auditioned for the award in New York City's Carnegie Hall in April.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY-CIRC. N. AVAIL.
MAY 1966

Berkshire Music Center to Open Twenty-Sixth Season on June 26

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center, operating concurrently with the Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, will begin its second quarter century with the Opening Exercises at Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.) June 26. Erich Leinsdorf, who will be in his fourth year as Director of the Center, has announced that the two major divisions—Fellowship Program and the Tanglewood Institute—formed last summer will again be the principal programs in this summer's session. Mr. Leinsdorf also announced that in 1966 the Berkshire Music Center will be joined by two other Boston institutions with the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory each offering college-level course work at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
MAY 5 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 286,021
MAY 8 1966

Newsday
GARDEN CITY, N. Y.
D. 390,443
MAY 5 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
GLOUCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 10,022
MAY 7 1966

Junior High Musicians Are Sought

Talented high school instrumentalists at the junior class level are being sought throughout the country for a new program at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in western Massachusetts.

Boston University is offering the program June 26-Aug. 21 in applied music, music theory and chamber music for the first time. Students who complete the course work satisfactorily and later qualify for admission to Boston University will receive credit toward the Bachelor of Music requirements.

Also to be offered are college credit courses for college students in applied music, chamber music, composition and orchestration.

Outstanding teachers include composers Gunther Schuller, Roger Sessions and George Rochberg.

Information may be obtained by writing Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts, Berkshire Music Program, 855 Commonwealth Ave., Boston.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
NEWBURYPORT, Mass.
Circ. 7,025
MAY 7 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
SALEM, Mass.
Circ. 26,770
MAY 7 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Circ. 15,882
MAY 5 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Chronicle-Citizen
BROOKLINE, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 8,280
MAY 1 2 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
BEVERLY, Mass.
Circ. 7,991
MAY 7 1966

24

The News American
BALTIMORE, MD.
D. 211,932 SUN. 310,264

MAY 2 2 1966

Dramaturgy Symposium

BOSTON — A symposium for promising playwrights will be offered by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts in cooperation with the Berkshire Music Center and the recently organized Berkshire Theater Festival. It will extend from [illegible] through Aug. 1 at the Windsor Mountain School near Tanglewood and Stockbridge.

Harold Clurman, eminent director and critic, will direct the symposium.

STATE TIMES
BATON ROUGE, LA.
D. 30,431

MAY 2 6 1966

PERFORM AT FESTIVAL — Miss Joan Barr, instructor of music at Southwestern Louisiana College, has been awarded a fellowship as a piano accompanist at the Berkshire Music Festival this summer. he was auditioned here earlier this month by Joseph Silverstein, concert master of the Boston Symphony. Miss Barr will accompany students of soprano soloist Phyllis Curtin at the festival.

THE PLAIN DEALER
CLEVELAND, OHIO
D. 370,439 SUN. 522,391

MAY 2 2 1966

Voice Student Wins Fellowship

Jo Ann Lanier, a voice student at the Cleveland Institute of Music and a pupil of George Vassos, will receive her bachelor of music degree in June at the institute.

She has just received a $450 vocal fellowship to coach with Phyllis Curtin and to perform in contemporary music, chamber music, cantatas, etc.

JO ANN LANIER

The fellowship is for the 1966 session of the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass., which lasts for eight weeks.

Miss Lanier, who has appeared in Karamu operas as well as in opera productions at the institute, auditioned for the award in New York City's Carnegie Hall in April.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY-CIRC. N. AVAIL.

MAY 1966

Berkshire Music Center to Open Twenty-Sixth Season on June 26

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center, operating concurrently with the Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, will begin its second quarter century with the Opening Exercises at Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.) June 26. Erich Leinsdorf, who will be in his fourth year as Director of the Center, has announced that the two major divisions—Fellowship Program and the Tanglewood Institute—formed last summer will again be the principal programs in this summer's session. Mr. Leinsdorf also announced that in 1966 the Berkshire Music Center will be joined by two other Boston institutions with the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory each offering college-level course work at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
MAY 5 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 286,021
MAY 8 1966

Newsday
GARDEN CITY, N. Y.
D. 390,443
MAY 5 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
GLOUCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 10,022
MAY 7 1966

Junior High Musicians Are Sought

Talented high school instrumentalists at the junior class level are being sought throughout the country for a new program at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in western Massachusetts.

Boston University is offering the program June 26-Aug. 21 in applied music, music theory and chamber music for the first time. Students who complete the course work satisfactorily and later qualify for admission to Boston University will receive credit toward the Bachelor of Music requirements.

Also to be offered are college credit courses for college students in applied music, chamber music, composition and orchestration.

Outstanding teachers include composers Gunther Schuller, Roger Sessions and George Rochberg.

Information may be obtained by writing Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts, Berkshire Music Program, 855 Commonwealth Ave., Boston.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
NEWBURYPORT, Mass.
Circ. 7,025
MAY 7 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
SALEM, Mass.
Circ. 26,770
MAY 7 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Circ. 15,882
MAY 5 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Chronicle-Citizen
BROOKLINE, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 8,280
MAY 1 2 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
BEVERLY, Mass.
Circ. 7,991
MAY 7 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
MAY 16 1966

Tanglewood Offers Courses For Teachers

LENOX — The Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is offering two courses this summer which should be of interest to music teachers.

An eight-week seminar specially designed for music teachers will be under the chairmanship of Louis Krasner of Syracuse University. In discussions and demonstration groups, Mr. Krasner and members of the Music Center's faculty will lead the seminar in consideration of all aspects of music teaching, whether in schools or private studios. Portions of the seminar will be devoted to wind, brass, and string teaching and contemporary music.

Peter Gram Swing, chairman of the department of music at Swarthmore College, will head a seminar in listening and analysis directed to the understanding of music and the relevance of analysis to this understanding. It is designed for music teachers, amateurs, and music-lovers who have attained proficiency in an instrument or voice sufficient to participate in chamber music and choral singing, and for those interested in teaching music appreciation.

There will also be seminars in orchestral and choral conducting.

Those interested may register for any two-week period within the Music Center's session, which ends August 21. Members enrolled at the Berkshire Music Center have the privilege of attending all Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts and rehearsals of the Berkshire Festival, and also of singing in several concerts with the orchestra as a member of the festival chorus.

Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the center. The faculty this summer will include Sir Adrian Bould, Gunther Schuller, Igor Kipnis, Joseph Silverstein, members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Richard Woitach, Paul Calloway, Iva Dee Hiatt, and Alfred Nash Patterson.

Further information on the seminars and the summer at Tanglewood may be obtained from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass. 02115

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
MAY 17 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 5,168
MAY 21 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
MAY 14 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
MAY 16 1966

THE NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
Memphis Press-Scimitar
D. 137,900 SUN. 222,693
MAY 22 1966

Chattanooga Daily Times
CHATTANOOGA, TENN.
D. 52,372 SUN. 60,562
MAY 20 1966

MORNING ADVOCATE
BATON ROUGE, LA.
D. 54,576 SUN. 73,701
JUN 25 1966

Boston Orchestra Fellowship Goes To BR Musician

Edwin Ernest Riley of Baton Rouge, a June graduate of Juillard School of Music in New York City has received a fellowship to the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's academy, where he will spend the remainder of the summer.

He received an M.S. degree from Juillard, specializing in the clarinet.

Riley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin E. Riley, 3715 Prescott Road, received the fellowship through a series of auditions.

He has preformed with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, and has made a number of professional appearances.

He is a graduate of Istrouma High School and attended George Peabody College in Nashville.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Record-American (m) (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 531,565
JUN 1 1966

ELLIOT NORTON WRITES:

B.U. Prepares Workshop To Build Playwrights

IN A GOOD CAUSE, to help lift the level of playwriting in America, Boston University has joined forces with some of the theater's better and busier professionals. For four weeks this summer, the college and the Berkshire Festival Theater will jointly conduct a seminar in which young writers of competence will be given a chance to work with directors and actors of repute.

Four or five playwrights—at the most six—are being selected for the B. U. "workshop," which will have its headquarters in the playhouse of the Windsor Mountain School near the Tanglewood Music Center of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The BSO and its music director, Erich Leinsdorf, are interested in the project, which will add to the cultural resources of the Berkshire region.

Elliot Norton

Boston University has engaged Harold Clurman to operate the workshop. As a Broadway director of long-established reputation, as a founder of the Group Theater, as critic and author and lecturer, he has had a hand in forming the careers of such playwrights as Clifford Odets and others. At present, he is conducting a seminar for dramatic writers in Israel.

Five Plays to Be Presented There

With Professors Mouzon Law and John R. Watts of Boston University, Mr. Clurman will pick the writers who are to be involved and supervise their guidance.

The new Berkshire Festival Theater, which has been organized by a playwright, William Gibson, will supply actors and actresses by contract to the project. From the pool of professional players, who are already rehearsing at Stockbridge for a season of five plays, they will provide competent performers to work with the embryo dramatists.

The chosen dramatists will bring to the workshop new plays on which they have been working, which are almost, but not quite, ready for the professional theater. These they will submit to Clurman and his assistants and to other professional consultants for discussion, first, then for production.

When Clurman decides that a play is ready to be tested on the stage, he will assign the script to actors from the Berkshire Festival, who will rehearse it, then perform a scene, or scenes, under a competent director in the private playhouse of the Windsor Mountain School, under the scrutiny of all those involved in the workshop.

Analysis, Criticism and Dissection

With the author present, it will be analyzed, criticized and, if necessary, dissected. The playwright will be allowed, first of all, the opportunity to see what it looks and sounds like on a stage, then to hear what others think of it.

This kind of presentation of new drama is not new; it has been done in many colleges since the days when the late Prof. George Pierce Baker taught playwriting at Harvard to men such as Eugene O'Neill.

What is unique and extraordinary—and promising—about the B. U. project is that while it will be conducted under academic discipline, the acting will be professional and so will the criticism offered to the writers.

It would be silly to overestimate the possibilities of this new enterprise. Nobody believes it will produce overnight four new American playwrights or even one significant drama for Broadway, but it could help to establish a pattern, a new working format in which potential dramatists would be helped to discover their strengths and weaknesses and so to move across the barriers into effective professional work.

Writers Must Be Found and Encouraged

That we badly need new playwrights in America is obvious. The reason there was no Pulitzer Prize in drama for '65-'66 is simple; there was no new American drama of distinction produced during the year. That there are writers of promise waiting for a chance stands to reason, but they have to be found and they have to be encouraged to develop their abilities.

Playwrights of the past have learned by trial and error, but the day when producers will take chances on imperfect scripts ended—except, of course, when the plays are light comedies with no more than three characters.

There is nothing necessarily wrong with comedy populated by only three characters, but dramas of other kinds are in short supply. The B. U. project may point the way to getting them for the stage.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUN 19 1966

Berkshire Music Center Will Open Next Sunday

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox — The Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will begin its 26th session here next Sunday afternoon with opening exercises at 3 in the theater. During the week some 250 musicians will register for the eight-week program held in conjunction with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival.

Enrollment at 400

Two innovations at the Music Center this summer will bring the total enrollment to more than 400 as students affiliated with Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will take part in summer programs at Tanglewood. These include music courses for college credit at the Berkshire Music Center and a Boston University theater program carried on in association with the Berkshire Theater Festival.

Erich Leinsdorf will deliver the principal address at Sunday's exercises which include the traditional singing of Randall Thompson's Alleluia. This work written especially for the opening of the Music Center in 1940 and subsequently sung each year, will be conducted by Paul Calloway, organist and choirmaster of the Washington Cathedral and a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty for the last two summers. Also joining in the opening exercises will be Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager.

Longtime faculty members Joseph Silverstein and Gunther Schuller will occupy new positions this summer. Silverstein is the new chairman of the faculty and Gunther Schuller is the head of contemporary music activities. Louis Speyer continues as assistant director of the Music Center with Victor Babin returning as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute.

Fellowship Program

Of the Music Center's total enrollment, 100 will be members of the fellowship program. Each of the participants in this program receives a fellowship stipend, and the program is designed to emphasize chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers and composers.

The Tanglewood Institute consists of seven seminars, each with an informational focus for its members. It provides a program for the musical layman, teacher, student or nonperforming musician in an environment in which he may broaden his musical horizon.

Throughout the summer the participants in the Music Center will take part in more than 30 concerts and programs which are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Center's activities.

Sunday's exercises are open to the public and tea will be served in the Tanglewood garden immediately following the ceremonies.

INTERNATIONAL MUSICIAN.
NEWARK, N. J.
MONTHLY 245.100
JUN 1966

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center will begin its second quarter century with opening exercises at Tanglewood (Lenox, Massachusetts) June 26. Erich Leinsdorf, who will again be the director of the center, has announced that it will be joined by two other Boston institutions—the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory, each offering college-level course work at Tanglewood. The seminars are conducted by outstanding musicians in their fields: choral conducting and repertoire, Paul Calloway; piano, Victor Babin; music teacher, Louis Krasner; voice teaching and performance, Phyllis Curtin; listening and analysis, Peter Gram Swing; conducting, Richard Woitach, coordinators with Erich Leinsdorf, Sir Adrian Boult and Gunther Schuller; and orchestra playing and chamber music, Louis Speyer. Joseph Silverstein is chairman of the faculty and Gunther Schuller is head of the contemporary music activities. For further information write to the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, Massachusetts 02115.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
MAY 16 1966

Tanglewood Offers Courses For Teachers

LENOX — The Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is offering two courses this summer which should be of interest to music teachers.

An eight-week seminar specially designed for music teachers will be under the chairmanship of Louis Krasner of Syracuse University. In discussions and demonstration groups, Mr. Krasner and members of the Music Center's faculty will lead the seminar in consideration of all aspects of music teaching, whether in schools or private studios. Portions of the seminar will be devoted to wind, brass, and string teaching and contemporary music.

Peter Gram Swing, chairman of the department of music at Swarthmore College, will head a seminar in listening and analysis directed to the understanding of music and the relevance of analysis to this understanding. It is designed for music teachers, amateurs, and music-lovers who have attained proficiency in an instrument or voice sufficient to participate in chamber music and choral singing, and for those interested in teaching music appreciation.

There will also be seminars in orchestral and choral conducting.

Those interested may register for any two-week period within the Music Center's session, which ends August 21. Members enrolled at the Berkshire Music Center have the privilege of attending all Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts and rehearsals of the Berkshire Festival, and also of singing in several concerts with the orchestra as a member of the festival chorus.

Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the center. The faculty this summer will include Sir Adrian Bould, Gunther Schuller, Igor Kipnis, Joseph Silverstein, members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Richard Woitach, Paul Calloway, Iva Dee Hiatt, and Alfred Nash Patterson.

Further information on the seminars and the summer at Tanglewood may be obtained from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass. 02115

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
MAY 17 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 5,168
MAY 21 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
MAY 14 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
MAY 16 1966

THE NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN
Memphis Press-Scimitar
D. 137,900 SUN. 222,693
MAY 22 1966

Chattanooga Times
CHATTANOOGA
D.
MAY 20 1966

MORNING ADVOCATE
BATON ROUGE
D. 54,[illegible]
JUN 25 1966

Boston Orchestra Fellowship Goes To BR Musician

Edwin Ernest Riley of Baton Rouge, a June graduate of Juillard School of Music in New York City has received a fellowship to the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's academy, where he will spend the remainder of the summer.

He received an M.S. degree from Juillard, specializing in the clarinet.

Riley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin E. Riley, 3715 Prescott Road, received the fellowship through a series of auditions.

He has preformed with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, and has made a number of professional appearances.

He is a graduate of Istrouma High School and attended George Peabody College in Nashville.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Record-American (m) (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 531,565
JUN 1 1966

ELLIOT NORTON WRITES:

B.U. Prepares Workshop To Build Playwrights

IN A GOOD CAUSE, to help lift the level of playwriting in America, Boston University has joined forces with some of the theater's better and busier professionals. For four weeks this summer, the college and the Berkshire Festival Theater will jointly conduct a seminar in which young writers of competence will be given a chance to work with directors and actors of repute.

Four or five playwrights—at the most six—are being selected for the B. U. "workshop," which will have its headquarters in the playhouse of the Windsor Mountain School near the Tanglewood Music Center of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The BSO and its music director, Erich Leinsdorf, are interested in the project, which will add to the cultural resources of the Berkshire region.

Elliot Norton

Boston University has engaged Harold Clurman to operate the workshop. As a Broadway director of long-established reputation, as a founder of the Group Theater, as critic and author and lecturer, he has had a hand in forming the careers of such playwrights as Clifford Odets and others. At present, he is conducting a seminar for dramatic writers in Israel.

Five Plays to Be Presented There

With Professors Mouzon Law and John R. Watts of Boston University, Mr. Clurman will pick the writers who are to be involved and supervise their guidance.

The new Berkshire Festival Theater, which has been organized by a playwright, William Gibson, will supply actors and actresses by contract to the project. From the pool of professional players, who are already rehearsing at Stockbridge for a season of five plays, they will provide competent performers to work with the embryo dramatists.

The chosen dramatists will bring to the workshop new plays on which they have been working, which are almost, but not quite, ready for the professional theater. These they will submit to Clurman and his assistants and to other professional consultants for discussion, first, then for production.

When Clurman decides that a play is ready to be tested on the stage, he will assign the script to actors from the Berkshire Festival, who will rehearse it, then perform a scene, or scenes, under a competent director in the private playhouse of the Windsor Mountain School, under the scrutiny of all those involved in the workshop.

Analysis, Criticism and Dissection

With the author present, it will be analyzed, criticized and, if necessary, dissected. The playwright will be allowed, first of all, the opportunity to see what it looks and sounds like on a stage, then to hear what others think of it.

This kind of presentation of new drama is not new; it has been done in many colleges since the days when the late Prof. George Pierce Baker taught playwriting at Harvard to men such as Eugene O'Neill.

What is unique and extraordinary—and promising—about the B. U. project is that while it will be conducted under academic discipline, the acting will be professional and so will the criticism offered to the writers.

It would be silly to overestimate the possibilities of this new enterprise. Nobody believes it will produce overnight four new American playwrights or even one significant drama for Broadway, but it could help to establish a pattern, a new working format in which potential dramatists would be helped to discover their strengths and weaknesses and so to move across the barriers into effective professional work.

Writers Must Be Found and Encouraged

That we badly need new playwrights in America is obvious. The reason there was no Pulitzer Prize in drama for '65-'66 is simple; there was no new American drama of distinction produced during the year. That there are writers of promise waiting for a chance stands to reason, but they have to be found and they have to be encouraged to develop their abilities.

Playwrights of the past have learned by trial and error, but the day when producers will take chances on imperfect scripts ended—except, of course, when the plays are light comedies with no more than three characters.

There is nothing necessarily wrong with comedies populated by only three characters, but dramas of other kinds are in short supply. The B. U. project may point the way to getting them for the stage.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUN 19 1966

Berkshire Music Center Will Open Next Sunday

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox — The Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will begin its 26th session here next Sunday afternoon with opening exercises at 3 in the theater. During the week some 250 musicians will register for the eight-week program held in conjunction with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival.

Enrollment at 400

Two innovations at the Music Center this summer will bring the total enrollment to more than 400 as students affiliated with Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will take part in summer programs at Tanglewood. These include music courses for college credit at the Berkshire Music Center and a Boston University theater program carried on in association with the Berkshire Theater Festival.

Erich Leinsdorf will deliver the principal address at Sunday's exercises which include the traditional singing of Randall Thompson's Alleluia. This work written especially for the opening of the Music Center in 1940 and subsequently sung each year, will be conducted by Paul Calloway, organist and choirmaster of the Washington Cathedral and a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty for the last two summers. Also joining in the opening exercises will be Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager.

Longtime faculty members Joseph Silverstein and Gunther Schuller will occupy new positions this summer. Silverstein is the new chairman of the faculty and Gunther Schuller is the head of contemporary music activities. Louis Speyer continues as assistant director of the Music Center with Victor Babin returning as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute.

Fellowship Program

Of the Music Center's total enrollment, 100 will be members of the fellowship program. Each of the participants in this program receives a fellowship stipend, and the program is designed to emphasize chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers and composers.

The Tanglewood Institute consists of seven seminars, each with an informational focus for its members. It provides a program for the musical layman, teacher, student or nonperforming musician in an environment in which he may broaden his musical horizon.

Throughout the summer the participants in the Music Center will take part in more than 30 concerts and programs which are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Center's activities.

Sunday's exercises are open to the public and tea will be served in the Tanglewood garden immediately following the ceremonies.

INTERNATIONAL MUSICIAN.
NEWARK, N. J.
MONTHLY 245.100
JUN 1966

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center will begin its second quarter century with opening exercises at Tanglewood (Lenox, Massachusetts) June 26. Erich Leinsdorf, who will again be the director of the center, has announced that it will be joined by two other Boston institutions—the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory, each offering college-level course work at Tanglewood. The seminars are conducted by outstanding musicians in their fields: choral conducting and repertoire, Paul Calloway; piano, Victor Babin; music teacher, Louis Krasner; voice teaching and performance, Phyllis Curtin; listening and analysis, Peter Gram Swing; conducting, Richard Woitach, coordinators with Erich Leinsdorf, Sir Adrian Boult and Gunther Schuller; and orchestra playing and chamber music, Louis Speyer. Joseph Silverstein is chairman of the faculty and Gunther Schuller is head of the contemporary music activities. For further information write to the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, Massachusetts 02115.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607
JUN 26 1966

Music Centers Offer Classes, Concerts for the Young

Wide Variety of Music, Dance Programs in Area

By JOAN SIMMONS

With the increase in performing arts centers for both the summer and winter seasons there is a parallel rise in the need for first class performers and for more appreciative audiences to support the new institutions.

The obvious place to turn is to the young performers and audience, and most of the area summer music and dance centers are catering to the student either through courses for young professional or future professional performers or by scheduling and presenting special programs for the student audience at special prices.

Expert Guidance

Tanglewood for many seasons has included the Berkshire Music Festival in its regular summer programing with Joseph Silverstein as chairman of the faculty and Erich Leinsdorf director of the center.

Since 1940 young musicians have been able to continue their professional training and add to their artistic experience with the guidance of some of the country's most outstanding musicians, including members of the Boston Symphony and guest conductors and artists who participate in the course work at Tanglewood as much as possible while they are there.

This year the members of the Berkshire Music Center will present six weeks of programs for the public alternating chamber with orchestral music. The first performance will be in the theatre with Sir Adrian Boult conducting on Thursday, July 7. Following weeks will have performances on Wednesday and Thursday evenings and Sunday mornings. A seventh week of concerts will be devoted to contemporary American music. All pertinent information is included on the Boston Symphony Orchestra schedule.

Jacob's Pillow

Jacob's Pillow, although well - known as a dance festival, is basically an educational institution and the theater is a part of the "laboratory" equipment in this self - styled "university of the dance."

Regular classes are held through the summer season granting college credit through an affiliation with Springfield College and performances are presented in the Ted Shawn Theatre.

Education at Jacob's Pillow is extended not only to the dancer but to the audience with a dance appreciation course offered on Sunday evenings. Opening today with a pictorial history of Jacob's Pillow the lectures will continue through August 21. Scheduled programs include Dame Alicia Markova, ballet director of the Metropolitan Opera discussing the functions, problems and goals of her position and Walter Terry of the New York Herald Tribune with Christine Hennessy and James Clouser, discussing the Art of the Ballerina. Ethnic dances will be represented by discussion of Hindu and Spanish traditions.

The Marlboro Music Festival in Marlboro, Vt., presents concerts for the public only incidently. Aimed at professional musicians who learn from each other, this summer festival, under the artistic direction of Rudolf Serkin, treats its weekend concerts rather lightly. Of more interest to both musicians and performers are the rehearsals and special week day concerts. Tickets for these are much harder to obtain, particularly during the two weeks when Pablo Casals will be in residence.

While Tanglewood is aimed at the general listening public and its school at the young performer, Marlboro is geared for the seasoned musician and the serious music student.

Newport Festival

As close as Newport, Rhode Island, opera - lovers can get special guidance in several aspects of staging and

See MUSIC CENTERS, Page G-3

IN WOODSTOCK EXHIBIT—Original prints of the first sketches of Rip Van Winkle to gain author Washington Irving's approval will be among items exhibited next Friday through Sunday at the Colony Arts Center show in Woodstock.

Music Centers Offer Youth Opportunities

Continued from Page G-1

producing an opera through afternoon workshops conducted by the Metropolitan Opera during its five day stay at the festival beginning July 12. This is the Met's first appearance at the Festival Center in Newport. The Jazz and Folk Festivals will continue as usual.

In addition to four full length operas and on program of opera highlights, all performed by soloists, chorus and orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera Company, short programs will be staged featuring the Metropolitan Opera Studio at the end of each afternoon workshop.

School Planned

Although the Saratoga Performing Arts Center plans to have its own school in the near future, affiliated with State University of New York, there will not be one during this first season. Soloists from the New York City Ballet will serve as guest instructors at the Saratoga Spa Ballet Center on the Skidmore campus.

The Saratoga Performing Arts Center and the Lake George Opera Festival are presenting special programs for students only at reduced rates. The ballet will have three matinees at Saratoga for teachers and students on Wednesday during July. During August, Wednesday matinees will be presented by the Philadelphia Orchestra. All of these programs are yet to be announced.

An additional feature of the program will be two workshops for teachers, supervisors, and school administrators. The dance workshop on July 28 starting at 9 a.m. will be hosted by Commissioner Allen, and will include addresses and dances by members of the ballet troupe.

The Aug. 18 workshop will be led by Dr. Walter Crewson, associate education commissioner. Eugene Ormandy, director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, Seiji Ozawa, guest conductor, and other musicians and managers will take part.

The Lake George Opera Festival will present four of its five productions in a special Young Audience Series on Monday, July 25 through August 22.

Tanglewood Jacob's Pillow and the Saratoga Spa Ballet Center are still accepting applications from interested students. Further information may be obtained by writing the respective centers.

Tickets are now on sale for all of the programs listed here.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 517,080
JUN 5 1966

'Playwright's Laboratory' Scheduled for Berkshires

A pioneering venture in a "playwright's laboratory" will take place this Summer in the Berkshires.

It is a symposium for promising playwrights offered by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts in cooperation with the Berkshire Music Center and the recently organized Berkshire Theater Festival.

The gathering of four or five writers, along with a student seminar for 20 persons, will extend July 5 through Aug. 1 at the Windsor Mountain School near Tanglewood and Stockbridge.

Harold Clurman, director and critic, will direct the symposium. Associated with him will be William Gibson, author of "The Miracle Worker" and president of the Berkshire Theater Festival; Alvin Epstein, actor and assistant artistic director of the festival; Gene Frankel, director; Elliot Norton, theater critic of the Boston Record-American, and George Tabori, author, playwright and artistic director, with his actress wife, Viveca Lindfors, of the Berkshire Theater Festival.

Erich Leinsdorf, director of the Berkshire Music Festival and conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, praised the new cooperative venture.

"It seems fitting indeed that the Berkshires which have inspired such literary luminaries in the past and which we hope will again exert an influence on literary creativity should be the place where we initiate this program of cooperation among the arts."

Leinsdorf recently announced another cooperative project with Boston University whereby the university will offer college credit courses in music this Summer at the Berkshire Music Center.

The theater seminar is open to all students of the theater who have had at least two years of college study, theatrical training or similarly pertinent experience. John Ransford Watts, assistant professor of theater arts, will direct the seminar.

Symposium and seminar participants will be admitted to rehearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other musical events at the Music Center.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607
2 6 1966

IN WOODSTOCK EXHIBIT—Original prints of the first sketches of Rip Van Winkle to gain author Washington Irving's approval will be among items exhibited next Friday through Sunday at the Colony Arts Center show in Woodstock.

Music Centers Offer Youth Opportunities

Continued from Page G-1

producing an opera through afternoon workshops conducted by the Metropolitan Opera during its five day stay at the festival beginning July 12. This is the Met's first appearance at the Festival Center in Newport. The Jazz and Folk Festivals will continue as usual.

In addition to four full length operas and on program of opera highlights, all performed by soloists, chorus and orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera Company, short programs will be staged featuring the Metropolitan Opera Studio at the end of each afternoon workshop.

School Planned

Although the Saratoga Performing Arts Center plans to have its own school in the near future, affiliated with State University of New York, there will not be one during this first season. Soloists from the New York City Ballet will serve as guest instructors at the Saratoga Spa Ballet Center on the Skidmore campus.

The Saratoga Performing Arts Center and the Lake George Opera Festival are presenting special programs for students only at reduced rates. The ballet will have three matinees at Saratoga for teachers and students on Wednesday during July. During August, Wednesday matinees will be presented by the Philadelphia Orchestra. All of these programs are yet to be announced.

An additional feature of the program will be two workshops for teachers, supervisors, and school administrators. The dance workshop on July 28 starting at 9 a.m. will be hosted by Commissioner Allen, and will include addresses and dances by members of the ballet troupe.

The Aug. 18 workshop will be led by Dr. Walter Crewson, associate education commissioner. Eugene Ormandy, director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, Seiji Ozawa, guest conductor, and other musicians and managers will take part.

The Lake George Opera Festival will present four of its five productions in a special Young Audience Series on Monday, July 25 through August 22.

Tanglewood Jacob's Pillow and the Saratoga Spa Ballet Center are still accepting applications from interested students. Further information may be obtained by writing the respective centers.

Tickets are now on sale for all of the programs listed here.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 517,080
JUN 5 1966

'Playwright's Laboratory' Scheduled for Berkshires

A pioneering venture in a "playwright's laboratory" will take place this Summer in the Berkshires.

It is a symposium for promising playwrights offered by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts in cooperation with the Berkshire Music Center and the recently organized Berkshire Theater Festival.

The gathering of four or five writers, along with a student seminar for 20 persons, will extend July 5 through Aug. 1 at the Windsor Mountain School near Tanglewood and Stockbridge.

Harold Clurman, director and critic, will direct the symposium. Associated with him will be William Gibson, author of "The Miracle Worker" and president of the Berkshire Theater Festival; Alvin Epstein, actor and assistant artistic director of the festival; Gene Frankel, director; Elliot Norton, theater critic of the Boston Record-American, and George Tabori, author, playwright and artistic director, with his actress wife, Viveca Lindfors, of the Berkshire Theater Festival.

Erich Leinsdorf, director of the Berkshire Music Festival and conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, praised the new cooperative venture.

"It seems fitting indeed that the Berkshires which have inspired such literary luminaries in the past and which we hope will again exert an influence on literary creativity should be the place where we initiate this program of cooperation among the arts."

Leinsdorf recently announced another cooperative project with Boston University whereby the university will offer college credit courses in music this Summer at the Berkshire Music Center.

The theater seminar is open to all students of the theater who have had at least two years of college study, theatrical training or similarly pertinent experience. John Ransford Watts, assistant professor of theater arts, will direct the seminar.

Symposium and seminar participants will be admitted to rehearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other musical events at the Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,910

JUN 12 1966

Music

Special Courses at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

The Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood is providing special opportunity this summer for music teachers whose standards and experience are confined to their studios, in schools or private.

Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer educational center for the advanced study of music is offering two special courses.

An eight week seminar, specially designed for music teachers, will be under the chairmanship of Louis Krasner of Syracuse University. It will include discussion, demonstrations, with special emphasis on wind, brass, string teaching, and contemporary music.

Those enrolled in this department will not be expected to perform.

Peter Gram Swing, chairman of the music department at Swarthmore College, will head another seminar in Listening and Analysis.

This is designed for music teachers, amateurs, and music-lovers who have attained proficiency in an instrument or voice. It must be sufficient to participate in chamber music and choral singing. It is also available for those who teach music appreciation.

The Listening and Analysis course is operated in sessions of two weeks each, from June 26 to Aug. 21.

Further information may be obtained from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass. 02115.

News Briefs

The 10th annual Merriweather Post contest for violinists and cellists, held recently at Washington, D.C., was won by a 19-year-old Japanese violinist, Mari Tsumura, a student at Curtis Institute, Philadelphia. The prize was $1,500.

Second place, winning $750, was taken by Valter Despalj, 18-year-old cellist from Zagreb, Yugoslavia. Annie Kavafian, violinist, age 18, from Royal Oak, Michigan, won third place and $350.

The Saratoga Performing Arts Center is the recipient of an additional $300,000 from members of the Rockefeller family. This pledge is made on a one-to-one matching basis. The Rockefellers had already contributed $1 million to the $4 million cultural project.

Michael Steinberg, in his second year as music critic for the Boston Globe, will receive an honorary doctor of music degree from the New England Conservatory of Music. He will also be guest speaker, today, at the Conservatory's 96th commencement exercise.

Steinberg is a Princeton graduate, and a former recipient of a Fulbright Fellowship. Also receiving honorary doctorates today from the Conservatory are Mildred Miller, mezzo soprano with the Metropolitan Opera; Roger Sessions, American composer; and Shinichi Suzuki, developer of a widely-claimed violin - teaching method that bears his name.

Self-Made Music

According to the American Music Conference in Chicago, businessmen are taking up musical instruments in increasing numbers.

Among names chosen for groups whose members play for the sheer enjoyment of it are the "Rare Bach and Let 'em Have It Boys" (Tulsa), "The Oldest Established Floating Dixieland Jazz Band East of the Mississippi" (New York ad men), and the "Convertible Notes" (Minneapolis stockbrokers).

New York's finest are doing these one better.

Look in on a classroom at the College of Police Science, East 20th Street, New York City, and you would think that there's more interest in Verdi than vice.

Music 101 meets Monday mornings and evenings, and is obligatory for all policemen and policewomen enrolled in the college.

Says Leonard Riesman, president of the college, "We're trying to develop rounded human beings, not fingerprint technicians."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600

JUN 9 1966

Berkshire Center Opens 26th Season Next Sunday

The Boston Symphony's Berkshire ~~Music Center~~ will begin its 26th season next Sunday afternoon at 3 with the traditional Opening Exercises in the Theater at Tanglewood. Erich Leinsdorf, Boston Symphony conductor and center music director, will be the principal speaker.

During the week some 250 musicians will register for the eight-week session held in conjunction with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival. Two new innovations at the music center this Summer will bring the total enrollmen to more than 400 as students affiliated with Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will take part in Summer programs at Tanglewood. These include music courses for college credit at the Berkshire Music Center and a Boston University theater program carried on in association with the Berkshire Theater Festival.

Next Sunday's exercises will include the singing of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia." This work, written especially for the opening of the Music Center in 1940 and subsequently sung each year, will be conducted by Paul Calloway, organist and choirmaster of the Washington Cathedral and a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty for the last two Summers. Also joining in the Opening Exercises will be Henry B. Cabot, president of the orchestra, and Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager.

Long-time faculty members Joseph Silverstein and Gunther Schuller will occupy new positions this Summer. Silverstein is the new chairman of the faculty and Schuller is the head of contemporary music activities. Louis Speyer continues as assistant director of the music center, with Victor Babin returning as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute.

Of the music center's total enrollment, 100 will be members of the Fellowship Program. Each of the participants in this program receives a fellowship stipend, and the program is designed to emphasize chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers and composers. The Tanglewood Institute consisting of seven seminars, each with an informational focus for its members, provides a program for the musical layman, teacher, student, and non-performing musician in an environment in which he may broaden his musical horizons.

Throughout the Summer the participants in the music center will take part in more than 30 concerts and programs which are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the center's activities.

Sunday's exercises are open to the public. Tea will be served in the Tanglewood garden following the ceremonies.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177

JUN 18 1966

BMC Opening Exercises Scheduled for June 26

LENOX — The Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's ~~summer center~~ for the advanced study of music, will begin its 26th session at Tanglewood Sunday, June 26, at 3 p.m. in the theatre.

Erich Leinsdorf will deliver the principal address at the opening exercises, which will include the traditional singing of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia." This work, written especially for the opening of the Music Center in 1940 and subsequently sung each year, will be conducted by Paul Calloway, organist and choirmaster of the Washington Cathedral and a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty for the past two summers. Also participating in the opening exercises will be Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager.

Over 400 Enrolled

During the week, about 250 musicians will register for the eight-week session held in conjunction with the BSO's Berkshire Festival. Two innovations at the Music Center this summer will bring the total enrollment to more than 400, as students affiliated with the Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will take part in summer programs at Tanglewood. These include music courses for college credit at the BMC and a Boston University theatre program carried on in association with the Berkshire Theatre Festival.

Throughout the summer the participants in the Music Center will take part in more than 30 concerts and programs which are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Faculty Appointments

Long-time faculty members Joseph Silverstein and Gunther Schuller will occupy new positions this summer, Mr. Silverstein as chairman of the faculty and Mr. Schuller as head of the contemporary music activites. Louis Speyer continues as assistant director of the Music Center, with Victor Babin returning as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute.

The opening exercises are open to the public; tea will be served in the Tanglewood gardens immediately following the ceremonies.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 286,021

JUN 19 1966

Center Opens Next Sunday

LENOX—Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's ~~summer center~~ for advanced music study, will begin its 26th session at Tanglewood here next Sunday afternoon, with opening exercises at 3 in the theater.

Some 250 musicians will register this week for the eight-week session held in conjunction with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival.

Two innovations will bring the total enrollment to 400, as students affiliated with Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts and the New England Conservatory will take part in programs. These include music courses for college credit at the Berkshire Music Center and a Boston University theater program carried on in association with the Berkshire Theater Festival.

Erich Leinsdorf will deliver the principal address at next Sunday's exercises, which will include the traditional singing of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia." This work written especially for the opening of the music center in 1940 and sung each year since, will be conducted by Paul Calloway, organist and choirmaster of the Washington Cathedral and a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty.

Also joining in the opening exercises will be Henry B. Cabot, president of the symphony, and Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager.

Long-time faculty members Joseph Silverstein and Gunther Schuller will occupy new positions this summer. Silverstein is the new chairman of the faculty and Gunther Schuller is the head of contemporary music activities. Louis Speyer continues as assistant music center director, with Victor Babin returning as chairman of the Tanglewood Institute.

Of the center's total enrollment, 100 will be members of the fellowship program. Each of the participants in this program receive a fellowship stipend, and the program is designed to emphasize chamber music for advanced instrumentalists, singers, and composers.

Next Sunday's exercises are open to the public. Tea will be served in the Tanglewood Garden immediately after the ceremonies.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600
JUL 17 1966

'Broadway in the Berkshires

Sitting in at Playright Seminar

By MARGO MILLER

LENOX—Two young playwrights and seven students were sitting around one sunny morning last week discussing the morality of characters in Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie," the language which French theologian Teilhard de Chardin had to invent to explain his theories, the break of mood toward the end of Ravel's "Bolero," the need for writers to break away from safe center, and the notion that the playwright should be a fascist, imposing his ideas on the audience.

It was all pretty literary, not that there is anything wrong in being well-read or able to quote. But the session pointed up something about budding playwrights which this month's Boston University programs in writing for the theater hope to correct.

Playwrights, who have not had their work produced, tend to write for the typewriter, not the stage. B.U.'s "Symposium for Playwrights" has accepted four or five writers and is pushing them and their scripts into intimate contact with an acting company which will play scenes, Broadway directors who will stage them, and critics who will have their say.

On this particular morning, when I sat in on a seminar, a one act play was being defended by its author. B.U.'s John Watts, administrator of the project, was acting as devil's advocate for the audience. The young playwright was maintaining that no author should have to "baby-sit" for the public; audiences, he thought, were under obligation to listen and to work at a play. He was insisting that repetition of a single phrase in his play's climax made all meaning clear.

Up jumped Watts. It was one thing to read a play, another to hear it, he said. Suppose at the crucial moment, the actor muffed this one line. A reader could leaf back, the audience could not. The audience, Watts thought, had every right to "turn the play off," and, further, to disbelieve everything that had gone before.

But Watts was also playing fair. He reminded the seminar that any competant director of this play would of course be building toward the climax. And any competent actor would know how to play it. What Watts was pleading for was room for director and actor to work in.

MILLER
Continued On Page A-18

Playwrights, [illegible] attending the seminars, bed down at the Windsor Mountain School in Lenox, which is one of the music center dormitories. The school's new 300-seat theater is available daily, first for play readings, then for staging of scenes. Participating directors are Gene Frankel, Arthur Penn and George Tabori. Critics Harold Clurman and Elliot Norton give seminars. Watts lectures on theater history.

This bit of "Broadway in the Berkshires" lacked no takers. Recalling the mail trucks of scripts which rolled up to B.U., when the university screened plays for the Spoleto Festival, Watts set up an invitation system (agents, publishers, nominating plays), then a reading committee.

What was finally accepted is in the traditional vein but of pleasing variety — a farce, a play, an historical play, a character study.

Watts doesn't believe playwriting can be taught but that talent in writing can be directed and the possibilities of the theater shown. "A playwright sitting here," said Watts pointing to the bare stage, "reading his play to us one morning is not going to be the same playwright after he sees the director and actors work out his stuff."

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON, D. C.
D. 444,396 SUN. 553,012
JUL 7 1966

FUTURE OPERA: The great opera companies of Vienna, Milan, and Hamburg will perform at the Montreal EXPO 67, the World's Fair which opens next spring. La Scala's dates are Oct. 5 through 15. Vienna precedes it from Sept. 1 to 22, with Hamburg coming in during the summer.

At the Smithsonian Institution: if you care for lunch on the Mall Terrace on Thursday or Friday, a 1920 military band organ will play for you from noon to 2 p.m. On Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m., a duplex orchestral organ, made around 1920, will play.

From July 11 to 22 the Smithsonian will present a seminar on "Instruments and Performance Conventions in Early 18th Century Music, with George Hunter of the University of Illinois in charge. The seminar will include specialists on flute, oboe, violin, viola da gamba, harpsichord, and voice. The sessions will begin at 2 p.m., Monday, in the Museum's east conference room. Inquiries should go to the Music Division of the Museum.

On July 19, the Smithsonian will open a six-month exhibition on American music. The general subject of the exhibition is "Music Making, American Style." It will include examples of genteel and folk traditions, with instrumental and vocal demonstrations and, in August, four concerts of 18th and 19th century music.

American University has commissioned David Diamond to write a string quartet for the dedication of the David Lloyd Kreeger Music Building in October. The tentative date for the opening is the 29th.

At Tanglewood this summer, Paul Callaway, organist and choirmaster of Washington Cathedral and music director of the Opera Society, is heading the seminar in choral conducting and repertoire and teaching organ.

The Washington Civic Symphony Repertoire Reading Series meets again Tuesday for an evening on Handel's "Messiah," complete with original orchestration, chorus and soloists. If you are interested in singing, it's at Roosevelt Auditorium, 8 p.m., dress is informal for hot weather. Bring your own score.

Findlay Cockrell, pianist, plays this week's Georgetown University Young Artist Series program, an all-Chopin evening at 8:15 in the Hall of Nations.

The Stockholm Girls Choir, 20 young ladies between 18 and 21 from Sweden's capital, will sing a concert at 7 p.m., Sunday, July 10, in Augustana Lutheran Church. The public is invited.

P. HUME

MILLER

Continued From Page A-17

"All it would take would be four tiny speeches," Watts told me later. "He (the playwright) wouldn't be pandering. He would be letting his idea work out. I hope, when he sees the play in rehearsal, he will realize this."

B.U.'s project got under way rather suddenly last Winter. The Boston Symphony had decided to look into arts programs which would be congenial to its eight-week Berkshire Music Center season. B.U.'s music department came up with several ideas, one a course for high school juniors.

About the time the B.S.O. was proferring its umbrella, a group of New Yorkers and Berkshirites took over the Stockbridge Playhouse, a venture which, as it turned out, has provided B.U. with actors and directors.

Playwrights, and students attending the seminars, bed down at the Windsor Mountain School in Lenox, which is one of the music center dormitories. The school's new 300-seat theater is available daily, first for play readings, then for staging of scenes. Participating directors are Gene Frankel, Arthur Penn and George Tabori. Critics Harold Clurman and Elliot Norton give seminars. Watts lectures on theater history.

This bit of "Broadway in the Berkshires" lacked no takers. Recalling the mail trucks of scripts which rolled up to B.U., when the university screened plays for the Spoleto Festival, Watts set up an invitation system (agents, publishers, nominating plays), then a reading committee.

What was finally accepted is in the traditional vein of pleasing variety — a farce, an historical play, a character study.

Watts doesn't believe playwriting can be taught but that in writing can be directed and the possibilities of the theater shown. "A playwright sitting here," said Watts pointing to the bare stage, "reading his play to us one morning is not going to be the same playwright after he sees the director and actors work out his stuff."

MILLER

★ Continued From Page A-17

"All it would take would be four tiny speeches," Watts told me later. "He (the playwright) wouldn't be pandering. He would be letting his idea work out. I hope, when he sees the play in rehearsal, he will realize this."

B.U.'s project got under way rather suddenly last Winter. The Boston Symphony had decided to look into arts programs which would be congenial to its eight-week Berkshire Music Center season. B.U.'s music department came up with several ideas, one a course for high school juniors.

About the time the B.S.O. was proferring its umbrella, a group of New Yorkers and Berkshirites took over the Stockbridge Playhouse, a venture which, as it turned out, has provided B.U. with actors and directors.

Playwrights, and students attending the seminars, bed down at the Windsor Mountain School in Lenox, which is one of the music center dormitories. The school's new 300-seat theater is available daily, first for play readings, then for staging of scenes. Participating directors are Gene Frankel, Arthur Penn and George Tabori. Critics Harold Clurman and Elliot Norton give seminars. Watts lectures on theater history.

This bit of "Broadway in the Berkshires" lacked no takers. Recalling the mail trucks of scripts which rolled up to B.U., when the university screened plays for the Spoleto Festival, Watts set up an invitation system (agents, publishers, nominating plays), then a reading committee.

What was finally accepted is in the traditional vein of pleasing variety — a farce, an historical play, a character study.

Watts doesn't believe playwriting can be taught but that in writing can be directed and the possibilities of the theater shown. "A playwright sitting here," said Watts pointing to the bare stage, "reading his play to us one morning is not going to be the same playwright after he sees the director and actors work out his stuff."

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON, D. C.
D. 444,396 SUN. 553,012

JUL 7 1966

FUTURE OPERA: The great opera companies of Vienna, Milan, and Hamburg will perform at the Montreal EXPO 67, the World's Fair which opens next spring. La Scala's dates are Oct. 5 through 15. Vienna precedes it from Sept. 1 to 22, with Hamburg coming in during the summer.

At the Smithsonian Institution: if you care for lunch on the Mall Terrace on Thursday or Friday, a 1920 military band organ will play for you from noon to 2 p.m. On Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m., a duplex orchestral organ, made around 1920, will play.

From July 11 to 22 the Smithsonian will present a seminar on "Instruments and Performance Conventions in Early 18th Century Music, with George Hunter of the University of Illinois in charge. The seminar will include specialists on flute, oboe, violin, viola da gamba, harpsichord, and voice. The sessions will begin at 2 p.m., Monday, in the Museum's east conference room. Inquiries should go to the Music Division of the Museum.

On July 19, the Smithsonian will open a six-month exhibition on American music. The general subject of the exhibition is "Music Making, American Style." It will include examples of genteel and folk traditions, with instrumental and vocal demonstrations and, in August, four concerts of 18th and 19th century music.

American University has commissioned David Diamond to write a string quartet for the dedication of the David Lloyd Kreeger Music Building in October. The tentative date for the opening is the 29th.

At Tanglewood this summer, Paul Callaway, organist and choirmaster of Washington Cathedral and music director of the Opera Society, is heading the seminar in choral conducting and repertoire and teaching organ.

The Washington Civic Symphony Repertoire Reading Series meets again Tuesday for an evening on Handel's "Messiah," complete with original orchestration, chorus and soloists. If you are interested in singing, it's at Roosevelt Auditorium, 8 p.m., dress is informal for hot weather. Bring your own score.

Findlay Cockrell, pianist, plays this week's Georgetown University Young Artist Series program, an all-Chopin evening at 8:15 in the Hall of Nations.

The Stockholm Girls Choir, 20 young ladies between 18 and 21 from Sweden's capital, will sing a concert at 7 p.m., Sunday, July 10, in Augustana Lutheran Church. The public is invited.

P. HUME

FIRST WEEK - JULY 2, 3, AND 4

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
JUN 25 1966

Regional Roundup

Three Concerts Over Holiday At Tanglewood

Three concerts given in the music shed at Tanglewood in Lenox over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival.

In keeping with his chosen theme, the romantic concerti, for this summer's festival Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Schedule Change

Because of the holiday Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend will be given Saturday night, July 2, and Sunday and Monday afternoons, July 3 and 4. Thereafter concerts will be given each Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon through the final program Aug. 21.

The first Saturday's program at 8 will feature the debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Leinsdorf and the orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's overture to "Tannhauser" and also include Stravinsky's suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello Sunday, July 3, at 2.30. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

July 4 Program

Leinsdorf will begin the concert July 4 at 2.30 with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the frst half of the program. After intermission, pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark 30 years since the orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at Holmwood in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

The first open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra pension fund will be held on Saturday, July 3, at 10.30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the season. Ticket information on the festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the festival ticket office at Tanglewood.

This Sunday the music center, the orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will hold its opening exercises at 3. After the exercises in the theater, tea will be served in the formal gardens. Sunday's events are open to the public.

* * *

The Record
HACKENSACK, N. J.
D. 137,868
JUN 20 1966

Festival Starts July 4 Weekend

Tanglewood, Mass. — Three concerts in the Music Shed over the July 4 weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under music director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the 8-week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with the theme, the romantic concerti, for this summer's Festival, Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because of the national holiday, the concerts for the first weekend will be on July 2, and Sunday and Monday afternoons July 3 and 4. Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons through the final program on August 21.

THE MORNING CALL
PATERSON, N. J.
D. 20,932
JUN 21 1966

Tanglewood Season To Begin July 2

Tanglewood, Mass. — Three concerts in the Music Shed over the July 4 weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under music director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the 8-week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with the theme, the romantic concerti, for this summer's Festival, Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because of the national holiday, the concerts for the first weekend will be on July 2, and Sunday and Monday afternoons July 3 and 4. Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons through the final program on August 21.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266
JUN 25 1966

The Arts

Tanglewood Season Opens With Holiday Schedule

THREE concerts in the Tanglewood Music Shed at Lenox, Mass., over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under its music director, Erich Leinsdorf, will open the eight week Berkshire Festival, the 30th since the property was given to the orchestra. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because July 4 falls on Monday, the opening weekend concerts will be given on Saturday evening and Sunday and Monday afternoons. Thereafter, festival concerts will be given each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through Aug. 21.

* * *

Saturday's program at 8 p.m. will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra in Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser" and include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two Boston Symphony principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello July 3 at 2:30 p.m. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the 2:30 p.m. July 4 concert with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1. It will be followed by Roger Sessions' Psalm 140 with soprano Anne Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem "Till Eulenspiegel" and pianist Abbey Simon in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms will complete the program.

The first Saturday morning open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund will take place at 10:30 a.m. July 3. Ticket information on concerts and rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

Tomorrow at 3 p.m. the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer center for advanced study of music, will hold its traditional opening exercises in the Tanglewood Theater, open to the public.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUN 24 1966

. . . First Concerts July 2-4

Three concerts given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival.

In keeping with his chosen theme for this summer's festival — the Romantic Concerti — Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because of the national holiday on July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4).

Thereafter, festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program August 21.

The first open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held Sat. July 3 at 10.30 a.m. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season.

Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, 01240.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607
JUN 26 1966

In Music

Ted Shawn and John Lindquist will present the first in a series of dance appreciation lectures to be held at 8:30 Sunday evenings at Jacob Pillow Dance Festival. Tonight's subject is a "Pictorial History of Jacob's Pillow." . . . Saratoga Performing Center will hold open house again this afternoon from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. Jacob's Pillow will be featuring Edward Villella and Company with Patricia McBride Barton Mumaw and Nala Najah and Sasha in five performances this week. Matinee will be on Thursday Friday and Saturday at 3:00, evening performances at 8:40 will be given on Friday and Saturday . . . Pablo Casals will join the festival orchestra at the Marlboro Music Festival for two weeks beginning Monday. Information about rehearsals and special concerts may be obtained at the festival. Weekend concerts begin next Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Casals as guest conductor . . . Tanglewood opens with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday at 8:00 under Erich Leinsdorf, with Samuel Ashkenasi as guest violinist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUN 26 1966

Concertmaster at Work

Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will appear with Jules Eskin to play the Brahms Double Concerto for violin and cello under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf, music director on Sunday, July 3, at Tanglewood. Also on the program will be Mahler's Fourth Symphony. Mr. Silverstein will be soloist with the orchestra again on Saturday, July 23 in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto under the direction of Seiji Ozawa.

8 Week Festival to Open Tanglewood's 30th Season

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox — Three concerts given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival.

In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on July 2, and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4).

Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's (July 2, 8 p. m.) program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2.30 p. m.). Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4, 2.30) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem, Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark 30 years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

The first Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held on July 3 at 10.30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season. Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, 01240.

This afternoon the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music will hold its traditional Opening Exercises at 3. Following the Exercises in the Tanglewood Theatre, tea will be served in the Formal Gardens. Today's events at Tanglewood are open to the public.

FIRST WEEK - JULY 2, 3, AND 4

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
JUN 25 1966

Regional Roundup

Three Concerts Over Holiday At Tanglewood

Three concerts given in the music shed at Tanglewood in Lenox over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival.

In keeping with his chosen theme, the romantic concerti, for this summer's festival Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Schedule Change

Because of the holiday Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend will be given Saturday night, July 2, and Sunday and Monday afternoons, July 3 and 4. Thereafter concerts will be given each Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon through the final program Aug. 21.

The first Saturday's program at 8 will feature the debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Leinsdorf and the orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's overture to "Tannhauser" and also include Stravinsky's suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello Sunday, July 3, at 2.30. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

July 4 Program

Leinsdorf will begin the concert July 4 at 2.30 with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the frst half of the program. After intermission, pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark 30 years since the orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at Holmwood in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

The first open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra pension fund will be held on Saturday, July 3, at 10.30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the season. Ticket information on the festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the festival ticket office at Tanglewood.

This Sunday the music center, the orchestra's summer center for the advanced study of music, will hold its opening exercises at 3. After the exercises in the theater, tea will be served in the formal gardens. Sunday's events are open to the public.

* * *

The Record
HACKENSACK, N. J.
D. 137,868
JUN 20 1966

Festival Starts July 4 Weekend

Tanglewood, Mass. — Three concerts in the Music Shed over the July 4 weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under music director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the 8-week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with the theme, the romantic concerti, for this summer's Festival Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because of the national holiday, the concerts for the first weekend will be on July 2, and Sunday and Monday afternoons July 3 and 4. Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons through the final program on August 21.

THE MORNING CALL
PATERSON, N. J.
D. 20,932
JUN 21 1966

Tanglewood Season To Begin July 2

Tanglewood, Mass. — Three concerts in the Music Shed over the July 4 weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under music director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the 8-week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with the theme, the romantic concerti, for this summer's Festival, Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because of the national holiday, the concerts for the first weekend will be on July 2, and Sunday and Monday afternoons July 3 and 4. Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons through the final program on August 21.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266
JUN 25 1966

The Arts

Tanglewood Season Opens With Holiday Schedule

THREE concerts in the Tanglewood Music Shed at Lenox, Mass., over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under its music director, Erich Leinsdorf, will open the eight week Berkshire Festival, the 30th since the property was given to the orchestra. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because July 4 falls on Monday, the opening weekend concerts will be given on Saturday evening and Sunday and Monday afternoons. Thereafter, festival concerts will be given each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through Aug. 21.

* * *

Saturday's program at 8 p.m. will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra in Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser" and include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two Boston Symphony principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello July 3 at 2:30 p.m. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the 2:30 p.m. July 4 concert with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1. It will be followed by Roger Sessions' Psalm 140 with soprano Anne Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem "Till Eulenspiegel" and pianist Abbey Simon in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms will complete the program.

The first Saturday morning open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund will take place at 10:30 a.m. July 3. Ticket information on concerts and rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

Tomorrow at 3 p.m. the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer center for advanced study of music, will hold its traditional opening exercises in the Tanglewood Theater, open to the public.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUN 24 1966

. . . First Concerts July 2-4

Three concerts given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival.

In keeping with his chosen theme for this summer's festival — the Romantic Concerti — Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because of the national holiday on July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4).

Thereafter, festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program August 21.

The first open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held Sat. July 3 at 10.30 a.m. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season.

Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, 01240.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,637 SUN. 122,607
JUN 26 1966

In Music

Ted Shawn and John Lindquist will present the first in a series of dance appreciation lectures to be held at 8:30 Sunday evenings at Jacob Pillow Dance Festival. Tonight's subject, is a "Pictorial History of Jacob's Pillow." . . . Saratoga Performing Center will hold open house again this afternoon from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. Jacob's Pillow will be featuring Edward Villella and Company with Patricia McBride Barton Mumaw and Nala Najah and Sasha in five performances this week. Matinee will be on Thursday Friday and Saturday at 3:00, evening performances at 8:40 will be given on Friday and Saturday . . . Pablo Casals will join the festival orchestra at the Marlboro Music Festival for two weeks beginning Monday. Information about rehearsals and special concerts may be obtained at the festival. Weekend concerts begin next Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Casals as guest conductor . . . Tanglewood opens with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday at 8:00 under Erich Leinsdorf, with Samuel Ashkenasi as guest violinist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUN 26 1966

Concertmaster at Work

Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will appear with Jules Eskin to play the Brahms Double Concerto for violin and cello under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf, music director on Sunday, July 3, at Tanglewood. Also on the program will be Mahler's Fourth Symphony. Mr. Silverstein will be soloist with the orchestra again on Saturday, July 23 in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto under the direction of Seiji Ozawa.

8 Week Festival to Open Tanglewood's 30th Season

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox — Three concerts given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival.

In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on July 2, and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4).

Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's (July 2, 8 p. m.) program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2.30 p. m.). Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4, 2.30) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem, Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark 30 years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

The first Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held on July 3 at 10.30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season. Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, 01240.

This afternoon the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer center for the advanced study o music will hold its traditiona Opening Exercises at 3. Following the Exercises in the Tanglewood Theatre, tea will b served in the Formal Gardens Today's events at Tanglewoo are open to the public.

30

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, June 26, 1966

Holiday Weekend Concerts at Tanglewood

Three concerts will be given in the Tanglewood Music Shed over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony. NE

Music Director Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct concertos by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday at 8 p.m., and Sunday and Monday afternoons at 2:30 p.m. Thereafter, concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra, d but of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the balet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday after noon. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The first open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held on Saturday morning at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday through out the Tanglewood season. Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts 01240.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,910
JUN 26 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099
JUN 26 1966

Boston Symphony Opens Berkshire Season Saturday

LENOX — Three concerts in the Music Shed here by the Boston Symphony Orchestra (under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf) will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival during Fourth of July weekend.

In keeping with the theme, "The Romantic Concerti," for the festival, Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because of the July 4 holiday that Monday, the concerts for the first weekend of the festival will be given on Saturday evening and next Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, festival concerts by the orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through to the final program Aug. 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Leinsdorf and the orcrestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser" and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the BSO's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cellist, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert next Monday afternoon with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1, which will be followed by the American composer Roger Sessions' Psalm 140, with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem "Till Eulenspiegel" will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The first open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra Pension Fund will be held Saturday morning at 10:30. The open rehearsals will take place each Saturday through the season. Ticket information on the festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 02240.

SHMUEL ASHKENASI, young Israeli violinist, will play the Brahms Violin Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival's 29th season at Tanglewood on Saturday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct. The young violinist was a second-prize winner in the 1962 Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow.

Nancy Burnett's Page

Summer Programs at Tanglewood Are Announced

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL program will begin this weekend with the first concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox. The orchestra, under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf, will give performances at 8 p.m. on Saturday and 2:30 p.m. next Sunday and July 4. Hours for the remaining seven programs, to be held each weekend through August 21, will be Fridays, 8 p.m.; Saturdays, 8 p.m., and Sundays, 2:30 p.m.

Comprising the opening concert will be works by Wagner, Stravinsky, Brahms, Mahler, Prokofiev, Sessions, and Strauss. Featured the second week will be the works of Mozart, with the following week devoted exclusively to the music of Bach. Other highlights of the summer series will include the appearance of the winners of the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition as soloists at the August 13 and 14 programs, and the presentation of a number of pieces by Liszt at the final concert the weekend of August 19 through 21.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUN 26 1966

MUSIC

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX (Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood). — Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Erich Leinsdorf, plays Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser, Stravinsky's Suite from Petrouchka and Brahms' Violin Concerto, Saturday at 8 p.m.; Brahms' Double Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 4, Sunday at 2:30 p.m.; Symphony No. 1 by Prokofiev, Psalm 140 by Sessions, Till Eulenspiegel by Strauss, and Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms, Monday at 2:30 p.m.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 7,764
JUN 18 1966

Tanglewood Opens Saturday, July 2

Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open Saturday, July 2, at 8 p.m. with a concert which will include: Wagner's Overture of Tannhauser, Stravinsky's Suite from Petrouchka, and Brahms' Violin Concerto.

A number of Troy Area residents go at least once each summer to hear a rehearsal of the orchestra. They are held each Saturday at 10:30 a.m. The small admission goes to the orchestra's pension fund.

(Additional programs will be announced later.)

CASH BOX
NEW YORK, N. Y.
W.—CIRC. N. AVAIL.
JUN 11 1966

Marks Catalog Featured At Summer Music Festivals

NEW YORK — This summer's music festivals in the United States and Europe, will feature music from the Marks catalog of serious music.

Roger Sessions' "Psalm 140" will be sung by Ann Elgar at the Tanglewood Music Festival on July 4th. The orchestra will be conducted by Erich Leinsdorf. Also at Tanglewood, on August 6th, Sessions' "Violin Concerto" will be performed by the violinist Paul Zukofsky with Gunther Schuller conducting. In Bucharest, Romania on June 10 and 11, the "Black Maskers Suite" by Sessions will be played by Jassy, the leading Romanian Symphony Orchestra with Peter Paul Fuchs conducting. Conductor Ernest Ansermet will perform the same work with the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande at San Francisco's Stanford University on June 29 while on tour and Sixten Ehrling and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra will perform the "Suite From Montezuma," based on Sessions' most recent opera, on August 18.

Other Marks' material to be played this summer are Charles Jones' "Five Melodies For Orchestra" (Aug. 14), Darius Milhaud's "Robin And Marion" (Aug. 19, 20) and Jacques Offenbach's "The Lantern Marriage" (Aug. 19, 20). These three works will be performed at Colorado's Aspen Music Festival.

30

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, June 26, 1966

Holiday Weekend Concerts at Tanglewood

Three concerts will be given in the Tanglewood Music Shed over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony. NE

Music Director Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct concertos by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday at 8 p.m., and Sunday and Monday afternoons at 2:30 p.m. Thereafter, concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra, d but of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra in perform ing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the balet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, 'cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday after noon. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The first open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held on Saturday morning at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday through out the Tanglewood season. Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts 01240.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,910

JUN 26 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099

JUN 26 1966

Boston Symphony Opens Berkshire Season Saturday

LENOX — Three concerts in the Music Shed here by the Boston Symphony Orchestra (under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf) will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival during Fourth of July weekend.

In keeping with the theme, "The Romantic Concerti," for the festival, Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because of the July 4 holiday that Monday, the concerts for the first weekend of the festival will be given on Saturday evening and next Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, festival concerts by the orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through to the final program Aug. 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Leinsdorf and the orcrestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser" and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the BSO's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, 'cello, will be soloisst in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello next Sunday afternoon. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert next Monday afternoon with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1, which will be followed by the American composer Roger Sessions' Psalm 140, with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Till Eulenspiegel" will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The first open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra Pension Fund will be held Saturday morning at 10:30. The open rehearsals will take place each Saturday through the season. Ticket information on the festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 02140.

SHMUEL ASHKENASI, young Israeli violinist, will play the Brahms Violin Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival's 29th season at Tanglewood on Saturday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct. The young violinist was a second-prize winner in the 1962 Thaikovsky Competition in Moscow.

Nancy Burncoat's Page

Summer Programs at Tanglewood Are Announced

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL program will begin this weekend with the first concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox. The orchestra, under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf, will give performances at 8 p.m. on Saturday and 2:30 p.m. next Sunday and July 4. Hours for the remaining seven programs, to be held each weekend through August 21, will be Fridays, 9 p.m.; Saturdays, 8 p.m., and Sundays, 2:30 p.m.

Comprising the opening concert will be works by Wagner, Stravinsky, Brahms, Mahler, Prokofiev, Sessions, and Strauss. Featured the second week will be the works of Mozart, with the following week devoted exclusively to the music of Bach. Other highlights of the summer series will include the appearance of the winners of the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition as soloists at the August 13 and 14 programs, and the presentation of a number of pieces by Liszt at the final concert the weekend of August 19 through 21.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737

JUN 26 1966

MUSIC

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX (Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood) — Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Erich Leinsdorf, plays Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser, Stravinsky's Suite from Petrouchka and Brahms' Violin Concerto, Saturday at 8 p.m.; Brahms' Double Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 4, Sunday at 2:30 p.m.; Symphony No. 1 by Prokofiev, Psalm 140 by Sessions, Till Eulenspiegel by Strauss, and Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms, Monday at 2:30 p.m.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 7,764

JUN 18 1966

Tanglewood Opens Saturday, July 2

Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open Saturday, July 2, at 8 p.m. with a concert which will include: Wagner's Overture of Tannhauser, Stravinsky's Suite from Petrouchka, and Brahms' Violin Concerto.

A number of Troy Area residents go at least once each summer to hear a rehearsal of the orchestra. They are held each Saturday at 10:30 a.m. The small admission goes to the orchestra's pension fund.

(Additional programs will be announced later.)

CASH BOX
NEW YORK, N. Y.
W.—CIRC. N. AVAIL.

JUN 11 1966

Marks Catalog Featured At Summer Music Festivals

NEW YORK — This summer's music festivals, in the United States and Europe, will feature music from the Marks catalog of serious music.

Roger Sessions' "Psalm 140" will be sung by Ann Elgar at the Tanglewood Music Festival on July 4th. The Orchestra will be conducted by Erich Leinsdorf. Also at Tanglewood, on August 6th, Sessions' Violin Concerto" will be performed by the violinist Paul Zukofsky with Gunther Schuller conducting. In Bucharest, Romania on June 10 and 11, the "Black Maskers Suite" by Sessions will be played by Jassy, the leading Romanian Symphony Orchestra with Peter Paul Fuchs conducting. Conductor Ernest Ansermet will perform the same work with the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande at San Francisco's Stanford University on June 29 while on tour and Sixten Ehrling and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra will perform the "Suite From Montezuma," based on Sessions' most recent opera, on August 18.

Other Marks' material to be played this summer are Charles Jones' "Five Melodies For Orchestra" (Aug. 14), Darius Milhaud's "Robin And Marion" (Aug. 19, 20) and Jacques Offenbach's "The Lantern Marriage" (Aug. 19, 20). These three works will be performed at Colorado's Aspen Music Festival.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766

JUN 29 1966

Berkshire Festival Opens This Weekend at Lenox

The eight-week Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., opens this weekend with three concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Erich Leinsdorf in the Music Shed.

* * *

Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Concerts are scheduled at 8 p.m. on Saturday and 2:30 p.m. on Sunday and Monday (July 4). Thereafter Festival concerts will be on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons through Aug. 21.

Violinist Shmuel Ashkenasi will make his Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut Saturday in a performance of the Brahms' "Violin Concerto," The Saturday concert will also include Wagner's "Overture to 'Tannhauser'" and Stravinsky's "Suite from the ballet 'Petrouchka.'"

* * *

Principal players Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, 'cellist, will be soloists in the Brahms' "Concerto for Violin and Cello" on Sunday afternoon. Gustav Mahler's "Symphony number 4" with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Abbey Simon will be the soloist in the Brahms' "Piano Concerto number 2" on Monday afternoon, July 4. Also on the program is Prokofiev's "Symphony number 1. 'Classical,'" Roger Sessions' "Psalm 140" and Richard Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel."

The first open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra pension fund will be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

* * *

This summer's concerts at Tanglewood will mark 30 years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Homewood" in 1936.

Ticket information on the Festival concerts and rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival ticket office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240.

SHMUEL ASHKENASI
Israeli Violinist

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304

JUN 23 1966

THE JEWISH ADVOCATE

ISRAELI TO PLAY AT TANGLEWOOD—Shmuel Ashkenasi, the young Israeli violinist, will play the Brahms Violin Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival's twenty-ninth season at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Mr. Ashkenasi was a second prize winner in the Tchaikowsky Competition in Moscow in 1962. Also on the program will be Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser" and Stravinsky's Suite from "Petrouchka." Eric Leinsdorf, BSO music director, will conduct.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177

JUN 25 1966

Weekend Program Listed For Tanglewood Opening

Three concerts given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme for this summer's festival, the Romantic Concerti, Music Director Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend will be given on Saturday evening, and Sunday and Monday afternoons. Thereafter, festival concerts by the Boston Symphony will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on Aug. 21.

Saturday's program at 8 p.m. will feature the Tanglewood and BSO debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi, who will join Leinsdorf and the orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser," and also include Stravinsky's suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Soloists Named

Two of the orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4, with Anne Elgar as soloist, will complete the program.

Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon at 2:30 with Prokofieff's Symphony No. 1, which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140, with Miss Elgar as solist. Richard Strauss' tone poem "Till Eulenspiegel" will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The first open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra pension fund will be held Staurday morning, July 3, at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season. Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the festival ticket office, Tanglewood, Lenox 01240.

Youngstown Vindicator
YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO
D. 95,619 SUN. 147,589

JUN 26 1966

Open 8-Week Festival

Three concerts over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under music director, Erich Leinsdorf, will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

In keeping with the theme of this year's festival, the Romantic Concerti, Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts.

Because of the national holiday Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend will be given Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4); thereafter, festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program Aug. 21.

Debut for Ashkenasi

Saturday's (July 2) 8 p.m. program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Leinsdorf and the orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to "Tanhauser" and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' "Concerto for Violin and Cello" on Sunday (July 3) at 2:30 p.m. Gustav Mahler's "Symphony No. 4" with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday (July 4) at 2:30 p.m. with Prokofiev's "Symphony No. 1" which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's "Psalm 140" with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem "Till Eulenspiegel" will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the "Piano Concerto No. 2" by Brahms.

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,015

JUN 25 1966

Tanglewood Opener Features Ashkenazi

Three concerts over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a Brahms concerto at each of the opening concerts in keeping with his theme, the romantic concerto. Because of the holiday the concerts for the first weekend will be given July 2 at 8 p.m. and July 3 and 4 at 2:30 p.m. Thereafter festival concerts will be given each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program Aug. 21.

The July 2 program will feature Schmuel Ashkenazi who will join the orchestra in performing the Brahms violin concerto. The program will include the overture to Wagner's "Tannhauser" and the suite from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Esko, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' "Concerto for Violin and Cello" July 3 at 2:30 p.m. when the program also will include Mahler's "Symphony No. 4" with Anne Elgar as soloist.

The July 4 program at 2:30 p.m. will begin with Prokofieff's "Symphony No. 1" which will be followed by Roger Sessions' "Psalm 140" with Miss Elgar as soloist. The program also will present Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel" and Brahms' "Piano Concerto No. 2" with Abbey Simon as soloist.

The first open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund will be held July 3 at 10:30 a.m. These rehearsals will be held Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season.

Ticket information may be obtained from the festival ticket office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood will hold its traditional opening exercises tomorrow at 3 p.m. After the exercises tea will be served in the formal gardens. The day's events will be open to the public.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600

JUN 26 1966

This Week at Tanglewood

A Brahms concerto will be played at the three concerts which open the 30th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Festival will run for eight weeks, through Aug. 21. The theme this Summer is the Romantic Concerto.

Because of the July 4 holiday, the concerts for the first week-end will be given Saturday evening July 2, and Sunday and Monday afternoons, July 3 and 4. Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given each Friday and Saturday evening at 8 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will perform Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser" and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello next Sunday afternoon. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with soprano Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Leinsdorf will begin the July 4th afternoon concert with Prokoflev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem "Till Eulenspiegel" will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this Summer will mark 30 years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent Summer home to which it has returned each year save two during World War II.

The first open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra pension fund will be held Saturday morning at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season. Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

This afternoon the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer center for the advanced study of music, will hold its traditional opening exercises at 3. Following the ceremonies in the Tanglewood Theater, tea will be served in the Formal Gardens. Today's events at Tanglewood are open to the public.

32

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUN 30 1966

Opening Weekend at Tanglewood

Three concerts given in the Music Shed in Lenox, Mass., over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. The concerts will be given on Saturday evening at 8 p.m. and Sunday and Monday afternoons at 2:30. Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi, who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also includes Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet Petrouchka.

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloist in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1, which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel and Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2, featuring the pianist Abbey Simon, will complete the program.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which the orchestra has returned each summer save two during World War II.

The first Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held on Saturday morning, July 2, at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
W. HARTFORD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 5,920
JUN 30 1966

Good Listening

by AMELIA ALLEN

The opening concert of the 1966 Chamber and Orchestra series at Norfolk on Friday, July 1 at 8:30 p.m. will feature the Yale String Quartet, Keith Wilson, clarinet and Ward Davenny, piano. The program contains the seldom heard Quintet for strings and clarinet and strings by Weber; String Quartet No. 1 by Bartok and The Quartet in G minor for Strings and piano by Brahms.

These concerts are given in the Music Shed, constructed in 1906 and lined with redwood. The large side doors provides excellent ventilation. It is quiet and cool and there is ample parking. Tickets for the series or individual concerts are for sale at the door, special rates for students.

The first of the Saturday-at three concerts at Music Mountain will begin on July 2. Here, too, is a Shed of Wood, acoustically perfect for chamber music, designed by the late Jacques Gordon, founder of the Music Mountain Music colony and concerts.

The route is direct; over the mountain on route 44 to Canaan, turn left and follow the signs "Music Mountain" over hills and through wooded sections until you find the plateau where the Music Shed is located. Ample parking, cool, quiet and fine music.

The featured work on the first program will be the Schumann Quintet for strings and piano played by the Berkshire Quartet and Ward Davenny, pianist, as guest artist.

Tanglewood Concerts begin the weekend also; on Saturday, July 2, Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first concert of this summer season at 8 p.m. The program: Wagner: "Tannhauser Overture"; Stravinsky: Suite from the ballet "Petroushka"; Brahms: Violin Concerto with Shmuel Ashkenasi as soloist.

On Monday, July 4 at 2:30 p.m. the program consists of the "Classical Symphony" by Prokofiev; Sessions: Psalm 140; Strauss: Elgar as soloist and Strauss: "Till Eulenspiegel". The closing work will be the Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 with Abbey Simon as soloist.

The theme for this, Mr. Leinsdorf's fourth season as musical director at Tanglewood, is the Romantic Concerto. This weekend three concerts by Brahms establish the theme to be developed through the following weeks.

The Summer Chamber Music Festival at the University of Hartford will continue on Sunday, July 3 at 8 p.m. with a program by the Hartt Trio, Renato Bonacini, violin, David Wells, violoncello and Raymond Hanson, piano. They will play The Mozart Trio in G major, K. 564; Trio in C major Opus 87 by Brahms, concluding with the Trio by Ravel. In the air conditioned Millard Auditorium one may relax and enjoy fine music well played on Sunday evenings through August 7.

The Hartford Festival of Music will give its first concert of the summer season on Wednesday, July 6 at 8:30 p.m. in the Millard Auditorium, University of Hartford.

This is the ninth season of these series under Mr. Brawley's direction; each year the programs contain some of the music of the established repertoire and some music unfamiliar, yet significant, not merely novelties.

The first program includes the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 by Bach; Tchaikovsky-Variations on Roccoco Theme for Cello and Orchestra, with Bruno DiCecco as cello soloist; Beethoven: Aria: "Ah, Perfido" for Soprano and Orchestra, Sandra Wrubel, soprano; concluding with the Pulcinella Suite by Stravinsky.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 51,098
JUL 2 1966

MUSIC

NEWPORT JAZZ FESTIVAL, Festival Field, Newport, R.I.

The 13th annual feast for jazzy folk goes into the last two days of its four-day jazz weekend.

Sun. at 2 p.m.:

Jazz great Woody Herman and his orchestra, The Herman Herds, offer a special program, "The Herman Story 1940-1966," a history-in-music of Herman and his bands. Guests and Herd alumni appearing on the program include Stan Getz, Al Cohn, Zoot Sims and Gerry Mulligan.

Sun. at 8 p.m.:

Jazz legendaries Ella Fitzgerald and Duke Ellington make the evening scene, along with Teddy Wilson, Buck Clayton, Coleman Hawkins and Buddy Rich.

Mon. at 1 p.m.:

Monday's a day of workshops, this one featuring the guitar and some of those who have mastered it, including Charlie Byrd, George Benson and Kenny Burrell.

Mon. at 2:30 p.m.:

Trumpet workshop, with Dizzy Gillespie, Bobby Hackett, Thad Jones, Howard McGhee, Ruby Broff, Buck Clayton, Kenny Dorham and Buddy Rich, among others, showing off their talents. Billy Taylor conducts both sessions.

Mon. at 8 p.m.:

The fest finishes off with the sounds of the Miles Davis 5, the Dizzy Gillespie 5, Herbie Mann and the Count Basie Orchestra.

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL, Tanglewood, Lennox, Mass.

Sun. at 2:30:

Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the second concert of Tanglewood's first weekend of music. The program includes Brahms' Double Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 4.

Mon. at 2:30:

Leinsdorf's mixed musical bag for this holiday concert consists of Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1, "Classical"; Sessions' Psalm 140; Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel" and Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2.

Fri. at 9:

The festival swings into its second week with an all-Mozart concert including the March No. 13 in C, K. 408; Symphony No. 31, "Paris," K. 297; Piano concerto in E flat, K. 450, and Symphony in C major, "Jupiter," K. 551. The 7 p.m. weekend prelude—two hours of informal listening for early-coming concertgoers — also features Mozart's music. All weekly concerts are in the Tanglewood music shed.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 3 1966

Leading Soprano

ANNE ELGAR, leading soprano with the New York City Center Opera Co., will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. Erich Leinsdorf, conducting, the Fourth Symphony of Gustav Mahler today.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUL 1 1966

Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concerts each week-end July 2 thru Aug 21. Ticket office open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Sundays 1-5 p.m., phone 413-637-1600. Write Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240 for programs.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
JUL 2 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUN 26 1966

FM Music for This Week

THE SATURDAY EVENING concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast live from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood on WCRO [illegible]. The program includes [illegible] Tannhauser, Stravinsky's [illegible] Suite from the ballet Petrouchka, with Shmuel Ashkenasi as soloist.

Verdi's Il Trovatore will be featured on WFMT-FM's At the Opera, Friday at 7 p.m. Soloists with the RCA Victor Orchestra, conducted by Renato Cellini, will be Zinka Milanov, Fedora Barbieri, Margaret Roggero, Jussi Bjoerling, Leonard Warren, Nicola Moscona, Paul Franke, George Cehanovsky and Stefanie Sarigeneva.

Channel 2 will repeat An Hour With Joan Sutherland tonight at 8. Miss Sutherland will sing arias by Arne, Ricci, Paisiello, Handel, Meyerbeer, Bellini and Rossini.

Three Brahms Solo Works Scheduled at Tanglewood

Three giants of the solo repertoire, all by Brahms, are featured on the holiday weekend programs at Tanglewood in Leonex as the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens the 1966 Berkshire Festival with a concert Saturday night at 8:00.

Shmuel Ashkenasi, young Israeli violinist, will play the Brahms Violin Concerto with the Orchestra at Saturday night's concert. Mr. Ashkenasi won second prize in the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition of 1962. The remainder of the program will consist of Wagner's overture to "Tannhauser," and Stravinsky's Suite from "Petrouchka." "Petrouchka."

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 two members of the Symphony, concertmaster Joseph Silverstein and principal cellist Jules Eskin, will perform Brahms' Double Concerto. One other work will complete the program, Mahler's Symphony No. 4, with soloist Anne Elgar, soprano.

Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 with soloist Abbey Simon, will be featured on the Monday program, again at 2:30.

37

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUN 30 1966

Opening Weekend at Tanglewood

Three concerts given in the Music Shed in Lenox, Mass., over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. The concerts will be given on Saturday evening at 8 p.m. and Sunday and Monday afternoons at 2:30. Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi, who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also includes Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet Petrouchka.

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloist in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1, which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel and Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2, featuring the pianist Abbey Simon, will complete the program.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which the orchestra has returned each summer save two during World War II.

The first Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held on Saturday morning, July 3, at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News
W. HARTFORD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 5,920
JUN 30 1966

Good Listening

by AMELIA ALLEN

The opening concert of the 1966 Chamber and Orchestra series at Norfolk on Friday, July 1 at 8:30 p.m. will feature the Yale String Quartet, Keith Wilson, clarinet and Ward Davenny, piano. The program contains the seldom heard Quintet for strings and clarinet and strings by Weber; String Quartet No. 1 by Bartok and The Quartet in G minor for Strings and piano by Brahms.

These concerts are given in the Music Shed, constructed in 1906 and lined with redwood. The large side door provides excellent ventilation. It is quiet and cool and there is ample parking. Tickets for the series or individual concerts are for sale at the door, special rates for students.

The first of the Saturday-at three concerts at Music Mountain will begin on July 2. Here, too, is a Shed of Wood, acoustically perfect for chamber music, designed by the late Jacques Gordon, founder of the Music Mountain Music colony and concerts.

The route is direct; over the mountain on route 44 to Canaan, turn left and follow the signs "Music Mountain" over hills and through wooded sections until you find the plateau where the Music Shed is located. Ample parking, cool, quiet and fine music.

The featured work on the first program will be the Schumann Quintet for strings and piano played by the Berkshire Quartet and Ward Davenny, pianist, as guest artist.

Tanglewood Concerts begin the weekend also; on Saturday, July 2, Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first concert of this summer season at 8 p.m. The program: Wagner: "Tannhauser Overture"; Stravinsky: Suite from the ballet "Petroushka"; Brahms: Violin Concerto with Shmuel Sahkenasi as soloist.

On Monday, July 4 at 2:30 p.m. the program consists of the "Classical Symphony" by Prokofiev; Sessions: Psalm 140 with Anne Elgar as soloist and Strauss: "Till Eulenspiegel". The closing work will be the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2 with Abbey Simon as soloist.

The theme for this, Mr. Leinsdorf's fourth season as musical director at Tanglewood, is the Romantic Concerto. This weekend three concertos by Brahms establish the theme to be developed through the following weeks.

The Summer Chamber Music Festival at the University of Hartford will continue on Sunday, July 3 at 8 p.m. with a program by the Hartt Trio, Renato Bonacini, violin, David Wells, violoncello and Raymond Hanson, piano. They will play The Mozart Trio in G major, K. 564; Trio in C major Opus 87 by Brahms, concluding with the Trio by Ravel. In the air conditioned Millard Auditorium one may relax and enjoy fine music well played on Sunday evenings through August 7.

The Hartford Festival of Music will give its first concert of the summer season on Wednesday, July 6 at 8:30 p.m. in the Millard Auditorium, University of Hartford.

This is the ninth season of these series under Mr. Brawley's direction; each year the programs contain some of the music of the established repertoire and some music unfamiliar, yet significant, not merely novelties.

The first program includes the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 by Bach; Tchaikovsky-Variations on Roccoco Theme for Cello and Orchestra, with Bruno DiCecco as cello soloist; Beethoven: Aria: "Ah, Perfido" for Soprano and Orchestra, Sandra Wrubel, soprano; concluding with the Pulcinella Suite by Stravinsky.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 51,098
JUL 2 1966

MUSIC

NEWPORT JAZZ FESTIVAL, Festival Field, Newport, R.I.

The 13th annual feast for jazzy folk goes into the last two days of its four-day jazz weekend.

Sun. at 2 p.m.:
Jazz great Woody Herman and his orchestra, The Herman Herds, offer a special program, "The Herman Story 1940-1966," a history-in-music of Herman and his bands. Guests and Herd alumni appearing on the program include Stan Getz, Al Cohn, Zoot Sims and Gerry Mulligan.

Sun. at 8 p.m.:
Jazz legendaries Ella Fitzgerald and Duke Ellington make the evening scene, along with Teddy Wilson, Buck Clayton, Coleman Hawkins and Buddy Rich.

Mon. at 1 p.m.:
Monday's a day of workshops, this one featuring the guitar and some of those who have mastered it, including Charlie Byrd, George Benson and Kenny Burrell.

Mon. at 2:30 p.m.:
Trumpet workshop, with Dizzy Gillespie, Bobby Hackett, Thad Jones, Howard McGhee, Ruby Broff, Buck Clayton, Kenny Dorham and Buddy Rich, among others, showing off their talents. Billy Taylor conducts both sessions.

Mon. at 8 p.m.:
The fest finishes off with the sounds of the Miles Davis 5, the Dizzy Gillespie 5, Herbie Mann and the Count Basie Orchestra.

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL, Tanglewood, Lennox, Mass.

Sun. at 2:30:
Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the second concert of Tanglewood's first weekend of music. The program includes Brahms' Double Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 4.

Mon. at 2:30:
Leinsdorf's mixed musical bag for this holiday concert consists of Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1, "Classical"; Sessions' Psalm 140; Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel" and Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2.

Fri. at 9:
The festival swings into its second week with an all-Mozart concert including the March No. 13 in C, K. 408; Symphony No. 31, "Paris," K. 297; Piano concerto in B flat, K. 450, and Symphony in C major, "Jupiter," K. 551. The 7 p.m. weekend prelude—two hours of informal listening for early-coming concertgoers — also features Mozart's music. All weekly concerts are in the Tanglewood music shed.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 3 1966

Leading Soprano

ANNE ELGAR, leading soprano with the New York City Center Opera Co., will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, conducting the Fourth Symphony of Gustav Mahler today.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUL 1 1966

Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concerts each week-end July 2 thru Aug 21. Ticket office open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Sundays 1-5 p.m., phone 413-637-1600. Write Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240 for programs.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
JUL 2 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUN 26 1966

FM Music for This Week

THE SATURDAY EVENING concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast live from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood on WCRQ at 8. The program includes Wagner's Overture Tannhauser, Stravinsky's Suite from Petrouchka and Brahms' Violin Concerto, with Shmuel Ashkenasi as soloist.

Verdi's Il Trovatore will be featured on WPJB-FM's At the Opera, Friday at 7 p.m. Soloists with the RCA Victor Orchestra, conducted by Renato Cellini, will be Zinka Milanov, Fedora Barbieri, Margaret Roggero, Jussi Bjoerling, Leonard Warren, Nicola Moscona, Paul Franke, George Cehanovsky and Nathaniel Sprinzena.

Channel 2 will repeat An Hour With Joan Sutherland tonight at 8. Miss Sutherland will sing arias by Arne, Ricci, Paisiello, Handel, Meyerbeer, Bellini and Rossini.

Three Brahms Solo Works Scheduled at Tanglewood

Three giants of the solo repertoire, all by Brahms, are featured on the holiday weekend programs at Tanglewood in Leonex as the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens the 1966 Berkshire Festival with a concert Saturday night at 8:00.

Shmuel Ashkenasi, young Israeli violinist, will play the Brahms Violin Concerto with the Orchestra at Saturday night's concert. Mr. Ashkenasi won second prize in the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition of 1962. The remainder of the program will consist of Wagner's overture to "Tannhauser," and Stravinsky's Suite from "Petrouchka." "Petrouchka."

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 two members of the Symphony, concertmaster Joseph Silverstein and principal cellist Jules Eskin, will perform Brahms' Double Concerto. One other work will complete the program, Mahler's Symphony No. 4, with soloist Anne Elgar, soprano.

Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 with soloist Abbey Simon, will be featured on the Monday program, again at 2:30.

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
W. 500

JUN 30 1966

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD
W. 500

JUNE 30 1966

Tanglewood Opens This Week End

Three concerts given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's Festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening (July 2), and Sunday and Monday afternoons (July 3 and 4). Thereafter, Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's program will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon (July 3; 2:30 p. m.) Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon (July 4; 2:30) with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War 2.

The first Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held Saturday morning (July 3) at 10:30. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season. Ticket information on the Berkshire Festival concerts and the rehearsals may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachsetts 01240.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766

JUL 1 1966

WAMC Will Cover 1966 Berkshire Festival 'Live'

FM station WAMC (90.3 mc.) begins its exclusive "live" coverage of the 1966 Berkshire Music Festival at 8 p.m. Saturday with a broadcast of the opening concert of the season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Erich Leinsdorf, the orchestra's music director, will conduct the premier concert, which consists of Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser," Suite from "Petrouchka" by Stravinsky, and Brahms' Violin Concerto, with Shmuel Ashkenasi as soloist.

* * *

On Sunday, WAMC's microphones will be at the Tanglewood Music Shed for a concert beginning at 2:30 p.m. Leinsdorf has chosen a program consisting of Brahms' double concerto and Mahler's symphony No. 4. Violinist Joseph Silverstein and cellist Jules Eskin will be soloists in the Brahms, and soprano Anne Elgar will have the solo role in the Mahler Symphony.

The concluding concert of WAMC's weekend coverage will begin at 2:30 p.m. on Monday. Leinsdorf will be on the podium for the four-work program: Prokofiev, symphony no. 1 (Classical); Sessions, Psalm 140; Strauss, Till Eulenspiegel; and Brahms, piano concerto no. 2. Abbey Simons will be soloist in the Brahms Concerto, and Miss Elgar will have the solo role in the Sessions' work.

* * *

WAMC is the non-commercial voice of Albany Medical College. The station will carry Tanglewood concerts daily through August 25, including chamber concerts and concerts of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra. The Tanglewood concerts are being carried on WAMC through the facilities of the Eastern Educational Radio Network.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 5,168
JUL 2 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
JUN 30 1966

Record Season Predicted

First Wave of Tourists Expected Tomorrow Night

John V. Geary, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, predicted today that the Berkshire summer tourist traffic will break all previous records.

The first wave of visitors is expected to come tomorrow evening for the July 4 weekend.

Already, Geary said, the hotels and motels in the area are 98 per cent sold out for the coming weekend and the weekends of July 22 and 29.

Business Brisk

Geary pledged that the Berkshire Hills Conference would take steps to put up every tourist who wants lodging in the Berkshires. There is some room left in country inns and plenty of space in private homes, he said. The home-rental business is "already getting brisk," Geary said.

Persons wishing to rent rooms or to offer space for rent may contact Mrs. Mary H. Carroll at the conference's offices at 100 North St.

Although the tourist traffic normally drops off in August, Geary said that this year may be an exception.

A live NBC telecast from Tanglewood on Aug. 14 is sure to stir added business, Geary said.

In addition, nine crew members for the Bell Telephone Hour will spend five weeks in the Berkshires starting July 11. They will film pops, chamber and shed concerts at Tanglewood and will also film other Berkshire attractions. The program will be aired in the fall.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUN 30 1966

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO LAUNCH TANGLEWOOD SEASON THIS WEEKEND

Three concerts given in the Tanglewood music shed over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Music Director, Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight week Berkshire Festival in Lenox. In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti, for this summer's festival, Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the national holiday on Monday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening, July 2, and Sunday and Monday afternoons, July 3 and 4. Thereafter, festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on August 21.

Saturday's program at 8 p.m. will feature the Tanglewood and Boston Symphony Orchestra debut of Shmuel Ashkenasi who will join Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra in performing Brahms' Violin Concerto. The concert will begin with Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser and also include Stravinsky's Suite from the ballet "Petrouchka."

Two of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal players, Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, cello, will be soloists in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soloist will complete the program.

Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the holiday concert on Monday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. with Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 which will be followed by the American composer Roger Session's Psalm with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' tone poem Till Eulenspiegel will conclude the first half of the program. Following the intermission, the pianist Abbey Simon will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936. The gift of Tanglewood to the Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

The first rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund will be held on Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m. These rehearsals will take place each Saturday throughout the Tanglewood season.

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
W. 4,000

JUNE 30 1966

A Calendar of Events

MUSIC

TANGLEWOOD—Saturday, July 2: Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Erich Leinsdorf in Wagner's Overture, "Petrouchka"; Brahms' Violin Concerto "Tannhauser"; Stravinsky's Suite from (Samuel Ashkenasi); 8 p.m. Music Shed . . . Sunday, July 3: BSO conducted by Leinsdorf in Brahms' Double Concerto (Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin); Mahler's Symphony No. 4 (Anne Elgar, soprano); 2:30 p.m., Shed . . . Monday, July 4: BSO conducted by Leinsdorf in Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1; Sessions' Psalm 140 (Elgar); Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel; Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 (Abbey Simon); 2:30 p.m., Shed.

34

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, July 3, 1966

Berkshire Festival Marking 30th Year

By JOAN SIMMONS

The opening concert of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood Saturday evening marked the 30th anniversary of the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Berkshire Symphonic Festival, forerunner of the current festival, invited the orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky to perform three concerts at "Holmwood," the former Vanderbuilt estate in Lenox, Mass., in 1936.

In the fall of 1936 Tanglewood was given to the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the summer of 1937 marked the beginning of this now world-famous summer headquarters. The 1937 series consisted of six concerts performed in rented tents and when one of the concerts was cut short by a severe thunderstorm, the need for a partially enclosed music center became apparent.

SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY

The present 6,000-seat Music Shed, first used in the summer of 1938, was built by Berkshire residents.

The first summer season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshires ran four days and drew 15,000 people. The present season is scheduled for eight weeks and includes 24 concerts by the orchestra, eight public rehearsals by the orchestra, eight chamber music concerts and more than 50 concerts by the students at the Berkshire Music Center, with more than a quarter of a million people are expected to attend.

Having weathered two successful summers in their new summer headquarters, the Berkshire Music Center was established by Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1940. The Center, which continued under Maestro Koussevitzky's leadership until his death in 1951, each year provides approximately 300 young musicians with concert experience and the expert guidance of outstanding professional musicians. Through the summer these students, under the efforts of the musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest performers, receive invaluable concentrated instruction from some of the best artists in their individual fields.

ERICH LEINSDORF

Charles Munch succeeded Koussevitzky as both music director of the orchestra and as director of the Music Center and he in turn was succeeded by Erich Leinsdorf as director of the orchestra in 1962 and as director of the Music Center in 1963.

The 210-acre Tanglewood estate overlooking Lake Mahkeenac between Lenox and Stockbridge, Mass., figured in the arts long before the advent of the Berkshire Music Festival. It had once been the meeting place of Emerson, Holmes and Melville. In the 1850's Nathaniel Hawthorne conceived his "Tanglewood Tales" and the "Wonder-book" and wrote "The House of Seven Gables" on these same grounds.

The Tanglewood grounds, beginning with the Music Shed in 1933 have expanded to include a Theater-Concert Hall, a rehearsal stage and a Chamber Music Hall. Both halls were designed by Eero Saarinen and constructed in 1941.

In 1959 the Edmund Hawes Talbot Memorial Stage Canopy, also designed by Saarinen, was dedicated replacing the original shell in the Music Shed enhancing the listener's enjoyment both within the enclosure and outside on the lawn.

The Berkshire Music Center is housed in the original mansion house and in a replica of the cottage which Hawthorne used while living on the estate.

The public is welcome to explore the Tanglwood grounds and the formal gardens which have been maintained. The grounds are open daily and guides are available. Entrance to the grounds at the time of concerts is by ticket only.

Except for a brief interruption during World War 2 the Boston Symphony Orchestra has appeared annually at Tanglewood. For the first time this season the entire series will be broadcast live in this area by WAMC-FM. Guest artists include conductors Sir Adrian Boult, Seiji Ozawa and Thomas Schippers, pianist van Cliburn and soprano Montserrat Caballe. Tickets for the Cliburn performance are already sold out. And another successful season appears to be underway.

LONG ISLAND DAILY PRESS
Sunday, July 3, 1966

Three Concerts Over Holiday

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.—Three concerts to be given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under music director Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival.

In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concert, for this summer's festival, Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the holiday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening, and next Sunday and Monday afternoons.

Thereafter, festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on Aug. 21.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936.

The gift of Tanglewood to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 3 1966

FULL ORCHESTRA OPENS 29TH YEAR AT TANGLEWOOD

7545 at First Concert Applaud Skill of Violinist

PAGE ONE

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — The Boston Symphony Orchestra began its 29th season of summer concerts at Tanglewood Saturday with a full complement of musicians for the first time since 1944.

Procedure Reversed

Since then it was the custom to open the season with a couple of weeks of Bach and Mozart played by a large chamber orchestra, (60 or 70), the others having remained in Boston for the Esplanade concert series.

Bach and Mozart and the Esplanade were put over this year to the second and third weeks, enabling the Berkshire Festival to open with a full orchestra to carefully measured, stately strains of the Pilgrim's Chorus, the first notes of Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser," which launched the season with grandeur.

(See FULL ORCHESTRA) Page 12

Colorful Excitement

Stravinsky's suite from the ballet "Petrouchka," filled the rest of the time before intermission with colorful excitement.

The score calls for plenty of perky, pixieish sounds, and Erich Leinsdorf, conductor, seemed intent upon emphasizing the great variety of tonal colors.

The bells glistened, the brass glowed, the snare drums rattled . . . the duets, trios, solos small ensembles each had their moments of glory.

The piece was played with brilliant clarity, its only flaw being the inherent episodic, shifting-mood, stop-and-go character that keeps the listener either confused or on the edge of his chair with interest.

There seemed no reason to suspect that the orchestra would not produce another magical season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Circ. 1,355,614
JUL 3 1966

Clemens Kalischer

Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass. The first weekend of the festival continues through tomorrow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 3 1966

MUSIC

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX (Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood) — Today, 2:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Erich Leinsdorf in program of Brahms and Mahler; Monday, 2:30 p.m., program of Prokofiev, Sessions, Strauss and Brahms; Friday, 9 p.m., all-Mozart program with pianist Malcolm Frager as soloist; Saturday, 8 p.m., all-Mozart program with pianist Claude Frank as soloist; next Sunday, 2:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Sir Adrian Boult in all-Mozart program with pianist Malcolm Frager as soloist.

Albany Knickerbocker News
Saturday, July 2, 1966

TANGLEWOOD — Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Wagner's Overture from Tannhauser, Stravinsky's Suite from Petroushka and Brahms' Violin Concerto at 8 p.m. today; Brahms' Double Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 4, with pianist Joseph Silverstein and cellist Jules Eskin, soprano Anne Elgar at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow; Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 (Classical), Sessions' Psalm 140, Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel and Brahm's Piano Concerto No. 2 at 2:30 p.m. Monday; Mozart program with pianist Malcom Frager at 9 p.m. Friday. Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Chamber concerts held at 8 p.m. Tuesdays, this Tuesday: the Boston Symphony Chamber Players perform in Mozart's Piano Quartet, Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon and Piano, Villa Lobos' Duo for Flute and Bassoon and Schubert's Trio Sonata for Violin Cello and Piano Op. 99.

THE KANSAS CITY STAR
KANSAS CITY, MO.
D. 335,705 SUN. 392,378
JUL 3 1966

Music Festival At Tanglewood Into 30th Year

By Joseph Kaye
(The Star's New York Correspondent)

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.—The opening concert of the 1966 summer by the Boston symphony last night marked the 30th year of the Tanglewood music festival at Berkshire Music Center for Advanced Music Study here.

The concerts are given in a 6,000 seat "shed" with more listeners able to hear well on the lawns surrounding the open sides of the shed.

The concert was conducted by Erich H. Leinsdorf, the permanent conductor of the Boston symphony, and featured the Israeli violinist, Shmuel Ashkenasi, who played Brahms concerto in D major. He is a perceptive artist but his sensitive tone was not large enough to fill such a huge auditorium and occasionally was lost.

The balance of the program consisted of two unusually familiar works, Stravinsky's "Petrouchka Suite" and Wagner's "Tannhauser Overture," conducted with brilliance by Leinsdorf.

The Tanglewood concert are on weekends and will continue until August 21. Special events by the students and by professional groups are given week days.

34

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, July 3, 1966

Berkshire Festival Marking 30th Year

By JOAN SIMMONS

The opening concert of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood Saturday evening marked the 30th anniversary of the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Berkshire Symphonic Festival, forerunner of the current festival, invited the orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky to perform three concerts at "Holmwood," the former Vanderbuilt estate in Lenox, Mass., in 1936.

In the fall of 1936 Tanglewood was given to the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the summer of 1937 marked the beginning of this now world-famous summer headquarters. The 1937 series consisted of six concerts performed in rented tents and when one of the concerts was cut short by a severe thunderstorm, the need for a partially enclosed music center became apparent.

SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY

The present 6,000-seat Music Shed, first used in the summer of 1938, was built by Berkshire residents.

The first summer season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshires ran four days and drew 15,000 people. The present season is scheduled for eight weeks and includes 24 concerts by the orchestra, eight public rehearsals by the orchestra, eight chamber music concerts and more than 50 concerts by the students at the Berkshire Music Center, with more than a quarter of a million people are expected to attend.

Having weathered two successful summers in their new summer headquarters, the Berkshire Music Center was established by Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1940. The Center, which continued under Maestro Koussevitzky's leadership until his death in 1951, each year provides approximately 300 young musicians with concert experience and the expert guidance of outstanding professional musicians. Through the summer these students, under the efforts of the musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest performers, receive invaluable concentrated instruction from some of the best artists in their individual fields.

ERICH LEINSDORF

Charles Munch succeeded Koussevizky as both music director of the orchestra and as director of the Music Center and he in turn was succeeded by Erich Leinsdorf as director of the orchestra in 1962 and as director of the Music Center in 1963.

The 210-acre Tanglewood estate overlooking Lake Mahkeenac between Lenox and Stockbridge, Mass., figured in the arts long before the advent of the Berkshire Music Festival. It had once been the meeting place of Emerson Holmes and Melville. In the 1850's Nathaniel Hawthorne conceived his "Tanglewood Tales" and the "Wonderbook" and wrote "The House of Seven Gables" on these same grounds.

The Tanglewood grounds, beginning with the Music Shed in 1933 have expanded to include a Theater-Concert Hall, a rehearsal stage and a Chamber Music Hall. Both halls were designed by Earo Saarinen and constructed in 1941.

In 1959 the Edmund Hawes Talbot Memorial Stage Canopy, also designed by Saarinen, was dedicated replacing the original shell in the Music Shed enhancing the listener's enjoyment both within the enclosure and outside on the lawn.

The Berkshire Music Center is housed in the original mansion house and in a replica of the cottage which Hawthorne used while living on the estate.

The public is welcome to explore the Tanglewood grounds and the formal gardens which have been maintained. The grounds are open daily and guides are available. Entrance to the grounds at the time of concerts is by ticket only.

Except for a brief interruption during World War 2 the Boston Symphony Orchestra has appeared annually at Tanglewood. For the first time this season the entire series will be broadcast live in this area by WAMC-FM. Guest artists include conductors Sir Adrian Boult, Seiji Ozawa and Thomas Schippers, pianist van Cliburn and soprano Montserrat Caballe. Tickets for the Cliburn performance are already sold out. And another successful season appears to be underway.

LONG ISLAND DAILY PRESS
Sunday, July 3, 1966

Three Concerts Over Holiday

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.—Three concerts to be given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under music director Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival.

In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concert, for this summer's festival, Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the holiday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening, and next Sunday and Monday afternoons.

Thereafter, festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on Aug. 21.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936.

The gift of Tanglewood to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 3 1966

FULL ORCHESTRA OPENS 29TH YEAR AT TANGLEWOOD

7545 at First Concert Applaud Skill of Violinist

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — The Boston Symphony Orchestra began its 29th season of summer concerts at Tanglewood Saturday with a full complement of musicians for the first time since 1944.

Procedure Reversed

Since then it was the custom to open the season with a couple of weeks of Bach and Mozart played by a large chamber orchestra, (60 or 70), the others having remained in Boston for the Esplanade concert series.

Bach and Mozart and the Esplanade were put over this year to the second and third weeks, enabling the Berkshire Festival to open with a full orchestra to carefully measured, stately strains of the Pilgrim's Chorus, the first notes of Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser," which launched the season with grandeur.

(See FULL ORCHESTRA) (Page 11A)

Colorful Excitement

Stravinsky's suite from the ballet "Petrouchka," filled the rest of the time before intermission with colorful excitement.

The score calls for plenty of perky, pixieish sounds, and Erich Leinsdorf, conductor, seemed intent upon emphasizing the great variety of tonal colors.

The bells glistened, the brass glowed, the snare drums rattled . . . the duets, trios, solos small ensembles each had their moments of glory.

The piece was played with brilliant clarity, its only flaw being the inherent episodic, shifting-mood, stop-and-go character that keeps the listener either confused or on the edge of his chair with interest.

There seemed no reason to suspect that the orchestra would not produce another magical season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Circ. 1,355,614
JUL 3 1966

Clemens Kalischer

Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass. The first weekend of the festival continues through tomorrow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 3 1966

MUSIC

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX (Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood) — Today, 2:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Erich Leinsdorf in program of Brahms and Mahler; Monday, 2:30 p.m., program of Prokofiev, Sessions, Strauss and Brahms; Friday, 9 p.m., all-Mozart program with pianist Malcolm Frager as soloist; Saturday, 8 p.m., all-Mozart program with pianist Claude Frank as soloist; next Sunday, 2:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Sir Adrian Boult in all-Mozart program with pianist Malcolm Frager as soloist.

Albany Knickerbocker News
Saturday, July 2, 1966

TANGLEWOOD — Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Wagner's Overture from Tannhauser, Stravinsky's Suite from Petroushka and Brahms' Violin Concerto at 8 p.m. today; Brahms' Double Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 4, with pianist Joseph Silverstein and cellist Jules Eskin, soprano Anne Elgar at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow; Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 (Classical), Sessions' Psalm 140, Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel and Brahm's Piano Concerto No. 2 at 2:30 p.m. Monday; Mozart program with pianist Malcom Frager at 9 p.m. Friday. Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Chamber concerts held at 8 p.m. Tuesdays, this Tuesday: the Boston Symphony Chamber Players perform in Mozart's Piano Quartet, Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon and Piano, Villa Lobos' Duo for Flute and Bassoon and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin Cello and Piano Op. 99.

THE KANSAS CITY STAR
KANSAS CITY
D. 335,705 SUN.
JUL 3 1966

Music Festival At Tanglewood Into 30th Year

By Joseph Kaye
(The Star's New York Correspondent)

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.—The opening concert of the 1966 summer by the Boston symphony last night marked the 30th year of the Tanglewood music festival at Berkshire Music Center for Advanced Music Study here.

The concerts are given in a 6,000 seat "shed" with more listeners able to hear well on the lawns surrounding the open sides of the shed.

The concert was conducted by Eric H. Leinsdorf, the permanent conductor of the Boston symphony, and featured the Israeli violinist, Shmuel Ashkenasi, who played Brahms concerto in D major. He is a perceptive artist but his sensitive tone was not large enough to fill such a huge auditorium and occasionally was lost.

The balance of the program consisted of two unusually familiar works, Stravinsky's "Petrouchka Suite" and Wagner's "Tannhauser Overture," conducted with brilliance by Leinsdorf.

The Tanglewood concert are on weekends and will continue until August 21. Special events by the students and by professional groups are given week days.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

34

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, July 3, 1966

Berkshire Festival Marking 30th Year

By JOAN SIMMONS

The opening concert of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood Saturday evening marked the 30th anniversary of the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Berkshire Symphonic Festival, forerunner of the current festival, invited the orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky to perform three concerts at "Holmwood," the former Vanderbuilt estate in Lenox, Mass., in 1936.

In the fall of 1936 Tanglewood was given to the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the summer of 1937 marked the beginning of this now world-famous summer headquarters. The 1937 series consisted of six concerts performed in rented tents and when one of the concerts was cut short by a severe thunderstorm, the need for a partially enclosed music center became apparent.

SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY

The present 6,000-seat Music Shed, first used in the summer of 1938, was built by Berkshire residents.

The first summer season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshires ran four days and drew 15,000 people. The present season is scheduled for eight weeks and includes 24 concerts by the orchestra, eight public rehearsals by the orchestra, eight chamber music concerts and more than 50 concerts by the students at the Berkshire Music Center, with more than a quarter of a million people are expected to attend.

Having weathered two successful summers in their new summer headquarters, the Berkshire Music Center was established by Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1940. The Center, which continued under Maestro Koussevitzky's leadership until his death in 1951, each year provides approximately 300 young musicians with concert experience and the expert guidance of outstanding professional musicians. Through the summer these students, under the efforts of the musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest performers, receive invaluable concentrated instruction from some of the best artists in their individual fields.

ERICH LEINSDORF

Charles Munch succeeded Koussevizky as both music director of the orchestra and as director of the Music Center and he in turn was succeeded by Erich Leinsdorf as director of the orchestra in 1962 and as director of the Music Center in 1963.

The 210-acre Tanglewood estate overlooking Lake Mahkeenac between Lenox and Stockbridge, Mass., figured in the arts long before the advent of the Berkshire Music Festival. It had once been the meeting place of Emerson Holmes and Melville. In the 1850's Nathaniel Hawthorne conceived his "Tanglewood Tales" and the "Wonderbook" and wrote "The House of Seven Gables" on these same grounds.

The Tanglewood grounds, beginning with the Music Shed in 1933 have expanded to include a Theater-Concert Hall, a rehearsal stage and a Chamber Music Hall. Both halls were designed by Earo Saarinen and constructed in 1941.

In 1959 the Edmund Hawes Talbot Memorial Stage Canopy, also designed by Saarinen, was dedicated replacing the original shell in the Music Shed enhancing the listener's enjoyment both within the enclosure and outside on the lawn.

The Berkshire Music Center is housed in the original mansion house and in a replica of the cottage which Hawthorne used while living on the estate.

The public is welcome to explore the Tanglwood grounds and the formal gardens which have been maintained. The grounds are open daily and guides are available. Entrance to the grounds at the time of concerts is by ticket only.

Except for a brief interruption during World War 2 the Boston Symphony Orchestra has appeared annually at Tanglewood. For the first time this season the entire series will be broadcast live in this area by WAMC-FM. Guest artists include conductors Sir Adrian Boult, Seiji Ozawa and Thomas Schippers, pianist van Cliburn and soprano Montserrat Caballe. Tickets for the Cliburn performance are already sold out. And another successful season appears to be underway.

NOTHING MADE BY SONOTONE EVER OUTSIDE EL
ed here
A 1945 or older toy train, live steam, live gauge. Need not run. Also wide gauge. Need catalog.
WANTED
ST 2-0019

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Circ. 1,355,614
JUL 3 1966

Clemens Kalischer

Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass. The first weekend of the festival continues through tomorrow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 3 1966

MUSIC

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX (Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood) — Today, 2:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Erich Leinsdorf in program of Brahms and Mahler; Monday, 2:30 p.m., program of Prokofiev, Sessions, Strauss and Brahms; Friday, 9 p.m., all-Mozart program with pianist Malcolm Frager as soloist; Saturday, 8 p.m., all-Mozart program with pianist Claude Frank as soloist; next Sunday, 2:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Sir Adrian Boult in all-Mozart program with pianist Malcolm Frager as soloist.

LONG ISLAND DAILY PRESS
Sunday, July 3, 1966

Three Concerts Over Holiday

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.—Three concerts to be given in the Music Shed here over the Fourth of July weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under music director Erich Leinsdorf will open the eight-week Berkshire Festival.

In keeping with his chosen theme, the Romantic Concert, for this summer's festival, Leinsdorf will conduct a concerto by Brahms at each of the opening concerts. Because of the holiday, July 4, the concerts for the first weekend of the Berkshire Festival will be given on Saturday evening, and next Sunday and Monday afternoons.

Thereafter, festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on each Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through the final program on Aug. 21.

The concerts at Tanglewood this summer will mark thirty years since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first performed in the Berkshires at "Holmwood" in 1936.

The gift of Tanglewood to the orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Mary Aspinwall Tappan in the autumn of 1936 gave a permanent summer home to which it has returned each summer save two during World War II.

Albany Knickerbocker News
Saturday, July 2, 1966

TANGLEWOOD — Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Wagner's Overture from Tannhauser, Stravinsky's Suite from Petroushka and Brahms' Violin Concerto at 8 p.m. today; Brahms' Double Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 4, with pianist Joseph Silverstein and cellist Jules Eskin, soprano Anne Elgar at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow; Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 (Classical), Sessions' Psalm 140, Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel and Brahm's Piano Concerto No. 2 at 2:30 p.m. Monday; Mozart program with pianist Malcom Frager at 9 p.m. Friday. Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Chamber concerts held at 8 p.m. Tuesdays, this Tuesday: the Boston Symphony Chamber Players perform in Mozart's Piano Quartet, Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon and Piano, Villa Lobos' Duo for Flute and Bassoon and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin Cello and Piano Op. 99.

Republican
LD, Mass.
966

(Continued from Page 1A)

ive fun ... to its 1966 theme, e romantic concerto.

he first concerto of the week was Brahms violin concerto played Saturday by Shmuel Ashkenasi. Brahms double concerto is scheduled today and his second piano concerto Monday.

Ashkenasi is a young, 25, violinist from Tel Aviv who first attained international prominence when he won second prize in the Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow in 1962.

Solid Surety

He played Brahms' difficult concerto Saturday with solid surety and supple grace. He approached the romantic flights with a no-nonsense manner, but he tempered it with smooth sweet, warm tone.

His performance was interrupted by applause from the 7545 listeners, a large audience for a hot opening night. It was hot enough for the orchestra members given permission to doff coats. Last year's opening night audience was about 4300.

The concert opened with the carefully measured, stately strains of the Pilgrim's Chorus, the first notes of Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser," which launched the season with grandeur.

Colorful Excitement

Stravinsky's suite from the ballet "Petrouchka," filled the rest of the time before intermission with colorful excitement.

The score calls for plenty of perky, pixieish sounds, and Erich Leinsdorf, conductor, seemed intent upon emphasizing the great variety of tonal colors.

The bells glistened, the brass glowed, the snare drums rattled . . . the duets, trios, solos small ensembles each had their moments of glory.

The piece was played with brilliant clarity, its only flaw being the inherent episodic, shifting-mood, stop-and-go character that keeps the listener either confused or on the edge of his chair with interest.

There seemed no reason to suspect that the orchestra would not produce another magical season.

THE KANSAS CITY STAR
KANSAS CITY
D. 335,705 SUN. 515,175
JUL 3 1966

Music Festival At Tanglewood Into 30th Year

By Joseph Kaye
(The Star's New York Correspondent)

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.—The opening concert of the 1966 summer by the Boston symphony last night marked the 30th year of the Tanglewood music festival at Berkshire Music Center for Advanced Music Study here.

The concerts are given in a 6,000 seat "shed" with more listeners able to hear well on the lawns surrounding the open sides of the shed.

The concert was conducted by Eric H. Leinsdorf, the permanent conductor of the Boston symphony, and featured the Israeli violinist, Shmuel Ashkenasi, who played Brahms concerto in D major. He is a perceptive artist but his sensitive tone was not large enough to fill such a huge auditorium and occasionally was lost.

The balance of the program consisted of two unusually familiar works, Stravinsky's "Petrouchka Suite" and Wagner's "Tannhauser Overture," conducted with brilliance by Leinsdorf.

The Tanglewood concert are on weekends and will continue until August 21. Special events by the students and by professional groups are given week days.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,910

JUL 3 1966

Music: Berkshire Festival Opens at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — It was a gala opening of the 29th annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

The full Boston Symphony orchestra was conducted by Erich Leinsdorf. Soloist was violinist Samuel Ashkenasi in the Brahms B Concerto.

After a hot day, matters didn't improve much last night at Tanglewood. There was an audience of 7,545, the most fortunate of which were the 1,500 seated outside the music shed. Although the musicians were in shirt sleeves, it must have been extremely uncomfortable for them on the huge heat - collecting stage.

The reward for all was a familiar but beautifully balanced program. Orchestral works were the overture from Wagner's opera "Tannhauser," and Stravinsky's ballet suite "Petrouchka."

Soloists Debut

Ashkenasi's appearance was his debut with the Boston Symphony, and at Tanglewood.

His concept of the Brahms concerto was an effective merger of classic framework and romantic matter. Superimposed over these was an epic grandeur, blended with warm, human emotion. At times, however, the soloist's pitch was questionable, particularly in his opening passages.

However, once the initial hurdle was out of the way, the soloist drew full, rich, round, intense sound from his violin. Phrasing flowed easily. The man and his instrument were inseparable. Little barrier existed between Brahms and the listener.

Wagner's "Tannhauser" was an impressive curtain - raiser. This wasn't merely the composer's provision, but a result of Leinsdorf's temperament. We know of no other conductor who gets so directly to the dramatic core of Wagner's music.

Superlative

A superlative orchestra of Boston's caliber does not necessarily guarantee a dazzling "Tannhauser." The "Pilgrim's Chorus" is anything but brilliant, unless it is made to take on dramatic intensity.

The orchestra played as if challenged to produce its best. Everything was in bold relief — motives of religious faith, repentance, rejoicing and the triump of salvation at the end.

Leinsdorf combined flexibility with firmness. The all-important brasses cut through the melange with power and accuracy. Strings, woodwinds and percussion interjected sweep, poetry and climax.

It was difficult to imagine a more spirit - rousing performance of Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" than last night's. It must be admitted, however, that some of the fragile interludes threatened to break the thread of interest - continuity.

Flamboyant

Actually, Leinsdorf's concept crossed the border from pure orchestral mechanics into the realm of flamboyance. Any ballet company would have been too overwhelmed by the playing to do much dancing, although Leinsdorf did display a little pantomime enroute.

This is not to say that the light matter was not played with affectionate care, devoid of impatience or pretense.

But so, too, were dramatic scenes and sparkling character portrayals. The sardonic, bitter, raging Petrouchka was virtually painted with splashing instrumental color. The "Grand Carnival" was a wild commotion of growling brasses, solid rhythm and sinister undercurrents.

Leinsdorf will again conduct the Boston Symphony in this afternoon's concert. Anne Elgar will be soprano soloist in Gustaf Mahler's Symphony No. 4, in G Major. Soloists in Brahms's D Concerto in A Minor, Opus 102, will be Joseph Silverstein, violinist, and Jules Eskin, cellist. Both are first - desk players with the orchestra.

Sunday Telegram
PORTLAND, Me.
Circ. 105,712

JUL 3 1966

B.S.O. At Tanglewood

AT LENOX, in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, "Tanglewood" began its season yesterday, continuing its holiday weekend concerts today and Monday with the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Erich Leinsdorf.

Leinsdorf tomorrow directs the orchestra in Prokoviev's Symphony No. 1 (Classical), continues with Roger Sessions's Psalm 140, with Anne Elgar as soloist, has scheduled the Richard Strauss tone-poem, "Till Eulenspiegel", and after intermission conducts Brahms Second Piano Concerto with Abbey Simon as the solo artist.

Concerts at Tanglewood this summer mark 30 years since the BSO first performed there, when the place was called "Holmwood" in 1938. Best route is down No. 1 to 128, thence to the Mass. Turnpike, directly to Lenox. Be sure to get reservations in advance, for the town is usually jammed.

Next Saturday Leinsdorf leads the Bostonians in a weekend of Mozart, beginning July 8 with the "Paris" Symphony, the B Flat K. 450 Piano Concerto, and the "Jupiter" Symphony, one of the most sublime achievements in all music.

As a prelude, you can go early at 7:00 p. m. and listen to Mozart's seldom heard "Scatological Canons" and the K. 488 two piano sonata.

Sunday's concert features Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201, the Piano Concerto in C, K. 503, and the enchanting "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Monday winds up the Mozart Festival, when the BSO offers the Symphony No 34, K. 338, that monumental and overlooked Piano Concerto No 17, K. 173, and the Symphony No 39, K. 453.

One of the last of the great giants of music, Pablo Casals, is now at Marlboro, Vt., where sixteen concerts will be presented on weekends by the end of the season August 14th. Casals scheduled to direct all of the Bach Suites for Orchestra, will be there until July 10. Concerts are on Saturdays at 8:30 p. m. and Sundays at 3 p. m., with a Friday event on Aug. 12 at 8:30 p. m.

Founded in 1950, the Festival is unique in America, as 80 outstanding artists come to Marlboro without remuneration in order to exchange musical ideas and explore chamber music repertoire. The renowned pianist, Rudolf Serkin, who makes his summer home at Marlboro, is the artistic director.

Open rehearsals are held for the public and you may be lucky enough to attend one with Casals on the podium.

If you are a venturesome soul who enjoys the scenic wonders of our New England, you can point your car towards Tanglewood, Marlboro, or Hanover and find at the end of your trip a great wealth of arts experiences.

Or, a short skip and jump will take you to the campus at Bowdoin College, where the most ambitious music school in its history will offer the music lover more than a dozen concerts.

A little later in the season Colby College at Waterville will present the Hungarian String Quartet in a series of concerts and lectures. More of that in a later column.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 61,129
JUL 4 1966

Music: Boston Symphony at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Yesterday afternoon's Tanglewood program, second of the Berkshire Music Festival's first weekend, had little to attract a cross-section audience on a hot afternoon. There was an attendance of 5,953, considerably smaller than usual.

Erich Leinsdorf conducted the full Boston Symphony Orchestra. Contrary to past summers, the entire orchestra is at Tanglewood, the symphony's summer concert grounds, for the festival's first weekend.

A smaller orchestra will pllay concerts of Mozart and Bach for the next two weekends. The full orchestra will return for the final five weekends, beginning July 22.

Yesterday afternoon's program followed Leinsdorf's festival format to feature the "Romantic Concerto."

Two Soloists

Joseph Silverstein, violinist, and Jules Eskin, cellist, were soloists in Brahms' Concerto in A Minor, Opus 102. Balance of the program was Gustaf Mahler's Symphony No. 4 in G Major, with Anne Elgar as soprano soloist. Miss Elgar is with the New York City Center Opera Company.

In every sense, the afternoon's most engaging fare was the Brahms concerto. Its aggressive opening was played by the orchestra in the grand manner, as incentive for an emotional entrance by solo instruments in cadenza style.

Both soloists played with admirable ease. Their combined efforts were, for the most part, brilliant and technically spotless. Orchestral interludes had massiveness of sound, sensitively abated for accompaniment function.

Leinsdorf gave the soloists the luxury of freedom in phrasing and flexibility. Incidentally, both soloists used scores, while Leinsdorf conducted from memory.

Romantic Principles

The performance was geared to romantic principles of tonal expression, technical extravagance, and a degree of heroim.

In the slow movement, the soloists carried on an emotional, richly-toned dialogue. The swift, dancelike finale was a fine exhibition of brilliance by soloists and orchestra.

There was standing ovation for all concerned.

Mahler's Fourth Symphony is neither a great work nor particularly interesting. The most remarkable features were the assiduous care given it by the orchestra and Leinsdorf's intimate knowledge which permitted him to conduct the overlong work from memory.

Its piquant, coy start was not entirely favorable to brasses. The first movement bordered closely on the trival. Its festive climax reached a point of elevation, at least momentarily.

The second movement, marked "with leisurely motion," was moore of the same with a chattering complex. The third movement, "peacefully," broughtt its reverie to fruition after an endless parade of tender melodies, all of them much the same.

Miss Elgar fulfilled the composer's instructions for the soprano score of the finale. He directed "with childlike, bright expression, always without parody."

The text uses verses from an old Bavarian folksong, "In Heaven Hang Many Fiddles."

Miss Elgar has an appealing lyric voice which served to communicate some of the lines, mostly of fanciful mien. The more dramatic were enfulfed by orchestral sound. She is an attractive singer with a gracious stage presence.

This afternoon, Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony in Prokofieff's "Classical" symphnny, and Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel."

Miss Elgar will be soloist in Roger Sessions' Psalm 140. Abbey Simon will be heard as soloist in Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 in B Flat Major, Opus 83.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277

JUL 4 1966

LEINSDORF BEGINS BERKSHIRE SERIES

Holiday Weekend Programs More Like a Brahms Fete

By ALLEN HUGHES
Special to The New York Times

LENOX, Mass., July 3 — It was heat, mosquito and music time at Tanglewood last night as the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Erich Leinsdorf, opened its 29th season of summer concerts in the giant open-air Music Shed here.

The concert was the first of three events scheduled for the holiday weekend. The fact that the holiday is distinctly American in origin and significance, and might merit more than a passing musical nod, seems not to have occurred to Mr. Leinsdorf when he made up his programs. Except for Roger Session's Psalm 140, which will be performed at tomorrow's concert, there is nothing in the three programs to indicate that this weekend is different from any other.

Perhaps Mr. Leinsdorf is celebrating a Germanic holiday of his own. If so, it must be chiefly Brahmsian in nature, for last night's concert included Brahme's Violin Concerto, the program this afternoon began with his Concerto for Violin and Cello, and tomorrow afternoon the final work will be Brahms's Piano Concerto No. 2.

Wagner and Stravinsky Heard

Keeping Brahms company last night were the overture to "Tannhäuser" and the Suite from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka."

The second of the two works heard this afternoon was Mahler's Symphony No. 4. The Brahms and Sessions works tomorrow will be joined by Strauss's "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks" and Prokofiev's "Classsical" Symphony.

If the sum of these programs gives Mr. Leinsdorf a rather low rating as a festival program-builder for an American holiday weekend, he must be credited with having produced performances of notably high quality in the first two concerts.

The soloist last night was Shmuel Ashkenazi, a 25-year-old Israeli violinist whose interpretation of the Brahms concerto was estimable in every way. Despite the oppressing heat and humidity, he kept his pitch and tone secure throughout the work, and negotiated all its hazardous passages fluently and compellingly.

Mr. Leinsdorf projected the grandeur of the "Tannhäuser" overture superbly, and gave a brilliant account of the colors and rhythms of the "Petrouchka" Suite.

Concertmaster Is Soloist

The soloists in the double concerto this afternoon were Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin, concertmaster and principal cellist, of the Boston Symphony. Their performances were excellent, as was that of Anne Elgar, soprano soloist in the fourth movement of the Mahler symphony.

Mr. Leinsdorf is now beginning his fourth season at Tanglewood, and there seems to be little doubt that performances here have reached an extraordinary level of virtuosity and interpretative reliability. This being the case, it is especially regrettable that he cannot bring more imagination and variety to the planning of the programs that are played with such mastery and splendor. Perhaps this will be accomplished in the future.

The concerts will continue on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons through Aug. 21.

FADED TEXT

36

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
JUL 4 1966

Mahler Opus Enchants Tanglewood Audience

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Those who stayed away from Tanglewood Sunday afternoon on the misguided assumption that Mahler's music tends to be mystically morbid must be unacquainted either with his Fourth Symphony or the Boston Symphony Orchestra's magical talent for tonal clarity.

Stravinsky "Sparkling"

That talent seems to be increasing. It was sparkling Saturday night with Stravinsky's "Petrouchka," but that score has a high degree of sparkle built into it.

Mahler's Fourth Symphony, on the other hand, very gradually unfolds its virtues with quiet, leisurely flow of soaring lyricism and the orchestra which can keep it from going flabby is rare.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra did it Sunday. What's more, it did it while scrupulously following Mahler's instructions to play the first movement "deliberately," the second "with leisurely motion," the third "peacefully" and the fourth "very easily."

Strings Retuned

Sunday the symphony took 57 minutes to play, perhaps two or three minutes longer than average because extra time was taken after the first movement to acknowledge applause to which the soprano soloist, Anne Elgar, waiting for her part to come up in the fourth movement, contributed, and after the second movement to retune the strings.

There was more than a usual amount of retunning between movements because of the heat. Strings tend to go flat when the humidity goes up over 80.

But if the listeners thought the orchestra's luminous string section and glowing winds could not surpass the simple, pure beauty of the first three movements, they did not count on the combination of those attributes with the superlative soprano tones of Miss Elgar in the fourth movement.

In that movement Mahler added several verses from an old Bavarian folk song, which begins "so delightful are the joys of heaven." Sunday it sounded like "so delightful are the joys of great music . . ."

Before intermission the concertmaster, Joseph Silverstein, and the first cellist, Jules Eskin, moved out front to play the solo parts in Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Violincello, Op. 102.

This piece was last heard at Tanglewood in 1963 when Silverstein played it with Samuel Mayes. Eskin and Silverstein are good choices for the soloists for a special reason: they are superior ensemble players, and this piece places a premium upon technical rapport between soloists as well as between the duet and orchestra.

Both were playing with light, gentle, almost apologetic tones, although Eskin sometimes seemed to be attacking his cello's strings with unusual vigor and the tonal blend between solo melodies and orchestral texture was entirely appropriate to the high degree of interdependence that Brahms put into the score.

It was a virtuosic performance by both soloists and orchestra, but its beauty was far surpassed by the Mahler symphony which followed.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
JUL 4 1966

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JUL 4 1966

Violinist Ashkenasi Plays With Boston Symphony

By D. E. RITZ

Erich Leinsdorf, who has chosen the "Romantic Concerto" as the theme of this 29th season of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., conducted the opening concerto of the series Saturday night before an audience of 7,545 which had assembled to hear Shmuel Ashkenasi, violinist, in his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

Ashkenasi performed the Brahms "Violin Concerto in D Major, opus 77," the first of the three Brahms concertos featured his weekend.

Yesterday afternoon Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster; and Jules Eskin, first 'cellist with the orchestra, played the "Concerto in A minor for Violin and Violoncello, opus 102" and in today's concert, opening at 2:30 o'clock, Abbey Simon will be the soloist in the Brahms "Piano Concerto number 2, in B-flat major, opus 83."

Saturday night was hit everywhere even at the higher tanglewood elevation and the men of the orchestra opened the season sans coats. Only Leinsdorf and Ashkenasi used the formal white coats, and many persons wondered why concert hall formalities should be allowed to add to the inevitable discomfort of two of the hardest working persons there.

* * *

In addition to the Brahms concerto the program included the opening "Overture to 'Tannhauser'" and the Stravinsky "Suite from the Ballet 'Petrouchka'."

The "Tannhauser" music has a rare nobility with its slow-paced Pilgrim's chant building up from a mere whisper to a mighty volume and then fading, followed by joyous shivers of tone and bewitching loveliness, and a return from the wildness of the second section to a closing with the original theme — leaving one feeling strangely purified.

"Petrouchka" is Stravinsky in every note — full of whimsy and oriental imagery. One basks in the tones in the sounds of the Russian Shrove-Tide Fair, the rhythms of the dances, the aloofness of the Ballerina theme and the general joyousness of the Masqueraders. It is music inspired by a visual concept, yet music that is totally aural in its impact.

* * *

Ashkenasi, born in Tel Aviv in 1941, studied under Efrem Zimbalist and is a 1963 graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music. He was a finalist in the Queen Elizabeth Competition in Brussels and received second prize in the 1962 Tchaikowsky Competition in Moscow.

His debut with the Boston Symphony won him ovations following each of the three movements of the Brahms' "Concerto" and a final ovation for Leinsdorf, the soloist and members of the orchestra.

The Brahms' Concerto is brilliant but it is also music of deep sentiment and Ashkenasi achieved not only technical mastery (no small accomplishment) but beauty of tone and interpretation such as one seldom hears, together. He has the luscious quality of the old Zimbalist tone, a technical brilliance that includes many moments of warmth, a deep-throated chord tone and warm doublestopping. The solo cadenza of the "Allegro non Troppo" was revealing with an introspective quality. The "Adagio" movement is lovely and the final "Allegro Giocose" with more emphasis on the orchestra is most truly Brahms.

Today's afternoon performance, the only Monday performance of the season, includes in addition to the piano concerto the Prokofiev' "Classical Symphony, opus 25"; Roger Sessions' "Psalm 140 for soprano and orchestra" with Anne Elgar as soloist; the Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks, after the Old-fashioned Roguish manner—Rondo Form, opus 28."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
JUL 6 1966

Correction

Because of typographical errors, the review in Monday's Globe of the opening Boston Symphony concert at Tanglewood, Shmuel Ashkenasi as violin soloist, gave a distorted impression.

The end of the fourth paragraph should have read: "His portamento, for example, is no mere violinistic expediency: it unfailingly makes musical sense. His playing conveys a vivid sense of the distinct characters of the four strings. This makes it revealingly colorful, as does his perceptively varied vibrato."

This should have been followed by the paragraph beginning "He has good rhythm . . ." which was out of place as printed.

The garbled seventh paragraph should have read: "The orchestral framework was well integrated with the solo playing. It was, however, weakened by rhythmic uncertainty and by mediocre woodwind playing which, at the start of the Adagio, produced phrasings and textures that achieved a bare minimum of intelligibility."

Violinist Ashkenasi Saves Opening Concert at Tanglewood

By MICHAEL STEINBERG
Globe Critic

LENOX — An impressive new violinist, Shmuel Ashkenasi, saved the opening concert of the Boston Symphony's 1966 Tanglewood season Saturday evening, an event that would have been drab indeed without him. A 25-year-old Israeli and a Zimbalist pupil, Ashkenasi played the Brahms concerto on a program including Wagner's "Tannhaeuser" Overture and Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" Suite, Erich Leinsdorf conducting.

Ashkenasi is a musician, and he plays with intelligence, vitality, and taste. That he is also a master violinist one could not infer so surely from this performance, though what I have heard of his playing elsewhere makes me quite certain he is.

Saturday at Lenox, however, temperature and humidity turned playing the violin into an even more preposterous challenge than it ordinarily is. Also, Ashkenasi may have been unusually nervous. For whatever reasons, his intonation was wildly wayward and the tone not under control. This was especially true during the bulk of the first movement. As the performance went along, the playing became clearer and cleaner.

It was clear, though, that all this was the playing of a superior instrumentalist who happened not to be in good form. In any case, Ashkenasi is a player who eschews obvious and easy technical solutions. His portamento, for example, is no mere

The taste that controls it is one of the most remarkable aspects of Ashkenasi's playing and certainly the one that most strikingly sets him apart from his colleagues, and not merely the ones of his own generation. His tone in general is clear, firm and refined rather than lushly opulent, but what a pleasure it was in particular to hear something other than the sticky imitation-cello sound most violinists offer on the G-string.

Even in a state so far from its best, Ashkenasi's playing is impressive for being perceptive, sensible, discriminating, lively, in a way most of the playing one hears is not. I must say also that there are very few violinists indeed whom I would as soon hear play the Brahms—Pina Carmirelli and Arnold Steinhardt are two that come to mind.

The orchestral framework was well integrated with the violinistic expediency: it unfailingly makes musical sense. His playing conveys a vivid sense of the distinct characters of the four strings. This makes his playing revealingly colorful, as does his perceptively varied vibrato.

He has good rhythm. in large structural dimensions as well as in detail, though at the beginning one of the symptoms of his being unsettled, and one that disappeared altogether, was a tendency to land hard on the last note of a phrase. His sculpturing of phrases is detailed and articulated in high relief, to a degree, indeed, that would be perilous with a player of less sure taste.

solo playing. It was, however, weakened by rhythmic uncertainty and by mediocre woodwind playing which, at the start of the Adagio, produced phrasings and textures that achieved a bare minimum of intelligibility.

In "Petrouchka" I was duly impressed by Leinsdorf's ability—unique in my experience—to drain every bit of color and vitality from the score, for all that he did look as though he were getting ready to audition for the Moiseyev Dancers. His dreary lack of temperament and his rhythmic flabbiness make Leinsdorf an unsuitable conductor for the piece. Much of the solo playing in the orchestra was technically shoddy and artistically brutal.

Except for the choppy phrasing of the opening melody, the "Tannhaeuser" Overture was well conducted and played.

TIGHT BINDING

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 5 1966

Music Review

Tanglewood, Lenox, Opens 29th Season, Brahms Concerto on Each Program

By Frank N. Patterson

SATURDAY

That Mr. Leinsodrf's casual saunter from wing to podium for Saturday's opening of Tanglewood's 29th season might have resembled more a savoring of satisfaction than reaction to a formidable heat wave seems both a logical and reasonable conclusion.

The faultless orchestra always appears unperturbed by any readings of temperature-humidity index. Anyway, it was about to produce one of the most technically impeccable performances of its long and illustrious career and Mr. Leinsdorf knew it.

True, Stravinsky's Petrouchka could have appeared more engaging had Mr. Leinsdorf bent his rather wooden representation with more imaginative conviction than feckless rochestral manipulation. And similar relief from the stunning perfection of Wagner's Tannhauser Overture might also have been found with less provound tempi and more distinct intent.

However, it was with the addition of the virile performance of violin solosit, Shmuel Ashkenasi that one realized how marvelous musical results could really be. The young but reliable soloist generated a seed of musical excitement that met immediate rapport with the orchestra.

Mr. Leinsdorf seems to find a greater margin for musical flair in concerti than in any other form or even in any partcular composer. Since this season's programs are to be devoted largely to music of the romantic concertos, the summer bodes considerable promise of success.

SUNDAY

By Louis S. Cuccinello
Music Department
NASC

The thread that ran through the first weekend at Tanglewood was the Romantic Concerto — a Brahms concerto was featured at each of the concerts. Mr. Leinsodrf's interest in symbolism gives vent to the idea that perhaps the concerto structure was extended beyond the framework of a single composition to that of the entire holiday period. The program on Sunday could be likened to the slow movement of a concerto in spite of the moments when the tempo and dynamics belie the metaphor. The quiet ending of the Mahler symphony created an incompleteness until "tomorrow's finale."

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is excellent! Any fault one might find rests not with the instrument but rather a difference of opinion with that of the conductor. Although Mr. Leinsdorf often conducts in an unorthodox manner, the orchestra is well rehearsed and responds with amazing precision.

The program opened with Brahms "Concerto in A minor for Violin and Violoncello," op. 102 featuring Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin - Concertmaster and principal cellist of the Boston Symphony.

The Double Concerto form is not plentiful in our orchestral literature because as Niemann tells us — "it demands two players of consummate technique and sure mastery, so thoroughly accustomed to playing together . . ." Your reviewer was particularly impressed by the rapport of the violin, cello and orchestra — especially evidenced in the lyrical slow section. This movement — although replete with unconventional phrase lengths — was beautifully executed.

Mahler's Fourth Symphony (with Soprano Voice) is essentially simple and short by the composer's standard. The fourth movement is strophic in structure — the text taken from an Old Bavarian folk song about the pleasures of life in Heaven.

"So delightful are the joys of Heaven,
We have no need of earthly ones.
No wordly turmoil,
Is heard in Heaven!
There all live in sweetest peace."

The soloist, Miss Anne Elgar of the New York City Center Opera Company, has a beautiful voice — her diction and intonation most commendable.

MONDAY

The "finale" of the weekend concerts opened with Serge Prokofiev's "Classical Symphony." From the outset it was apparent that Mr. Leinsdorf would be generous with his allegro and fortes — the climax coming with the fortissimo at the conclusion of "Till Eulenspiegel."

Roger Sessions' "Psalm 140 for Soprano and Orchestra" (soloist, Miss Anne Elgar; was highlighted by the apperance of the composer. This was the first performance at Tanglewood of this recent composition (1963) which was commissioned by the Princeton Theological Seminary for the occasion of the Sesquicentennial Anniversary of that school. The Psalm, originally written for soprano and organ was later rescored for the orchestra as the accompanying instrument. Mr. Sessions writes that "This is of course the version performed on the present occasion; and it is the version that I consider definitive."

The concerto selected for Monday was Brahms "Piano Concerto No. 2, in B-flat major, op. 83 with Abbey Simon as soloist. Mr. Simon is a forceful musician with flawless technique and very much at home with the Romantic Movement.

(Next week at Tanglewood — "A weekend with Mozart.")

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,007
JUL 5 1966

Albany Knickerbocker News
Tuesday, July 5, 1966

Sunday Concert

By C. ROBIE BOOTH

LENOX — An ambitious and diverse program performed with stunning musicianship by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and three soloists marked the Berkshire Festival season's first Sunday concert at Tanglewood.

Soloists on Brahms' Concerto in A minor for Violin and Violoncello were Joseph Silverstein, pure-tones violinist-concertmaster, and renowned cellist Jules Eskin; in Mahler's Symphony No. 4 in G major, New York City Center Opera Company soprano Anne Elgar. Each received sustained applause and four calls for bows. Miss Elgar possesses a lovely high-ranging, vibrant voice. Silverstein and Eskin were most impressive in all segments, whether in solo, duet, without orchestra or with full orchestra.

The orchestra, jacketless in white shirts and white linen trousers, was everything its conductor, the dynamic old school perfectionist Erich Leinsdorf, could have desired. The Brahms, competing with a large family of chirping birds throughout, had flawless strings, impeccable timing and compastic percussion.

Highlights of the Mahler: the opening movement's spangled tambourines, chimes, trumpet solos, thunder effects and deviations (i.e., the cellos playing what is usually the horn's pretheme); the oboe and harp passages in the beautiful, concapuntal third movement,

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,615
JUL 5 1966

Boston Symphony Concerts Are Pleasing

By ROBERT STOLZBERG

The Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its 29th season at Tanglewood last weekend with three concerts. Erich Leinsdorf was the conductor.

The Saturday evening concert began with the Overture to "Tannhauser" by Wagner. The second work was the Suite from Stravinsky's ballet, 'Petrouchka." Both works are of a light nature and they were complemented by the summery warmth of the evening.

The main work was the Violin Concerto in D major, Op 77, by Brahmes. The young Israeli artist Shmuel Ashkenazi was soloist and he had the difficulties, which are considerable, of the piece well in hand at all times. The work itself is a tour de force and it overcame the distractions inherent in an outdoor concert quite well.

Concerto Is Featured

The Sunday afternoon concert featured the Brahms Concerto in A minor for Violin and Violincello, Op. 102 and Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 in G major.

Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin soloed in the former work, which led off the concert. Although their performances were not as glittering as was Ashkenazi's, due in part to the differences in the pieces they were playing, the totality of the number came through exceedingly well and proved thoroughly satisfying.

Anne Elgar, the soprano for both the Mahler and Monday's Psalm 140 by Roger Sessions, has a beautiful voice, clear and sufficiently strong to be easily heard even in the outside general admission area. The work is lyric and romantic, long and heavy by normal standards but not by Mahler's, being the shortest that Mahler wrote. The performance was crisp and to the point, not wasting effort or overdoing the comparatively light scoring.

Monday's Concert

In addition to Sessions, Monday's concert included Prokofiev's "Classical" Symphony, Richard Strauss' delightful "Till Eulenspiegel," and Brahm's Piano Concerto No. 2, Op. 83.

All three concerts were marked by musicianship of the highest caliber, indicating again why the BSO is one of the finest orchestras in the country. The trumpet section once or twice slipped up, and Mr. Leinsdorf's tempi sometimes seemed ever so slightly forced. But these very minor flaws were more than overshadowed by the beauty of the works and soloists and the general excellence of the orchestra. It is a grand thing to be able to hear music of this distinction in the beautiful surroundings of the Berkshires.

Brilliant Opening of Tanglewood Season

By EDGAR S. VANOLINDA

The slghtly humid spirit of Euterpe, mythological Greek muse of concordant sound, descended upon the Berkshires over the weekend for the opening triad of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the dynamic direction of Erich Leinsdorf, marking the Bostonians' 30th year of participation in the annual summer festival of symphonic and vocal music.

Mr. Leinsdorf, showing not the slightest effects of a strenuous season of home and road concerts, was in fine form, his eloquent hands and fingers indicating every facet of nuance and rhythmic beauty, inherent in the programmed music and sensed by the coatless members of the ensemble. Following his proposed format to include music in the romatic vein, the opening week was an excellent indication of what is to follow during the balance of the festival.

Magnificient Opener

Saturday night's concert was ushered in with a magnificient performance of the Overture to "Tannhauser" by Wagner; the suite from the ballet, "Petroushka" by Stravinsky and the Brahms violin concerto in D major, stunningly performed by the young Israeli virtuoso, Shmuel Ashkenasi, making his Tanglewood debut. He was accorded a veritable ovation at its exciting conclusion.

Sunday's offering was short, numerically, but long from an artistic standpoint. It consisted of the Brahms double concerto for violin and cello, admirably played by Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the orchestra as violinist and Jules Eskin solo cellist of the string section. Here was individual perfection of technical and interpretative accord, merged into a highly emotional duo, enhanced by the outstanding background contributed by Mr. Leinsdorf and his well-disciplined colleagues.

Mahler's 4th Symphony brought the evening to a soul-satisfying conclusion. It is a joyful work, full of the German composer's own collaboration of folk music and ethnic dance rhythms, which follow one another in uninhibited abandon. Ann Elgar, leading soprano of the New York City Center Opera Company, in her initial Tanglewood appearance, sang the incidental solos in the fourth movment with oppulance of vocalism and apparent love of the music and texts to earn for her several recalls to the stage, singly and, with Mr. Leinsdorf.

Fourth Observed

The Fourth of July was suitably observed with the pyrotechnical display of Prokoviev's "Classical Symphony," the "140th Psalm" by Sessions; the mirthful music of Ricard Strauss's musical cartoon: "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks." For the final work, the genius of Brahms was again invoked with the inclusion of the German melodist's Piano Concerto No. 2 in which Abbey Simon, American-born pianist, but musical citizen of the world, making his Tanglewood debut, proved him to be one of the finest exponents of his instrument to be heard at this or any other Berkshire season.

TIGHT BINDING

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 5 1966

Music Review

Tanglewood, Lenox, Opens 29th Season, Brahms Concerto on Each Program

By Frank N. Patterson

SATURDAY

That Mr. Leinsodrf's casual saunter from wing to podium for Saturday's opening of Tanglewood's 29th season might have resembled more a savoring of satisfaction than reaction to a formidable heat wave seems both a logical and reasonable conclusion.

The faultless orchestra always appears unperturbed by any readings of temperature-humidity index. Anyway, it was about to produce one of the most technically impeccable performances of its long and illustrious career and Mr. Leinsdorf knew it.

True, Stravinsky's Petrouchka could have appeared more engaging had Mr. Leinsdorf bent his rather wooden representation with more imaginative conviction than feckless rochestral manipulation. And similar relief from the stunning perfection of Wagner's Tannhauser Overture might also have been found with less provound tempi and more distinct intent.

However, it was with the addition of the virile performance of violin solosit, Shmuel Ashkenasi that one realized how marvelous musical results could really be. The young but reliable soloist generated a seed of musical excitement that met immediate rapport with the orchestra.

Mr. Leinsdorf seems to find a greater margin for musical flair in concerti than in any other form or even in any partcular composer. Since this season's programs are to be devoted largely to music of the romantic concerto, the summer bodes considerable promise of success.

SUNDAY

By Louis S. Cuccinello
Music Department
NASC

The thread that ran through the first weekend at Tanglewood was the Romantic Concerto — a Brahms concerto was featured at each of the concerts. Mr. Leinsodrf's interest in symbolism gives vent to the idea that perhaps the concerto structure was extended beyond the framework of a single composition to that of the entire holiday period. The program on Sunday could be likened to the slow movement of a concerto in spite of the moments when the tempo and dynamics belie the metaphor. The quiet ending of the Mahler symphony created an incompleteness until "tomorrow's finale."

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is excellent! Any fault one might find rests not with the instrument but rather a difference of opinion with that of the conductor. Although Mr. Leinsdorf often conducts in an unorthodox manner, the orchestra is well rehearsed and responds with amazing precision.

The program opened with Brahms "Concerto in A minor for Violin and Violoncello," op. 102 featuring Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin - Concertmaster and principal cellist of the Boston Symphony.

The Double Concerto form is not plentiful in our orchestral literature because as Niemann tells us — "it demands two players of consummate technique and sure mastery, so thoroughly accustomed to playing together . . ." Your reviewer was particularly impressed by the rapport of the violih, cello and orchestra — especially evidenced in the lyrical slow section. This movement — although replete with unconventional phrase lengths — was beautifully executed.

Mahler's Fourth Symphony (with Soprano Voice) is essentially simple and short by the composer's standard. The fourth vovement is strophic in structure — the text taken from an Old Bavarian folk song about the pleasures of life in Heaven.

"So delightful are the joys of Heaven,
We have no need of earthly ones.
No wordly turmoil,
Is heard in Heaven!
There all live in sweetest peace."

The soloist, Miss Anne Elgar of the New York City Center Opera Company, has a beautiful voice — her diction and intonation most commendable.

MONDAY

The "finale" of the weekend concerts opened with Serge Prokofiev's "Classical Symphony." From the outset it was apparent that Mr. Leinsdorf would be generous with his allegro and fortes — the climax coming with the fortissimo at the conclusion of "Till Eulenspiegel."

Roger Sessions' "Psalm 140 for Soprano and Orchestra" (soloist, Miss Anne Elgar; was highlighted by the apperance of the composer. This was the first performance at Tanglewood of this recent composition (1963) which was commissioned by the Princeton Theological Seminary for the occasion of the Sesquicentennial Anniversary of that school. The Psalm, originally written for soprano and organ was later rescored for the orchestra as the accompanying instrument. Mr. Sessions writes that "This is of course the version performed on the present occasion; and it is the version that I consider definitive."

The concerto selected for Monday was Brahms "Piano Concerto No. 2, in B-flat major, op. 83 with Abbey Simon as soloist. Mr. Simon is a forceful musician with flawless technique and very much at home with the Romantic Movement.

(Next week at Tanglewood — "A weekend with Mozart.")

Albany Knickerbocker News
Tuesday, July 5, 1966

Sunday Concert

By C. ROBIE BOOTH

LENOX — An ambitious and diverse program performed with stunning musicianship by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and three soloists marked the Berkshire Festival season's first Sunday concert at Tanglewood.

Soloists on Brahms' Concerto in A minor for Violin and Violoncello were Joseph Silverstein, pure-tones violinist-concertmaster, and renowned cellist Jules Eskin; in Mahler's Symphony No. 4 in G major, New York City Center Opera Company soprano Anne Elgar. Each received sustained applause and four calls for bows. Miss Elgar possesses a lovely high-ranging, vibrant voice. Silverstein and Eskin were most impressive in all segments, whether in solo, duet, without orchestra or with full orchestra.

The orchestra, jacketless in white shirts and white linen trousers, was everything its conductor, the dynamic old school perfectionist Erich Leinsdorf, could have desired. The Brahms, competing with a large family of chirping birds throughout, had flawless strings, impeccable timing and compastic percussion.

Highlights of the Mahler: the opening movement's spangled tambourines, chimes, trumpet solos, thunder effects and deviations (i.e., the cellos playing what is usually the horn's pre-theme); the oboe and harp passages in the beautiful, contrapuntal third movement,

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,615
JUL 5 1966

Boston Symphony Concerts Are Pleasing

By ROBERT STOLZBERG

The Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its 29th season at Tanglewood last weekend with three concerts. Erich Leinsdorf was the conductor.

The Saturday evening concert began with the Overture to "Tannhauser" by Wagner. The second work was the Suite from Stravinsky's ballet, 'Petrouchka." Both works are of a light nature and they were complemented by the summery warmth of the evening.

The main work was the Violin Concerto in D major, Op 77, by Brahmes. The young Israeli artist Shmuel Ashkenazi was soloist and he had the difficulties, which are considerable, of the piece well in hand at all times. The work itself is a tour de force and it overcame the distractions inherent in an outdoor concert quite well.

Concerto Is Featured

The Sunday afternoon concert featured the Brahms Concerto in A minor for Violin and Violincello, Op. 102 and Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 in G major.

Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin soloed in the former work, which led off the concert. Although their performances were not as glittering as was Ashkenazi's, due in part to the differences in the pieces they were playing, the totality of the number came through exceedingly well and proved thoroughly satisfying.

Anne Elgar, the soprano for both the Mahler and Monday's Psalm 140 by Roger Sessions, has a beautiful voice, clear and sufficiently strong to be easily heard even in the outside general admission area. The work is lyric and romantic, long and heavy by normal standards but not by Mahler's, being the shortest that Mahler wrote. The performance was crisp and to the point, not wasting effort or overdoing the comparatively light scoring.

Monday's Concert

In addition to Sessions, Monday's concert included Prokofiev's "Classical" Symphony, Richard Strauss' delightful "Till Eulenspiegel," and Brahm's Piano Concerto No. 2, Op. 83.

All three concerts were marked by musicianship of the highest caliber, indicating again why the BSO is one of the finest orchestras in the country. The trumpet section once or twice slipped up, and Mr. Leinsdorf's tempi sometimes seemed ever so slightly forced. But these very minor flaws were more than overshadowed by the beauty of the works and soloists and the general excellence of the orchestra. It is a grand thing to be able to hear music of this distinction in the beautiful surroundings of the Berkshires.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,633
JUL 5 1966

Brilliant Opening of Tanglewood Season

By EDGAR S. VANOLINDA

The slghtly humid spirit of Euterpe, mythological Greek muse of concordant sound, descended upon the Berkshires over the weekend for the opening triad of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the dynamic direction of Erich Leinsdorf, marking the Bostonians' 30th year of participation in the annual summer festival of symphonic and vocal music.

Mr. Leinsdorf, showing not the slightest effects of a strenuous season of home and road concerts, was in fine form, his eloquent hands and fingers indicating every facet of nuance and rhythmic beauty, inherent in the programmed music and sensed by the coatless members of the ensemble. Following his proposed format to include music in the romatic vein, the opening week was an excellent indication of what is to follow during the balance of the festival.

Magnificient Opener

Saturday night's concert was ushered in with a magnificient performance of the Overture to "Tannhauser" by Wagner; the suite from the ballet, "Petroushka" by Stravinsky and the Brahms violin concerto in D major, stunningly performed by the young Israeli virtuoso, Shmuel Ashkenasi, making his Tanglewood debut. He was accorded a veritable ovation at its exciting conclusion.

Sunday's offering was short, numerically, but long from an artistic standpoint. It consisted of the Brahms double concerto for violin and 'cello, admirably played by Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the orchestra as violinist and Jules Eskin solo 'cellist of the string section. Here was individual perfection of technical and interpretative accord, merged into a highly emotional duo, enhanced by the outstanding background contributed by Mr. Leinsdorf and his well-disciplined colleagues.

Mahler's 4th Symphony brought the evening to a soul-satisfying conclusion. It is a joyful work, full of the German composer's own collaboration of folk music and ethnic dance rhythms, which follow one another in uninhibited abandon. Ann Elgar, leading soprano of the New York City Center Opera Company, in her initial Tanglewood appearance, sang the incidental solos in the fourth movment with oppulance of vocalism and apparent love of the music and texts to earn for her several recalls to the stage, singly and with Mr. Leinsdorf.

Fourth Observed

The Fourth of July was suitably observed with the pyrotechnical display of Prokoviev's "Classical Symphony," the "140th Psalm" by Sessions; the mirthful music of Ricard Strauss's musical cartoon: "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks." For the final work, the genius of Brahms was again invoked with the inclusion of the German melodist's Piano Concerto No. 2 in which Abbey Simon, American-born pianist, but musical citizen of the world, making his Tanglewood debut, proved him to be one of the finest exponents of his instrument to be heard at this or any other Berkshire season.

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 51,098

JUL 5 1966

Romanticism Flares At Tanglewood

By Peter M. Knapp

LENOX — Tanglewood opened with a big Brahms blast over the Fourth of July weekend.

At their summer encampment in the normally cool green Berkshire Hills, Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra are perusing the romantic concerto repertoire as a theme for this year's Berkshire Music Festival.

For opening weekend, instead of the chamber-sized Mozart-Bach concerts (which begin next weekend), the full orchestra was present for three of Johannes Brahms' concerti — the violin, the "double", and yesterday, the Second Piano Concerto for which Abbey Simon was soloist.

Monday produced the only true Tanglewood weather — a sunny and comfortably warm but unoppressive afternoon which attracted 4,278 to the verdant grounds. However, the musical events were less dazzling.

Simonized Stint

Certainly there were no holiday fireworks in Simon's low-key approach to the block-busting B-flat piano concerto. It hardly seems possible to underplay this work, yet it was done, and even the orchestra seemed to lose interest before the last bars.

Not that Simon missed many notes, though he did overpedal extravagantly and his left hand often dropped out of sight. He just failed to make the music compelling, to throw some vitality into it, and in truth it was just plain dull.

Otherwise, there was nothing to touch the magnificent reading of the Mahler Fourth Symphony the preceding day. Prokofiev's "Classical" Symphony tripped along nicely enough, but the use of the full orchestra overwhelmed the dainty score. Richard Strauss' merry tone poem "Till Eulen spiegel" has been played with more esprit, more precision in the woodwinds and less bombast at the end, though it did have its moments.

Roger Sessions' recent Psalm 140 for Soprano and Orchestra had its Tanglewood debut, with the composer going onstage to take his bows. Soprano Anne Elgar was the soloist, and declaimed the erratic vocal line with distinction.

Sessions presumes a gifted soloist for this work — originally for organ and voice and later scored for full orchestra. The soprano gets a workout, with wide skips and troublesome intervals, without much help from the orchestra which pursues its own gritty way. One wonders where the soloist finds her pitch.

"Deliver me, O Lord, from the evil man: preserve me from the violent man," the psalm implores. Sessions conjures up violence in his accompaniment, in bristling strings and spiky harmonies. Miss Elgar perhaps lacks the full weight Sessions requires here, but she projected the text probably as well as it can be done, and with considerable power.

Open With Strings

In Saturday's opener on a steamy evening, Shmuel Ashkenasi was soloist in Brahms' violin concerto. Leinsdorf also led his jacket-less musicians through a dramatic reading of Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser" and Stravinsky's Petrouchka" ballet suite before 7,545 patrons.

ANNE ELGAR
. . . soprano at Berkshires

Ashkenasi, 25, was born in Israel and received his training there and in this country. He is a large young man with dark, curly hair and a modest stage bearing.

He had his problems with the Brahms — particularly the first movement — and the general impression he left was of a youngster with considerable talent which has not yet fully ripened.

In the exacting opening movement, Ashkenasi's playing was marred by uneven tone, problems with pitch, and attacks that often were coarse. He seemed to be pressing too hard, especially in his rugged assaults on double-stopped passages. The heat, however, was wilting, and Ashkenasi had not been feeling too well since his arrival at Tanglewood, which may be the source of his troubles.

The audience applauded lavishly after the movement. "It's so super! It just clutched you right here," gushed a nearby listener.

The final two movements went better, though with occasional echoes of his earlier problems. Ashkenasi's tone blossomed into a freer sound and his technical skills were more even, especially in the finale. The violinist caressed the song of the second movement tenderly, with vibrato that stopped just short of throbbing.

Beating The Heat

Considering the heat, "Petrouchka" was a triumph of professional musicianship. The intricate by-play of this brilliant score, the many difficult solos, the blazing section work were superbly executed by the BSO players.

Leinsdorf perhaps loses some of the raw vitality of Stravinsky's showpiece in damping down some of the enthusiasm that tempts an orchestra to boil over with sound. But he does illuminate the bits and pieces of the score with uncommon clarity.

He excels in putting a particular instrumental section in perspective — in the just-so weighting, for example, of the hurdy-gurdy music of the carousel in the Shrove-Tide Fair, or the progressively heavier ostinato rhythm near the end of the suite. And this kind of control and balance produces its own excitement.

Richard Woitach, a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty and of the Metropolitan Opera musical staff, played the piano solos.

Sunday threatened to be equally hot, which perhaps cut down the audience to 5,953. But by concert time a cooling breeze was blowing and the shed was relatively comfortable.

It was a fine concert on a glorious afternoon, with the Symphony in peak form and expert soloists. Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein and principal cellist Jules Eskin came out front for Brahms' Concerto in a minor for violin and cello, the "double concerto," and Miss Elgar was soloist for Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 in G.

Silverstein and Eskin have come a long way in the last few years as soloists. The solo opportunities given these BSO first deskmen by their conductor has paid off in maturity and assurance.

The Brahms displayed both at their best. Eskin's tone has become more even and glistening than before. The sonorous manner in which he launched the concerto with a cadenza in the depths of the instrument was matched by the expressiveness of his upper register and the smoothness of his work in the brisk finale. Silverstein's technical prowess came through in well-articulated scales and arpeggiation, and in his radiant tones, though he could be more forceful in some of his attacks.

Viva Leinsdorf

Leinsdorf guided the dialogue for high and low strings with his customary skill, hanging out orchestral buildups for his soloists like a Bob Cousy setting up easy basketball shots.

The velvety sonorities and warm lyricism of the Brahms furnish choice summertime listening, as do the pastoral qualities of the Mahler Fourth. A merry jingle of sleighbells and a chirp of woodwinds start the symphony, and this easy-going quality continues to the end.

It's a long symphony, to be sure. But Mahler's sunny tunes and the imaginative orchestration make up for the composer's loquacity. Leinsdorf is a superb Mahler conductor. In this splendid interpretation, everything seemed to be in its correct proportion to the whole, and to be flowing in an easy, gemuetlich grace. It was probably one of the most relaxed and relaxing performances Leinsdorf has led — and in the third movement variations, one of the most beautiful as well.

Miss Elgar contributed a good deal to the final movement, in which Mahler arrays gay, jigging tunes behind the soprano's stanzas telling of the delights of heaven. Her singing seemed much more effective than in her appearance in the Mahler in Symphony Hall this March. Her diction again was superb, and her clear soprano carried strongly throughout the shed.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266

JUL 5 1966

7,500 Attend Tanglewood's First Concert

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Although Tanglewood was not exactly an escape from humidity and sultry weather, the opening program on Saturday night drew more than 7,500 persons to hear Erich Leinsdorf and the full complement of the Boston Symphony in the Music Shed in Lenox, Mass.

With a musical agenda that included familiar works by Wagner, Stravinsky, and Brahms there was an obvious attempt to attract the holiday trade that in previous years was offered the so-called Bach-Mozart series. Whether this will prove an astute change in terms of the box-office will probably be determined after the July 4th figures are appraised.

* * *

Mr. Leinsdorf opened the festivities with the Dresden version of Wagner's "Tannhauser" Overture, which means that the Venusberg music was surrounded by the thematic material of the Pilgrim's Chorus. For Leinsdorf, who was once the principal conductor of the Metropolitan's Wagnerian wing, it was indeed familiar fare.

If some, including this reviewer, found the conductor's tempos somewhat deliberate and the playing somewhat less than impassioned, the rich sonority of the Boston brass and the woodwind playing in the Venusberg music were beautifully poised and thoroughly impressive.

* * *

Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" Suite is now a solid repertory piece but this did not rule out an exciting performance from the Bostonians on this occasion.

While Stravinsky himself has come to prefer his later version with a smaller orchestra, Leinsdorf achieved such transparency of texture and clarity of detail in this performance that if afforded even the most carping listener more than could reasonably be expected from such a large aggregation of players.

* * *

Brahms' Violin Concerto introduced the young Israeli violinist Shmuel Ashkenasi, to Tanglewood audiences for the time but I did not envy playing under the conditions imposed by the sticky weather Saturday night. This is a and arduous workout for soloist.

It was obvious that Mr. Ashkenasi is a performer of considerable technical attainments. Although he was more than a little nervous (which may have been the reason that his tone did not through the orchestral texture the way it should), his authoritative handling of the double-stopped passages was praiseworthy.

* * *

The Allegro giocoso was most successfully realized of three movements and more for the slow movement a tenuous performance. Mr. Leinsdorf offered sympathetic support and allowed the soloist a chance to rest between movements, which I'm sure was appreciated by Ashkenasi.

Incidentally, Friday night concerts start at 9 o'clock this season, with what is called a Weekend Prelude (starting at 7) preceding the main concert. Saturday night concerts are at 8 and Sunday's concerts are at 2:30.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,304
JUL 5 1966

Music Review

Berkshire Festival Opens

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BERKSHIRE Festival got under way this past weekend in greater strength than has ever been the custom in other years. Instead of starting with two weeks of so-called smaller concerts, in which only Bach and Mozart are played (these weeks were postponed to the second and third weeks of the Festival), the complete personnel of the Boston Symphony Orchestra came on to play three concerts, centered around three of the four Brahms concertos.

The only novelty of the weekend was Roger Sessions' Psalm No. 140 for soprano and orchestra. Sessions is on the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the academy which is a major adjunct of the Tanglewood enterprise, and was in the audience. He was called to the stage to share in the appreciation which followed the performance of his music.

* * *

ANNE ELGAR was the soloist and her clear, easy and powerful voice proclaimed the psalm over and against the uncompromising statement of Sessions' orchestra. The composer, a man of long-honored and erudite record, chose to represent religious experience in violent imprecations. He supplied information concerning the source of his commission and his purpose in choosing a certain kind of Biblical text. The Hebrew name for the Psalms is "tehillim," meaning "praise-songs," but they include many of widely varied character. A reduced orchestra was used. The vocal line was not in apparent sympathy with the poem nor the orchestral mode of expression. Only in the short postlude was a supplicant mood expressed by decreasing and perspectively-vanishing asperity.

The weekend was a tour de force for the orchestra's conductor, Erich Leinsdorf. The major opus of the three programs within 40 hours was the Mahler fourth symphony, a strangely paradoxical work, which was played Sunday afternoon. It is full of short engaging themes of youthful freshness made to fit and intertwine into a broader canvas by Mahler's great instrumentative genius. Leinsdorf made it completely transparent, and the orchestra responded to his sparse but telling indications with vital alacrity and tonal splendor.

MAHLER ASKED that his symphony begin "comfortably." Leinsdorf's "commodo" is certainly leisurely; but the variety of idioms placed in juxtaposition, both in tempo and color, maintain interest and enjoyment during the entire length of the hour-long symphony. The final movement enlists a soprano voice singing one of the composer's songs from his own "Des Knaben Wunderhorn." Miss Elgar again was the vocalist but she favored her beautiful voice above the textual content of the music and disregarded in some details the composer's desires.

Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" Saturday night was, appropriately for the holiday weekend, of spectacular brilliance. Leinsdorf is a chef who never forgets to use a modicum of sang-froid, and so the pyrotechnical display was never in vertiginous display, but he gave the orchestra's principals ample opportunity for individual display.

In the first half of yesterday's program were two witty, short jolly works: Prokofieff's Classical Symphony and Richard Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel." In such competent hands, both are pure delight and the orchestra continued its virtuoso pace.

* * *

IN THE BRAHMS concerto Shmuel Ashkenasi was soloist in the violin concerto Saturday night. Sunday afternoon Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, the principal cello, played the "double" concerto, and yesterday afternoon Abbey Simon the second piano concerto. Experts have analyzed and drained the Brahms concertos with every kind of penetrating inspection and have come up with semantic decisions proving that the importance of the orchestral parts outweighs and overshadows the soloists' assignments. They claim the concertos are more "against" the solo than "with" it and it is an ever-present danger that the conductor may allow his orchestra to obscure in some degree the soloist. Leinsdorf did not so qualify very often. Moreover, he had an outstanding set of soloists.

Ashkenasi, it was learned later, played under handicap. He suffered an indisposition just before the concert, but he went through like a trouper and, except for some initial over-eager pressing, he showed a thorough understanding of the music. His technical equipment was far in excess of the formidable requirements of the concerto but it was more a muscular rendition than was essential. He won the heart of the audience and the orchestra's appreciation of his valor.

* * *

THE PRESENT standard of instrumental competence has risen so much in this last generation that technical accomplishments are no longer matters worthy of mention, yet that facet of the performance by Silverstein and Eskin cannot fairly be ignored. In the unsurpassable coordination of their performance and in the expansive slow movement, they produced an exemplary sonority and just intonation.

Yesterday afternoon Abbey Simon played with gratifying spaciousness. His climaxes were well prepared and his sense of proportion made his performance outstanding architecturally.

The orchestral management announced that, including the Saturday morning open rehearsal, there was a total paid attendance over the weekend of 19,366.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 177,755
JUL 5 1966

Tanglewood opens its 29th year

ARTS ENTERTAINMENT

Lenox, Mass.

Over the Fourth of July weekend Erich Leinsdorf opened the 29th Berkshire Music Festival. If his programs were made up mainly of works played this past season by the Boston Symphony, the repetition offered no great problem to Tanglewood audiences. Most of the listeners were New Yorkers.

Among the featured items were Stravinsky's Suite from "Petrouchka," the Brahms Violin Concerto (with 25-year-old Shmuel Askenasi from Israel as soloist), and the Mahler Symphony No. 4. For the Mahler, Anne Elgar again took the solo, as she did this past season at Symphony Hall; and the day following she appeared in Roger Sessions's "Psalm 140" for Soprano and Orchestra. This, too, she had sung in Boston.

Again her superb musicianship was put to the test by Sessions's acerb writing; and again one was overwhelmed by the sense that Sessions had missed the mark in setting the Psalm that begins: "Deliver me, O Lord, from the evil man: preserve me from the violent man." Whereupon Sessions sets to work atonally to give literal voice to evil, to violence and wickedness. It is a prayer, and the music should underline the petitioner's mood. He is not an angry man; he is simply asking to be saved from angry men.

Appealing performances

In addition to the Sessions, the Fourth of July program included Prokofiev's "Classical" Symphony (for which Mr. Leinsdorf has finally established appropriate tempos). The conductor turned out a thoroughly engaging performance of Strauss's "Til Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," and the event came to a close with a deeply satisfying traversal of the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

Abbey Simon was the soloist in the Brahms, and he forsook all superficial brilliance to provide an introspective performance. His excellent technique was put to the service of the poetic character of the music, and in this he was handsomely supported by Mr. Leinsdorf's orchestral collaboration.

Afterwards Mr. Simon was cheered for his work. Mr. Sessions, too, was on hand for rounds of applause after the performance of his "Psalm 140." H. R.

By Whitestone

Erich Leinsdorf

. . . conducted the opening concerts of the 29th Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood this past weekend.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,304
JUL 5 1966

Whitestone

OPENING NIGHT concert of 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Saturday featured violinist Shmuel Ashkenasi, left, shown here with Boston Symphony Orchestra director Erich Leinsdorf. The performance marked Ashkenasi's Tanglewood debut.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,304
JUL 5 1966

Music Review

Berkshire Festival Opens

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BERKSHIRE Festival got under way this past weekend in greater strength than has ever been the custom in other years. Instead of starting with two weeks of so-called smaller concerts, in which only Bach and Mozart are played (these weeks were postponed to the second and third weeks of the Festival), the complete personnel of the Boston Symphony Orchestra came on to play three concerts, centered around three of the four Brahms concertos.

The only novelty of the weekend was Roger Sessions' Psalm No. 140 for soprano and orchestra. Sessions is on the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the academy which is a major adjunct of the Tanglewood enterprise, and was in the audience. He was called to the stage to share in the appreciation which followed the performance of his music.

* * *

ANNE ELGAR was the soloist and her clear, easy and powerful voice proclaimed the psalm over and against the uncompromising statement of Sessions' orchestra. The composer, a man of long-honored and erudite record, chose to represent religious experience in violent imprecations. He supplied information concerning the source of his commission and his purpose in choosing a certain kind of Biblical text. The Hebrew name for the Psalms is "tehillim," meaning "praise-songs," but they include many of widely varied character. A reduced orchestra was used. The vocal line was not in apparent sympathy with the poem nor the orchestral mode of expression. Only in the short postlude was a supplicant mood expressed by decreasing and perspectively-vanishing asperity.

The weekend was a tour de force for the orchestra's conductor, Erich Leinsdorf. The major opus of the three programs within 40 hours was the Mahler fourth symphony, a strangely paradoxical work, which was played Sunday afternoon. It is full of short engaging themes of youthful freshness made to fit and intertwine into a broader canvas by Mahler's great instrumentative genius. Leinsdorf made it completely transparent, and the orchestra responded to his sparse but telling indications with vital alacrity and tonal splendor.

MAHLER ASKED that his symphony begin "comfortably." Leinsdorf's "commodo" is certainly leisurely; but the variety of idioms placed in juxtaposition, both in tempo and color, maintain interest and enjoyment during the entire length of the hour-long symphony. The final movement enlists a soprano voice singing one of the composer's songs from his own "Des Knaben Wunderhorn." Miss Elgar again was the vocalist but she favored her beautiful voice above the textual content of the music and disregarded in some details the composer's desires.

Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" Saturday night was, appropriately for the holiday weekend, of spectacular brilliance. Leinsdorf is a chef who never forgets to use a modicum of sang-froid, and so the pyrotechnical display was never in vertiginous display, but he gave the orchestra's principals ample opportunity for individual display.

In the first half of yesterday's program were two witty, short jolly works: Prokofieff's Classical Symphony and Richard Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel." In such competent hands, both are pure delight and the orchestra continued its virtuoso pace.

* * *

IN THE BRAHMS concerto Shmuel Ashkenasi was soloist in the violin concerto Saturday night. Sunday afternoon Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster, and Jules Eskin, the principal cello, played the "double" concerto, and yesterday afternoon Abbey Simon the second piano concerto. Experts have analyzed and drained the Brahms concertos with every kind of penetrating inspection and have come up with semantic decisions proving that the importance of the orchestral parts outweighs and overshadows the soloists' assignments. They claim the concertos are more "against" the solo than "with" it and it is an ever-present danger that the conductor may allow his orchestra to obscure in some degree the soloist. Leinsdorf did not so qualify very often. Moreover, he had an outstanding set of soloists.

Ashkenasi, it was learned later, played under handicap. He suffered an indisposition just before the concert, but he went through like a trouper and, except for some initial over-eager pressing, he showed a thorough understanding of the music. His technical equipment was far in excess of the formidable requirements of the concerto but it was more a muscular rendition than was essential. He won the heart of the audience and the orchestra's appreciation of his valor.

* * *

THE PRESENT standard of instrumental competence has risen so much in this last generation that technical accomplishments are no longer matters worthy of mention, yet that facet of the performance by Silverstein and Eskin cannot fairly be ignored. In the unsurpassable coordination of their performance and in the expansive slow movement, they produced an exemplary sonority and just intonation.

Yesterday afternoon Abbey Simon played with gratifying spaciousness. His climaxes were well prepared and his sense of proportion made his performance outstanding architecturally.

The orchestral management announced that, including the Saturday morning open rehearsal, there was a total paid attendance over the weekend of 19,366.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 177,755
JUL 5 1966

Tanglewood opens its 29th year

Lenox, Mass.

Over the Fourth of July weekend Erich Leinsdorf opened the 29th Berkshire Music Festival. If his programs were made up mainly of works played this past season by the Boston Symphony, the repetition offered no great problem to Tanglewood audiences. Most of the listeners were New Yorkers.

Among the featured items were Stravinsky's Suite from "Petrouchka," the Brahms Violin Concerto (with 25-year-old Shmuel Askenasi from Israel as soloist), and the Mahler Symphony No. 4. For the Mahler, Anne Elgar again took the solo, as she did this past season at Symphony Hall; and the day following she appeared in Roger Sessions's "Psalm 140" for Soprano and Orchestra. This, too, she had sung in Boston.

Again her superb musicianship was put to the test by Sessions's acerb writing; and again one was overwhelmed by the sense that Sessions had missed the mark in setting the Psalm that begins: "Deliver me, O Lord, from the evil man: preserve me from the violent man." Whereupon Sessions sets to work atonally to give literal voice to evil, to violence and wickedness. It is a prayer, and the music should underline the petitioner's mood. He is not an angry man; he is simply asking to be saved from angry men.

Appealing performances

In addition to the Sessions, the Fourth of July program included Prokofiev's "Classical" Symphony (for which Mr. Leinsdorf has finally established appropriate tempos). The conductor turned out a thoroughly engaging performance of Strauss's "Til Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," and the event came to a close with a deeply satisfying traversal of the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

Abbey Simon was the soloist in the Brahms, and he forsook all superficial brilliance to provide an introspective performance. His excellent technique was put to the service of the poetic character of the music, and in this he was handsomely supported by Mr. Leinsdorf's orchestral collaboration.

Afterwards Mr. Simon was cheered for his work. Mr. Sessions, too, was on hand for rounds of applause after the performance of his "Psalm 140."

H. R.

ARTS
ENTERTAINMENT

By Whitestone

Erich Leinsdorf

. . . conducted the opening concerts of the 29th Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood this past weekend.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,304
JUL 5 1966

Whitestone

OPENING NIGHT concert of 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Saturday featured violinist Shmuel Ashkenasi, left, shown here with Boston Symphony Orchestra director Erich Leinsdorf. The performance marked Ashkenasi's Tanglewood debut.

TIGHT BINDING

Albany Knickerbocker News
Tuesday, July 5, 1966

At the Concert

Tanglewood's 29th Season Gets Underway

Opening Concert

By R. E. KRIEGER

LENOX, Mass. — With musicians playing in their shirtsleeves in the hottest weather in many years, the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its 29th season Saturday before a perspiring and panting audience of some 7,545 people.

The highlight of the performance was the appearance of 25-year-old Shmuel Asknenasi, the Tel Aviv violinist and second prize winner in the 1962 Tchaikovsky Competition, in a performance of Brahm's only violin concert, that in D Major.

In one of the most difficult of the works written for violin, Ashkenasi wended what seemed a remarkably easy way through the labryinth.

Prize Winner

His tone is impeccable, his technique flawless and it was easy to understand how he was a Moscow prize winner.

The detailed passage work was fluidly encompassed and he was especially fine in the second melody.

His performance is all the more remarkable when one finds that he had been ill with a stomach disorder throughout most of the day.

He was forced to break off rehearsal in the middle that afternoon, although he did return later.

The middle work of the afternoon was Stravinsky's suite from the ballet, "Petrouchka," the work for which he interrupted completion of his "Sacre du Printemps."

The ballet setting is that of a Russian carnival and consequently there is almost a cacophony what with the merging of the sounds . . . the dancing bear, the Russian dance, the sounds of a hand organ, dances, all telling the story of Petrouchka, the puppet, who falls in love with a puppet ballerina and is eventually killed by a rival.

There are tambourines, flute, clarinet, tuba, accordion music (imitated by oboe against plucked strings) and soaring out of this are what Stravinsky called "diabolical cascades of appeggios, menacing trumpet blasts and the outcome a terrific noise."

The Boston Orchestra, under Erich Leinsdorf was superb in this rather tricky and difficult work that resulted in four return calls for the maestro and the orchestra.

The afternoon opened with the overture to Wagner's "Tannhauser" . . . the stately and familiar "Pilgrim's Chorus" filtering out over the audience and people sitting outside on the grounds. The voluptuous Venusberg section in the strings was absolutely beautiful and the following chorus with full orchestra resplendently showed why this orchestra is thought by some to be the finest in the world.

Sunday Concert

The Sunday concert is reviewed over at the right and and yesterday's concert had soloist Anne Elgar singing Sessions' "Psalm 140 for soprano and orchestra" and pianist Abbey Simon as soloist in Brahms Second piano concert.

Other works of the afternoon were Prokofiev's "Classical" Symphony and Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks."

Incidentally, this performance by the full orchestra to open the season is unusual. There is normally a large chamber group playing either Mozart or Bach while the balance of the orchestra is back in Boston for the Esplanade concerts.

This year the Boston concerts are scheduled for the next two weeks so we shall return to the large chamber works at Tanglewood for the next two weekends.

TANGLEWOOD OPENS ITS 29TH YEAR—Erich Leinsdorf is shown in a familiar pose as he conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the opening of the 1966 Tanglewood Concerts at Lenox, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 94,357
JUL 5 1966

Tanglewood Has A Hot Opening

By JOHN F. KYES
Gazette Music Critic

LENOX — The eight-week season of Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood opened handsomely Saturday night in spite of the oppressive heat.

The 104 shirtsleeved players came through with audience pleasing spirit and tone in two famous "storytelling" pieces, Wagner's Overture to "Tannhauser" and a suite from Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" ballet music.

Gazette Review

Erich Leinsdorf's assets also included the brilliant 25-year-old Israeli pianist, Shmuel Ashkenasi, in Brahms' difficult but romantic Concerto in D major.

The weekend series continued to emphasize Brahms, with Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin in the Violin-Cello Concerto in A minor on Sunday and Abbey Simon in the Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat major on Monday.

Soprano Soloist

Anne Elgar was the soprano soloist in Mahler's Symphony No. 4 in G major on Sunday, and Roger Sessions' setting of Psalm 140 on Monday.

The opening concert drew about 7,500, a gratifying result.

Steadiness and purity of tone, needed for the Chorus of Pilgrims theme in "Tannhauser," were present in abundance, and the ensemble glittered and sang in the "Venusberg" scenes more supernatural than sensual to modern ears.

A different magic was unleashed in Stravinsky's tale of the sad puppet and his hopeless love, against a carnival background. Wry humor, sentiment and the roar of crowds were depicted in clever handling of tonal possibilities, as well as fiendishly intricate rhythms and odd-length measures. Richard Woitach's piano passages had colorful prominence, and a delightful flute solo by Dorin Anthony Dwyer emerged from the mimicries contributed by her more earthy companion woodwinds.

Affected by Heat

Ashkenasi, visbly affected by the heat and humidity, nevertheless projected a versatile quality of tone, heard effectively at all times and ranging from the tranquilities of the "Adagio" to the bristling cadenza of the first movement, and the friendly but keen competition between violin and orchestra in the final "Allegro giocoso."

The Brahms was rich in heartfelt emotion, often causing one to forget the extent of its famous difficulties.

Next Friday the format changes to a 50-piece chamber orchestra in a weekend of Mozart, with a "Festival Prelude" at 7 o'clock on Friday preceding the main concert at 8. Saturday and Sunday will revert to traditional times, 8 and 3 respectively.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
JUL 5 1966

MUSIC

Abbey Simon Offers a Poetic Brahms

By McLAREN HARRIS

TANGLEWOOD — With many vacationers homeward bound on Monday afternoon, the crowd dwindled for the final Symphony concert of the Berkshire Festival's first full weekend. At the same time, thankfully for those who remained, temperatures were somewhat lower inside the Music Shed.

EMINENT MELODIST

For the third time in as many concerts, a Brahms Concerto appeared on the program. The Concerto No. 2 for piano, played by Abbey Simon, was a repeat from last season, as were the other works, but the Symphony Hall performances occurred during the newspaper strike.

Mr. Simon, American born, educated, and now residing in Switzerland, is an eminent keyboard melodist. It may be said that he treats the piano kindly, always with an ear for the best manner in which his instrument can curve and taper its lines. Where the texture and tempo gave him a chance to relax, the pianist's concentration was utmost, etching his part with clarity, building and diminishing the substance in gradual steps. The Andante was purely poetic, meticulously wrought.

But the Brahms Concerto has another side—and Mr. Simon's performance was simply not massive. He had all the requsite dexterity but seemingly not the strength to deliver the far flung chordal motives with full sonority. For the most part he stayed well in tempo with barely a rubato—which is fine for discipline, but the soloist was left with scant time to prepare for large scale attacks. The three fast movements were occasionally breathless and a bit short on contrast.

Where we might have expected, on July 4, to find a taste of nationalism by Ives, Schuman or Copeland for the remainder, Erich Leinsdorf presented Prokofiev, Sessions and Strauss; a sprightly, endearing "Classical" Symphony from the first; a dramatic (and lyric, considering its atonality) Psalm 140, with Anne Elgar as soprano soloist afrom Mr. Sessions, who attended; Till Eulenspeigel from the latter composer, marked by fine bombast, but plenty of shaky responses from the winds.

But a holiday is a holiday, and the audience found most everything to its favor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 61,129
JUL 5 1966

Music: First Weekend Ends At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The first weekend of Berkshire Music Festival concerts at Tanglewood ended yesterday afternoon with a program that covered a lot of ground and common interest.

Attendance was 4,278, the smallest for the three events, bringing the total to 19,366. This is a little better than half of expectations.

Erich Leinsdorf conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Prokofieff's "Classical" Symphony in D major, Opus 25, and Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," Opus 28.

Anne Elgar was soprano soloist in Roger Sessions' Psalm 140. Abbey Simon was soloist in Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat major, Opus 83. The Brahms fulfilled the Festival's chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti.

Simon Hero of Occasion

Simon was hero of the occasion. Jules Eskin brought unusual substance and beauty to the prominent cello solo of the third movement.

Everything about the Concerto bespoke high grade musicianship and temperament.

Simon is a sound, admirably equipped technician. He is not a dashing virtuoso, but this was no detriment excepting for the concerto's finale which lacked fire and drive. Elsewhere, absence of exterior dazzle served good purpose.

It was clear from the start that pianist and conductor had a clear understanding of the direction they were to take, and of fine points of nuance.

Conducted From Memory

Leinsdorf conducted from memory. This is a most unusual procedure when conducting for a soloist.

The first movement's initial statement heralded an attention-holding experience. Simon discharged difficult passages with deft, reliable technique, conservative sonorities, and excellent symmetry.

Stages of brilliance were reached in the fiery scherzo. The slow movement had tonal warmth and compelling emotion. The finale was more competent than dashing, but it did set off a most cordial reception for soloist, shared by conductor and orchestra who had given him a superlative background.

We can't report with much enthusiasm on Sessions' Psalm or its performance. Miss Elgar disclosed more verve than in her Sunday afternoon performance in Mahler's Fourth Symphony.

The question is whether the solo score should have been entrusted to a voice of greater dramatic stature, or whether the orchestral accompaniment should have been consideraly modified.

Little of the powerful text of declaration and petition came through. Sequences of extreme orchestral effects were separate issues, because most of the words were lost in a maze of instrumental cocophony.

Miss Elgar's voice was little more than another sound added to the orchestral.

Clear Pronunciation

What could be heard indicated clear pronunciation and a bright tone.

Sessions is composer - in - residence at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, and was on hand to acknowledge cordial applause.

Strauss' "Till" received a sensational performance. The orchestra was in top form, technically and tonally. Leinsdorf slowed down some of the frequently hurried passages, bringing out usually - concealed material. Here was music in which program shared absorbtion with instrumental brilliance.

Leinsdorf completed discarded Prokofieff's usual haranguery in the "Classical" Symphony. The four short movements were gems of satire.

The first was an undiminished burst of vitality. The second was a model of grace featuring beautiful string tone. The Gavotte was a perfect display of Prokofieff irony, and the finale raced to the finish line with impeccable accuracy — the work of a great orchestra.

The smaller orchestra will begin the festival's second weekend on Friday night. Leinsdorf will conduct an all-Mozart program — "Paris" and Jupiter" Symphonies, March No. 3 in C major, and Piano Concerto in B flat, K.450 with Malcolm Frager as soloist.

A preliminary program, beginning at 7 p.m., will feature the Tanglewood Choir and duo-pianists, Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir.

od Has ning

the "Venusberg" scenes ore supernatural than sensual modern ears.

A different magic was unashed in Stravinsky's tale of e sad puppet and his hopeless ve, against a carnival backound. Wry humor, sentiment d the roar of crowds were dected in clever handling of nal possibilities, as well as endishly intricate rhythms
d odd-length measures. Rich-
d. Woitach's piano passages d colorful prominence, and a lightful flute solo by Doriot nthony Dwyer emerged from e mimicries contributed by r more earthy companion oodwinds.

Affected by Heat

Ashkenasi, visibly affected by e heat and humidity, never-eless projected a versatile uality of tone, heard effective-y at all times and ranging rom the tranquilities of the 'Adagio" to the bristling ca-
enza of the first movement, nd the friendly but keen competition between violin and orchestra in the final "Allegro giocoso."

The Brahms was rich in heartfelt emotion, often causing one to forget the extent of its famous difficulties.

Next Friday the format changes to a 50-piece chamber orchestra in a weekend of Mozart, with a "Festival Prelude" at 7 o'clock on Friday preceding the main concert at 9. Saturday and Sunday will revert to traditional times, 8 and 2: respectively.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
JUL 5 1966

At Tanglewood

Abbey Simon's Brahms Has Sparkling Finale

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Abbey Simon ended Monday afternoon's concert at Tanglewood as soloist in Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 with a performance that seemed to have a kind of crescendo of its own.

Ends With Joyousness

The music very gradually increased in sensitivity and depth of expression so that although it was disappointingly wooden at the outset, it wound up in an atmosphere of bright joyousness.

There wasn't anything specifically wrong with the music at the beginning; every note was in place properly and impersonally. It just didn't seem to have much inspiration. It was accurate and non-committal.

The second movement perked up, and the third, a slow movement, had several moments of smooth, seamless, flowing beauty. The last was sparkling with a greater gaiety than even the gay score asked for.

A Matter of Spirit

The difference between first and last couldn't be attributed to competence inasmuch as the early pages seemed to be performed without fault; it was a matter of spirit, an indefinable matter to be felt rather than identified.

Before intermission the program presented three works composed according to three widely-diverging styles: Prokofiev's "Classical" Symphony, Roger Sessions' Psalm 140 for Soprano and Orchestra and Richard Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks."

The Prokofiev piece, a delightful recreation of 18th-Century style, and "Till Eulenspiegel," both well-known, popular works, were played Monday with elegant precision.

Neither is music of the depth of, say, the Brahms' concerto which followed intermission, but both are fun, the Prokofiev because of its light manner and delicate melodies and "Till" because of its great wealth of brilliant orchestral color.

Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra are highly expert practitioners of this sort of music because it depends upon the meticulous clarity of tone and timing that the Boston ensemble can produce at least as well as, and probably better than, any other orchestra.

The Sessions' Psalm, however, probably was of more interest to musicians in the audience. It was composed in 1963 first as an organ and soprano duet and rescored in 1964 for large orchestra and soprano.

Anne Elgar Performs

Soloist Monday was Anne Elgar, the soprano who entranced the audience Sunday afternoon with her performance of the soprano part in the fourth movement of Mahler's fourth symphony.

She didn't sound so beautiful because the music was not beautiful; it is a fervent prayer for help which begins with the words "Deliver me, O Lord, from the evil man," and uses throughout the stark methods of contemporary music (discord, fragmented phrases, giant leaps of pitch, avoidance of rythmic pattern) to establish a mood of despair and intensity.

It ends, however, with a phrase of mild dissonance which follows the words "The upright shall dwell in Thy presence" and seems to hint at optimism.

It was a compelling piece, commissioned by Princeton Theoogical Seminary, but its musical difficulty probably will keep it from being heard very often.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607
JUL 11 1966

Symphonies By Mozart WellReceived

By EDGAR S. VANOLINDA

Symphonic music in its purest form ushered in the second week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood over the weekend. Eric Leinsdorf offered a grateful sampling of the prodigious musical resources of Mozart, who in his 35 short years contributed so much to the happiness of the civilized world.

Mr. Leinsdorf broke with Tanglewood traditions by preluding the programmed works with short, symphonic works, interspersed with duo piano and choral compositions, Friday evening. The major program began at 9 p.m., to enable out of town patrons more leisurely transportation arrangements.

A piquant march, two symphonies and a piano concerto constituted the major portion of the program, featuring Malcolm Frager, makinig his third annual appearance at Tanglewood as soloist. The 31-year virtuoso is endowed with tremendous technical gifts, which, however, never intrude upon his individualistic approach to the sparkling melodies of Mozart, allowing him full expression of personal joy in its recreation.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
APRIL 15, 1966

BSO Lauded For Boosting Berkshires

Manager Perry Given Award By Conference

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was lauded last night as the major attraction that has built the Berkshires' international reputation as a tourist area.

John T. McPhillips, president of the Berkshire Hills Conference, paid the BSO the compliment as he presented the orchestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry Jr., a special award honoring the orchestra on the 30th anniversary of its affiliation with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

In accepting the engraved silver tray, Mr. Perry credited the Berkshire County setting with enhancing the BSO's reputation.

"The Boston Symphony could not have been the orchestra it is now," he said, "if it had not been for the place in which we find ourselves. We are more than grateful to be here, and we intend to stay."

Special Award to Sheriff

John V. Geary, executive director of the conference, the county's tourist promotion agency, presented a special award to Sheriff John D. Courtney for assisting the organization's conservation program by instituting a prisoner-work project at Balance Rock Park in Lanesboro.

More than 300 attended the conference's 41st annual dinner at Eastover in Lenox. A. John Tuller of Great Barrington, a past president of the organization, was master of ceremonies.

Among those he introduced was George W. Schryver of Williamstown, who was active in the conference when it was first formed.

J. Robert Busch of Pittsfield, another past president of the conference, introduced the main speaker, Harry Bowser of New York City. Mr. Bowser, a representative of the All-Star Dairy Association, talked on growth, change, opportunity and salesmanship.

Marasco

30TH ANNIVERSARY of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's affiliation with Tanglewood is marked by presentation to BSO Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. from the Berkshire Hills Conference President John T. McPhillips, left. At right is John V. Geary, conference executive director. Award was made at annual dinner last night.

APRIL 12, 1966

41

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 61,129
JUL 5 1966

Music: First Weekend Ends At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The first weekend of Berkshire Music Festival concerts at Tanglewood ended yesterday afternoon with a program that covered a lot of ground and common interest.

Attendance was 4,278, the smallest for the three events, bringing the total to 19,366. This is a little better than half of expectations.

Erich Leinsdorf conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Prokofieff's "Classical" Symphony in D major, Opus 25, and Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," Opus 28.

Anne Elgar was soprano soloist in Roger Sessions' Psalm 140. Abbey Simon was soloist in Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat major, Opus 83. The Brahms fulfilled the Festival's chosen theme, the Romantic Concerti.

Simon Hero of Occasion

Simon was hero of the occasion. Jules Eskin brought unusual substance and beauty to the prominent cello solo of the third movement.

Everything about the Concerto bespoke high grade musicianship and temperament.

Simon is a sound, admirably equipped technician. He is not a dashing virtuoso, but this was no detriment excepting for the concerto's finale which lacked fire and drive. Elsewhere, absence of exterior dazzle served good purpose.

It was clear from the start that pianist and conductor had a clear understanding of the direction they were to take, and of fine points of nuance.

Conducted From Memory

Leinsdorf conducted from memory. This is a most unusual procedure when conducting for a soloist.

The first movement's initial statement heralded an attention-holding experience. Simon discharged difficult passages with deft, reliable technique, conservative sonorities, and excellent symmetry.

Stages of brilliance were reached in the fiery scherzo. The slow movement had tonal warmth and compelling emotion. The finale was more competent than dashing, but it did set off a most cordial reception for soloist, shared by conductor and orchestra who had given him a superlative background.

We can't report with much enthusiasm on Sessions' Psalm or its performance. Miss Elgar disclosed more verve than in her Sunday afternoon performance in Mahler's Fourth Symphony.

The question is whether the solo score should have been entrusted to a voice of greater dramatic stature, or whether the orchestral accompaniment should have been consideraly modified.

Little of the powerful text of declaration and petition came through. Sequences of extreme orchestral effects were separate issues, because most of the words were lost in a maze of instrumental cocophony.

Miss Elgar's voice was little more than another sound added to the orchestral.

Clear Pronunciation

What could be heard indicated clear pronunciation and a bright tone.

Sessions is composer - in - residence at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, and was on hand to acknowledge cordial applause.

Strauss' "Till" received a sensational performance. The orchestra was in top form, technically and tonally. Leinsdorf slowed down some of the frequently hurried passages, bringing out usually - concealed material. Here was music in which program shared absorbtion with instrumental brilliance.

Leinsdorf completed discarded Prokofieff's usual haranguery in the "Classical" Symphony. The four short movements were gems of satire.

The first was an undiminished burst of vitality. The second was a model of grace featuring beautiful string tone. The Gavotte was a perfect display of Prokofieff irony, and the finale raced to the finish line with impeccable accuracy — the work of a great orchestra.

The smaller orchestra will begin the festival's second weekend on Friday night. Leinsdorf will conduct an all-Mozart program — "Paris" and Jupiter" Symphonies, March No. 3 in C major, and Piano Concerto in B flat, K.450 with Malcolm Frager as soloist.

A preliminary program, beginning at 7 p.m., will feature the Tanglewood Choir and duo-pianists, Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir.

od Has ning

the "Venusberg" scenes ore supernatural than sensual
modern ears.

A different magic was unashed in Stravinsky's tale of e sad puppet and his hopeless ve, against a carnival background. Wry humor, sentiment nd the roar of crowds were deicted in clever handling of nal possibilities, as well as endishly intricate rhythms nd odd-length measures. Richd Woitach's piano passages nd colorful prominence, and a elightful flute solo by Doriot nthony Dwyer emerged from e mimicries contributed by er more earthy companion oodwinds.

Affected by Heat

Ashkenasi, visbly affected by he heat and humidity, nevertheless projected a versatile uality of tone, heard effectively at all times and ranging rom the tranquilities of the 'Adagio" to the bristling calenza of the first movement, and the friendly but keen competition between violin and orchestra in the final "Allegro giocoso."

The Brahms was rich in heartfelt emotion, often causing one to forget the extent of its famous difficulties.

Next Friday the format changes to a 50-piece chamber orchestra in a weekend of Mozart, with a "Festival Prelude" at 7 o'clock on Friday preceding the main concert at 9. Saturday and Sunday will revert to traditional times, 8 and 2:30 respectively.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
JUL 5 1966

At Tanglewood

Abbey Simon's Brahms Has Sparkling Finale

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Abbey Simon ended Monday afternoon's concert at Tanglewood as soloist in Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2, with a performance that seemed to have a kind of crescendo of its own.

Ends With Joyousness

The music very gradually increased in sensitivity and depth of expression so that although it was disappointingly wooden at the outset, it wound up in an atmosphere of bright joyousness.

There wasn't anything specifically wrong with the music at the beginning; every note was in place properly and impersonally; it just didn't seem to have much inspiration. It was accurate and non-committal.

The second movement perked up, and the third, a slow movement, had several moments of smooth, seamless, flowing beauty. The last was sparkling with a greater gaiety than even the gay score asked for.

A Matter of Spirit

The difference between first and last couldn't be attributed to competence inasmuch as the early pages seemed to be performed without fault; it was a matter of spirit, an indefinable matter to be felt rather than identified.

Before intermission the program presented three works composed according to three widely-diverging styles; Prokofiev's "Classical" Symphony, Roger Sessions' Psalm 140 for Soprano and Orchestra and Richard Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks."

The Prokofiev piece, a delightful recreation of 18th-Century style, and "Till Eulenspiegel," both well-known, popular works, were played Monday with elegant precision.

Neither is music of the depth of, say, the Brahms' concerto which followed intermission, but both are fun, the Prokofiev because of its light manner and delicate melodies and "Till" because of its great wealth of brilliant orchestral color.

Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra are highly expert practitioners of this sort of music because it depends upon the meticulous clarity of tone and timing that the Boston ensemble can produce at least as well as, and probably better than, any other orchestra.

The Sessions' Psalm, however, probably was of more interest to musicians in the audience. It was composed in 1963 first as an organ and soprano duet and rescored in 1964 for large orchestra and soprano.

Anne Elgar Performs

Soloist Monday was Anne Elgasr, the soprano who entranced the audience Sunday afternoon with her performance of the soprano part in the fourth movement of Mahler's fourth symphony.

She didn't sound so beautiful because the music was not beautiful; it is a fervent prayer for help which begins with the words "Deliver me, O Lord, from the evil man," and uses throughout the stark methods of contemporary music (discord, fragmented phrases, giant leaps of pitch, avoidance of rythmic pattern) to establish a mood of despair and intensity.

It ends, however, with a phrase of mild dissonance which follows the words "The upright shall dwell in Thy presence" and seems to hint at optimism.

It was a compelling piece, commissioned by Princeton Theoogical Seminary, but its musical difficulty probably will keep it from being heard very often.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607
JUL 1 1 1966

Symphonies By Mozart WellReceived

By EDGAR S. VANOLINDA

Symphonic music in its purest form ushered in the second week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood over the weekend. Eric Leinsdorf offered a grateful sampling of the prodigious musical resources of Mozart, who in his 35 short years contributed so much to the happiness of the civilized world.

Mr. Leinsdorf broke with Tanglewood traditions by preluding the programmed works, with short, symphonic works, interspersed with duo piano and choral compositions, Friday evening. The major program began at 9 p.m., to enable out of town patrons more leisurely transportation arrangements.

A piquant march, two symphonies and a piano concerto constituted the major portion of the program, featuring Malcolm Frager, makinig his third annual appearance at Tanglewood as soloist. The 31-year virtuoso is endowed with tremendous technical gifts, which, however, never intrude upon his individualistic approach to the sparkling melodies of Mozart, allowing him full expression of personal joy in its recreation.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
APRIL 13, 1966

BSO Lauded For Boosting Berkshires

Manager Perry Given Award By Conference

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was lauded last night as the major attraction that has built the Berkshires' international reputation as a tourist area.

John T. McPhillips, president of the Berkshire Hills Conference, paid the BSO the compliment as he presented the orchestra's manager, Thomas D. Perry Jr., a special award honoring the orchestra on the 30th anniversary of its affiliation with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

In accepting the engraved silver tray, Mr. Perry credited the Berkshire County setting with enhancing the BSO's reputation.

"The Boston Symphony could not have been the orchestra it is now," he said, "if it had not been for the place in which we find ourselves. We are more than grateful to be here, and we intend to stay."

Special Award to Sheriff

John V. Geary, executive director of the conference, the county's tourist promotion agency, presented a special award to Sheriff John D. Courtney for assisting the organization's conservation program by instituting a prisoner-work project at Balance Rock Park in Lanesboro.

More than 300 attended the conference's 41st annual dinner at Eastover in Lenox. A. John Tuller of Great Barrington, a past president of the organization, was master of ceremonies.

Among those he introduced was George W. Schryver of Williamstown, who was active in the conference when it was first formed.

J. Robert Busch of Pittsfield, another past president of the conference, introduced the main speaker, Harry Bowser of New York City. Mr. Bowser, a representative of the All-Star Dairy Association, talked on growth, change, opportunity and salesmanship.

Marasco

30TH ANNIVERSARY of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's affiliation with Tanglewood is marked by presentation to BSO Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. from the Berkshire Hills Conference President John T. McPhillips, left. At right is John V. Geary, conference executive director. Award was made at annual dinner last night.

APRIL 12, 1966

42

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-2200

Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Circ. 21,114

JUL 11 1966

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA IS OFF TO A FINE START

Already in its second weekend of concerts, and its summer music school in full swing, the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., is off to an auspicious season. While this current weekend featured a series of Mozart symphonies and piano concerto's, the opening July 4 offered a variation of Wagner, Stravinsky, Brahms, Mahler and Prokofief and Strauss. Special recognition was offered Roger Sessions who had composed the 140th Psalm for soprano and orchestra in 1963, was played for its first time at Tanglewood in the composer's presence. He received a tremendous ovation. The number had been a commission from Princeton Theological Seminary for the occasion of the Sesquicentennial Anniversary of the school in 1963.

Brahms double concerto for violin and cello featured Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin, first chairs in the orchestra, and added to the strains from the strings was the beauty of the lower tones of horns and bass at its opening, followed by a duet-like antiphonal against the strings.

The Mahler Fourth symphony, with soprano voice, with Anne Elgar, dramatic soprano whose tones are like the clearest bell, ending with a long sustained horn motif, will long be remembered as one of the orchestra's finest presentations. It was its first performance at the Festival concerts.

Abbey Simon was the featured piano soloist in the Brahms Second Piano concert in B flat major. When words ar no longer needed to describ this, one of the most lyrical o all concerti, and you just si spellbound drinking in its soun with a spine-tingling exultation This is music at its rarest an best. If this opens the season dramatically and with this so of inspiring precedent, the se son is off to a worthy beginnin and deserves enthusiastic at tendance and applause. Erich Leinsdorf was conductor fo both weekend concerts, with the exception of Sir Adrian Boult who conducted on July 10.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-2200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771

JUL 11 1966

At Tanglewood:

New Friday Night Program Proves A Pleasing Innovation

Three concerts devoted to the works of Mozart, each featuring a piano concerto, filled the programs for the past weekend at Tanglewood in Lenox. For these concerts the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in smaller "chamber" size.

Next weekend the programs will be all-Bach, and the following weekend the full orchestra will move into the regular Berkshire Festival pace. Again this year director Erich Leinsdorf is including concertos of the romantic composers in each weekend offering.

Leinsdorf conducted at the Friday and Saturday evening concerts this past weekend, with guest conductor Sir Adrian Boult, London Philharmonic director, on the podium on Sunday afternoon. Attendance was 5268 Friday night, 7856 Saturday night, and 5936 Sunday afternoon.

An innovation this year is a double-header program on Friday evenings. The main concert now starts at 9 instead of the usual 8 p.m. on Friday nights. But from 7 to 8 there is now a preliminary concert of two infrequently heard works, by a vocal or instrumental group. It is a very agreeable arrangement. The early concert on Friday night was delightful — two groups of Mozart canons sung by the Tanglewood choir directed by Alfred Nash Patterson, and the Sonata for two pianos in D major, played by Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir, his wife. The canons, the Scatological Canons (naughty, if you know German) and Six Canons without text, were sung robustly and crisply with fine definition. The two piano work presented with great style — a bright and rich piece which elevates the instrument as well as composer and the performers.

An hour's recess allows for picnicking or enjoyment of the lovely Tanglewood grounds for the early concertgoers and permits long-distance travelers or late diners to be on time for the major program. Friday night the Mozart program continued with more familiar works. March No. 3 in C was the opener, followed by the "Paris" symphony. This is a short and sparkling composition in which the Leinsdorf finesse and the Boston strings combined for an impeccable performance. For some reason the smaller orchestra and the restrained classical compositions are not swallowed up in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood. Mozart always comes through.

The cheers of the evening were for young Malcolm Frager, who played the Piano Concerto in B-flat with balanced perfection, in fact virtuoso fingering. This artist also played on Sunday afternoon, presenting the Piano Concerto in D major with a mastery which again won high applause. He has a particularly neat style appropriate to Mozart.

The finale on Friday night was the Great Jupiter symphony, often heard and rightly so. The new Friday programs are a happy means of pleasing those who like to hear something different and those who feel that the great, favorite masterpieces should always be available at a major music festival.

The Saturday night program presented Claude Frank as piano soloist for the Concerto in C major, and he too won full-scale cheers from the audience. It is quite thrilling to hear these concertos as they are given at Tanglewood by musicians of the stature of Frank and Frager, with the Boston Symphony in deferential partnership. Also on the Saturday night program was the Symphony No. 29, one of the early Mozart works, and the "Posthorn" Serenade, a graceful piece played by a 10-instrument ensemble.

On Sunday afternoon, Sir Adrian Boult led the orchestra in Mozart's Symphony No. 34, K338 and Symphony No. 39, K 543, in addition to the Concerto in which Mr. Frager played. The elderly conductor showed a quiet, easy style to which the orchestra responded with its usual fine discipline.

Next weekend the weekend programs will be entirely made up of Bach works, with the St. John Passion presented on Saturday evening. Szymon Goldberg will be guest conductor on Friday evening and will play the Violin Concerto in E major. Among the singers appearing Saturday and Sunday will be Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Ernst Haefliger, tenor, several other soloists and the Tanglewood choir. — By Anabel [illegible]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-2200

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587

JUL 7 1966

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 2
By A. C. S.

Wagner's "Tannhauser" Overture heralded the opening of the twenty-ninth season of the Berkshire Festival. The Boston Symphony Orchestra was back with Erich Leinsdorf on the podium for his fourth Tanglewood summer.

The Suite from the Ballet "Petrouchka" was a happy inclusion for this first concert. The work was originally conceived as a Konzertstueck for piano and orchestra, and Richard Woitach appeared as piano soloist. But there are also opportunities for solos by various other instrumentalists: flute, oboe, trumpet, bassoon, and percussion. It was like being introduced to members of the family, or rather reintroduced, for most of the soloists are old friends to Tanglewood.

The theme of this festival is the Romantic Concerto. Three concerti by Brahms were chosen for this weekend, the Violin Concerto being given on this program. Shmuel Ashkenasi, the young Israeli violinist, was soloist. A major talent who has proved himself in international competition as well as in concertizing, it was no surprise that he had no trouble with the technical demands of the "unplayable" concerto. Despite the withering heat of the evening, his tone was vibrant, his intonation secure. It was a sensitive reading on the part of both soloist and orchestra. Perhaps it was the heat, but this listener longed for more involvement.

July 3

What a glorious afternoon of music making! The Brahms Double Concerto and Mahler's Fourth Symphony in one package. The Concerto for Violin and Violincello was the last orchestral work of Brahms. It is a concerto in the sense that the solo instruments have opportunities to display virtuosity; on the other hand, they emerge from the orchestral fabric as though talented members of the same family. How appropriate, then, that the soloists were the first-desk men of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony: Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin. The close association was apparent throughout the performance. Leinsdorf maintained a perfect balance of forces; the soloists poured themselves out in beautiful and authoritative playing. It was a privilege to hear this work, too rarely performed, given so wondrous a reading.

Nor did the spirit die with the Brahms. Another rarely heard composition followed: the Symphony No. 4 by Mahler was given its first performance at the Berkshire Festival. With such haunting melodies, wonderful orchestral sounds, and rhythmic variety, one wonders why it was neglected so long. Certainly, the Boston Symphony gave it a brilliant reading under the strong and imaginative guidance of Erich Leinsdorf. The short final movement, employing a text from Des Knaben Wunderhorn, was sung effectively by Anne Elgar, a leading soprano of the New York City Center Opera Company.

July 4

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, in rare form this afternoon, drew heavy applause from an enthusiastic, if sparse audience. A varied program was the order of the day, beginning with Prokofiev's Classical Symphony. Needless to say, Mr. Leinsdorf turned in a magic performance of this sprightly, capricious work.

Following on the program was the complex moving Psalm 140 of Roger Sessions. Jolting modulations and strange dissonances, suggestive of his earlier Black Maskers, also an occasional piece, combined, nevertheless, beautifully with the resonant voice of Anne Elgar, soprano, to render the biblical text.

The Till Eulenspiegel of Richard Strauss received one of the finest performances this reviewer has heard. Mr. Leinsdorf brought into play exciting rhythmic contrasts and a dramatic intensity seldom given this score; his vivid interpretation was a refreshing experience after so many mediocre, uninteresting readings.

Abbey Simon gave a highly polished account of the second Piano Concerto of Brahms. Completely at home in this difficult score, Mr. Simon and the orchestra achieved a perfect balance. The piano here was no mere appendage to an orchestral accompaniment, nor did it seek to dazzle by keyboard pyrotechnics; the soloist's delicate shadings, frequent understatement were at one with the orchestra in a powerful yet gentle flow through the four movements.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Circ. 21,114
JUL 11 1966

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA IS OFF TO A FINE START

Already in its second weekend of concerts, and its summer music school in full swing, the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood at Lenox, Mass., is off to an auspicious season. While this current weekend featured a series of Mozart symphonies and piano concerto's, the opening July 4 offered a variation of Wagner, Stravinsky, Brahms, Mahler and Prokofief and Strauss. Special recognition was offered Roger Sessions who had composed the 140th Psalm for soprano and orchestra in 1963, was played for its first time at Tanglewood in the composer's presence. He received a tremendous ovation. The number had been a commission from Princeton Theological Seminary for the occasion of the Sesquicentennial Anniversary of the school in 1963.

Brahms double concerto for violin and cello featured Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin, first chairs in the orchestra, and added to the strains from the strings was the beauty of the lower tones of horns and bass at its opening, followed by a duet-like antiphonal against the strings.

The Mahler Fourth symphony, with soprano voice, with Anne Elgar, dramatic soprano whose tones are like the clearest bell, ending with a long sustained horn motif, will long be remembered as one of the orchestra's finest presentations. It was its first performance at the Festival concerts.

Abbey Simon was the featured piano soloist in the Brahms Second Piano concert in B flat major. When words ar no longer needed to describ this, one of the most lyrical o all concerti, and yon just si spellbound drinking in its soun with a spine-tingling exultation This is music at its rarest an best. If this opens the season s dramatically and with this so of inspiring precedent, the sea son is off to a worthy beginning and deserves enthusiastic attendance and applause. Erich Leinsdorf was conductor for both weekend concerts, with the exception of Sir Adrian Boult who conducted on July 10.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
JUL 11 1966

At Tanglewood:

New Friday Night Program Proves A Pleasing Innovation

Three concerts devoted to the works of Mozart, each featuring a piano concerto, filled the programs for the past weekend at Tanglewood in Lenox. For these concerts the Boston Symphony Orchestra is its smaller "chamber" size.

Next weekend the programs will be all-Bach, and the following weekend the full orchestra will move into the regular Berkshire Festival pace. Again this year director Erich Leinsdorf is including concertos of the romantic composers in each weekend offering.

Leinsdorf conducted at the Friday and Saturday evening concerts this past weekend, with guest conductor Sir Adrian Boult, London Philharmonic director, on the podium on Sunday afternoon. Attendance was 5268 Friday night, 7856 Saturday night, and 5936 Sunday afternoon.

An innovation this year is a double-header program on Friday evenings. The main concert now starts at 9 instead of the usual 8 p.m. on Friday nights. But from 7 to 8 there is now a preliminary concert of two infrequently heard works, by a vocal or instrumental group. It is a very agreeable arrangement. The early concert on Friday night was delightful — two groups of Mozart canons sung by the Tanglewood choir directed by Alfred Nash Patterson, and the Sonata for two pianos in D major, played by Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir, his wife. The canons, the Scatological Canons (naughty, if you know German) and Six Canons without Text, were sung robustly and crisply with fine definition. The two piano work presented with great style — a bright and rich piece which elevates the instrument as well as composer and the performers.

An hour's recess allows for picnicking or enjoyment of the lovely Tanglewood grounds for the early concertgoers and permits long-distance travelers or late diners to be on time for the major program. Friday night the Mozart program continued with more familiar works. March No. 3 in C was the opener, followed by the "Paris" symphony. This is a short and sparkling composition in which the Leinsdorf finesse and the Boston strings combined for an impeccable performance. For some reason the smaller orchestra and the restrained classical compositions are not swallowed up in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood. Mozart always comes through.

The cheers of the evening were for young Malcolm Frager, who played the Piano Concerto in B-flat with balanced perfection, in fact virtuoso fingering. This artist also played on Sunday afternoon, presenting the Piano Concerto in D major with a mastery which again won high applause. He has a particularly neat style appropriate to Mozart.

The finale on Friday night was the Great Jupiter symphony, often heard and rightly so. The new Friday programs are a happy means of pleasing those who like to hear something different and those who feel that the great, favorite masterpieces should always be available at a major music festival.

The Saturday night program presented Claude Frank as piano soloist for the Concerto in C major, and he too won full-scale cheers from the audience. It is quite thrilling to hear these concertos as they are given at Tanglewood by musicians of the stature of Frank and Frager, with the Boston Symphony in deferential partnership. Also on the Saturday night program was the Symphony No. 29, one of the early Mozart works, and the "Posthorn" Serenade, a graceful piece played by a 10-instrument ensemble.

On Sunday afternoon, Sir Adrian Boult led the orchestra in Mozart's Symphony No. 34, K338 and Symphony No. 39, K 543, in addition to the Concerto in which Mr. Frager played. The elderly conductor showed a quiet, easy style to which the orchestra responded with its usual fine discipline.

Next weekend the weekend programs will be entirely made up of Bach works, with the St. John Passion presented on Saturday evening. Szymon Goldberg will be guest conductor on Friday evening and will play the Violin Concerto in E major. Among the singers appearing Saturday and Sunday will be Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Ernst Haefliger, tenor, several other soloists and the Tanglewood choir. — By Anabel B. Murphy

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUL 7 1966

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 2
By A. C. S.

Wagner's "Tannhauser" Overture heralded the opening of the twenty-ninth season of the Berkshire Festival. The Boston Symphony Orchestra was back with Erich Leinsdorf on the podium for his fourth Tanglewood summer.

The Suite from the Ballet "Petrouchka" was a happy inclusion for this first concert. The work was originally conceived as a Konzertstueck for piano and orchestra, and Richard Woitach appeared as piano soloist. But there are also opportunities for solos by various other instrumentalists: flute, oboe, trumpet, bassoon, and percussion. It was like being introduced to members of the family, or rather reintroduced, for most of the soloists are old friends to Tanglewood.

The theme of this festival is the Romantic Concerto. Three concerti by Brahms were chosen for this weekend, the Violin Concerto being given on this program. Shmuel Ashkenasi, the young Israeli violinist, was soloist. A major talent who has proved himself in international competition as well as in concertizing, it was no surprise that he had no trouble with the technical demands of the "unplayable" concerto. Despite the withering heat of the evening, his tone was vibrant, his intonation secure. It was a sensitive reading on the part of both soloist and orchestra. Perhaps it was the heat, but this listener longed for more involvement.

July 3

What a glorious afternoon of music making! The Brahms Double Concerto and Mahler's Fourth Symphony in one package. The Concerto for Violin and Violincello was the last orchestral work of Brahms. It is a concerto in the sense that the solo instruments have opportunities to display virtuosity; on the other hand, they emerge from the orchestral fabric as though talented members of the same family. How appropriate, then, that the soloists were the first-desk men of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony: Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin. The close association was apparent throughout the performance. Leinsdorf maintained a perfect balance of forces; the soloists poured themselves out in beautiful and authoritative playing. It was a privilege to hear this work, too rarely performed, given so wondrous a reading.

Nor did the spirit die with the Brahms. Another rarely heard composition followed: the Symphony No. 4 by Mahler was given its first performance at the Berkshire Festival. With such haunting melodies, wonderful orchestral sounds, and rhythmic variety, one wonders why it was neglected so long. Certainly, the Boston Symphony gave it a brilliant reading under the strong and imaginative guidance of Erich Leinsdorf. The short final movement, employing a text from Des Knaben Wunderhorn, was sung effectively by Anne Elgar, a leading soprano of the New York City Center Opera Company.

July 4

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, in rare form this afternoon, drew heavy applause from an enthusiastic, if sparse audience. A varied program was the order of the day, beginning with Prokofiev's Classical Symphony. Needless to say Mr. Leinsdorf turned in a magic performance of this sprightly, capricious work.

Following on the program was the complex moving Psalm 140 of Roger Sessions. Jolting modulations and strange dissonances, suggestive of his earlier Black Maskers, also an occasional piece, combined, nevertheless, beautifully with the resonant voice of Anne Elgar, soprano, to render the biblical text.

The Till Eulenspiegel of Richard Strauss received one of the finest performances this reviewer has heard. Mr. Leinsdorf brought into play every rhythmic contrasts and dramatic intensity seldom in this score; his vivid interpretation was a refreshing experience after so many mere, uninteresting readings.

Abbey Simon gave a polished account of the Piano Concerto of Brahms. Completely at home in the difficult score, Mr. Simon and the orchestra achieved a perfect balance. The piano here was no mere appendage to an orchestral accompaniment, nor did it seek to dazzle by keyboard pyrotechnics; the soloist's delicate shadings, frequent understatement were at one with the orchestra in a powerful yet gentle flow through the four movements.

43 3 37

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186

JUL 7 1966

Berkshire Festival Opens Long Tanglewood Season

For the first weekend series of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf shattered precedence by devoting part of each of these concerts to the Romantic Concerto theme of this year's program. Besides this, the opening concert was given on a Saturday night, the hottest of the three, and most humid, allowing the third to be scheduled for the Fourth of July afternoon.

Shmuel Ashkenasi, young Israeli violinist, played the Brahms violin concerto under the strain of temporary indisposition and subsequent nervousness, nevertheless displaying a fastidiously musical talent and easy familiarity with his instrument. An audience of 7545 applauded without restraint. Wagner's Overture to Tannhauser introduced the orchestra and Mr. Leinsdorf with dignity and stature, with Stravinsky's suite from "Petrouchka" concluding the first half.

Sunday's romantic concerto was the double one of Brahms, well-coordinated by Joseph Silverstein, concermaster, and Jules Eskin, first cellist. However. Mahler's Fourth Symphony with soprano Anne Elgar, in the lovely fourth movement, was supreme in performance and interpretation.

As far as weather can be analyzed, Monday afternoon was the perfect day; humidity almost non-existent, making repeated tuning unnecessary. But the program lacked sparkle, spontaneity and excitement. All was cleared and well-played, Mr. Leinsdorf taking precisely drawn tempos in Prokofieff's charming "Classical Symphony"; the music iteself should lift one's heart with its lilting lines, so Mozartean is its style and flow.

The great lift came with Roger Sessions' Pslam 140, atonally lyrical, sung with resonant force and beauty ,striking by Anne Elgar. Mr. Sessions was pleased, too, and shared the continued applause with Mr. Leinsdorf, the orchestra and Miss Elgar.

Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel finished the first portion, its romance overshadowing the inherent tragic humor, the winds rather shaky in spots (was it here that Gomberg had difficulty with his reed? Weird sounds resulted, but actually not too out of keeping). And throughout the concert, the new crop of nestlings in the Big Shed almost out-harassed the players.

Again Brahms was the romantic concerto contributor, this time with his second piano work, played by Abbey Simon, a native New Yorker, now a resident of Geneva, who started instruction at the age of eight at Curtis Institute of Music. A serious pianist, with marvelously expressive fingers, that sculptured every phrase into shapely lines, his performance was complemented by the orchestra and Mr. Leinsdorf with sympathetic artistry, but on a too constant a level.

Brahms always soars in his wonderfully woven music; not necessarily unrestrained, with an inner breathing makes him unique in writing and performance. We felt none of this, not even in the exquisite Andante (the second movement almost) and the haunting melody by piano and woodwind, matching intonation shatteringly dissonant (perhaps the heat) and provoking. The piano also just can't resound any better; we'd like to hear Mr. Simon on another instrument.

But the audience reacted with enthusastic vigor; they applauded every movement, Mr. Leinsdorf encouraging the pianist to acknowledge each one, the final recallings shared with Mr. Eskin.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607

JUL 11 1966

Two Artists Superb As Tanglewood Guests

By JOAN SIMMONS

Two guest artists unobtrusively stole the show at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon.

Sir Adrian Boult, as conductor of the final concert of an all-Mozart weekend and first guest conductor of the season at the Lenox, Mass., site, was every bit the distinguished, reserved Briton.

Malcolm Frager, as piano soloist, presented a superb performance as he intently bent over his keyboard playing the Piano Concerto No. 5, in D major, K. 175. The Concerto ended with long and heavy applause while Sir Adrian and Frager were quite delighted with each other.

The guests were of course more than ably assisted by the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, reduced in number this week as many of the musicians have returned to Boston for a two-week series there.

The program included the symphonies number 34 and 39 which were gracefully achieved under the seeming effortlessness of Sir Adrian's baton. A cool-looking figure, despite the afternoon heat, Sir Adrian quite casually waved his baton and at times appeared to stop altogether. But appearances were deceiving because there was no doubt that the orchestra was completely under his expert control.

The combination of performers reached its peak in the concerto where the rapport between conductor, pianist and soloist resulted in a completely pleasurable blend.

Frager has performed many times with the Boston Symphony and the combination is well worth repeating. While he has appeared before the Boston Symphony previously, this is Sir Adrian's first season at Tanglewood and one that may result in his return.

SECOND WEEK - JULY 8, 9, AND 10

Boston Symphony's Great Summer Festival Has Big Second Week

By William G. Glackin
Bee drama and music critic

LENOX, Mass. — There is one consolation in leaving this great Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony when it is just getting under way: This second week of concerts, no matter what follows, should remain as one of the high points of the summer.

And probably its own high point was the last of the three programs, consisting entirely of the music of Bach and performed before an audience of 6,255. It included three works: the Brandenburg Concerto No. 4 and two cantatas — No. 146, Only Through Tribulation May We Enter The Kingdom Of God, and No. 70, Watch, Pray, Be Ready — and it was a stimulating, stirring afternoon.

Orchestra Cut To 20

For the Brandenburg, Erich Leinsdorf cut the orchestra down to 20 again, and sat in on the harpsichord himself. With concertmaster Joseph Silverstein and flutists Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis playing the solo roles with a liquid brilliance, the performance kept gathering beauty and power like some glorious, sparkling snowball until the final presto simply carried the audience before it to an ovation.

The Cantata No. 146 will startle you if you haven't heard it but know the more popular Concerto in D minor for piano, for the first two movements of the concerto are identical with the vocal work. The opening sinfonia gave the solo role here to the organ — the festival has a handsome Noack tracker organ sitting right in the midst of the singers, and Paul Calloway played the long, difficult part with superb clarity — and the opening chorus is a kind of expansion of the slow movement of the concerto. The combined voices of the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, directed by Elliot Forbes, sang it with affecting feeling, as they did all weekend.

Four Young Singers

The soloists were four fine young singers, all of whom you are going to hear a lot of in future years. They included soprano Veronica Tyler, a tall girl with an extremely pretty voice who has only one serious flaw, mushy enunciation; contralto Beverly Wolff, who sings with great power, vocal beauty and strong feeling; and two former Carmel Bach Festival soloists who will be in Carmel again this year: Charles Bressler, who sings with compelling force and admirably exact enunciation, as well as ringing tenor tones; and Thomas Paul, a real bass with a beautiful, liquid tone, and a fine singer, full of quiet emotional conviction which is just as compelling as Bressler's, if not more so.

These last two joined, in No. 146, in an affectingly joyful duet which was one of the peaks of the performance, as was Miss Tyler's solo, surrounded by the soft, rich environment of flute, oboes, cellos, bass and organ, and the lovely, peaceful, happy chorale with which the work ends.

Chorus Radiated

As for Watch, Pray, it is an even more dramatic work, and under Leinsdorf's marvelously flexible, expressive conducting, the opening chorus seemed not so much sung as radiated. As the message of its warning of the day of judgment was expanded in contrasting arias, recitatives and a single chorale midway in the work like an island of calm, the drama was compounded and the tension grew.

It remained for Paul, in the final aria, which alternates strikingly between reverence and a fierce reminder of the last trumpet, to bring it to a climax of feeling and a release like a blessing in some grippingly personal singing which furnished one of the most memorable moments of the entire weekend.

Lots Of Enrichments

The night before, Leinsdorf offered a variety of enrichments, including masterpieces by Mozart and Gluck, but it was Bach who provided the thriller in the great Cantata No. 140, Wachet Auf (Sleepers, Wake!).

The thrills were the more remarkable because Leinsdorf set a tempo for the piece that was, in my experience at any rate, a very deliberate speed. Since the text is the famous clarion call to the wise and foolish virgins of the Bible — an inspiriting announcement of the arrival of Christ, the Bridegroom — the tempo matters a bit more than usual.

But this one turned out to work, after all. If the tremendous opening chorus would not startle anyone from sleep, it conveyed a sense of majestic joy that was indeed, in a very powerful, cumulative way, a rousing summons. And when Leinsdorf got to the glorious love duet for Christ and the soul, the method in his method appeared, for he could now quicken the pace in an exhilarating way without forcing the soloists to race.

The excellent first oboist of the orchestra, Ralph Gomberg, was an equal partner of the singers, and concertmaster Joseph Silverstein had a [illegible] joined them with stirring effect.

Conductor The Heart

As with everything else on the program, though, the heart of the matter was the steady, flowing, feeling presence in the music of the conductor.

Leinsdorf is eminently a conductor who seems inside the music. With the opening Gluck, orchestral and vocal selections from Orpheus And Eurydice, his presence there seemed as sympathetic, as compellingly expressive as it did in the livelier Mozart Concerto in E flat for two pianos, K. 365, which followed. Whatever I have heard Leinsdorf conduct so far — and as it happens, that means nothing after Beethoven — he has seemed much more than a leader, or even an interpreter; but instead a gifted partner of the composer, a bosom friend to his music.

It remains to be noted that his charges, including Miss Dwyer, Miss Wolff and Miss Tyler, and Gluck gave him beautiful cooperation in the opening piece and that pianists Vitya Vronsky and Victor Babin were expert, spirited collaborators in the Mozart, whose final allegro was worked up to a happy, irresistible point of exhilaration.

THE FRESNO BEE
FRESNO, CALIF.
D. 110,189 SUN. 137,332
JUL 16 1965

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bulletin (m)
NORWICH, Conn.
Circ. 30,240
JUN 28 1965

MODESTO, CALIF.
BEE
D. 41,000 S. 42,000
JUL 18 1965

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Circ. 15,882
JUN 29 1966

MALCOLM FRAGER will return this season to Tanglewood, Lenox to be guest soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, July 8. Mr. Frager will play the Mozart Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450 and appear again on July 10 to play Mozart Piano Concerto in D major, K. 175.

The News American
BALTIMORE, MD.
D. 211,932 SUN. 310,264
JUL 3 1966

Guest Conductor

LENOX, Mass., July 2 — Sir Adrian Boult, distinguished British conductor, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra on July 10 in a Mozart program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Circ. 40,258
JUN 29 1966

Second Concert Listed By Boston Symphony

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's second concert of the 1966 Berkshire Festival season will be broadcast live over WGBH-FM Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

On Monday, the concert will also start at 2:30 and on Tuesday night at 8, the Boston Symphony Players will perform works by Mozart, Poulenc, Villa Lobos and Schubert.

The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will perform July 7 at 8 p.m. and the program on July 8 will open at 9 p.m.

The week of live Tanglewood broadcasts will conclude on July 9 at 8 p.m. with the symphony featured in an all-Mozart program.

SPRINGFIELD
UNION JULY 2 '66

Extra Friday Concerts To Start at Tanglewood

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at next weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts.

British conductor Sir Adrian Boult will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the Orchestra July 10 at 2:30. Malcolm Frager will be piano soloist for that concert as with music director Erich Leinsdorf July 8 at 9 p.m. As piano soloist for Saturday at 8 p.m. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place at 7 p.m. in advance of each Friday concert. The Preludes will consist of infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform. The programs will be provided at no extra cost to those holding Friday evening concert tickets.

Friday's 9 p.m. all - Mozart program will inlude March No. 3 in C, K. 408; Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris;" the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, with Malcolm Frager and the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The Prelude program will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir directed by Alfred Nash Patterson, and Mozart's sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir. Saturday at 8 p.m. Frank will be soloist in Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201 and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend Sunday at 2:30 with Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

The regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will take place at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the Music Shed.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will open the Tuesday evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs in the Tanglewood Theater with Mozart's Piano Quartet, K. 478, with Frank as soloist; Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon, and Piano (1926); the Duo for Flute and Bassoon by Villa Lobos; and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin, Cello and Piano, Op. 99.

Erich Leinsdorf tomorrow at 2:30 will conduct Brahms' Double Concerto with Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin as soloists and Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soprano soloist. The Fourth of July 2:30 program will include Prokofiev's Classical Symphony, Roger Sessions' Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist, Richard Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel and Abbey Simon performing Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2.

SECOND WEEK - JULY 8, 9, AND 10

Boston Symphony's Great Summer Festival Has Big Second Week

By William C. Glackin
Bee drama and music critic

LENOX, Mass. — There is one consolation in leaving this great Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony when it is just getting under way: This second week of concerts, no matter what follows, should remain as one of the high points of the summer.

And probably its own high point was the last of the three programs, consisting entirely of the music of Bach and performed before an audience of 6,255. It included three works: the Brandenburg Concerto No. 4 and two cantatas — No. 146, Only Through Tribulation May We Enter The Kingdom Of God, and No. 70, Watch, Pray, Be Ready — and it was a stimulating, stirring afternoon.

Orchestra Cut To 20

For the Brandenburg, Erich Leinsdorf cut the orchestra down to 20 again, and sat in on the harpsichord himself. With concertmaster Joseph Silverstein and flutists Doriot Anthony Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis playing the solo roles with a liquid brilliance, the performance kept gathering beauty and power like some glorious, sparkling snowball until the final presto simply carried the audience before it to an ovation.

The Cantata No. 146 will startle you if you haven't heard it but know the more popular Concerto in D minor for piano, for the first two movements of the concerto are identical with the vocal work. The opening sinfonia gave the solo role here to the organ — the festival has a handsome Noack tracker organ sitting right in the midst of the singers, and Paul Calloway played the long, difficult part with superb clarity — and the opening chorus is a kind of expansion of the slow movement of the concerto. The combined voices of the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, directed by Elliot Forbes, sang it with affecting feeling, as they did all weekend.

Four Young Singers

The soloists were four fine young singers, all of whom you are going to hear a lot of in future years. They included soprano Veronica Tyler, a tall girl with an extremely pretty voice who has only one serious flaw, mushy enunciation; contralto Beverly Wolff, who sings with great power, vocal beauty and strong feeling; and two former Carmel Bach Festival soloists who will be in Carmel again this year: Charles Bressler, who sings with compelling force and admirably exact enunciation, as well as ringing tenor tones; and Thomas Paul, a real bass with a beautiful, liquid tone, and a fine singer, full of quiet emotional conviction which is just as compelling as Bressler's, if not more so.

These last two joined, in No. 146, in an affectingly joyful duet which was one of the peaks of the performance, as was Miss Tyler's solo, surrounded by the soft, rich environment of flute, oboes, cellos, bass and organ, and the lovely, peaceful, happy chorale with which the work ends.

Chorus Radiated

As for Watch, Pray, it is an even more dramatic work, and under Leinsdorf's marvelously flexible, expressive conducting, the opening chorus seemed not so much sung as radiated. As the message of its warning of the day of judgment was expanded in contrasting arias, recitatives and a single chorale midway in the work like an island of calm, the drama was compounded and the tension grew.

It remained for Paul, in the final aria, which alternates strikingly between reverence and a fierce reminder of the last trumpet, to bring it to a climax of feeling and a release like a blessing, in some grippingly personal singing which furnished one of the most memorable moments of the entire weekend.

Lots Of Enrichments

The night before, Leinsdorf offered a variety of enrichments, including masterpieces by Mozart and Gluck, but it was Bach who provided the thriller in the great Cantata No. 140, Wachet Auf (Sleepers, Wake!).

The thrills were the more remarkable because Leinsdorf set a tempo for the piece that was, in my experience at any rate, a very deliberate speed. Since the text is the famous clarion call to the wise and foolish virgins of the Bible — an inspiriting announcement of the arrival of Christ, the Bridegroom — the tempo matters a bit more than usual.

But this one turned out to work, after all. If the tremendous opening chorus would not startle anyone from sleep, it conveyed a sense of majestic joy that was indeed, in a very powerful, cumulative way, a rousing summons. And when Leinsdorf got to the glorious love duet for Christ and the soul, the method in his method appeared, for he could now quicken the pace in an exhilarating way without forcing the soloists to race.

The excellent first oboist of the orchestra, Ralph Gomberg, was an equal partner of the singers, and concertmaster Joseph Silverstein had a partner joined them with stirring effect.

Conductor The Heart

As with everything else on the program, though, the heart of the matter was the steady, flowing, feeling presence in the music of the conductor.

Leinsdorf is eminently a conductor who seems inside the music. With the opening Gluck, orchestral and vocal selections from Orpheus And Eurydice, his presence there seemed as sympathetic, as compellingly expressive as it did in the livelier Mozart Concerto in E flat for two pianos, K. 365, which followed. Whatever I have heard Leinsdorf conduct so far — and as it happens, that means nothing after Beethoven — he has seemed much more than a leader, or even an interpreter; but instead a gifted partner of the composer, a bosom friend to his music.

It remains to be noted that his charges, including Miss Dwyer, Miss Wolff and Miss Tyler, and Gluck gave him beautiful cooperation in the opening piece and that pianists Vitya Vronsky and Victor Babin were expert, spirited collaborators in the Mozart, whose final allegro was worked up to a happy, irresistible point of exhilaration.

THE FRESNO BEE
FRESNO, CALIF.
D. 110,189 SUN. 137,332
JUL 16 1965

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bulletin (m)
NORWICH, Conn.
Circ. 30,240
JUN 28 1965

MODESTO, CALIF.
BEE
D. 41,000 S. 42,000
JUL 18 1965

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Circ. 15,882
JUN 29 1966

MALCOLM FRAGER will return this season to Tanglewood, Lenox to be guest soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, July 8. Mr. Frager will play the Mozart Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450 and appear again on July 10 to play Mozart Piano Concerto in D major, K. 175.

The News American
BALTIMORE, MD.
D. 211,932 SUN. 310,264
JUL 3 1966

Guest Conductor

LENOX, Mass., July 2 — Sir Adrian Boult, distinguished British conductor, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra on July 10 in a Mozart program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Circ. 40,258
JUN 29 1966

Second Concert Listed By Boston Symphony

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's second concert of the 1966 Berkshire Festival season will be broadcast live over WGBH-FM Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

On Monday, the concert will also start at 2:30 and on Tuesday night at 8, the Boston Symphony Players will perform works by Mozart, Poulenc, Villa Lobos and Schubert.

The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will perform July 7 at 8 p.m. and the program on July 8 will open at 9 p.m.

The week of live Tanglewood broadcasts will conclude on July 9 at 8 p.m. with the symphony featured in an all-Mozart program.

SPRINGFIELD
UNION JUL 2 '66

Extra Friday Concerts To Start at Tanglewood

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at next weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts.

British conductor Sir Adrian Boult will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the Orchestra July 10 at 2:30. Malcolm Frager will be piano soloist for that concert as with music director Erich Leinsdorf July 8 at 9 p.m. As piano soloist for Saturday at 8 p.m. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place at 7 p.m. in advance of each Friday concert. The Preludes will consist of infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform. The programs will be provided at no extra cost to those holding Friday evening concert tickets.

Friday's 9 p.m. all - Mozart program will inlude March No. 3 in C, K. 408; Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris;" the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, with Malcolm Frager and the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The Prelude program will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir directed by Alfred Nash Patterson, and Mozart's sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir. Saturday at 8 p.m. Frank will be soloist in Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201 and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K.-320.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend Sunday at 2:30 with Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K.-543.

The regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will take place at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the Music Shed.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will open the Tuesday evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs in the Tanglewood Theater with Mozart's Piano Quartet, K. 478, with Frank as soloist; Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon, and Piano (1926); the Duo for Flute and Bassoon by Villa Lobos; and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin, Cello and Piano, Op. 99.

Erich Leinsdorf tomorrow at 2:30 will conduct Brahms' Double Concerto with Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin as soloists and Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soprano soloist. The Fourth of July 2:30 program will include Prokofiev's Classical Symphony, Roger Sessions' Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist, Richard Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel and Abbey Simon performing Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2.

Week

Gluck gave him cooperation in the ... that pianists ky and Victor Babin t, spirited collabo- the Mozart, whose was worked up to resistible point of

RESNO BEE
ESNO, CALIF.
189 SUN. 137,332

6 1965

NewsclipAgency,Inc.
ston 02106 • 742-4200
lletin (m)
VICH, Conn.
c. 30,240
8 1965

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,615

JUL 5 1966

Sir Adrian Boult to Conduct A Mozart Concert at Tanglewood

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's Bershire Festival.

The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as he will with music director Erich Leinsdorf Friday at 9 p.m. As soloist for Saturday's program, Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a transcontinental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Friday evening concert. Each of the Weekend Preludes, given each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7:00 p.m. and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the Orchestra performing in small ensemblies will perform on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

Friday evening's all Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, K. 408 and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Malcolm Frager will then be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, and Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" symphony in C, K. 551.

The Weekend Prelude Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and Mozart Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Frank will be heard again on Saturday evening when he joins Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201 and conclude with his "Posthore" Serenade, K. 320.

Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon. Sir Adrian's program will include the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

The regular Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will take place at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the Music Shed.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,007

JUL 6 1966

3 Mozart Concerts Planned At Berkshire for Weekend

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts.

Guest artists for the series include British conductor Sir Adrian Boult and pianists Malcom Frager and Claude Frank. Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct Friday and Saturday evenings' concerts. Sir Adrian Boult will make his first appearance at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon when he appears as the first guest conductor of the season.

The first of the Weekend Preludes, a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, will take place preceeding the Friday evening concert. Each of the Weekend Preludes, to be given each Friday evening for the remainder of the season, will begin at 7:00 and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will appear on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

This first Prelude will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and the Mozart Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 444 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

The regular weekend concerts will take place Friday evening at 9; Saturday at 8 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Buffalo Evening News
D. 279,780 SAT. 292,741

JUL 2 1966

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL will be honored in the guest appearance of British conductor Sir Adrian Boult for the first time in the 30-year series. Sir Adrian will conduct on Sunday, July 10, at 2:30 PM, an all-Mozart program including the Piano Concerto in D, K175, with Malcolm Frager as soloist, and Symphonies Nos. 34 and 39.

NewEnglandNewsclipAgency,Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503

JUL 1 1966

Mozart Concerts, Tanglewood

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at next weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox.

The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra at 2:30 next Sunday afternoon. Pianist Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert and with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf at next Friday evening's concert at 9.

As soloist for Saturday's 8 p. m. program Mr. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a transcontinental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the weekend preludes, will take place in advance of Friday evening's concert. Each of the weekend preludes, given each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7 and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer.

Some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform on these programs, which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

Friday evening's all-Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, and continue with the Symphony No. 31, "Paris." Malcolm Frager will then be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B-flat, and Mr. Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C.

The weekend prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson, and Mozart Sonata for Two Pianos in D, played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

On Saturday evening Claude Frank joins Mr. Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend Sunday afternoon with the Symphony No. 34, the Piano Concerto in D, with Mr. Frager as soloist and Symphony No. 39.

NewEnglandNewsclipAgency,Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,304

JUL 5 1966

BSO Will Feature Mozart

TANGLEWOOD — Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Berkshire Festival concerts next weekend, July 8 through 10. The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert and for one with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf Friday evening at 9. Soloist for Saturday's program will be Claude Frank, who recently returned from a transcontinental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the orchestra's Friday evening concerts. Each of the Weekend Preludes will begin at 7 p.m. and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform on these programs, which will be provided at no extra cost to ticket holders for the evening concerts.

Friday evening's all Mozart program will begin at 9 with March No. 3 in C, K. 408, and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Mr. Frager will then be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B-Flat, K. 450, and Mr. Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

Mr. Frank will be heard on Saturday evening at 8 when he joins Mr. Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201, and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend at Tanglewood with a program including the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Mr. Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

NewEnglandNewsclipAgency,Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331

JUL 5 1966

45.3

NewEnglandNewsclipAgency,Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 98,605

JUL 2 1966

British Maestro At Tanglewood

SIR ADRIAN BOULT

Sir Adrian Boult, famed British conductor, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood on the afternoon of the 10th. He will conduct the Mozart Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Mozart Symphony No. 39, K. 543, and the Mozart Piano Concerto in D major, K. 175, with Malcolm Frager as soloist.

Three Mozart Concerts Next at Tanglewood

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts in Lenox. The British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as he will with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf Friday night at 9. As soloist for Saturday's program, Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a transcontinental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

New Series

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's of the Weekend Preludes, giv- Friday evening concert. Each en each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7 and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will peform on these programs which will be provided at o extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

Friday night's all Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, K. 408, and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Frager will be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, and Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and Mozart Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448, played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Frank will be heard again Saturday night at 8 when he joins Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201 and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

First Guest Conductor

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon at 2.30. Sir Adrian's program will include the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175, with Frager as soloist and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

The regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will take place at 10.30 Saturday morning in the Music Shed.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will open the Tuesday evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs tonight at the Tanglewood Theater. The Chamber Players, formed from the principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1964, have been heard extensively throughout the eastern part of the country and this spring made their first transcontinental tour. Claude Frank will be pianist with the Chamber Players at tonight's concert at 8. The program will consist of Mozart's Piano Quartet, K. 478; Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon, and Piano, (1926); the Duo for Flute and Bassoon by Villa Lobos, and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin, Cello and Piano, Op. 99.

Friends Concerts

Two Berkshire Music Center concerts this week will be open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Music Center's activities. Sir Adrian Boult is scheduled to conduct the first concert by the Berkshire Music Center orchestra in the Tanglewood Theater Thursday night, at 8. His program will include Walton's Portsmouth Point Overture; the Horn Concerto No. 2 by Strauss with William Lane as soloist and Vaughn Williams' London Symphony. Sunday morning at 10 a concert of baroque music will be presented in the Theater.

Program and ticket information on all Tanglewood concerts may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox.

* * *

Correction

The weekend of Bach concerts at Tanglewood will be July 15, 16 and 17, contrary to the report printed in The Union Saturday.

* * *

Week

nd Gluck gave him cooperation in the piece and that pianists onsky and Victor Babin bert, spirited collabo- the Mozart, whose gro was worked up to irresistible point of on.

FRESNO BEE
FRESNO, CALIF.
10,189 SUN. 137,332

1 6 1965

land Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bulletin (m)
RWICH, Conn.
Circ. 30,240
2 8 1965

od

551. will in-
Mozart's
e Tan-
by Ald Monos in
Claude
Saturbe so-oncerrt will phony e with e, K.-

e sea-or, will
d Sunny No.
oncerto as so-
39, K.-

hearsal
Boston
Pension
t 10:30
usic

Cham-
e Tues-Festival
seven lewood
Piano
ank as Oboe,
6); the oon by t's Trio and Pi-row at s' Dou-

Silver-as solo-
's Sym-
Elgar
Fourth will inlassical essions'
lgar as Till Eu-non per-
Concer-

Schenectady Union Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,615

JUL 5 1966

Sir Adrian Boult to Conduct A Mozart Concert at Tanglewood

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's Bershire Festival.

The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as he will with music director Erich Leinsdorf Friday at 9 p.m. As soloist for Saturday's program, Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a transcontinental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Friday evening concert. Each of the Weekend Preludes, given each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7:00 p.m. and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the Orchestra performing in small ensemblies will perform on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

Friday evening's all Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, K. 408 and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Malcolm Frager will then be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, and Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" symphony in C, K. 551.

The Weekend Prelude Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and Mozart Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Frank will be heard again on Saturday evening when he joins Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201 and conclude with his "Posthore" Serenade, K. 320.

Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon. Sir Adrian's program will include the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

The regular Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will take place at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the Music Shed.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503

JUL 1 1966

Mozart Concerts, Tanglewood

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at next weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox.

The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra at 2:30 next Sunday afternoon. Pianist Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert and with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf at next Friday evening's concert at 9.

As soloist for Saturday's 8 p. m. program Mr. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a transcontinental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the weekend preludes, will take place in advance of Friday evening's concert. Each of the weekend preludes, given each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7 and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer.

Some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform on these programs, which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

Friday evening's all-Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, and continue with the Symphony No. 31, "Paris." Malcolm Frager will then be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B-flat, and Mr. Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C.

The weekend prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson, and Mozart Sonata for Two Pianos in D, played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

On Saturday evening Claude Frank joins Mr. Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend Sunday afternoon with the Symphony No. 34, the Piano Concerto in D, with Mr. Frager as soloist and Symphony No. 39.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,655

JUL 6 1966

3 Mozart Concerts Planned At Berkshire for Weekend

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts.

Guest artists for the series include British conductor Sir Adrian Boult and pianists Malcom Frager and Claude Frank. Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct Friday and Saturday evenings' concerts. Sir Adrian Boult will make his first appearance at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon when he appears as the first guest conductor of the season.

The first of the Weekend Preludes, a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, will take place preceeding the Friday evening concert. Each of the Weekend Preludes, to be given each Friday evening for the remainder of the season, will begin at 7:00 and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will appear on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

This first Prelude will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and the Mozart Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 444 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

The regular weekend concerts will take place Friday evening at 9, Saturday at 8 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Buffalo Evening News
D. 279,780 SAT. 292,741

JUL 2 1966

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL will be honored in the guest appearance of British conductor Sir Adrian Boult for the first time in the 30-year series. Sir Adrian will conduct on Sunday, July 10, at 2:30 PM, an all-Mozart program including the Piano Concerto in D, K175, with Malcolm Frager as soloist, and Symphonies Nos. 34 and 39.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,304

JUL 5 1966

BSO Will Feature Mozart

TANGLEWOOD — Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Berkshire Festival concerts next weekend, July 8 through 10. The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert and for one with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf Friday evening at 9. Soloist for Saturday's program will be Claude Frank, who recently returned from a transcontinental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the orchestra's Friday evening concerts. Each of the Weekend Preludes will begin at 7 p.m. and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform on these programs, which will be provided at no extra cost to ticket holders for the evening concerts.

Friday evening's all Mozart program will begin at 9 with March No. 3 in C, K. 408, and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Mr. Frager will then be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B-Flat, K. 450, and Mr. Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

Mr. Frank will be heard on Saturday evening at 8 when he joins Mr. Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201, and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend at Tanglewood with a program including the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Mr. Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331

JUL 5 1966

Three Mozart Concerts Next at Tanglewood

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts in Lenox. The British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as he will with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf Friday night at 9. As soloist for Saturday's program, Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a transcontinental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

New Series

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's of the Weekend Preludes, giv- Friday evening concert. Each en each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7 and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will peform on these programs which will be provided at o extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

Friday night's all Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, K. 408, and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Frager will be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, and Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and Mozart Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448, played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Frank will be heard again Saturday night at 8 when he joins Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201 and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

First Guest Conductor

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon at 2.30. Sir Adrian's program will include the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175, with Frager as soloist and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

The regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will take place at 10.30 Saturday morning in the Music Shed.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will open the Tuesday evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs tonight in the Tanglewood Theater. The Chamber Players, formed from the principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1964, have been heard extensively throughout the eastern part of the country and this spring made their first transcontinental tour. Claude Frank will be pianist with the Chamber Players at tonight's concert at 8. The program will consist of Mozart's Piano Quartet, K. 478; Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon, and Piano, (1926); the Duo for Flute and Bassoon by Villa Lobos, and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin, Cello and Piano, Op. 99.

Friends Concerts

Two Berkshire Music Center concerts this week will be open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Music Center's activities. Sir Adrian Boult is scheduled to conduct the first concert by the Berkshire Music Center orchestra in the Tanglewood Theater Thursday night, at 8. His program will include Walton's Portsmouth Point Overture; the Horn Concerto No. 2 by Strauss with William Lane as soloist and Vaughn Williams' London Symphony. Sunday morning at 10 a concert of baroque music will be presented in the Theater.

Program and ticket information on all Tanglewood concerts may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox.

* * *

Correction

The weekend of Bach concerts at Tanglewood will be July 15, 16 and 17, contrary to the report printed in The Union Saturday.

* * *

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 98,605

JUL 2 1966

British Maestro At Tanglewood

SIR ADRIAN BOULT

Sir Adrian Boult, famed British conductor, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood on the afternoon of the 10th. He will conduct the Mozart Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Mozart Symphony No. 39, K. 543, and the Mozart Piano Concerto in D major, K. 175, with Malcolm Frager as soloist.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JUL 6 1966

Music of Mozart to Be Featured at Tanglewood

Music of Mozart will be featured during the second weekend of the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this weekend.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the orchestra for the Friday and Saturday programs, and Sir Adrian Boult, distinguished British conductor, will make his first Tanglewood appearance with the orchestra in the Sunday afternoon program.

Sir Adrian is also scheduled to conduct the first concert by the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra in the Tanglewood Theater Thursday at 8 p.m. in a concert open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the music center's activities.

Soloists for the weekend programs will be Malcolm Frager, pianist, in the Friday 9 p.m. concert; Claude Frank, pianist, for the Saturday 8 p.m. program; and Frager will again appear as soloist on Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The first of the Weekend Prelude programs will be presented on Friday at 7 p.m. Made up of infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer, the Preludes will be performed by some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensemble. The Preludes will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

* * *

The Friday evening principal all-Mozart program will open with "March number 3 in C, K. 408" and continue with the "Symphony number 31, K. 297, 'Paris'." Frager will then be heard in the "Piano Concerto in B flat, K. 450" and Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and the Mozart "Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448" played by Claudue Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Frank will be heard in the Saturday night program when he joins Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's "Piano Concerto in C, K. 503." The program will open with the "Symphony number 34, K. 201" and conclude with the "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

* * *

Sir Adrian Boult's program on Sunday afternoon will include the "Symphony number 34, K. 338" and the "Piano Concerto in D, K. 175" with Frager as soloist, and the "Symphony number 39, K. 543."

The regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will take place in the Music Shed Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra of the 1966 season will present its first concert at the Tanglewood Theater Thursday at 8 p.m. Sir Adrian Boult will conduct the program including Walton's "Portsmouth Point Overture"; the "Horn Concerto number 2" by Strauss with William Lane as soloist; and the Vaughn Williams' "London Symphony."

* * *

A concert of Baroque music will be presented for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center Sunday at 10 a.m. in the theater.

Program and ticket information on all Tanglewood concerts may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

SIR ADRIAN BOULT
To Conduct at Lenox

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUL 8 1966

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orhcestra at the July 8, 9, 10 Berkshire Festival concerts. The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra on Sunday afternoon, July 10, at 2:30.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Washington News
WASHINGTON, D. C.
Circ. 212,455
JUL 8 1966

At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform three concerts of Mozart music tonight through Sunday at the Berkshire Music Festival. British conductor Sir Adrian Boult will lead the orchestra in his Tanglewood debut Sunday afternoon. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct tonight and tomorrow.

NEW YORK PARK EAST
Thursday, July 7, 1966

Photo by Whitestone

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will present an all Mozart program on Friday and Saturday, July 8 and 9. Erich Leinsdorf directs the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 3 1966

Boston Symphony Orchestra to Play 3 Mozart Concerts at Tanglewood

Sir Adrian Boult, British Conductor Will Make First Appearance at Lenox

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox—Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra July 8, 9, 10 at the Berkshire Festival concerts.

First Appearance

The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the Orchestra on July 10 at 2.30 p. m. Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as he will with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on July 8 at 9. As soloist for Saturday's program Mr. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a trans-continental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

Weekend Preludes

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Friday evening concert.

Each of the Weekend Preludes, given each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7 p. m. and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the week end's principal composer.

Some of the week-end soloists and members of the Orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

Friday evening's all-Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, K. 408 and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Malcolm Frager will then be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, and Mr. Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

Mozart's Canons

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and Mozart Sonato for Two Pianos in D, K. 448 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Mr. Frank will be heard again on Saturday evening when he joins Mr. Leinsodrf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201 and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart week end at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. Sir Adrian's program will include the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Mr. Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

Open Rehearsal

The regular Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will take place at 10.30 on Saturday morning in the Music Shed.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will open the Tuesday evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs next Tuesday in the Tanglewood Theatre.

The Chamber Players, formed from the principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1964, have been heard extensively throughout the eastern part of the country and this spring made their first trans-continental tour. Claude Frank will be pianist with the Chamber Players at Tuesday's concert which begins at 8. The program will consist of Mozart's Piano Quartet, K. 478; Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon, and Piano (1926); the Duo for Flute and Bassoon by Villa Lobos; and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin, Cello and Piano, Op. 99

2 Berkshire Concerts

Two Berkshire Music Center concerts this week will be open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Music Center's activities. Sir Adrian Boult is scheduled to conduct the first concert by the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra in the Tanglewood Theatre July 7 at 8. His program will include Walton's Portsmouth Point Overture; the Horn Concerto No. 2 by Strauss with William Lane as soloist and Vaughn Williams' London Symphony. On Sunday, July 10 at 10 a concert of Baroque music will be presented in the Theatre.

Program and ticket information on all Tanglewood concerts may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, 01240 by calling Tanglewood (413) 637-1600.

This afternoon and tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the second and third concerts of the opening week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival. Two works are scheduled for today's concert—Brahms' Double Concerto with Joseph Silverstein and Julius Eskin as soloists and Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soprano soloist. The Fourth of July program will open with Prokofiev's Classical Symphony continuing with Roger Sessions' Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel and Abbey Simon performing Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 will conclude tomorrow's program.

News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Bi-Weekly Circ. 1,200
JUL 7 1966

Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD – Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts. The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the Orchestra on Sunday afternoon. Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as he will with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Friday evening. As soloist for Saturday's program Mr. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a trans-continental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Friday evening concert. Each of the Weekend Preludes, given each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7:00 p.m. and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the Orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

British Conductor

Sir Adrian Boult, well known British conductor, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, on July 10. Sir Adrian Boult will conduct the Mozart Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Mozart Symphony No. 39, K. 543 and the Mozart Piano Concerto in D major, K. 175 with Malcolm Frager as soloist.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JUL 6 1966

Music of Mozart to Be Featured at Tanglewood

Music of Mozart will be featured during the second weekend of the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this weekend.

* * *

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the orchestra for the Friday and Saturday programs, and Sir Adrian Boult, distinguished British conductor, will make his first Tanglewood appearance with the orchestra in the Sunday afternoon program.

Sir Adrian is also scheduled to conduct the first concert by the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra in the Tanglewood Theater Thursday at 8 p.m. in a concert open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the music center's activities.

Soloists for the weekend programs will be Malcolm Frager, pianist, in the Friday 9 p.m. concert; Claude Frank, pianist, for the Saturday 8 p.m. program; and Frager will again appear as soloist on Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The first of the Weekend Prelude programs will be presented on Friday at 7 p.m. Made up of infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer, the Preludes will be performed by some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensemble. The Preludes will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

* * *

The Friday evening principal all-Mozart program will open with "March number 3 in C, K. 408" and continue with the "Symphony number 31, K. 297, 'Paris'." Frager will then be heard in the "Piano Concerto in B flat, K. 450" and Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and the Mozart "Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448" played by Claudue Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Frank will be heard in the Saturday night program when he joins Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's "Piano Concerto in C, K. 503." The program will open with the "Symphony number 29, K. 201" and concludue with the "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

* * *

Sir Adrian Boult's program on Sunday afternoon will include the "Symphony number 34, K. 338" and the "Piano Concerto in D, K. 175" with Frager as soloist, and the "Symphony number 39, K. 543."

The regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will take place in the Music Shed Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra of the 1966 season will present its first concert at the Tanglewood Theater Thursday at 8 p.m. Sir Adrian Boult will conduct the program including Walton's "Portsmouth Point Overture"; the "Horn Concerto number 2" by Strauss with William Lane as soloist; and the Vaughn Williams' "London Symphony."

* * *

A concert of Baroque music will be presented for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center Sunday at 10 a.m. in the theater.

Program and ticket information on all Tanglewood concerts may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

SIR ADRIAN BOULT
To Conduct at Lenox

NEW YORK PARK EAST
Thursday, July 7, 1966

Photo by Whitestone

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will present an all Mozart program on Friday and Saturday, July 8 and 9. Erich Leinsdorf directs the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUL 8 1966

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orhcestra at the July 8, 9, 10 Berkshire Festival concerts. The distingusihed British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra on Sunday afternoon, July 10, at 2:30.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Washington News
WASHINGTON, D. C.
Circ. 212,455
JUL 8 1966

At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform three concerts of Mozart music tonight through Sunday at the Berkshire Music Festival. British conductor Sir Adrian Boult will lead the orchestra in his Tanglewood debut Sunday afternoon. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct tonight and tomorrow.

News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Bi-Weekly Circ. 1,200
JUL 7 1966

Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD – Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts. The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the Orchestra on Sunday afternoon. Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as he will with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Friday evening. As soloist for Saturday's program Mr. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a trans-continental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Friday evening concert. Each of the Weekend Preludes, given each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7:00 p.m. and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the Orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 3 1966

Boston Symphony Orchestra to Play 3 Mozart Concerts at Tanglewood

Sir Adrian Boult, British Conductor Will Make First Appearance at Lenox

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox—Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra July 8, 9, 10 at the Berkshire Festival concerts.

First Appearance

The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the Orchestra on July 10 at 2.30 p. m. Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as he will with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on July 8 at 9. As soloist for Saturday's program Mr. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a trans-continental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

Weekend Preludes

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Friday evening concert.

Each of the Weekend Preludes, given each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7 p. m. and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the week end's principal composer.

Some of the week-end soloists and members of the Orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

Friday evening's all-Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, K. 408 and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K, 297, "Paris." Malcolm Frager will then be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, and Mr. Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

Mozart's Canons

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and Mozart Sonato for Two Pianos in D, K. 448 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Mr. Frank will be heard again on Saturday evening when he joins Mr. Leinsodrf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K, 201 and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart week end at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. Sir Adrian's program will include the Symphony No. 34, K, 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Mr. Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

Open Rehearsal

The regular Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will take place at 10.30 on Saturday morning in the Music Shed.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will open the Tuesday evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs next Tuesday in the Tanglewood Theatre.

The Chamber Players, formed from the principal players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1964, have been heard extensively throughout the eastern part of the country and this spring made their first trans-continental tour. Claude Frank will be pianist with the Chamber Players at Tuesday's concert which begins at 8. The program will consist of Mozart's Piano Quartet, K. 493; Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon, and Piano (1926); the Duo for Flute and Bassoon by Villa Lobos; and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin, Cello and Piano, Op. 99.

2 Berkshire Concerts

Two Berkshire Music Center concerts this week will be open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Music Center's activities. Sir Adrian Boult is scheduled to conduct the first concert by the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra in the Tanglewood Theatre July 7 at 8. His program will include Walton's Portsmouth Point Overture; the Horn Concerto No. 2 by Strauss with William Lane as soloist, and Vaughn Williams' London Symphony. On Sunday, July 10 at 10 a concert of Baroque music will be presented in the Theatre.

Program and ticket information on all Tanglewood concerts may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, 01240 by calling Tanglewood (413) 637-1600.

This afternoon and tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the second and third concerts of the opening week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival. Two works are scheduled for today's concert—Brahms' Double Concerto with Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin as soloists and Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 4 with Anne Elgar as soprano soloist. The Fourth of July program will open with Prokofiev's Classical Symphony continuing with Roger Sessions' Psalm 140 with Miss Elgar as soloist. Richard Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel and Abbey Simon performing Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 will conclude tomorrow's program.

British Conductor

Sir Adrian Boult, well known British conductor, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, on July 10. Sir Adrian Boult will conduct the Mozart Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Mozart Symphony No. 39, K. 543 and the Mozart Piano Concerto in D major, K. 175 with Malcolm Frager as soloist.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099
JUL 3 1966

Show Guide | MUSIC

Mozart Highlights Berkshire Week

LENOX — Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at next weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts.

British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra next Sunday afternoon. Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as well as on Friday evening. As soloist for Saturday's program Erich Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a transcontinental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood — the Weekend Preludes — will take place in advance of the orchestra's Friday evening concert. Each of the preludes, given Friday evenings for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7 p.m. and will consist of some of the infrequently-heard music of the weekend's principal composer.

Friday evening's all-Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, K. 408 and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Frager will perform the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, and Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The weekend prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under direction of Alfred Nash Peterson and the Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448, played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Frank will be heard again Saturday evening in Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201, and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Sir Adrian, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend next Sunday afternoon. Sir Adrian's program will include the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Mr. Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

The regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will take place at 10:30 Saturday morning in the Music Shed.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will open the Tuesday-evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs on Tuesday in the Tanglewood Theater. Frank will be pianist, and the program will consist of Mozart's Piano Quartet, K. 478; Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon, and Piano (1926); the Duo for Flute and Bassoon by Villa Lobos; and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin, Celo and Piano, Op. 99.

ABBEY SIMON will be soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2 with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, in Lenox, tomorrow. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct. The program will include Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 "Classical," Roger Sessions' "Psalm 140" and Richard Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUL 7 1966

SIR ADRIAN BOULT . . . distinguished British conductor who will make his Tanglewood debut, Sunday.

GUEST CONDUCTOR AT TANGLEWOOD

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's (July 8, 9, 10) Berkshire Festival concerts. The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the Orchestra on Sunday afternoon (July 10; 2:30). Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as he will with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Friday evening (July 8; 9:00). As soloist for Saturday's program Mr. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a trans-continental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Friday evening concert. Each of the Weekend Preludes, given each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7:00 p.m. and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the Orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

Friday evening's (July 9; 9:00) all Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, K. 408 and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Malcolm Frager will then be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B Flat, K. 450, and Mr. Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and Mozart Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Mr. Frank will be heard again on Saturday evening (July 9, 8:00) when he joins Mr. Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201 and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon (July 10; 2:30). Sir Adrian's program will include the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Mr. Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

BROOKLYN KINGS COURIER
Saturday, July 9, 1966

SIR ADRIAN BOULT, well known British conductor, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, on Sun. afternoon, July 10. Sir Adrian Boult will conduct the Mozart Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Mozart Symphony No. 39, K. 543 and the Mozart Piano Concerto in D major, K. 175, with Malcolm Frager as soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186
JUL 7 1966

Three Concerts On The Schedule At Tanglewood

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts. The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra on Sunday afternoon. Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as he will with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Friday evening. As soloist for Saturday's program Mr. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a trans-continental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Boston Symphony Orchesera's Friday concert. Each of the Weekend Preludes, given each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7 and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

Friday's all-Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, K. 408 and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Malcolm Frager will then be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, and Mr. Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and Mozart Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Mr. Frank will be heard again on Saturday when he joins Mr. Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201, and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon (July 10, 2:30). Sir Adrian's program will include the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Mr. Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,304
JUL 7 1966

Boult To Lead Music Center Orchestra

Sir Adrian Boult will make his first appearance at Tanglewood tonight when he conducts the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra in its initial concert of the summer. The personnel of the Music Center Orchestra consists of more than 70 players who are all members of the Berkshire Music Center's Fellowship Program.

Tonight's concert will begin with the Portsmouth Point Overture by William Walton and continue with Richard Strauss' Horn Concerto No. 2. William Lane will be the soloist in the concert. Sir Adrian will close the program with Ralph Vaughan Williams' London Symphony.

This concert is the first of approximately 30 programs open this summer to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. On Sunday there will be another Friends program in the theatre. This will be an all Vivaldi concert by members of the fellowship program and under the direction of Igor Kipnis.

gland Newsclip Agency, Inc.
78, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099
JUL 3 1966

Show Guide | MUSIC

Mozart Highlights Berkshire Week

LENOX — Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at next weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts.

British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra next Sunday afternoon. Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as well as on Friday evening. As soloist for Saturday's program Erich Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a transcontinental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood — the Weekend Preludes — will take place in advance of the orchestra's Friday evening concert. Each of the preludes, given Friday evenings for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7 p.m. and will consist of some of the infrequently-heard music of the weekend's principal composer.

Friday evening's all-Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, K. 408 and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Frager will perform the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, and Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The weekend prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under direction of Alfred Nash Peterson and the Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448, played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Frank will be heard again Saturday evenings in Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201 and conclude with is "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Sir Adrian, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend next Sunday afternoon. Sir Adrian's program will include the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Mr. Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

The regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will take place at 10:30 Saturday morning in the Music Shed.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will open the Tuesday-evening Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series of seven programs on Tuesday in the Tanglewood Theater. Frank will be pianist, and the program will consist of Mozart's Piano Quartet, K. 478; Poulenc's Trio for Oboe, Bassoon, and Piano (1926); the Duo for Flute and Bassoon by Villa Lobos; and Schubert's Trio No. 1 for Violin, Celo and Piano, Op. 99.

ABBEY SIMON will be soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2 with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, in Lenox, tomorrow. Erich Leinsdorf will conduts. The program will include Prokofiev's Symphony No. 1 "Classical," Roger Sessions' "Psalm 140" and Richard Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUL 7 1966

SIR ADRIAN BOULT . . . distinguished British conductor who will make his Tanglewood debut, Sunday.

GUEST CONDUCTOR AT TANGLEWOOD

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's (July 8, 9, 10) Berkshire Festival concerts. The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the Orchestra on Sunday afternoon (July 10; 2:30). Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as he will with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Friday evening (July 8; 9:00). As soloist for Saturday's program Mr. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a trans-continental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Friday evening concert. Each of the Weekend Preludes, given each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7:00 p.m. and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the Orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

Friday evening's (July 9; 9:00) all Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, K. 408 and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Malcolm Frager will then be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B Flat, K. 450, and Mr. Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and Mozart Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Mr. Frank will be heard again on Saturday evening (July 9, 8:00) when he joins Mr. Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201 and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon (July 10; 2:30). Sir Adrian's program will include the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Mr. Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

BROOKLYN KINGS COURIER
Saturday, July 9, 1966

SIR ADRIAN BOULT, well known British conductor, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, on Sun. afternoon, July 10. Sir Adrian Boult will conduct the Mozart Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Mozart Symphony No. 39, K. 543 and the Mozart Piano Concerto in D major, K. 175, with Malcolm Frager as soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186
JUL 7 1966

Three Concerts On The Schedule At Tanglewood

Three concerts of Mozart's music will be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at this weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts. The distinguished British conductor, Sir Adrian Boult, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the orchestra on Sunday afternoon. Malcolm Frager will be soloist for that concert as he will with Music Director Erich Leinsdorf on Friday evening. As soloist for Saturday's program Mr. Leinsdorf will have Claude Frank, who recently returned from a trans-continental tour as guest pianist with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The first of a new series of musical offerings at Tanglewood, the Weekend Preludes, will take place in advance of the Boston Symphony Orchesera's Friday concent. Each of the Weekend Preludes, given each Friday evening for the remainder of the Tanglewood season, will begin at 7 and will consist of some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer. Some of the weekend soloists and members of the orchestra performing in small ensembles will perform on these programs which will be provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets for the Friday evening concerts.

Friday's all-Mozart program will begin with March No. 3 in C, K. 408 and continue with the Symphony No. 31, K. 297, "Paris." Malcolm Frager will then be heard in a performance of the Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450, and Mr. Leinsdorf will close the concert with the "Jupiter" Symphony in C, K. 551.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will include two groups of Mozart's canons performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson and Mozart Sonata for Two Pianos in D, K. 448 played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

Mr. Frank will be heard again on Saturday when he joins Mr. Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C, K. 503. This concert will begin with Mozart's Symphony No. 29, K. 201, and conclude with his "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320.

Sir Adrian Boult, the season's first guest conductor, will close the Mozart weekend at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon (July 10, 2:30). Sir Adrian's program will include the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Mr. Frager as soloist, and Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,304
JUL 7 1966

Boult To Lead Music Center Orchestra

Sir Adrian Boult will make his first appearance at Tanglewood tonight when he conducts the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra in its initial concert of the summer. The personnel of the Music Center Orchestra consists of more than 70 players who are all members of the Berkshire Music Center's Fellowship Program.

Tonight's concert will begin with the Portsmouth Point Overture by William Walton and continue with Richard Strauss' Horn Concerto No. 2. William Lane will be the soloist in the concert. Sir Adrian will close the program with Ralph Vaughan Williams' London Symphony.

This concert is the first of approximately 30 programs open this summer to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. On Sunday there will be another Friends program in the theatre. This will be an all Vivaldi concert by members of the fellowship program and under the direction of Igor Kipnis.

48
New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 9 1966

Sir Adrian Boult

Knight of Music

Whitestone

Sir Adrian Boult conducts students at Tanglewood.

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

This is the third in a series of Berkshire Week articles about people who stage some part of the Berkshire summer scene.

SIR ADRIAN BOULT'S 1966 appearances on the podium at Tanglewood mark his Berkshire Music Festival debut, but this is his 11th artistic visit to the United States.

Six-feet, one-inch tall, the Englishman's erect stance and vigorous guardsman's gait in no way give evidence of his 77 years. The mustache he has always cultivated, still more blond than gray, would, in a man of other years, be termed of an incipient walrus variety.

Sir Adrian is no stranger to the Boston Symphony Orchestra; he twice conducted it in Koussevitzky's day. His American experiences include appearances at the New York World's Fair in 1939 and the opening of the Hollywood Bowl season in 1954. His Tanglewood program July 10 is composed entirely of Mozart, but he does not claim to be a specialist in the music of that composer, or of any other, for that matter; his record shows that he has conducted music from the entire catalogue, approached either from time or style.

Boult was knighted in 1937 and at the coronation of King George VI conducted the orchestral music before the ceremony. This was during his twenty-year tenure as conductor of the British Broadcasting Company orchestra, which he founded in 1930 and which constitutes probably the most impressive achievement in his long and honored career. Boult says that Toscanini, when he came to conduct it as a guest, called it the finest orchestra he had ever rehearsed.

* * * *

Sir Adrian graduated from Christ Church, Oxford, and took his Doctor of Music degree at the university. He then went on to Leipzig where he came into contact with one of the most revered conductors of a previous generation, Arthur Nikisch, who had been conductor of the Boston Symphony for four years, starting in 1899. Returning to England, Boult was called, on short notice, to learn and conduct the Diaghilev ballet repertory for its 13th-week London season immediately after World War I.

The basis of his reputation may have been founded by his conducting of certain of the Royal Philharmonic Society's concerts in London in 1918-19 season, the year he joined the staff of the Royal College of Music. There he organized a class in conducting and score-reading which, he fondly recalls, included a young man named Hugh Ross, with whose American career and Tanglewood successes Sir Adrian is well acquainted and justly proud.

Boult was invited to Tanglewood this summer primarily to "infect," as he named it, the 80 students of the Berkshire Music Festival orchestra (BMS) with Vaughan-Williams' "London" Symphony. He was allotted eight rehearsals, and it was presented July 7 at the first concert of the BMS "Friends" series.

The "London" Symphony was first played in 1914 with a comparatively untried conductor, and it was not until 1918, when young Boult gave it with the London Symphony Orchestra that it was accorded its due. Williams later revised it and the performance heard this past week was the 1920 version.

Boult has always been in the forefront of English conductors who have featured the compositions of their countrymen, and the 1922 premiere of Vaughan-Williams' "Pastoral" Symphony, which Boult conducted in Queen's Hall was an event of major importance.

Sir Adrian is chagrined to find himself comparatively close to his old friend, Pablo Casals, whose presence at the Marlboro (Vt.) Music Festival coincides with his own concentrated term at Tanglewood and precludes a chance of his greeting and paying his respects to his 89-year-old conferers. He recalls with deep pleasure directing the orchestra when Casals recorded the Elgar cello concerto. One of the recording company officials, with not a little trepidation, Sir Adrian says, came to the Spanish cellist and said:

"Maestro Casals, we can hear you singing."

"Yes," replied Casals, "Isn't it a beautiful concerto?"

* * * *

A perusal of the record of such an international conductor as Sir Adrian becomes a lesson in history and geography. Invitations to conduct foreign orchestras came from Salzburg, America and all the major symphonies of the world. His first quasi-permanent post in England was his appointment in 1923 to the Birmingham Festival Choral Society in which he succeeded Sir Henry Wood, whom many maintained was a non-conductor.

In recent years Sir Adrian has divested himself of administrative posts, preferring to devote himself to artistic responsibilities. When he reached the age at which his BBC contract stipulated he must retire, he accepted the post of conductor-in-chief of the London Philharmonic Society.

* * * *

One of the happiest phenomena of the artistic world is the longevity of conductors, a fact that permits audiences to hear a degree of maturity in performances no other vocation seems to allow. Composers may revise their symphonies, authors their books, painters their pictures; but the performance of music is a transient thing. Tradition is thus a doubly valued factor.

Tanglewood itself has been favored with a succession of masters in conducting who have passed their three score and ten: Koussevitzky, Munch, Monteux, Stokowski and others.

And now we have Sir Adrian Cedric Boult, a man universally recognized among music's aristocracy.

JAY C. ROSENFELD regularly reviews Tanglewood concerts for The Eagle, is also a musician in his own right.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 9 1966

Music Review

An Evening of Mozart

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BERKSHIRE Festival at Tanglewood fell into its regular pattern last night as the second weekend of the season started. Last week the three-concert schedule was advanced a day for that week only to take advantage of the Monday holiday. Last night, however, a new system was tried by retarding the hour of the concert to 9 p.m. to accommodate those who might be arriving late for the weekend. As a bonus, those who were on hand early were invited to hear a "weekend prelude" at 7, performed by the Tanglewood choir and the two-piano team of Lilian Kallir and Claude Frank.

The Fourth of July holiday upset the Boston Symphony's previously established schedules inasmuch as a trio of concerts by the entire orchestra was played to start the season this year. Ordinarily the Berkshire Festival begins with two weeks of Mozart and Bach performed by a reduced personnel.

* * *

LAST NIGHT both the "Prelude" and the main concert were solely of Mozart. Erich Leinsdorf conducted the March in C, No. 3, (K408) to begin, and followed it with the "Paris" Symphony. Then came one of the most beloved of the piano concertos, the B flat (K450) and the program ended with the "Jupiter," Symphony (K551).

The "Paris" is an uncomplicated symphony and Leinsdorf did not try to sophisticate it with cosmetics. The orchestra employed last night was reduced to half its normal size to conform to the orchestra Mozart knew in his day. There is an academic controversy over the single central movement. There are two versions. In their days Koussevitzky and Munch played what is known as version number two, Leinsdorf opted for the other last night, a graceful little idiom, but not convincingly more beautiful than the other.

* * *

MALCOLM FRAGER was the piano soloist, and his Mozart was outstanding for simple security, both of his fingers and of his conception of the music. The concerto was written only six years after the "Paris" symphony, but it is much more meaty and substantial. I liked Frager's robust grasp of the last movement theme, as he played it in the cadenza, better than the more delicate playing at the beginning. I would wager, too, that one day he will be still more relaxed in the slow movement. The repartee in the last movement would make a Strauss play seem tame if the exchanges between the soloist and the orchestra could be stated in words. The audience of over five thousand could not be stopped from applauding and shouting bravo to the soloist.

A substantial audience was on hand for the earlier short program of the evening. The choir, under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson, sang eight songs of Mozart on scatological subjects. They are fascinating canons and the words are hilariously unsanitary. They were "performed," as well as sung, much as Arthur Fiedler has his brass choirs stand and march when he renders "The Stars and Stripes Forever" with the Pops orchestra.

The Mozart sonata for two pianos (K448) performed by Mr. and Mrs. Frank was the conclusion of the all too short part of the evening.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277
JUL 10 1966

MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX
Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood
TODAY, 2:30. Boston Symphony conducted by Sir Adrian Boult; Malcolm Frager, pianist.
Mozart program: Symphony No. 34 (K. 338); Piano Concerto in D (K. 175); Symphony No. 39 (K. 543)
FRIDAY, 7 P.M., Weekend Prelude concert, At 9, Conductor and violinist, Szymon Goldberg.
Bach program: Violin Concerto in E; Suite No. 2; Four Fugues; Suite No. 4
SATURDAY, 8 P.M. Conductor, Leinsdorf; soloists include Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Walter Carringer, Thomas Paul, Norman Treigle, Beverly Wolff. Bach's St. John Passion. NEXT SUNDAY, July 17, 2:30. Conductor, Leinsdorf; soloists include Curtin, Haefliger, Treigle, Wolff. Bach program: Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 in F; Cantata 55; Magnificat.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 10 1966

MUSIC

CONNECTICUT

NORFOLK (Yale Summer School of Music)—Orchestra concert conducted by Gustav Meier; David Schwartz, viola soloist.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX (Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood)—Today, 2:30 p.m. Sir Adrian Boult conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Mozart program with pianist Malcolm Frager as soloist; Friday, 9 p.m., Szymon Goldberg conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Bach program; Saturday, 8 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf conducts Bach's St. John Passion; next Sunday, 2:30 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf conducts all-Bach program.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

HANOVER (Hopkins Center, Dartmouth) — Today, 8:30 p.m., Mario di Bonaventura will conduct the Dartmouth Symphony Orchestra in works by Handel, Barber and Menotti; Wednesday, 8:30 p.m. Works by Britten, Debussy, Villa-Lobos and Schubert will be performed by the Dartmouth String Quartet; next Sunday, 8:30 p.m. the Dartmouth Symphony Orchestra will present the world premiere of Easley Blackwood's Concerto for Oboe and Strings.

Albany Knickerbocker News
Saturday, July 9, 1966

TANGLEWOOD — Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a Mozart program of Symphony No. 29, Piano Concerto in C major and Posthorn Serenade at 8 p.m. today; Sir Adrian Boult conducts the orchestra in a Mozart program of Symphony No. 34, Piano Concerto in D major and Symphony No. 39 at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow; the Guarneri Quartet plays Mozart's Quartet, Webern's Five Pieces and Beethoven's Quartet in E Flat, Op. 127 at 8 p.m. Tuesday. Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607
JUL 10 1966

PREMIERE PERFORM
drian Boult, first gue ake his first Tanglewo
e Boston Symphony O

Sir Adria
Conducts
At Tangl

Distinguished Britis
ductor Sir Adrian Boult make his first appearan the regular Tanglewood ries this afternoon at hen he conducts the B Symphony Orchestra in all-Mozart program.
As the season's first conductor, Sir Adrian close the Mozart weeke
Tanglewood with a prog including the Symphony
34, K. 338, the Piano Con
in D, K. 175 with Ma
Frager as soloist, and
Symphony No. 39, K. 54
This past week Sir A made his first conductin pearance at the Berk
Music Fesitval when he ducted the Berkshire Center Orchestra in its concert of the summe Thursday evening. The sonnel of the Music C
Orchestra consists of than 70 players who a members of the Berk
Music Center's Fello
Program.
The concluding wo
Thursday's concert
Ralph Vaugn William's
don Symphony. Accord the conductor one of t portant factors in his sion to come to Tang was the opportunity t duct a student orches

49 3 37

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607
JUL 10 1966

PREMIERE PERFORMANCE — British conductor Sir Adrian Boult, first guest conductor of the season, will make his first Tanglewood appearance when he conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra this afternoon at 2:30.

Sir Adrian Boult Conducts Today At Tanglewood

Distinguished British conductor Sir Adrian Boult will make his first appearance in the regular Tanglewood series this afternoon at 2:30 when he conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Mozart program.

As the season's first guest conductor, Sir Adrian will close the Mozart weekend at Tanglewood with a program including the Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Piano Concerto in D, K. 175 with Malcom Frager as soloist, and the Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

This past week Sir Adrian made his first conducting appearance at the Berkshire Music Fesitval when he conducted the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra in its initial concert of the summer on Thursday evening. The personnel of the Music Center Orchestra consists of more than 70 players who are all members of the Berkshire Music Center's Fellowship Program.

The concluding work of Thursday's concert was Ralph Vaugn William's London Symphony. According to the conductor one of the important factors in his decision to come to Tanglewood was the opportunity to conduct a student orchestra in a Vaughan Williams' symphony.

Sir Adrian has taken a particular interest in the music of English composer Ralph Vaughan Williams and has recorded a number of his works.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 10 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 11 1966

Music Review

Saturday at Tanglewood

By ANDREW L. CLARKE

WITH THE dispatching of Mr. Rosenfeld Saturday night to another music festival west of here, it became my very pleasant task to comment on the second of the Mozart concerts last weekend at Tanglewood.

Not surprisingly, the program was a sheer delight from start to finish, and once again demonstrated Erich Leinsdorf's superb mastery of his forces. Mozart, more consistently perhaps than any other great composer, wrote music that demands the utmost in clarity of performance, if the desired effect is to be achieved. Played well, there is little music in this world more sublime; but played sloppily, it loses almost everything. Happily, the BSO under Leinsdorf is a wonderfully disciplined ensemble, and their Mozart is a joy to hear.

* * *

THE FIRST offering of the evening, for example, Symphony No. 29 in A Major, is a lovely, delicate work. The opening allegro movement in particular cries out for a sensitive, subtle interpretation which it received under Leinsdorf's baton. In fact, each succeeding rendering of the exquisite climbing motif in the first theme seemed more gentle than the last. It was a first-rate performance. The beautifully muted andante was followed by a playful and precise minuet full of striking dynamics. The finale, an allegro con spirito in the form of a rollicking gigue, hurled the work on to its joyful conclusion, as both conductor and players seemed to be enjoying themselves thoroughly.

* * *

PIANO CONCERTO No. 25 in C Major, which followed, was the last of 15 composed for performance in Vienna and has been compared in grandeur to the great Jupiter symphony. Both are in the same key and both are grand in design. Soloist Claude Frank demonstrated a sparkling technique and control that enabled his playing to be tender or bold as the occasion demanded. Especially during the lengthy cadenza at the end of the first movement was the assurance of his playing in evidence. Mr. Frank, who has appeared frequently with the Boston Symphony both here and in Boston, once again proved to be a great favorite with the audience and was called back several times for bows.

* * *

THE FINAL work was the Serenade in D Major. The serenades were Mozart's version of the Bach suites or perhaps of Handel's water music. They are, for all intents and purposes, miniature concerts in themselves, consisting of several movements of varying mood and orchestra texture, and were intended for outdoor performances.

This one makes splendid use of alternation between the strings and woodwinds. Two of the seven movements contain lengthy passages for flute, oboe and bassoon which were played with loveliness by the orchestra's woodwind section. The last minuetto makes use of a posthorn, an early instrument that looks something like a small French horn but sounds more like a bugle. At any rate, Roger Voisin's handling of it was masterful.

At Tanglewood

Preludes Add Pleasure To All-Mozart Concert

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's new expanded Friday night program, intended to please nearby listeners at Tanglewood as well as weekend travelers, was received with enthusiasm on its first test Friday.

To Start At 9

The plan is to start the regular program at 9 instead of 8 so that weekend listeners from Boston and New York can reach the concert on time more easily.

And to keep nearby one-evening listeners entertained while waiting, short programs of about an hour called weekend preludes will start at 7. The gate opens at 6 as usual for all.

Thus music lovers who wish to make an occasion of it can arrive with picnic baskets at 6 and, with two leisurely intermissions, listen from 7 to 11.

One Sentiment

A few lawn-strollers questioned during the hour between concerts voiced one sentiment more often than others, "The more music the better."

The other sentiments were so widely varied as to lead to the conclusion that general approval was felt because the wide time spread allowed listeners to arrive early or late and leave early or late according to personal whims or requirements.

The Friday prelude programs will offer small-ensemble music with emphasis on the weekend's principal composer. Performers include one or more of the weekend soloists.

Franks Perform

This weekend is all Mozart, and the prelude presented Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir (Mrs. Frank) with one of Mozart's most perfectly made piano works, the Sonata for Two Pianos, K. 448.

Also heard was the Tanglewood Choir with fourteen of the composer's short canons.

It may seem odd to say so, but these works were fully as satisfying Friday as anything on the regular program—a program which included such giant Mozart works as the "Jupiter" Symphony, K.551 and the K. 450 Piano Concerto with Malcolm Frager as soloist.

Musical Rarity

One reason, aside from the fact that musical impact is not in proportion to the size of the performing group, probably lay in the rarity of the prelude music and the familiarity of the music on the regular program. March No. 3, K.408 led off the regular program, and the "Paris" Symphony, K 297, was included.

The canons involved 30 voices conducted by Alfred Nash Patterson and, with the duet sonata, were heard by a couple of thousand early listeners.

They were heard with joy, too, considering the amount of applause, as well they might.

Sensitive Depth

The intricate weaving of multiple parts in the canons was performed with precision and happy vitality, and the piano sonata's carefully balanced structure and intimate interplay of four-handed teamwork was expressed with a gentle and sensitive depth.

Malcolm Frager was the hero of the regular concert—after Mozart, of course. His view of the solo part of the K.450 Piano Concerto was received with shouting approval.

His digital control was strong, his runs and trills steady and ringing, his manner genteel and polite. It was almost too polite, perhaps a little on the cool side.

Orchestra Underplayed

And Erich Leinsdorf kept the orchestra carefully in the background. At no time did it take the spotlight from the piano . . . even when the orchestral contribution had more musical substance to offer.

There were a few discreet, lady-like sighs during the slow, middle movement, but otherwise there was no gusty emotion. It was nice.

The little march which opened the program and the "Paris" Symphony were pretty much the same—beautiful and nice.

"Jupiter" Symphony

The "Jupiter" symphony, Mozart's last, which came after intermission, was the work with the greatest emotional depth on the program.

It was also the most familiar piece and it couldn't have been treated with greater craftsmanship.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
JUL 11 1966

Boult Conducts Boston Players With Gentility

By R. C. HAMMERICH
Union Music Critic

LENOX—Sir Adrian Boult was at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon to lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in its third all-Mozart program of the weekend.

Frager Soloist

On the program was Symphony No. 34, K.338, Piano Concerto No. 5, K.175 with Malcolm Frager as soloist and Symphony No. 39, K.543.

It was a program that presented Mozart at three widely-separated musical ages through the medium of Boston's precision and Boult's casual British gentility. It was an interesting combination.

The first evidence that a visiting conductor was at work was the placement of the musicians. The viola players were at left behind the first violinist. The second violinists were at right up front in space usually occupied by the cellists. The cellists occupied the violists' regular position in back at right, and the double-bass players were strung single-file across the back row.

Gracious Manner

The second evidence was the appearance of Boult—tall, bald, a large white mustache and a gracious manner.

Springfield listeners with good memories may recall seeing him conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Springfield in 1946. He gained fame as conductor of the BBC Orchestra and, in recent years, of the London Philharmonic Orchestra. He is 77.

He conducted Sunday with gentle gestures and an economy of effort. He seemed to be conveying his messages to the musicians by suggestion as if he were politely inviting them, with a little bow, to move this way or that.

Casually Correct

The third evidence was perceived gradually as the music unfolded. It was heard as a reflection of Boult's casually correct manner.

The musical material was all precisely in place (Boston's players could hardly do otherwise these days) but it also had an element of relaxation, of English under-emphasis of the sort one expects to see in the famous stereotype British who accepts the end of the world with a stiff upper lip and a flick of the wrist.

Mozart composed the K.175 Concerto when he was 17.

It is a gem of simple purity and uncluttered lyrical flow.

Thousands of Notes

There are, to be sure, thousands of little keyboard notes to be negotiated by the soloist with great speed during the first and third movements, but they do not add to the confusion.

In fact they add to the smoothness of the melodic motion.

In both movements Frager found a slight difficulty getting into high gear during the first few bars, but once up there he made the velocity sound easy. He made the music, as Mozart requested, "Flow like oil."

Composed at 32

Symphony No. 34 was composed when Mozart was 24, about in the middle of his productive years, and No. 39 when he was 32, three years before his death.

No. 39 is the first of the three masterpieces he wrote without apparent reason. It is a great work and it sounded Sunday like a warm, quiet June afternoon.

It was, if we may quote Pogo's friend, Albert, "Like a day with all the lumps taken out of it."

Boult began it with a tempo so slow it seemed halting. But that didn't last long.

Swinging Manner

It picked up a swinging manner with little delay, moved gracefully through its many wondrous moments and presented its last movement with an easy briskness.

Attendance for the weekend was 5268 Friday night, 2667 at the open rehearsal Saturday morning, 7856 Saturday night and 5936 Sunday afternoon.

Next weekend is all Bach. Szymon Goldberg, who appeared as violin soloist with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra last season, will conduct Friday night. The orchestra will be joined by the Tanglewood Choir and six soloists to give the St. John Passion Saturday night, and Sunday's program will include Brandenburg Concerto No. 1, Cantata 55, and the Magnificat.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 177,755

JUL 11 1966

Malcolm Frager plays Mozart at Tanglewood

By Harold Rogers

Lenox, Mass.

Malcolm Frager is a pianist who has earned the respect and praise of the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra — that is, if we can assume that Joseph Silverstein, their concertmaster, has a right to speak for them. And he has.

"Usually when an artist plays with us again and again," Mr. Silverstein said after the Tanglewood concert Friday night, "we find the chinks in his armor. His flaws show up. But not with Frager. He just keeps getting better and better."

The young pianist had just collaborated with Erich Leinsdorf in an altogether winning performance of Mozart's Concerto No. 13 in B-flat major, K. 450. Both orchestrally and pianistically, it emerged like a flawless diamond, with each facet adding to the brilliance of the whole.

Concealing art

Mr. Frager has achieved the art that conceals art. He makes you think and feel the music. If you should force your attention away from the meaning of the music and rest it on technical matters, you will find everything as it should be. Scales come forth skimmingly. Phrases are elegantly shaped. His unpercussive tone does not assail the ear. It rather insinuates itself into the listener's being.

But when he is playing Mozart, you do not really think of all these things. You feel the wonder that is Mozart—the sheer beauty that manifests the composer's poise, balance, form, and color.

Mr. Leinsdorf, of course, also handles Mozart this way; and on the same program he gave us superb readings of the March No. 3 in C major, K. 408; the "Paris" Symphony No. 31 in D major, K. 297; and the Jupiter" Symphony No. 41 in C major, K. 551.

Boult on podium

With Leinsdorf, the listener was more aware of Mozart's precision than of his exuberance. With Sir Adrian Boult, who conducted Sunday afternoon, the listener was more aware of Mozart's joy than of his precision.

This was immediately evident in the Symphony No. 34 in C major, K. 338, with which Sir Adrian opened, as it was in the Symphony No. 39 in E-flat major, K. 543, with which he closed. Sir Adrian has a more casual approach to Mozart, and there were moments when slight inaccuracies were much in evidence. This was true both in the opening symphony and in the Piano Concerto No. 5 in D major, K. 175, for which Mr. Frager was again the soloist.

But there was an over-riding joy that settled a rich glow over the entire concerto; and the listeners responded ardently by giving Mr. Frager a standing ovation, punctuated by cheers and bravos. Sir Adrian too, came in for his share of the glory.

Visitor

Sir Adrian Boult appeared as guest conductor with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon in a Mozart program

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966

JUL 10 1966

Berkshire Festival

Piano Work Highlights Tanglewood Program

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — The cornerstone of Saturday night's concert at Tanglewood, the second of three all-Mozart programs this week-end, was the young composer's big C-Major Piano Concerto, K. 503, of 1786.

Pianist Busy

It is an expansive, unhurried, serene piece that nevertheless keeps the pianist busy with many runs, trills and fancy figures.

Claude Frank played the solo part Saturday with exquisite taste. His music didn't fly as high nor as freely as it did when he played a concerto during the Mozart weekend here last year, but it was equally sublime.

There were moments during the first movement that seemed on the edge of 19th Century showmanship, a hint that Mozart had lived to be 75 he might very well have composed as romantically as the rest of them in 1831.

Middle Slow

The middle movement was very slow, sometimes, it seemed a little too "expansive and unhurried," but it was, indeed, serene.

And Frank played the final movement with fluid and thoughtful deliberation. He truly deserved the ovation he received from what seemed like all of the 7856 listeners.

The 23-minute Symphony No. 29, K. 201 opened the program with a delightful expression of joy written by the 18-year-old Mozart when he was working happily for the Archbishop of Salzburg.

Floating in Sunlight

It is a symphony of innocent simplicity, without rhetoric or bombast or theatrical pretense and Boston's chamber orchestra (about 50 players, almost all strings) played it as if it were a little white feather gently glowing and floating in the sunlight.

The "Posthorn" Serenade, K. 320 which followed intermission, was conducted by Erich Leinsdorf at Tanglewood three years ago during his first summer there.

It is a seven-movement, light piece written for a 10-piece garden-party orchestra—a quartet of strings consisting of two violins, viola and bass, tympani and five pairs of wind instruments consisting of flutes, oboes, bassoons, horns and trumpets.

Its playful perfection Saturday under Leinsdorf's guidance was unbeatable.

Exact Precision

His liking for exact precision as a first requirement, a basis on which emotional expression can be built, has been hovering over the orchestra steadily for almost four years now and seems to be ideal for Mozart's style.

Supple grace, knifelike exactness of timing, buoyancy, smooth tonal warmth—all these made Leinsdorf's Mozart with the Boston players magnificent Saturday.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733

JUL 11 1966

BSO's Mozart at Tanglewood Cut Above Same in Boston

By MICHAEL STEINBERG
Globe Critic

LENOX—This was Mozart weekend at Tanglewood, and America's two best Mozart pianists, Malcolm Frager and Claude Frank, were here to play concertos with the Boston Symphony. Friday night Frager played the B Flat Concerto, K.450, and Erich Leinsdorf conducted the March in C, K.408 and "Paris" and "Jupiter" Symphonies. On Saturday, Frank played the C Major Concerto, K.503, Leinsdorf again conducting and completing the program with the Symphony No. 29 in A and the "Posthorn" Serenade.

Frager's playing was of characteristic lyricism and had a keen sense of the Italian opera gestures on which the music is based. And there was again in his playing the joy of his sense of playfulness and the delight in the unexpected. It was beautifully musical and fanciful playing of Mozart and unusually fine as playing of the piano as well.

Wonderful as Frager's playing is, Frank's does take one to another and higher, interpretive level. There is thorough command of the instrument, though I would suppose Frank to care less for smooth playing as such than Frager. The most remarkable thing about Frank's playing is, however, what it is musically, and it is characterized by stylistic elegance, incisive rhythm, and a powerful sculpturing of phrases. And above all, there is that strong left hand, guided by an uncommonly perceptive musical intelligence to outline the large structural direction of the music he plays.

Moreover, the intelligence and the thoughtful musicianship that produce such notable playing, also revealed themselves in the cadenza Frank composed for the first movement of the C Major Concert. Staying close to the harmonic boundaries of Mozart's language, it was a [illegible] piece of writing that [illegible] witty juxtapositions [illegible] corrections su[illegible] fulfilled its task of [illegible] heads of [illegible] eventually [illegible] movement.

BETTER THAN BOSTON

Except for a couple of details in the second and third movements that were realized on too small a scale to be properly telling, the orchestral part in the C Major Concerto was admirably produced by Leinsdorf and the orchestra, and the many crucial solo bits for flute oboe, and bassoon were very well done by Mrs. Dwyer and by Gomberg and Walt. In the B Flat Concerto that Frager played, the orchestral contribution was less impressive, with many things that were disagreeably clipped and dry.

In general Leinsdorf's Tanglewood performance are apt to be improvements on the Boston ones, and that was strikingly true of the A major and Paris symphonies. [illegible] were more spacious a[illegible] ful than they had be[illegible] the Winter, though [illegible] now there was a lot o[illegible] rapid playing which, while correctly observing the dynamic markings, yet seems to evade all variations of intensity.

The endless and intermittently interesting Posthorn Serenade received a performance that was likewise variable, with some fine and vigorous playing and some that was blandly shapeless. It is a work that contains many opportunities for solo winds, which were on the whole well done though not on the level of the playing in the C Major Concerto.

Roger Voisin played the Posthorn solo in the second minuet from which the serenade takes its name, and for a professional trumpeter he makes a pretty good postman.

PRANCING OVERDONE

Leinsdorf reversed the order of the serenade's second and third movements, which seems a mistake in that it breaks up the two-movement G Major Concertante which is unified by key, instrumentation, and general style, and which Mozart certainly thought of as belonging together.

Friday marked the beginning of the weekend preludes, a series of fairly informal concerts given at 7 o'clock now that Boston Symphony Concerts begin at 9 in a manner rather racier than that which one is accustomed to.

Mozart's scatological canons had been advertised. While there are actually five of those, only two were done along with a dozen others whose texts are irreproachable.

Mozart's canons are beautiful pieces, many of them works of his maturity with Koechel numbers in the 500's and it was a pleasure to hear them.

The pleasure was a little diminished by the cute prancing all over the stage that someone had contrived for the singers, and I also had the feeling that so much time had been given to working out the choreography that the music was rather underprepared.

Alfred Nash Patterson conducted the Tanglewood choir. The program also contained the brilliant and rather empty Sonata in D for two pianos, K.448, which was excellently played by Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 11 1966

Music Review

Boult Conducts Mozart at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE CONCERT at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon introduced the venerable English conductor Sir Adrian Boult, whose program was the final of the Mozart weekend.

Sir Adrian closed with the big E Flat symphony, K.543. The other half of his program had been devoted to the less familiar C Major, No. 34 K.338, and a welcome second appearance this weekend of the pianist Malcolm Frager in another concerto, this time the earliest, in D Major K.175.

The musicians of any one country cannot be classified in generalities, yet Sir Adrian may not be untypical of the approach to Mozart of his countrymen. He gave the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in a complement properly reduced in numbers for Mozart purposes, quite a free rein in most cases but his choice of tempos was basically one of his conspicuous felicities. He conveyed that he understood Mozart's indications of pace more thoroughly than many conductors to whom "allegro," by any composer, is thoughtlessly fast; so fast, indeed, that when they come upon an "allegro vivace" they find they have exhausted their potential.

* * *

IT WAS gratifying, too, to note the English conception of more quiet moods as "andante" requires. His "andante con moto" moved along without haste yet with quite a patent perception of the spirit which may well have been the composer's intention. Another fine detail of his playing was the distinction of accents he made between modest stress and violent impact. Further, he observed all the Mozart indications regarding repeats and indulged in a small personal and unusual conceit in the second reading of the final bars of the E Flat symphony, retarding ever so slightly the two vehement chords eight bars from the end and then playing the remaining six bars with an extra speedy stretta.

The two symphonies of the afternoon showed one of the ways Mozart varied the colors of his music. The earlier of the two, the C Major, employs no flutes or clarinets and the andante di molto is for strings alone. The E Flat requires no oboe. The C Major has only one central movement but Sir Adrian usurped a happy license and European tradition of inserting here a minuet from another page of Mozart's resources which fitted in character and in key designation.

* * *

FRAGER compounded the impression of mastery he had established Friday night. One gets to be permanently astonished by anything Mozart did at any age of his tragically short term on this earth so that any expression of wonderment becomes trite, even when it refers to his initial essay in a concerto for keyboard. Frager's remarkably commanding fingers were the lesser factor in his success; the greater was his choice of style which showed at once both an awareness of the spirit of Mozart's writing and a logical adaptation to it of today's keyboard equipment. Sir Adrian's excellent collaboration was noted and included in the triumphal ovation an audience of 5,936 was eager to confer on the performers.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 94,357
JUL 11 1966

At Tanglewood

Symphony Group Features Mozart

By JOHN F. KYES
Gazette Music Critic

LENOX — Improved attendance over a week ago was registered this past weekend at Tanglewood where the orchestra of 50 Boston Symphony players gave three concerts, entirely of Mozart's music. Erich Leinsdorf (a worthy exponent of this composer) conducted on Friday and Saturday, while on Sunday Sir Adrian Boult of England made his first appearance with the Boston Symphony in 20 years.

Gazette Review

For the week, there were 1,142 at the Tuesday chamber music, 5,268 at Friday's concert, 2,667 at the Saturday morning open rehearsal, 7,856 Saturday night and 5,936 Sunday afternoon, a total of 22,869.

Friday offered the Mozart Symphonies No. 31 and 41, and Malcolm Frager as soloist in the Piano Concerto No. 15 in B flat major.

Saturday had the Symphony No. 29, the Serenade in D major (with the Posthorn) and Claude Frank soloing in the Piano Concerto No. 25 in C major.

Yesterday Boult led the ensemble in Symphonies No. 34 and 39, and Frager soloed in the Piano Concerto No. 5 in D major written by Mozart at the age of 17, and receiving its first Tanglewood hearing.

Famed Conductor

The famed 77-year - old English conductor was alert but relaxed in his handling of the symphonies. He inserted a wholly compatible Minuet, K. 409, to provide a third movement for Symphony No. 34, a move some say Mozart would have favored.

His readings of the slower and softer portions of the symphonies were made to sound flexible, as well as sensitive in tonal balances. When the orchestra was singing at full voice, or comparatively loudly, he had a tendency to let things go at a routine gait. Nevertheless, he put delicacy and verve into portions of the opening and final movements of No. 34, and drew moments of great loveliness from the familiar No. 39, including a gracious limning of the well - known Minuet.

Frager, who will be heard at the Worcester Festival in October with the Detroit Orchestra under Sixten Ehrling, made splendid things of the smooth and agile phrases in the two "Allegros," and did his best to overcome with poetry the rather static qualities of Mozart's writing in the slow movement. He was warmly applauded, not only by the audience, but by the orchestra members and Sir Adrian.

Albany Knickerbocker News
Monday, July 11, 1966

MOZART SOLOIST—Malcolm Frager, pianist, was the soloist yesterday afternoon at Tanglewood in the final concert of an all-Mozart weekend at the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Frager is scheduled to appear as soloist with the Albany Symphony next April.

At the Concert

5 Curtain Calls

By R. E. KRIEGER

LENOX, Mass.—Pianist Malcom Frager gave an inspired performance yesterday with the Boston Symphony under guest conductor Sir Adrian Boult, of Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 5 in D Major, K. 175.

There are a couple of firsts here. The work is Mozart's first original piano concerto; this concert was the first time that the concerto has been played at Tanglewood, and it was Sir Adrian's first appearance as guest conductor at the festival.

Frager likes it here as one can easily see by the fact that he has appeared as a performer at these Berkshire Festival concerts for the last three years.

★ ★ ★

BUT MOST of all his delight is evident in the way he smiles and sways at the piano while performing. There is the sudden quick smile springing from a dead-serious face when he has successfully encompassed a particular tricky passage and then he will close his eyes rocking to and fro in what seems near-ecstacy as the Boston Symphony string section blooms behind him.

He'll cast quick glances of approval at Joseph Silverstein, the concert master, followed by an even quicker glance at Sir Adrian.

Or at the end of a quicksilver, absolutely crystal clear explosion of notes, he'll sit back and take a deep breath in satisfaction.

★ ★ ★

THE SENTIMENTAL second movement, the fiery virtuosity displayed in the finale were marvelous to hear and the audience thought so, too, for they called Frager back five times before they let him go...and even then there was still splatterings of applause from super-enthusiastic devotees from various sections of the Tanglewood Music Shed.

In the opening work of the afternoon "Symphony No. 34 in C Major, K. 338", Sir Adrian easily led the Boston Symphony through one of Mozart's lesser played works.

Sir Adrian, in his first Tanglewood appearance, makes conducting look so easy that he appears lethargic, a misconception, for he has been high in the conducting business for some 40 years.

★ ★ ★

THE AFTERNOON closed with one of Mozart's greater symphonies, No. 39 in E-Flat Major, K. 543 and the string section showed brilliantly its professionalism. The whole work is filled with graceful melodies, bolstered for a time by the third movement, Minuet, and then surging to a breathless conclusion in the allegro finale.

This was the third of three Mozart concerts last weekend. On Friday, 5,268 people heard performances of March No. 3 in C, Symphony No. 31 ("Paris"), Mr. Frager in the Piano Concerto in B-Flat, K.450 and the "Jupiter" Symphony in C.

While on Saturday, 7,856 heard Claude Frank as piano soloist in the Piano Concerto in C, K.503, the orchestra in Symphony No. 29 and the "Posthorn" Serenade.

Bach will take over next weekend's concerts with violinist Szymon Goldberg performing and conducting Friday, the St. John Passion scheduled on Saturday and on Sunday the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and the Magnificat as the highlights.

52

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Boston 02108 • 742-5200

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUL 14 1966

TANGLEWOOD REVIEWED

TANGLEWOOD
Friday — by J. G. B.

The most noteworthy feature of this first concert of a weekend devoted to Mozart's music was the brio displayed by all concerned: the sheer pleasure of performing great and beautiful music, the joy one feels in having brought it off. The evening also offered the first of the so-called "Weekend Preludes," an innovation at Tanglewood this summer, which are to present "some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer," performed by relatively small groups in the vast reaches of the Shed at seven o'clock on Fridays.

The experiment proved to be a success, although the D major Sonata for Two Pianos can hardly be called "infrequently heard music." Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir played it with verve and style and appeared to enjoy themselves as much as did the surprisingly large audience. They were preceded by the Tanglewood Choir, a group of young singers who had an enormously good time with the eight "Scatological" Canons and Six Canons without text, a sort of eighteenth-century equivalent of the currently popular folksinging mode.

The concert proper began at nine o'clock and featured the "Paris" and "Jupiter" symphonies and the Piano Concerto No. 15 in B-Flat major, with Malcolm Frager as soloist. This was by far the most exciting and fully realized performance of a Mozart concerto I have yet heard at Tanglewood. Pianist, conductor, and orchestra sound as if they had been playing together for years; the tempos were just right, the trills and runs and arpeggios effortless. Mr. Leinsdorf's approach is long on precision and strength, just a bit short on grace and lilt.

Saturday — by A. C. S.

Judging from the size of the audience, there are a great many Mozart devotees; and a good thing there are so many for the program Saturday evening could not be considered the "pops" variety of Mozart program. Included were the Symphony in A major, K. 201, the C major Piano Concerto, K. 503, and the Serenade in D major, K. 320.

The Symphony was impeccably performed. Erich Leinsdorf used a reduced string section throughout the concert and here, in a work which is basically a string symphony, the sound had a wondrous sheen.

Claude Frank made his first solo appearance of the season in the concerto. From the first entrance of the piano, it was obvious that here was a performer with a real affinity for Mozart. The sound was clean and well-projected without being forced; the phrasing was exemplary and the ornamentation clear as crystal. With Leinsdorf providing a perfect balance between solo and orchestra, this was as rewarding a reading as one could hope for.

The D major Serenade offers many delights for the listener. Alternate movements feature the wind instruments, including a graceful cadenza in the second movement, and a solo for Posthorn in the second minuet.

Sunday — by E. M.

Sir Adrian Boult and Malcolm Frager joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon and brought the Mozart series to a satisfying close. Sir Adrian's interpretation of the Symphony No. 34 in C Major was notable for its body and resonance, especially in the firm Minuet, enhanced by Ralph Gomberg's strong oboe, and the buoyant Finale, which is a showpiece for the first violins.

Mr. Frager's reading of the Piano Concerto in D Major was immensely successful with the large and appreciative audience, but this reviewer was struck by a note of Beethovenesque heavy Romanticism that seemed to emerge in the long allegro solos in the first and last movements. This was especially notable on two occasions in the finale when Mr. Frager's bravura introspection and Sir Adrian's rhythm seemed at odds. There might be a question of such an interpretation being too "romantic" for the Mozart of seventeen, in spite of the recognized precocious maturity of the young composer.

The program ended with the Symphony No. 39 in E-flat Major. Slower and more impassioned than the C Major, the symphony moves to a vivacious and inventive Finale which brought forth the finest ensemble playing of the afternoon.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600
JUL 17 1966

Sir Adrian Boult

English Conductor, 77, Reminisces at Tanglewood

By MICHAEL STEINBERG

LENOX — "I had said before," Sir Adrian Boult was saying, "that at my advanced age I would not cross the Atlantic again except for a Vaughan Williams cycle, but then the chance to prepare his London Symphony with American students and in seven rehearsals proved a sufficient inducement."

The previous evening the 77-year-old conductor had led the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra in a concert including the Vaughan Williams. Afterwards he had been presented with a dedication scroll signed by all the players, and he had delighted them by saying that he was so pleased because it would match one very like it that he had already, that one being from the Vienna Philharmonic.

Now, as he sat at lunch in the Tanglewood cafeteria, students and members of the faculty and staff came by in continental stream with congratulations, some with pictures to be signed, most with obviously affectionate thanks.

I remarked on the evident pleasure with which the students had played for him — the same pleasure was to be evident on the faces and in the demeanor of the Boston Symphony when they had a concert with him two days later — and I suggested that he seemed to be a conductor who made it easy for an orchestra to play.

"Well, in 1912, you see, I went to Leipzig for a year, and there I could watch Arthur Nikisch in rehearsal nearly every day. By that point — he was close to 60 then — he had mastered entirely the technique of rehearsing almost altogether with the stick and nearly not at all with his mouth. The economy with which he worked was the greatest influence on my conducting career."

(Later I learned that Sir Adrian used to have a nightmare about coming to an orchestra for a first rehearsal, playing through the music, and finding there was absolutely nothing to say.)

Before the Nikisch experience, the great influence had been that of Hans Richter, who lived in Manchester as conductor of the Halle Orchestra from 1897 to 1911. Boult's mother was an admirer of Richter's and a frequent visitor in the Boults' Liverpool home.

"From him I learned about musical architecture. Of course, they say architecture is frozen music, and I think it essential to think of music as molten architecture. Shape is everything, and it has always been what I most particularly strive to clarify, even if it means sacrificing some of the detail when, for example, there isn't quite enough time."

The difference between Nikisch and Richter? "Ah, that was put well by one of your colleagues in London when both men had conducted the 'Flying Dutchman' Overture with the same orchestra in the same hall within a few days. 'With Nikisch,' he said, 'fate pursued you wherever you turned.'"

"The other great conductor of that generation was Fritz Steinbach," Sir Adrian continued, "though you must understand I never heard Mahler. Steinbach was absolutely unparalleled as a Brahms Conductor and in general perhaps somewhere between Nikisch and Richter, with something of the warmth and sensitivity of one and the magnificent grasp of large form of the other. Like Weingartner's work, which perhaps you know, it was extremely simple, but it had somehow more character. Later on I'm afraid he was rather a naughty old man with the girl students at the Cologne conservatory and so he disappeared from the scene a bit prematurely."

In many ways, Sir Adrian is a singularly modern conductor. He is, for example, almost alone in his generation in his respect for historical scholarship and in his understanding of its relevance to the activity of the performer.

In one area he is, however, an ardent champion of a conservative point of view, and that is in his retention of the old seating for orchestra that puts the second violins on the conductor's right, opposite the firsts. He insists — and his results with the Boston Symphony bore him out — that 18th and most 19th century music assumes such a division of violins and that is vital to the proper hearing of the music.

"I know the disadvantages for the seconds: They often play with the firsts and they bow together and they think together and it's a nuisance for them to be playing toward the back of the platform always, but one mustn't let orchestral convenience become a criterion. The only important thing is to present the music to the audience in the right way."

Conservatism brought us to the subject of recent music. "O, I'm afraid I'm quite an old fogey now and I don't really keep up any more. There are many gifted and interesting chaps among the younger Englishmen, but I don't know how to conduct the sort of music they write. I've conducted pieces by Malcolm Williamson: He writes stuff I can do."

"But I wish I could be like Vaughan Williams. At 85 he still took an interest in all the new music. He complained about lots of it, but his mind was open and he kept going to concerts every evening and one would see him there with an ear trumpet in each ear and sitting in the front row."

Sir Adrian's association with Vaughan Williams was long and close. From the first revision of the London Symphony to the posthumous performance of some Variations, he led 17 Vaughan William's premieres, recorded all nine symphonies, and conducted at the composer's funeral in Westminster Abbey. "He revised the London Symphony in my office, made cuts, took out what he called some horrid modern music. That was during the '14 war, and I was working in a sort of distant outcrop of the War Office spreading boots about, and he sat there among the samples and worked on the symphony."

"That certain awkwardness in the music is characteristic of him. A clumsy sort of beggar he was, really. Couldn't tie his boots properly so they wouldn't come undone. But it's completely personal music, and so vital. I'm so glad to have been able to do it with young American players and I hope some of them will do it on their own later on. And now I must write them a letter to thank them."

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
JUL 12 1966

Boult Conducting Symphony Is Mozart Week-End Highlight

By MICHAEL STEINBERG
Globe Critic

LENOX—Sunday afternoon's Boston Symphony Concert in the Tanglewood Mozart Weekend was conducted, and conducted marvelously, by Sir Adrian Boult. He led two symphonies, the splendid and too rarely done C Major, No. 34, and the great No. 39 in E Flat. Malcolm Frager, who had played the B Flat Concerto, K.450, on Friday night, was again the soloist, this time in Mozart's very first concerto for any instrument, the D Major, K.175.

While it perhaps has nothing in the level of the very best things in the roughly contemporary violin concertos, it is an engaging and brilliant piece with a contrapuntal finale that [illegible] especially interesting and attractive.

Frager again played with beautiful lyricism [illegible] his infectious enjoyment [illegible] what [illegible] immediate [illegible] and this time with an [illegible] as well. Glenn Gr[illegible] chestral context for him to play into was excellently realized.

Two unusual things about the playing of the symphonies must be noted. One, that in the C Major, Boult introduced the Minuet K.409 which Einstein believed Mozart added to the work for its Viennese performance.

It is an exceptionally fine and richly detailed movement with some delightful and quite showy passages for solo winds in the trio. Two, Boult uses the old-style seating with second violins at stage front opposite the firsts, something that in classical music he is unconditionally right to do. He also places the basses across the back of the stage which lends a handsome weight of sound to the ensemble.

An immediately striking thing about Boult's conducting and the [illegible] was how relaxed the players were, and there were every sign of playing with special pleasure. This stems largely, I expect, from Boult's conducting itself, which is intensely concerned with rhythm and relatively little with beat. The stick is only minimally involved with time-beating and functioning as a metronome.

The sense of rhythmic propulsion is strong in a way that makes the players sure of when the next beat is coming, in a way that they cannot be sure with the rhythmically jumpy Leinsdorf.

Not that what Boult does is stiff or dully predictable. His tempi are often daringly flexible across a whole movement, but he moves from one to the next so organically that only in retrospect, say in singing over fragments of the symphony just heard, does one realize how different the speed was at the beginning of a movement as opposed to ten pages later.

Boult's conducting is, above all, a remarkable demonstration of how the rhetoric of a composition is inseparable from, identical to, its form. Subtle and vigilant response to musical architecture, manifested — to pick one example from many—in the creative and forward-moving way of taking repeats, gave everything a vigorous drive, clear sense of direction, and tremendous energy.

★

Or, in the country-dance tune in the finale, most conductors begin with far heavier accents than did Boult—not to mention their public performance of calisthenics — and go nowhere in particular. From there Boult [illegible] a fairly contained way, but then encouraged the orchestra to respond to the harmonies as they begin to move and to the gradually increasing range of the melody and gave the passage unprecedented strength and excitement.

Boult's feeling for texture and orchestral balance is notable for its subtlety, for its response to the detail of the moment and the ability to integrate that consideration into a larger plan. His solutions to textural problems in performance are as involved as Mozart's solutions to such problems in composition, and both the richly and fascinatingly scored symphonies presented a most wonderful play of light and shade.

The orchestral playing all afternoon was very beautiful indeed, though there were moments in the E Flat Symphony that suggested again that the clarinets, musically and often technically, simply are not up to the standard one should assume as being proper for the Boston Symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUL 14 1966

TANGLEWOOD REVIEWED

TANGLEWOOD
Friday — by J. G. B.

The most noteworthy feature of this first concert of a week-end devoted to Mozart's music was the brio displayed by all concerned: the sheer pleasure of performing great and beautiful music, the joy one feels in having brought it off. The evening also offered the first of the so-called "Weekend Preludes," an innovation at Tanglewood this summer, which are to present "some of the infrequently heard music of the weekend's principal composer," performed by relatively small groups in the vast reaches of the Shed at seven o'clock on Fridays.

The experiment proved to be a success, although the D major Sonata for Two Pianos can hardly be called "infrequently heard music." Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir played it with verve and style and appeared to enjoy themselves as much as did the surprisingly large audience. They were preceded by the Tanglewood Choir, a group of young singers who had an enormously good time with the eight "Scatological" Canons and Six Canons without text, a sort of eighteenth-century equivalent of the currently popular folksinging mode.

The concert proper began at nine o'clock and featured the "Paris" and "Jupiter" symphonies and the Piano Concerto No. 15 in B-Flat major, with Malcolm Frager as soloist. This was by far the most exciting and fully realized performance of a Mozart concerto I have yet heard at Tanglewood. Pianist, conductor, and orchestra sound as if they had been playing together for years; the tempos were just right, the trills and runs and arpeggios effortless. Mr. Leinsdorf's approach is long on precision and strength, just a bit short on grace and lilt.

Saturday — by A. C. S.

Judging from the size of the audience, there are a great many Mozart devotees; and a good thing there are so many for the program Saturday evening could not be considered the "pops" variety of Mozart program. Included were the Symphony in A major, K. 201, the C major Piano Concerto, K. 503, and the Serenade in D major, K. 320.

The Symphony was impeccably performed. Erich Leinsdorf used a reduced string section throughout the concert and here, in a work which is basically a string symphony, the sound had a wondrous sheen.

Claude Frank made his first solo appearance of the season in the concerto. From the first entrance of the piano, it was obvious that here was a performer with a real affinity for Mozart. The sound was clean and well-projected without being forced; the phrasing was exemplary and the ornamentation clear as crystal. With Leinsdorf providing a perfect balance between solo and orchestra, this was as rewarding a reading as one could hope for.

The D major Serenade offers many delights for the listener. Alternate movements feature the wind instruments, including a graceful cadenza in the second movement, and a solo for Posthorn in the second minuet.

Sunday — by E. M.

Sir Adrian Boult and Malcolm Frager joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon and brought the Mozart series to a satisfying close. Sir Adrian's interpretation of the Symphony No. 34 in C Major was notable for its body and resonance, especially in the firm Minuet, enhanced by Ralph Gomberg's strong oboe, and the buoyant Finale, which is a showpiece for the first violins.

Mr. Frager's reading of the Piano Concerto in D Major was immensely successful with the large and appreciative audience, but this reviewer was struck by a note of Beethovenesque heavy Romanticism that seemed to emerge in the long allegro solos in the first and last movements. This was especially notable on two occasions in the finale when Mr. Frager's bravura introspection and Sir Adrian's rhythm seemed at odds. There might be a question of such an interpretation being too "romantic" for the Mozart of seventeen, in spite of the recognized precocious maturity of the young composer.

The program ended with the Symphony No. 39 in E-flat Major. Slower and more impassioned than the C Major, the symphony moves to a vivacious and inventive Finale which brought forth the finest ensemble playing of the afternoon.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600
JUL 17 1966

Sir Adrian Boult

English Conductor, 77, Reminisces at Tanglewood

By MICHAEL STEINBERG

LENOX — "I had said before," Sir Adrian Boult was saying, "that at my advanced age I would not cross the Atlantic again except for a Vaughan Williams cycle, but then the chance to prepare his London Symphony with American students and in seven rehearsals proved a sufficient inducement."

The previous evening the 77-year-old conductor had led the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra in a concert including the Vaughan Williams. Afterwards he had been presented with a dedication scroll signed by all the players, and he had delighted them by saying that he was so pleased because it would match one very like it that he had already, that one being from the Vienna Philharmonic.

Now, as he sat at lunch in the Tanglewood cafeteria, students and members of the faculty and staff came by in continental stream with congratulations, some with pictures to be signed, most with obviously affectionate thanks.

I remarked on the evident pleasure with which the students had played for him — the same pleasure was to be evident on the faces and in the demeanor of the Boston Symphony when they had a concert with him two days later — and I suggested that he seemed to be a conductor who made it easy for an orchestra to play.

"Well, in 1912, you see, I went to Leipzig for a year, and there I could watch Arthur Nikisch in rehearsal nearly every day. By that point — he was close to 60 then — he had mastered entirely the technique of rehearsing almost altogether with the stick and nearly not at all with his mouth. The economy with which he worked was the greatest influence on my conducting career."

(Later I learned that Sir Adrian used to have a nightmare about coming to an orchestra for a first rehearsal, playing through the music, and finding there was absolutely nothing to say.)

Before the Nikisch experience, the great influence had been that of Hans Richter, who lived in Manchester as conductor of the Halle Orchestra from 1897 to 1911. Boult's mother was an admirer of Richter's and he was a frequent visitor in the Boults' Liverpool home.

"From him I learned about musical architecture. Of course, they say architecture is frozen music, and I think it essential to think of music as molten architecture. Shape is everything, and it has always been what I most particularly strive to clarify, even if it means sacrificing some of the detail when, for example, there isn't quite enough time."

The difference between Nikisch and Richter? "Ah, that was put well by one of your colleagues in London when both men had conducted the 'Flying Dutchman' Overture with the same orchestra in the same hall within a few days. 'With Nikisch,' he said, 'fate pursued you wherever you turned.'"

"The other great conductor of that generation was Fritz Steinbach," Sir Adrian continued, "though you must understand I never heard Mahler. Steinbach was absolutely unparalleled as a Brahms Conductor and in general perhaps somewhere between Nikisch and Richter, with something of the warmth and sensitivity of one and the magnificent grasp of large form of the other. Like Weingartner's work, which perhaps you know, it was extremely simple, but it had somehow more character. Later on I'm afraid he was rather a naughty old man with the girl students at the Cologne conservatory and so he disappeared from the scene a bit prematurely."

In many ways, Sir Adrian is a singularly modern conductor: He is, for example, almost alone in his generation in his respect for historical scholarship and in his understanding of its relevance to the activity of the performer.

In one area he is, however, an ardent champion of a conservative point of view, and that is in his retention of the old seating for orchestra that puts the second violins on the conductor's right, opposite the firsts. He insists — and his results with the Boston Symphony bore him out — that 18th and most 19th century music assumes such a division of violins and that is vital to the proper hearing of the music.

"I know the disadvantages for the seconds: They often play with the firsts and they bow together and they think together and it's a nuisance for them to be playing toward the back of the platform always, but one mustn't let orchestral convenience become a criterion. The only important thing is to present the music to the audience in the right way."

Conservatism brought us to the subject of recent music. "O, I'm afraid I'm quite an old fogey now and I don't really keep up any more. There are many gifted and interesting chaps among the younger Englishmen, but I don't know how to conduct the sort of music they write. I've conducted pieces by Malcolm Williamson: He writes stuff I can do."

"But I wish I could be like Vaughan Williams. At 85 he still took an interest in all the new music. He complained about lots of it, but his mind was open and he kept going to concerts every evening and one would see him there with an ear trumpet in each ear and sitting in the front row."

Sir Adrian's association with Vaughan Williams was long and close. From the first revision of the London Symphony to the posthumous performance of some Variations, he led 17 Vaughan William's premieres, recorded all nine symphonies, and conducted at the composer's funeral in Westminster Abbey. "He revised the London Symphony in my office, made cuts, took out what he called some horrid modern music. That was during the '14 war, and I was working in a sort of distant outcrop of the War Office spreading boots about, and he sat there among the samples and worked on the symphony."

"That certain awkwardness in the music is characteristic of him. A clumsy sort of beggar he was, really. Couldn't tie his boots properly so they wouldn't come undone. But it's completely personal music, and so vital. I'm so glad to have been able to do it with young American players and I hope some of them will do it on their own later on. And now I must write them a letter to thank them."

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
JUL 12 1966

Boult Conducting Symphony Is Mozart Week-End Highlight

By MICHAEL STEINBERG
Globe Critic

LENOX—Sunday afternoon's Boston Symphony Concert in the Tanglewood Mozart Week-end was conducted, and conducted marvelously, by Sir Adrian Boult. He led two symphonies, the splendid and too rarely done C Major, No. 34, and the great No. 39 in E Flat. Malcolm Frager, who had played the B Flat Concerto, K.450, on Friday night, was again the soloist, this time in Mozart's very first concerto for any instrument, the D Major, K.175.

While it perhaps has nothing in the level of the very best things in the roughly contemporary violin concertos, it is an engaging and brilliant piece with a contrapuntal finale that is especially interesting and attractive.

Frager again played with beautiful lyricism, with his infectious enjoyment of "what next" on the most immediate level, and this time with an extra sparkle as well. The orchestral context for him to play into was excellently realized.

Two unusual things about the playing of the symphonies must be noted. One, that in the C Major, Boult introduced the Minuet K.409 which Einstein believed Mozart added to the work for its Viennese performance.

It is an exceptionally fine and richly detailed movement with some delightful and quite showy passages for solo winds in the trio. Two, Boult uses the old-style seating with second violins at stage front opposite the firsts, something that in classical music he is unconditionally right to do. He also places the basses across the back of the stage which lends a handsome weight of sound to the ensemble.

An immediately striking thing about Boult's concert and the dress rehearsal was how relaxed the orchestra players were, and they gave every sign of playing with special pleasure. This stems largely, I expect, from Boult's conducting itself, which is intensely concerned with rhythm and relatively little with beat. The stick is only minimally involved with time-beating and functioning as a metronome.

The sense of rhythmic propulsion is strong in a way that makes the players sure of when the next beat is coming, in a way that they cannot be sure with the rhythmically jumpy Leinsdorf.

Not that what Boult does is stiff or dully predictable. His tempi are often daringly flexible across a whole movement, but he moves from one to the next so organically that only in retrospect, say in singing over fragments of the symphony just heard, does one realize how different the speed was at the beginning of a movement as opposed to ten pages later.

Boult's conducting is, above all, a remarkable demonstration of how the rhetoric of a composition is inseparable from, identical to, its form. Subtle and vigilant response to musical architecture, manifested — to pick one example from many—in the creative and forward-moving way of taking repeats, gave everything a vigorous drive, clear sense of direction, and tremendous energy.

★

Or, in the country-dance tune in the finale, most conductors begin with far heavier accents than did Boult—not to mention their public performance of calisthenics—and go nowhere in particular from there. Boult began in a fairly contained way, but then encouraged the orchestra to respond to the harmonies as they begin to move and to the gradually increasing range of the melody and gave the passage unprecedented strength and excitement.

Boult's feeling for texture and orchestral balance is notable for its subtlety, for its response to the detail of the moment and the ability to integrate that consideration into a larger plan. His solutions to textural problems in performance are as involved as Mozart's solutions to such problems in composition, and both the richly and fascinatingly scored symphonies presented a most wonderful play of light and shade.

The orchestral playing all afternoon was very beautiful indeed, though there were moments in the E Flat Symphony that suggested again that the clarinets, musically and often technically, simply are not up to the standard one should assume as being proper for the Boston Symphony.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,007

JULY 17 1966

Sir Adrian Boult on The Art of The Maestro

"I wouldn't mind if the orchestra and conductor were kept right out of sight," says Sir Adrian Boult, the world - renowned British musician whose conservative but by no means inflexible theories have served him well in his 40 years on the podium.

The sound of the music is the all important thing in Sir Adrian's performances. The conductor, he believes, can and should be the pivotal point in any performance but he should be unobtrusive. "If the audience wants showmanship on the stage, they should go to the ballet. That' where they are supposed to do that sort of thing," says Sir Adrian, who firmly believes that a conductor's gestures are meant for the direction of the musicians not the entertainment of the audience. In practice he epitomizes his theory and at times barely seems to be moving at all as he quietly but firmly guides the orchestra.

See SIR ADRIAN, Page C-2

Sir Adrian Boult on the Art of the Maestro

Continued from Page C-1

Very much the reserved British gentleman, Sir Adrian was enjoying his first appearance at Tanglewood last week where he conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Mozart concert and led the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra in a performance of Ralph Vaughan Williams' "London Symphony."

One of the deciding factors in bringing the Englishman to the Berkshire Festival was the opportunity to perform a Vaughan Williams work with students. "I enjoy working with the students immensely," says Sir Adrian, "and I try to do all I can for the English composers, Elgar, Williams. After all, I grew up with them."

The "London Symphony" was featured in Sir Adrian's very first concert. As he explains it: "It was just following the first World War and very little new music was being produced, and there was the 'London Symphony' which had never been performed. Well, it was obvious it had got to go into my program."

SIR ADRIAN BOULT—"I wouldn't mind if the orchestra and conductor were kept right out of sight. If the audience wants showmanship on the stage, they should go to the ballet. That's where they are supposed to do that sort of thing."

Popularizes Williams

Sir Adrian has done much to popularize the works of Vaughan Williams, who generally is probably best-known in England, and he has recorded many of his works. "I would love to have a chance to do the 'Sea Symphony' in the United States but you don't have combined orchestras and choruses to do that sort of thing," he says.

Compared with European orchestras, "American orchestras stand up well indeed," says Sir Adrian, "for economic reasons if no other they have to be among the best." He then explained that England has nothing comparable to the United States in programs for financial assistance for the arts. "The Arts Council has just begun to give small grants," he said. "We do have the British Council but they are concerned with British culture abroad."

As director of music for the BBC for 20 years, Sir Adrian formed the BBC Orchestra and did much to form and promote music in broadcasting. The director of music plans all musical programing, and as the the BBC is non-commercial, he has greater latitude than his American counterpart. "We try to do all we can for living composers," says Sir Adrian, speaking for himself and his successors in broadcasting, "but they are a rotten box office proposition."

No Favorites

"Whenever I am asked what my favorite work is my reply is always the same," said Sir Adrian, "The one I'm doing I like the most. I've tried not to have favorites because my job has always been the kind where it was my responsibility to give space to all serious composers."

"A conductor does put his stamp on an orchestra," according to Sir Adrian, "but that isn't universally so. I've seen good - humored musicians carry a poor conductor." He points out that the Boston Symphony most definitely has a "Leinsdorf style." But this does not present a problem to guest conductors, says Sir Adrian because, "Right thinking people play Mozart right," referring to his own appearance before the Boston Symphony.

In Sir Adrian's opinion it is the conductor's responsibility to maintain the integrity of a composer's work. "Bach you want to put more expression in," he said, "but the others should be left pretty much alone." But as he himself admonished his students in one of the conducting classes he held while at Tanglewood, "It is very unhealthy to systematize anything." He proceeded to point out a few minor changes that he prefers in Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" but remarked that he is very unsure about them and often does not decide until the final rehearsal just how he will play these passages.

Not at all opposed to the use of the score at the podium, he used the scores for all of the Mozart works he performed with the Boston Symphony. "In 1927 in Philadelphia I saw Stokowsky conduct Stravinsky directly from the score," says Sir Adrian, adding that this confirmed his belief in the usefulness of the score during a performance.

Before the orchestra, the 77-year-old gentleman is a master. Having conducted the London Symphony for several years following his retirement from the BBC, he has appeared with most of the major musicians of his time. Following his visit to Tanglewood, Sir Adrian returned directly to London where he is now recording Gustave Holst's "The Planets."

—Joan Simmons

54

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 722-6200

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 41,630

JUL 12 1966

All-Bach Program At Tanglewood

The Tanglewood Festival, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, reverted this past weekend to its regular concert schedule, which was disrupted last weekend because of the July 4 holiday. Last weekend, the opening one of the season, three exciting concerts were performed, but the schedule was moved up from Friday to Saturday night, enabling the audience of 18,000 to take advantage of Monday's concert as well.

The second weekend of concerts found the orchestra reduced to half, which enables Mr. Leinsdorf, the symphony's veteran conductor of three seasons, to play such composers as Mozart and Bach whose music calls for a smaller orchestra.

This past weekend featured an all-Mozart program, again emphasizing the theme of the Concerto, which Mr. Leinsdorf has chosen for this whole season, and enabled the audience of more than 23,000 for the week, to hear some of this country's young and talented pianists.

Friday evening began with the innovation of both 7 and 9 o'clock concerts. This will be the format for the remainder of the season. The 9 p. m. concert will allow those who wish to attend the Friday night performance as well as the rest of the weekend to arrive in plenty of time to hear the main orchestra performance. The "prelude" concerts are open to anyone holding a ticket for the regularly scheduled Friday evening concert, and will usually consisth of lesser known chamber works of the composer being featured in the 9 o'clock concert. This past Friday's prelude performance featured Mozart's Scatalogical Canons, whose delightful music belies the fact that these are really just "dirty songs" as the words attest. However, Mozart genius in scoring truly makes them fun. The canons were performed by the Tanglewood Choir, directed by Alfred Nash Patterson. Claude Frank and Lilian Kellir played the Mozart Sonnata for two Pianos, in D major, K. 488, with a scintillating and subtly musical interpretation. They are so well attuned pehaps, because they are a husband and wife team, each equal accomplished in their own right.

The regularly scheduled concert began with the Mozart March No. 3 in C major, K.408, and continued brilliantly with almost a fervent and loving simplicity, to its close with the Symphony No. 41, in C major, the 'Jupiter" K.551.

Saturday evening's program at 8, began with Mozart's Symphony No. 29 in A major, K. 201, written when Mozart was 18 years old. Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony played it with the simple and direct style it deserved, carrying the lovely musical lines to the finish in the Finale: Allegro con spirito of the fourth movement.

The piano soloist Saturday night was the eminent Claude Frank, whose technical brilliance in the Piano Concerto No. 25 in C major, K. 503, produced a tone of flawless virtuosity. The theme was light and exquisite, almost ethereal in the first movement, a quality that was carried through to the completion of the concerto. Mr. Frank's cadenza in the Adante was perhaps a bit too robust for Mozart, but nevertheless he exercised astute phrasing and performed beautifully, a fact which the audience appreciated with thunderous applause and wild bravos.

Sunday afternoon's program again featured a piano concerto, with the return of Malcolm Frager to the podium, playing Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 5, in D major, K. 175. The guest conductor was Sir Adrian Boult, a distinguished and dignified Englishman, whose conducting reflected his personality. It was this conductor's first appearance at Tanglewood, although he is well-kown to the regular Boston Symphony audiences. Mozart's Symphony No. 34 in C major, K. 338 was stately, yet nonetheless charming.

Next weekend's concerts will feature an all-Bach program, while half of the Boston Symphony's musicians are still playing in the Esplenade concerts on the Charles River in Boston. The reduced orchestra will perform under the shared conductorship of Mr. Leinsdorf and guest, Szymon Goldberg. Mr. Leinsdor has invited soloists Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Triegle and Beverly Wolff.

S.C.M.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277

JUL 17 1966

A New Complex for 'Oedipus Rex'

By ALLEN HUGHES

"FLAGS, skies and plagues . . . a bright stadium . . . packed bleachers . . . a place of contradictions." These are words Larry Rivers uses to describe his production for the New York Philharmonic's performances of Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex" this week. It all adds up to what he calls "a timely visual presentation."

How will it look? Mr. Rivers is keeping the details secret, but he has dropped enough hints to indicate that this "Oedipus Rex" will be unlike any ever done before. It will even sound different in one respect, for painter Rivers and conductor Lukas Foss have "de-fancified" E. E. Cummings's English version of the narrator's part, which will be read by Jason Robards. Otherwise, Mr. Rivers has borrowed concepts and contemporary ideas from the world of sports to bring the tragedy "closer and make it even more applicable to our times." The result may or may not be to Stravinsky's taste, but it will certainly be different.

HERE AGAIN AND GONE

A fine-looking gentleman with an imposing moustache and a jovial manner sailed home to England last week after having worked wisely and wittily for two weeks with the student orchestra and 14 aspiring conductors at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood and having led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a Mozart concert.

It was Sir Adrian Boult, who, at 77, had thought he was probably too old to make a return visit to the United States to work this year. "But," he explained, "the opportunity to introduce Vaughan Williams' 'London' Symphony to 80 student musicians was the magnet that attracted me."

Paul Doniger, a conducting student who overheard the remark, said, "I think you've made everybody love it. Now, I want to buy a recording." Sir Adrian beamed.

"I believe in economy," Sir Adrian announced when asked what he had been teaching the conductors. "A player doesn't want to see a windmill over here," he said pointing off in the distance. "He wants to see the stick right here," and he put a finger in front of his nose. "I admired Pierre Monteux and Fritz Reiner, but I learned from Arthur Nikisch. He didn't know what he was doing, and he had no theories, but he wielded the most supple stick I've ever seen in my life. He said everything with the stick and did not have to babble with his lips."

Then, speaking about the conducting class at Tanglewood: "Some are rabbits; some are good. We talked about rehearsals one day. Usually, a young conductor taking his first rehearsal with a professional orchestra tries to conduct, which is fatal. What he should do is listen. He should be content to steer rather than try to go down and oil the engine."

CONCERTINA COMEBACK

An instrument that has been neglected in the serious music world for decades is soon to be reintroduced by Allan Atlas, a 23-year-old New Yorker currently working on a doctorate in musicology at New York University. In September, he will play a solo recital on the concertina in Carnegie Recital Hall.

The tiny bellows instrument that is operated somewhat like an accordion was invented in 1829 by Sir Charles Wheatstone, an English physicist. Through the performances of Giulio Regondi in the middle of the 19th century, it became rather popular and concertos were written for it by both Regondi and Bernhard Molique.

The range and technical possibilities of the instrument are similar to those of the violin, and in his recital Mr. Atlas will play violin sonatas by Vivaldi, Mozart and Paganini. There will also be Regondi's Andantino and Capriccio for unaccompanied concertina and, if Mr. Atlas can learn it in time, a new concerto composed by James Cohn.

Although this will be Mr. Atlas's New York recital debut, he and his $550 custom-built British instrument have already been heard in several colleges and universities in the midwest, and he is scheduled to play at the Gardner Museum in Boston in October. Since he also performed for invited audiences of distinction at three parties given last December by the late Billy Rose at his New York town house, it must be said that Mr. Atlas is getting the concertina into many of the right places. It may be time to get squared away for a concertina comeback.

WALTON REPORTER
Thursday, July 14, 1966

Mr. and Mrs. George Judd and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Combs spent last weekend enjoying the concerts of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Judd remained for the week.

THIRD WEEK - JULY 15, 16 AND 17

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331

JUL 2 1966

Regional Roundup

printed week early - probably release date

Three Concerts At Tanglewood To Feature Bach

The second series of three concerts by a chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will take place at Tanglewood in Lenox next Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The three programs entirely devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach will have Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf sharing the conducting. Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and also be soloist at Friday night's concert. The St. John Passion will be conducted by Leinsdorf Saturday night.

Goldberg to Conduct

Bach's Violin Concerto in E major with Goldberg, founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, as conductor and soloist will begin Friday's program at 9. For the balance of his program with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Goldberg has chosen the Suite No. 2, the first four fugues from "Art of the Fugue," and the Suite No. 4.

As soloists in next Saturday's performances at 8 of the St. John Passion, Leinsdorf has invited Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtin, Ernest Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Triegle and Beverly Wolff. The chorus consists of the Tanglewood Choir, and the text will be sung in German.

Sunday, July 16, at 2:30 Leinsdorf will begin the concert with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and continue with the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch" with Haefliger as soloist. Sunday's program and the Bach weekend at Tanglewood conclude with the Magnificat with Miss Curtin, Haefliger and Treigle, and Miss Wolff as soloists.

Brandenburg Concerti

The weekend prelude Friday at 7 will consist of two Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 3 performed by members of the orchestra. Admission to the weekend prelude is provided at no extra cost for those holding tickets to Friday's concert.

Next Saturday morning at 10:30 the regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund will be held in the music shed.

The Guarneri Quartet will be guest artists for the chamber music concert Tuesday, July 12, at 8. Their program in the theater will include Mozart's Quartet, K. 589; Five Pieces by Weben and Beethoven's Quartet in E-flat, Op. 127. The members of the Guarneri Quartet are Arnold Steinhardt, violin; John Daley, violin; Michael Tree, viola, and David Soyer, cello.

Open to Friends

During the festival's third week members of the Berkshire Music Center will present three concerts. The programs by the music center are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the center's summer activities. Chamber music concerts will be given on Wednesday, July 13, at 8 and Sunday morning, July 17, at 10 in the chamber music hall, and a program of contemporary music will be presented in the Theater Thursday, July 14, at 8.

Program and ticket information on all concerts may be obtained from the ticket office at Tanglewood.

This afternoon the Tanglewood season's first guest conductor will direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Mozart program beginning with the Symphony No. 34, K. 338. Malcolm Frager will be soloist in the Piano Concerto in D major, K. 175, and Sir Adrian Boult will close his concert with Mozart's Symphony No. 39, K. 543.

10 at UM 'Regret' Viet Raids

AMHERST — A telegram expressing "deep regret" over the bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong in North Viet Nam has been sent to President Ho Chi Minh and Premier Tram Van Dong by a group of 10 University of Massachusetts students.

A telegram also was sent to U. S. Rep. Silvio O. Conte, (R-Mass.) demanding the government pay reparations to North Viet Nam for damages.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600

JUL 10 1966

Bach Week-End At Tanglewood

LENOX—The second series of three concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will take place at Tanglewood next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 15-17. The programs entirely devoted to the music of Bach will have Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf sharing the conducting. Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and also be soloist at Friday evening's concert. The St. John Passion will be conducted by Leinsdorf Saturday evening.

Bach's Violin Concerto in E major will begin Friday's 9 p.m. program. For the balance of his program with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Goldberg has chosen Suite No. 2, the first four fugues from "Art of the Fugue," and the Suite No. 4.

As soloists in Saturday's 8 p.m. performances of the St. John Passion, Leinsdorf has invited Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Treigle and Beverly Wolff. The chorus is the Tanglewood Choir.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Leinsdorf will begin the concert with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and continue with the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch" with Haefliger as soloist. Sunday's program and the Bach week-end at Tanglewood will conclude with the Magnificat with Curtin, Wolff, Haefliger and Treigle as soloists.

The Week-end Prelude Friday evening at 7 will consist of two Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 3. Admission to the Week-end Prelude is provided at no extra cost for those holding tickets to Friday's Boston Symphony Orchestra concert.

Saturday morning at 10:30 the regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund will be held in the Music Shed.

The Guarneri Quartet will be guest artists for the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music concert this Tuesday evening at 8. The program in the Tanglewood Theater will include Mozart's Quartet, K. 589; Five Pieces by Webern; and Beethoven's Quartet in E-flat, Op. 127. Members of the Guarneri Quartet are Arnold Steinhardt, violin; John Daley, violin; Michael Tree, viola, and David Soyer, cello.

During the Berkshire Festival's third week members of the Berkshire Music Center will present three concerts. The programs given by the Music Center are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Center's Summer activities. Chamber music concerts will be given this Wednesday evening at 8 and next Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall, and a program of contemporary music will be presented in the theater this Thursday evening at 8.

3rd:
Herald Amer...
SYRACUSE
D. 133

JUL 10 1966

Bach featured at Tanglewood

The second series of three concerts by a chamber orchestra of the Boston Synphony Orchestra musicians will take place at Tanglewood at Lenox, Mass., next Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. The three programs entirely devoted to the music of Jonann Sebastian Bach will have Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf sharing the conducting. Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and also be soloist at Friday evening's concert. The St. John Passion" will be conducted by Leinsdorf on Saturday evening.

Bach's Violin Concerto in E major with Goldberg, founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, as conductor and soloist will begin Friday's 9 p.m. program. For the balance of his program, Goldberg has chosen the Suite No. 2, the first four fugues from "Art of the Fugue," and the Suite No. 4.

As soloists in Saturday's 8 p.m. performances of the St. John Passion, Leinsdorf has invited Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Treigle and Beverly Wolff. The chorus consists of the Tanglewood Choir, and the text will be sung in German.

Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Leinsdorf will begin the concert with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and continue with the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch" with Haefliger as soloist. Sunday's program and the Bach Weekend at Tanglewood concluded with the Magnificat with Miss Curtin, Haefliger and Treigle, and Miss Wolff as soloists.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday at 7 p.m. will consist of two Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 3 performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

On Saturday morning at 10:30, the regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund will be held in the Music Shed.

The Guarneri Quartet will be the guest artists for the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music concert on Tuesday at 8 p.m. Their program in the Tanglewood Theatre will include Mozart's Quartet, K. 589; Five Pieces by Webern and Beethoven's Quartet in E-flat, Op. 127. The members of the Guarneri Quartet are Arnold Steinhardt, violin; John Bailey, violin; Michael Tree, viola; and David Soyer, cello.

During the Berkshire Festival's third week the members of the Berkshire Music Center will present three concerts. The programs given by the Music Center are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Center's summer activities. Chamber music concerts will be given on Wednesday at 8 p.m. and Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall, and a program of contemporary music will be presented in the Theater Thursday at 8 p.m.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
AMERIKANISCHE
SCHWEIZER ZEITUNG
W. 2.200

JUN 8 1966

Forthcoming Swiss Cultural Activities In The New York Consular District

July 17

Ernst Haefliger. Program: Bach, Cantata 55, and Bach, Magnificat. Tanglewood Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass.

SUNDAY NEWS
NEW YORK
SUN. 3.0

JUL 10

Bach at Lenox

Three programs devoted entirely to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach, and with Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf sharing the podium, will be presented Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737

JUL 10 1966

BEVERLY WOLFF will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood on Saturday evening at 8.

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUL 7 1966

Music of Bach To Be Heard At Three Tanglewood Concerts

The second series of three concerts by a chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will take place at Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.) next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 15-17. The three programs entirely devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach will have Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf sharing the conducting. Mr. Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and also be soloist at Friday evening's concert. The St. John Passion will be conducted by Mr. Leinsdorf on Saturday evening.

Bach's Violin Concerto in E major with Mr. Goldberg, founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, as conductor and soloist will begin Friday's (July 15, 9 p.m.) program. For the balance of his program with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Goldberg has chosen the Suite No. 2, the first four fugues from "Art of the Fugue" and the Suite No. 4.

As soloists in Saturday's (July 16, 8 p.m.) performances of the St. John Passion, Mr. Leinsdorf has invited Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Triegle and Beverly Wolff. The chorus consists of the Tanglewood Choir and the text will be sung in German.

Sunday afternoon (July 16, 2:30 p.m.) Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the concert with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and continue with the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch" with Mr. Haefliger as soloist. Sunday's program and the Bach weekend at Tanglewood conclude with the Magnificat with Miss Curtin, Messrs. Haefliger and Treigle, and Miss Wolff as soloists.

SZYMON GOLDBERG

The weekend prelude on Friday evening (July 15) at 7 p.m. will consist of two Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 3 performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Admission to the weekend prelude is provided at no extra cost for those holding tickets to Friday's Boston Symphony Orchestra concert.

On Saturday morning at 10:30 the regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund will be held in the Music Shed.

The Guarneri Quartet will be the guest artists for the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music concert on Tuesday evening (July 12, 8 p.m.). Their program in the Tanglewood Theatre will include Mozart's Quartet, K. 589; Five Pieces by Webern and Beethoven's Quartet in E-flat, Op. 127. The members of the Guarneri Quartet are Arnold Steinhardt, violin; John Dailey, violin; Michael Tree, viola, and David Soyer, cello.

During the Berkshire Festival's third week the members of the Berkshire Music Center will present three concerts. The programs given by the Music Center are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Center's summer activities. Chamber music concerts will be given on Wednesday evening (July 13, 8 p.m.) and Sunday morning (July 17, 10 a.m.) in the Chamber Music Hall and a program of contemporary music will be presented in the Theatre Thursday evening (July 14) at 8 p.m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 9 1966

Tanglewood Will Present Weekend of Bach Concerts

The second series of three concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will take place at Tanglewood next Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. The three programs, entirely devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach, will have Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf sharing the conducting. Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and also be soloist at Friday evening's concert. The St. John Passion will be conducted by Leinsdorf on Saturday evening.

Bach's Violin Concerto in E Major with Goldberg, founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, as conductor and soloist will begin Friday's program at 9 p.m. For the balance of his program with the symphony orchestra, Goldberg has chosen the Suite No. 2, the first four fugues from "Art of the Fugue," and the Suite No. 4.

Six Soloists

As soloists in Saturday's 8 p.m. performance of the St. John Passion, Leinsdorf has invited Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Triegle, and Beverly Wolff. The chorus consists of the Tanglewood Choir, and the text will be sung in Ger

Sunday afternoon at 2 Leinsdorf will begin the con with the Brandenburg Conc No. 1 and continue with Cantata No. 55, "Ich ar Mensch" with Haefliger as loist. Sunday's program and Bach weekend at Tanglew conclude with the Magnifi with Miss Curtin, Haefliger a Treigle, and Miss Wolff as loists.

The weekend prelude on F day evening at 7 will consis Brandenburg Concerti Nos. and 3 performed by membe the Boston Symphony Orche tra. Admission is provided at extra cost for those holdi tickets to Friday's concert.

On Saturday morning at 10 the regular open rehearsal fo the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund will be held in the Music Shed.

Chamber Music Tuesday

The Guarneri Quartet will b the guest artists for the Berk shire Festival Chamber Mu concert on Tuesday evening a 8. Their program in the Tangl wood theatre will include Mo zart's Quartet, K. 589; Fi pieces by Webern and Beeth en's Quartet in E Flat, Op 127. The members of the Gua neri Quartet are Arnold Ste hardt, violin; John Dailey, vi in; Michael Tree, viola; a David Soyer, cello.

During the Berkshire Fe val's third week, the memb of the Berkshire Music Cen will present three concerts. T programs given by the Mus Center are open to the Frien of the Berkshire Music Cente Chamber music concerts will b given on Wednesday evening 8 and Sunday morning at 10 the Chamber Music Hall, and program of contemporary musi will be presented in the theatr Thursday evening at 8.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 286,021
JUL 10 1966

SOUNDS IN THE SUN AND SH
Tanglewood, in Lennox. The 29
Berkshire Festival is directed by clude Bach's St. John Passion
Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 for

CONCERT CALENDAR

TODAY

GARDNER MUSEUM — Joy Poffle, pianist. Works by Mozart, Franck, Chopin and Scriabin. 3 p.m. Free.

MONDAY

SANDERS THEATER — Guarneri String Quartet. Beethoven, Quartet in E flat, Op. 127; Webern, Five Pieces, Op. 5; Schumann, Quintet in E flat, Op. 44, with Leonard Shure, pianist. 8:30 p.m.

Tuesday

GARDNER MUSEUM — Irvine Lowe, bass-baritone, and Frederic Davis, piano. Works by Monteverde, Caldara, Handel and Schubert 3 p.m. Free.

THURSDAY

GARDNER MUSEUM — Carolyn Kimball, soprano, and Paul Marcus, piano. Works by Adolf Jensen, Faure, Mozart and Turina. 3 p.m. Free.

FRIDAY

CASTLE HILL, Ipswich — Britten's "Albert Herring," presented by the New England Conservatory Summer School, directed by Sarah Caldwell. 8:30 p.m.

SATURDAY

GARDNER MUSEUM — Heidi Kenwischer, pianist. Works by Beethoven, Chopin 3 p.m. Free.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 10 1966

Bach Concert at Tanglewood; Szymon Goldberg Conducting

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox—The second series of three concerts by a chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will take place at Tanglewood next Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Share Conducting

The three programs entirely devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach will have Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf sharing the conducting. Mr. Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and also be soloist at Friday evening's concert. The St. John Passion will be conducted by Mr. Leinsdorf on Saturday evening.

Bach's Violin Concerto in E major with Mr. Goldberg, founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, as conductor and soloist will begin Friday's 9 p. m. program. For the balance of his program with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Goldberg has chosen the Suite No. 2, the first four fugues from "Art of the Fugue," and the Suite No. 4.

Six Soloists

As soloists in Saturday's 8 p. m. performances of the St. John Passion, Mr. Leinsdorf has invited Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Triegle, and Beverly Wolff. The chorus consists of the Tanglewood Choir, and the text will be sung in German.

Szymon Goldberg will be guest conductor and soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, music director, on Friday evening, July 15. He will conduct and play the Bach Violin Concerto in E major. He will also conduct the Bach Suite No. 2, Four Fugues from the "Art of Fugue" and the Suite No. 4.

July 16 at 2.30 p. m. Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the concert with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and continue with the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch" with Mr. Haefliger as soloist. Today's program and the Bach week end at Tanglewood conclude with the Magnificat with Miss Curtin, Messrs. Haefliger and Treigle, and Miss Wolff as soloists.

The Weekend Prelude on July 15 at 7 p. m. will consist of two Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 3 performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Admission to the Weekend Prelude is provided at no extra cost for those holding tickets to Friday's Boston Symphony Orchestra concert.

On Saturday morning at 10.30 the regular Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund will be held in the Music Shed.

The Guarneri Quartet will be the guest artists for the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music concert on Tuesday evening at 8 p. m. Their program in the Tanglewood Theater will include Mozart's Quartet, K. 589; Five Pieces by Webern and Beethoven's Quartet in E-flat, Op. 127.

The members of the Guarneri Quartet are Arnold Steinhardt, violin; John Dailey, violin; Michael Tree, viola; and David Soyer, cello.

During the Berkshire Festival's third week the members of the Berkshire Music Center will present three concerts. The programs given by the Music Center are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Center's summer activities.

Chamber music concerts will be given on July 15, 8 p. m. and July 17, 10 a. m. in the Chamber Music Hall, and a program of contemporary music will be presented in the Theatre July 14 at 8 p. m.

Program and ticket information on all Tanglewood concerts may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Mass. 01240 or by calling Tanglewood (413) 637-1600.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 8 1966

Bach Concerts at Tan

The second series of three certs by a chamber orc of the Boston Symphony Or tra musicians will take pla
Tanglewood next weekend
15, 16, 17.) Three program tirely devoted to the mus
Johann Sebastian Bach wil
Szymon Goldberg and Leinsdorf sharing the co
ing. Mr. Goldberg, makin first appearance at the Berk Festival, will conduct and in Friday evening's concer
The St. John Passion w conducted by Mr. Leinsdo Bach's Violin Concerto
major with Mr. Goldberg er and conductor of the N lands Chamber Orchestra conductor and soloist wil
Friday's program at 9 P balance of his program w
Boston Symphony Orchestra has chosen the Suite first four fugues from the Fugue," and the 4. sts in Saturday's 8

rmances of the St. John
Mr. Leinsdorf has inter Carringer, Phyllis rnst Haefliger, Thomas man Triegle, and Bevf. The chorus consists nglewood Choir, and the be sung in German.
afternoon at 2.30 p.m.
dorf will begin the con-
the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and conti

Cantata No. 55,
Mensch," with Mr.
soloist. Sunday's p the Bach weekend
wood conclude with

SZYMON G
Conducting wood July 1

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 286,021
JUL 10 1966

SOUNDS IN THE SUN AND SHADE is just part of the summer music program at Tanglewood, in Lennox. The 29th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1966 Berkshire Festival is directed by Erich Leinsdorf. Featured works during the festival include Bach's St. John Passion on July 16, Mozart's "The Magic Flue" on Aug. 6 Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 for the final concert on Aug. 21.

Chamber Orchestra To Perform Bach At Lenox Weekend

LENOX—The second series of three concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will take place at Tanglewood next Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The three programs entirely devoted to the music of Bach will have Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf as conductors. Mr. Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and also be soloist at Friday evening's concert. The St. John Passion will be conducted by Mr. Leinsdorf on Saturday evening.

Bach's Violin Concerto in E major, with Mr. Goldberg as conductor and soloist, will begin Friday's program. For the balance of his program with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Goldberg has chosen the Suite No. 2, the first four fugues from "Art of the Fugue," and the Suite No. 4.

AS SOLOISTS in Saturday's performances of the St. John Passion, Mr. Leinsdorf has invited Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Triegle, and Beverly Wolff. The chorus consists of the Tanglewood Choir, and the text is in German.

Sunday afternoon Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the concert with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and continue with the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch," with Mr. Haefliger as soloist. Sunday's program and the Bach weekend at Tanglewood conclude with the Magnificat with Miss Curtin, Mr. Haefliger and Mr. Treigle, and Miss Wolff as soloists.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday at 7 p.m. will consist of two Brandenburg Concerti, Nos. 6 and 3, performed by members of the Orchestra. Admission to the Weekend Prelude is provided at no extra cost for those holding tickets to Friday's Boston Symphony Orchestra concert.

On Saturday morning at 10:30 the regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund will be held in the Music Shed.

THE GUARNERI Quartet will be guest artists for the chamber music concert on Tuesday evening. The program, in the Tanglewood Theater, will include Mozart's Quartet, K. 589; Five Pieces by Webern and Beethoven's Quartet in E flat, Op. 127. The members of the Guarneri Quartet are Arnold Steinhardt, violin; John Dailey, violin; Michael Tree, viola, and David Soyer, cello.

During the festival's third week, members of the Berkshire Music Center will present three concerts. Chamber muic concerts will be given Wednesday evening and next Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall, and a program of contemporary music will be presented in the theater Thursday evening at 8.

CONCERT CALENDAR

TODAY

GARDNER MUSEUM — Joy Pottle, pianist. Works by Mozart, Franck, Chopin and Scriabin. 3 p.m. Free.

MONDAY

SANDERS THEATER — Guarneri String Quartet. Beethoven, Quartet in E flat, Op. 127; Webern, Five Pieces, Op. 5; Schumann, Quintet in E flat, Op. 44, with Leonard Shure, pianist. 8:30 p.m.

Tuesday

GARDNER MUSEUM — Irvine Lowe, bass-baritone, and Frederic Davis, piano. Works by Monteverde, Caldara, Handel and Schubert 3 p.m. Free.

THURSDAY

GARDNER MUSEUM — Carolyn Kimball, soprano, and Paul Marcus, piano. Works by Adolf Jensen, Faure, Mozart and Turina. 3 p.m. Free.

FRIDAY

CASTLE HILL, Ipswich — Britten's "Albert Herring," presented by the New England Conservatory Summer School, directed by Sarah Caldwell. 8:30 p.m.

SATURDAY

GARDNER MUSEUM — Heidi Kenwischer, pianist. Works by Beethoven, Chopin 3 p.m. Free.

SIR ADRIAN BOULT, well known British conductor, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this afternoon. He will conduct the Mozart Symphony No. 34, K. 338, the Mozart Symphony No. 39, K. 543 and the Mozart Piano Concerto in D Major, K. 175 with Malcolm Frager as soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 8 1966

Bach Concerts at Tanglewood July 15-17

The second series of three concerts by a chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will take place at Tanglewood next weekend. (July 15, 16, 17.) Three programs entirely devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach will have Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf sharing the conducting. Mr. Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and solo in Friday evening's concert.

The St. John Passion will be conducted by Mr. Leinsdorf.

Bach's Violin Concerto in E major with Mr. Goldberg, founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, as conductor and soloist will begin Friday's program at 9. For the balance of his program with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Goldberg has chosen the Suite No. 2, the first four fugues from "Art of the Fugue," and the Suite No. 4.

As soloists in Saturday's 8 p.m. performances of the St. John Passion, Mr. Leinsdorf has invited Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Triegle, and Beverly Wolff. The chorus consists of the Tanglewood Choir, and the text will be sung in German.

Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the concert with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and continue with the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch," with Mr. Haefliger as soloist. Sunday's program and the Bach weekend at Tanglewood conclude with the Magnificat with Miss Curtin, Messrs. Haefliger and Treigle, and Miss Wolff as soloists.

Brandenburg Concerti

The weekend prelude on Friday evening at 7 will consist of two Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 3 performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Admission to the weekend prelude is provided at no extra cost for those holding tickets to Friday's Boston Symphony Orchestra concert.

On Saturday morning at 10.30 the regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund will be held in the Music Shed.

The Guarneri Quartet will be the guest artists for the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music concert on Tuesday evening at 8. Their program in the Tanglewood Theater will include Mozart's Quartet; and Five Pieces by Webern and Beethoven's Quartet in E-flat. The members of the Guarneri Quartet are Arnold Steinhardt, violin; John Dailey, violin; Michael Tree, viola; and David Soyer, cello.

During the Berkshire Festival's third week the members of the Berkshire Music Center will present 3 concerts. The programs given by the Music Center are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the center's summer activities.

Chamber music concerts will be given on Wednesday evening at 8 and Sunday morning at 10, in the chamber music hall. A program of contemporary music will be presented in the theater Thursday evening at 8.

Program and ticket information on all Tanglewood concerts may be obtained from the festival ticket office, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

SZYMON GOLDBERG—Conducting at Tanglewood July 15.

SOLOISTS NEXT WEEKEND AT TANGLEWOOD will be (above) Ernst Haefliger, tenor; Beverly Wolff, mezzo soprano; Thomas Paul, basso, (below) Norman Treigle, bass baritone; Phyllis Curtin, operatic singer; and Walter Carringer, tenor. All will appear in the July 16 performance of Bach's St. John's Passion.

. . . Mozart This Weekend

Sunday the Tanglewood season's first guest conductor will direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Mozart program beginning with the Symphony No. 34. Malcolm Frager will be soloist in the Piano Concerto in D major, and Sir Adrian Boult will close his concert with Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 11 1966

Music Review

Weekend at Tanglewood Had All Mozart Program

Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf conducting three all-Mozart programs.

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

By FRANK N. PATTERSON

The steady fare of a one-composer program almost always runs the risk of boring most of the audience some of the time. Even when that composer is Mozart, as it was this weekend, or Bach as it will be next, very little modification of such a statement is necessary.

While any one work by either composer falls in the fail-proof category, it is only Bach that can in concentrated doses still appear faultless as well as inspiring. Not quite as much can be said for Mozart. Here the faultless impression itself seems too apparent. Especially when that perfection is so well underscored by the impeccable Boston Symphony guided by Leinsdorf's meticulous control. By the time Symphonies 29, 31, 41 plus two Concertos and a serenade were played, one was wrestling with an urge to bellow a brassy blair of raucous dissonance.

However, though the performances were above technical reproach due to attention to clarity and precision, Mr. Leinsdorf quite frequently produced subtle tensions and some fresh gaiety in all the works.

In all fairness, Malcolm Frager's performance of Piano Concerto Number 15 added much sparkle to Friday's concert, as indeed did the playing of Claude Frank in Saturday's Piano Concerto Number 25.

Mr. Frank perhaps tended to romanticize a bit with over-pedaling and restraint of tempo in the Andante. This criticism might have been, however, a more general comment of too many of all works performed. Too slow Mozart tempos offer at least surface impressions of plaintive effect. It's safe to say Mozart is often plaintive, but it is safer to say it is unlikely his intent was ever to be obvious about it.

Not at all plaintive were the Scatological Canons performed Friday evening by the Tanglewood Choir as a prelude to the weekend concerts. The canons obviously composed and authored by Mozart in broad German dialect for broad-minded people, held far more vigor than simply naughty numbers or studies in musical gamesmanship.

Most composers have at one time or another fiddled with this form, but have too often produced results akin to the accomplishment of an involved crossword puzzle.

The Weekend Preludes, which this week included Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in a warm performance of the gay Two Piano Sonata in D major, are an invention of Mr. Leinsdorf that should be eminently successful. They run from 7 to approximately 8 p.m., allowing an hour for a picnic before the regular concert at 9. The effect is novel, and refreshing as a light dessert before dinner.

SUNDAY

By LOUIS S. CUCCINELLO
Music Department
NASC

The final concert of the "Mozart Weekend" introduced the first guest conductor of the summer at Tanglewood — Sir Adrian Boult.

Sir Adrian is a conservative conductor who does not resort to facial expression or excessive body movement while on the podium. His baton often is moved to indicate only the first beat of the measure regardless of the meter played and there is very little distinction in his dynamic cues. However, the orchestra played well following the tempo and dynamic markings perfectly — testimony to the leadership of the conductor at rehearsal.

Perhaps the lesson was learned too well for in spite of the perfect realization of the score there was an absence of the spontaneity that is felt when conductor and orchestra are "creating" for a live audience.

The improper orchestral balance that was obvious from your reviewer's vantage point was probably due to the change in the normal seating arrangement. The inner string sound was often lost and during the Piano Concerto the tone of the solo instrument was thin and often enveloped by the orchestra.

The program opened with Symphony No. 34, in C Major, K. 338. This was the last symphony Mozart composed at Salzburg. The symphony is in three movements — a minuet was started by Mozart but never finished. For Sunday's performance Sir Adrain Boult incorporated the Minuet in C. Major, K. 409 as the third movement of the symphony.

Malcolm Frager was the soloist for the Piano Concerto, No. 5, in D Major, K. 175. This concerto is full of the vitality necessary to win audience approval and Mr. Frager made the most of his dexterity and vigor to be assured of an equally vigorous applause.

Sunday's finale was Symphony No. 39, in E-flat major, K. 543. This symphony is the first of the trilogy — Mozart's concluding and three greatest symphonies — completed in less than nine weeks (Summer 1788).

Next week — "Bach at Tanglewood."

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Monday, July 11, 1966

Two Artists Superb As Tanglewood Guests

By JOAN SIMMONS

Two guest artists unobtrusively stole the show at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon.

Sir Adrian Boult, as conductor of the final concert of an all-Mozart weekend and first guest conductor of the season at the Lenox, Mass., site, was every bit the distinguished, reserved Briton.

Malcolm Frager, as piano soloist, presented a superb performance as he intently bent over his keyboard playing the Piano Concerto No. 5, in D major, K. 175. The Concerto ended with long and heavy applause while Sir Adrian and Frager were quite delighted with each other.

The guests were of course more than ably assisted by the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, reduced in number this week as many of the musicians have returned to Boston for a two-week series there.

The program included the symphonies number 34 and 39 which were gracefully achieved under the seeming effortlessness of Sir Adrian's baton. A cool looking figure, despite the afternoon heat, Sir Adrian quite casually waved his baton and at times appeared to stop altogether. But appearances were deceiving because there was no doubt that the orchestra was completely under his expert control.

The combination of performers reached its peak in the concerto where the rapport between conductor, pianist and soloist resulted in a completely pleasurable blend.

Frager has performed many times with the Boston Symphony and the combination is well worth repeating. While he has appeared before the Boston Symphony previously, this is Sir Adrian's first season at Tanglewood and one that may result in his return.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal & Press
SOMERVILLE, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 12,594
JUL 14 1966

Week of Tanglewood Concerts To Be Aired

The third full week of live Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcasts on WGBH-FM begins Sunday, July 17, at 2:30 p.m. with Erich Leinsdorf conducting an all-Bach program.

Heard direct from the Music Shed at Tanglewood, this Berkshire Festival concert includes the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1, the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer mensch", and the Magnifcat. Joining the orchestra for this concert are soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Beverly Wolff, contralto; Ernest Haefliger and Walter Carriger, tenors; Norman Treigle, bass; and the Tanglewood Choir.

Monday night at 8 o'clock, chamber music recorded Sunday morning will be broadcast — the only recorded concert of the week.

Tuesday and Wednesday, July 19 and 20, at the same hour there will be more chamber music, and on Thursday at 8 p.m. the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will be heard under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf.

Friday evening, July 22, at 9 p.m. the Boston Symphony Orchestra again comes on stage, with Seiji Ozawa conducting Schumann's American Festival Overture, Schubert's Symphony No. 5, the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto with soloist Joseph Silverstein and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite.

And, finally, on Saturday, at 8 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony in excerpts from Act 3 of Wagner's Die Meistersinger", Schumann's Symphony No. 2 and Piano Concerto No. 3 by Rachmaninoff, with American pianist Van Cliburn.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE
Tuesday, July 12, 1966

Goldberg, Leinsdorf Set To Conduct at Lenox

Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf will share conducting honors in three concerts featuring a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians in music of Johann Sebastian Bach Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and also be soloist at the Friday evening concert.

Leinsdorf will conduct the Saturday night and the Sunday afternoon concerts.

Goldberg is founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra. He will be heard as soloist in the Bach "Violin Concerto in E major," which opens the 9 p.m. program. The balance of the program includes the "Suite number 2," the first four fuges from the "Art of the Fugue" and the "Suite number 4."

The weekend prelude at 7 p.m. on Friday will consist of the two Brandenburg "Concerti numbers 6 and 3" performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Admission to the weekend prelude is provided at no extra cost for those holding tickets to Friday's Boston Symphony Orchestra concert.

* * *

The 8 p.m. Saturday program will feature the "St. John Passion" with Walter Carriger, Phyllis Curtain, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Treigle and Beverly Wolff as soloists. The text will be sung in German and the chorus will be the Tanglewood Choir.

At 2:30 p.m. Sunday Leinsdorf will open the concert with the Brandenburg "Concerto number 1" and continue with the "Cantata number 55, 'Ich armer Mensch'" with Haefliger as soloist. The Sunday program will conclude with the "Magnificat" with Miss Curtin, Miss Wolff, Haefliger and Treigle as soloists.

The regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the Orchestra's pension fund will be held in the Music Shed.

Members of the Berkshire Music Center will present three concerts during the week open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Chamber music concerts will be given in the Chamber Music Hall on Wednesday evening (July 13, 8 p.m.) and Sunday (July 17, 10 a.m.) and a program of contemporary music will be presented in the Theater at 8 p.m. Thursday (July 14).

Program and ticket information on all Tanglewood concerts may be obtained from the Festival Ticket office, Tanglewood, Mass. 01260.

SZYMON GOLDBERG

Albany Knickerbocker News
Friday, July 15, 1966

TANGLEWOOD—Szymon Goldberg conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Bach program which includes Violin Concerto in E major, Suite No. 2, Four Fugues from the Art of Fugue and Suite No. 4 at 9 p.m. today, preceded by a weekend prelude at 7 p.m. today which includes Bach's Brandenberg Concerto No. 6 and Brandenberg Concerto No. 3 both at the Music Shed Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Monday, July 11, 1966

Symphonies By Mozart Well Received

By EDGAR S. VANOLINDA

Symphonic music in its purest form ushered in the second week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood over the weekend. Eric Leinsdorf offered a grateful sampling of the prodigious musical resources of Mozart, who in his 35 short years contributed so much to the happiness of the civilized world.

Mr. Leinsdorf broke with Tanglewood traditions by preluding the programmed works with short, symphonic works, interspersed with duo piano and choral compositions, Friday evening. The major program began at 9 p.m., to enable out of town patrons more leisurely transportation arrangements.

A piquant march, two symphonies and a piano concerto constituted the major portion of the program, featuring Malcolm Frager, making his third annual appearance at Tanglewood as soloist. The 31-year virtuoso is endowed with tremendous technical gifts, which, however, never intrude upon his individualistic approach to the sparkling melodies of Mozart, allowing him full expression of personal joy in its recreation.

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,179
Independent
AGAWAM, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 2,558
JUL 14 1966

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. —Ernst Haefliger, Swiss Tenor, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, in the Bach St. John Passion on Saturday evening, July 16 and again on Sunday, July 17 as soloist in the Bach Cantata 55, "Ich armer Mensch" and in the Bach Magnificat. This will be Mr. Haefliger's debut at Tanglewood.

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD
W. 500

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
W. 2,000

JULY 13 1966

Phyllis Curtin, American operatic singer, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, in the Bach St. John Passion on July 16 and will appear again on July 17 in the Bach Magnificat. Miss Curtin will give a recital on Tuesday, August 2 as part of the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music events. She is also a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty as Chairman of the Voice Teaching and Performance seminar.

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,179
Independent
AGAWAM, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 2,558
JUL 14 1966

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. —Thomas Paul, Basso in his fourth season with the New York City Opera will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, in this season's final concert, Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 on Sunday afternoon, August 21. He was heard earlier this season in the Bach: St. John Passion on July 16.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 11 1966

Music Review

Weekend at Tanglewood Had All Mozart Program

Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf conducting three all-Mozart programs.

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

By FRANK N. PATTERSON

The steady fare of a one-composer program almost always runs the risk of boring most of the audience some of the time. Even when that composer is Mozart, as it was this weekend, or Bach as it will be next, very little modification of such a statement is necessary.

While any one work by either composer falls in the fail-proof category, it is only Bach that can in concentrated doses still appear faultless as well as inspiring. Not quite as much can be said for Mozart. Here the faultless impression itself seems too apparent. Especially when that perfection is so well underscored by the impeccable Boston Symphony guided by Leinsdorf's meticulous control. By the time Symphonies 29, 31, 41 plus two concertos and a serenade were played, one was wrestling with an urge to bellow a brassy blair of raucous dissonance.

However, though the performances were above technical reproach due to attention to clarity and precision, Mr. Leinsdorf quite frequently produced subtle tensions and some fresh gaiety in all the works.

In all fairness, Malcolm Frager's performance of Piano Concerto Number 15 added much sparkle to Friday's concert, as indeed did the playing of Claude Frank in Saturday's Piano Concerto Number 25.

Mr. Frank perhaps tended to romanticize a bit with over-pedaling and restraint of tempo in the Andante. This criticism might have been, however, a more general comment of too many of all works performed. Too slow Mozart tempos offer at least surface impressions of plaintive effect. It's safe to say Mozart is often plaintive, but it is safer to say it is unlikely his intent was ever to be obvious about it.

Not at all plaintive were the Scatological Canons performed Friday evening by the Tanglewood Choir as a prelude to the weekend concerts. The canons obviously composed and authored by Mozart in broad German dialect for broad-minded people, held far more vigor than simply naughty numbers or studies in musical gamesmanship.

Most composers have at one time or another fiddled with this form, but have too often produced results akin to the accomplishment of an involved crossword puzzle.

The Weekend Preludes, which this week included Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in a warm performance of the gay Two Piano Sonata in D major, are an invention of Mr. Leinsdorf that should be eminently successful. They run from 7 to approximately 8 p.m., allowing an hour for a picnic before the regular concert at 9. The effect is novel and refreshing as a light dessert before dinner.

SUNDAY

By LOUIS S. CUCCINELLO
Music Department
NASC

The final concert of the "Mozart Weekend" introduced the first guest conductor of the summer at Tanglewood — Sir Adrian Boult.

Sir Adrian is a conservative conductor who does not resort to facial expression or excessive body movement while on the podium. His baton often is moved to indicate only the first beat of the measure regardless of the meter played and there is very little distinction in his dynamic cues. However, the orchestra played well following the tempo and dynamic markings perfectly — testimony to the leadership of the conductor at rehearsal.

Perhaps the lesson was learned too well for in spite of the perfect realization of the score there was an absence of the spontaneity that is felt when conductor and orchestra are "creating" for a live audience.

The improper orchestral balance that was obvious from your reviewer's vantage point was probably due to the change in the normal seating arrangement. The inner string sound was often lost and during the Piano Concerto the tone of the solo instrument was thin and often enveloped by the orchestra.

The program opened with Symphony No. 34, in C Major, K. 338. This was the last symphony Mozart composed at Salzburg. The symphony is in three movements — a minuet was started by Mozart but never finished. For Sunday's performance Sir Adrain Boult incorporated the Minuet in C. Major, K. 409 as the third movement of the symphony.

Malcolm Frager was the soloist for the Piano Concerto, No. 5, in D Major, K. 175. This concerto is full of the vitality necessary to win audience approval and Mr. Frager made the most of his dexterity and vigor to be assured of an equally vigorous applause.

Sunday's finale was Symphony No. 39, in E-flat major, K. 543. This symphony is the first of the trilogy — Mozart's concluding and three greatest symphonies — completed in less than nine weeks (Summer 1788).

Next week — "Bach at Tanglewood."

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Monday, July 11, 1966

Symphonies By Mozart Well Received

By EDGAR S. VANOLINDA

Symphonic music in its purest form ushered in the second week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood over the weekend. Eric Leinsdorf offered a grateful sampling of the prodigious musical resources of Mozart, who in his 35 short years contributed so much to the happiness of the civilized world.

Mr. Leinsdorf broke with Tanglewood traditions by preluding the programmed works with short, symphonic works, interspersed with duo piano and choral compositions, Friday evening. The major program began at 9 p.m., to enable out of town patrons more leisurely transportation arrangements.

A piquant march, two symphonies and a piano concerto constituted the major portion of the program, featuring Malcolm Frager, making his third annual appearance at Tanglewood as soloist. The 31-year virtuoso is endowed with tremendous technical gifts, which, however, never intrude upon his individualistic approach to the sparkling melodies of Mozart, allowing him full expression of personal joy in its recreation.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Monday, July 11, 1966

Two Artists Superb As Tanglewood Guests

By JOAN SIMMONS

Two guest artists unobtrusively stole the show at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon.

Sir Adrian Boult, as conductor of the final concert of an all-Mozart weekend and first guest conductor of the season at the Lenox, Mass., site, was every bit the distinguished, reserved Briton.

Malcolm Frager, as piano soloist, presented a superb performance as he intently bent over his keyboard playing the Piano Concerto No. 5, in D major, K. 175. The Concerto ended with long and heavy applause while Sir Adrian and Frager were quite delighted with each other.

The guests were of course more than ably assisted by the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, reduced in number this week as many of the musicians have returned to Boston for a two-week series there.

The program included the symphonies number 34 and 39 which were gracefully achieved under the seeming effortlessness of Sir Adrian's baton. A cool looking figure, despite the afternoon heat, Sir Adrian quite casually waved his baton and at times appeared to stop altogether. But appearances were deceiving because there was no doubt that the orchestra was completely under his expert control.

The combination of performers reached its peak in the concerto where the rapport between conductor, pianist and soloist resulted in a completely pleasurable blend.

Frager has performed many times with the Boston Symphony and the combination is well worth repeating. While he has appeared before the Boston Symphony previously, this is Sir Adrian's first season at Tanglewood and one that may result in his return.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal & Press
SOMERVILLE, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 12,594
JUL 14 1966

Week of Tanglewood Concerts To Be Aired

The third full week of live Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcasts on WGBH-FM begins Sunday, July 17, at 2:30 p.m. with Erich Leinsdorf conducting an all-Bach program.

Heard direct from the Music Shed at Tanglewood, this Berkshire Festival concert includes the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1, the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer mensch", and the Magnifcat. Joining the orchestra for this concert are soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Beverly Wolff, contralto; Ernest Haefliger and Walter Carriger, tenors; Norman Treigle, bass; and the Tanglewood Choir.

Monday night at 8 o'clock, chamber music recorded Sunday morning will be broadcast — the only recorded concert of the week.

Tuesday and Wednesday, July 19 and 20, at the same hour there will be more chamber music, and on Thursday at 8 p.m. the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will be heard under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf.

Friday evening, July 22, at 9 p.m. the Boston Symphony Orchestra again comes on stage, with Seiji Ozawa conducting Schumann's American Festival Overture, Schubert's Symphony No. 5, the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto with soloist Joseph Silverstein and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite.

And, finally, on Saturday, at 8 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony in excerpts from Act 3 of Wagner's Die Meistersinger", Schumann's Symphony No. 2 and Piano Concerto No. 3 by Rachmaninoff, with American pianist Van Cliburn.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE
Tuesday, July 12, 1966

Goldberg, Leinsdorf Set To Conduct at Lenox

Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf will share conducting honors in three concerts featuring a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians in music of Johann Sebastian Bach Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and also be soloist at the Friday evening concert.

Leinsdorf will conduct the Saturday night and the Sunday afternoon concerts.

Goldberg is founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra. He will be heard as soloist in the Bach "Violin Concerto in E major," which opens the 9 p.m. program. The balance of the program includes the "Suite number 4," the first four fuges from the "Art of the Fugue" and the "Suite number 4."

The weekend prelude at 7 p.m. on Friday will consist of the two Brandenburg "Concerti numbers 6 and 3" performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Admission to the weekend prelude is provided at no extra cost for those holding tickets to Friday's Boston Symphony Orchestra concert.

* * *

The 8 p.m. Saturday program will feature the "St. John Passion" with Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtain, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Treigle and Beverly Wolff as soloists. The text will be sung in German and the chorus will be the Tanglewood Choir.

At 2:30 p.m. Sunday Leinsdorf will open the concert with the Brandenburg "Concerto number 1" and continue with the "Cantata number 55, 'Ich armer Mensch'" with Haefliger as soloist. The Sunday program will conclude with the "Magnificat" with Miss Curtin, Miss Wolff, Haefliger and Treigle as soloists.

The regular open rehearsal for the benefit of the Orchestra's pension fund will be held in the Music Shed.

Members of the Berkshire Music Center will present three concerts during the week open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Chamber music concerts will be given in the Chamber Music Hall on Wednesday evening (July 13, 8 p.m.) and Sunday (July 17, 10 a.m.) and a program of contemporary music will be presented in the Theater at 8 p.m. Thursday (July 14).

Program and ticket information on all Tanglewood concerts may be obtained from the Festival ticket office, Tanglewood, Mass. 01240.

SZYMON GOLDBERG

Albany Knickerbocker News
Friday, July 1[illegible] 1966

TANGLEWOOD—Szymon Goldberg conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Bach program which includes Violin Concerto in E major, Suite No. 2, Four Fugues from the Art of Fugue and Suite No. 4 at 9 p.m. today, preceded by a weekend prelude at 7 p.m. today which includes Bach's Brandenberg Concerto No. 6 and Brandenberg Concerto No. 3 both in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,179

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,179
Independent
AGAWAM, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 2,558
JUL 14 1966

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. —Ernst Haefliger, Swiss Tenor, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, in the Bach St. John Passion on Saturday evening, July 16 and again on Sunday, July 17 as soloist in the Bach Cantata 55, "Ich armer Mensch" and in the Bach Magnificat. This will be Mr. Haefliger's debut at Tanglewood.

ATHENS, N. Y.
HERALD
W. 500
RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
W. 2,000
JULY 13 1966

Phyllis Curtin, American operatic singer, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, in the Bach St. John Passion on July 16 and will appear again on July 17 in the Bach Magnificat. Miss Curtin will give a recital on Tuesday, August 2 as part of the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music events. She is also a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty as Chairman of the Voice Teaching and Performance seminar.

Independent
AGAWAM, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 2,558
JUL 14 1966

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. —Thomas Paul, Basso in his fourth season with the New York City Opera will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf Music Director, in this season's final concert, Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 on Sunday afternoon, August 21. He was heard earlier this season in the Bach: St. John Passion on July 16.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUL 14 1966

SZYMON GOLDBERG . . . guest conductor and soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood

Beverly Wolff

Phyllis Curtin

Weekend at Tanglewood

The second series of three concerts by a chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will take place at Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.) next Friday, Saturday, and Sunday (July 15, 16, 17). The three programs entirely devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach will have Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf sharing the conducting. Mr. Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and also be soloist at Friday evening's concert. The St. John Passion will be conducted by Mr. Leinsdorf on Saturday evening.

Bach's Violin Concerto in E major with Mr. Goldberg, founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra as conductor and soloist will begin Friday's (July 15; 9:00 program. For the balance of his program with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Goldberg has chosen the Suite No. 2, the first four fugues from "Art of the Fugue," and the Suite No. 4.

As soloists in Saturday's (July 16; 8:00 p.m.) performances of the St. John Passion, Mr. Leinsdorf has invited Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Treigle, and Beverly Wolff. The chorus consists of the Tanglewood Choir, and the text will be sung in German.

Sunday afternoon (July 16; 2:30 p.m.) Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the concert with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and continue with the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch" with Mr. Haefliger as soloist. Sunday's program and the Bach weekend at Tanglewood conclude with the Magnificat with Miss Curtin, Messrs. Haefliger and Treigle, and Miss Wolff as soloists.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday evening (July 15) at 7:00 p.m. will consist of two Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 3 performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Admission to the Weekend Prelude is provided at no extra cost for those holding tickets to Friday's Boston Symphony Orchestra concert.

On Saturday morning at 10:30 the regular Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund will be held in the Music Shed.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE
Tuesday, July 12, 1966

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

There is plenty to choose from in the culture line this week. There are ballet performances tonight through Sunday at 8:30 at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center by the New York City Ballet Company. Also the west coast debut of the San Diego Ballet takes place this week at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, near Lee, Mass., with performances tonight, tomorrow, Friday and Saturday at 8:40 and matinees on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 4. Tanglewood features music of Johnann Sebastian Bach on Friday at 9, Saturday at 8 and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. The chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players will be conducted by Szymon Goldberg on Friday, and Erich Leinsdorf on Saturday and Sunday.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
JUL 16 1966

Goldberg Leads, Plays Bach At Tanglewood

By RICHARD C. HAMMERICH

LENOX—Szymon Goldberg's presentation of Bach at Tanglewood seemed to fare somewhat better Friday night when he conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra with a baton than it did when he led with his violin.

Plays Solo Part

The program began with the Concerto for Violin No. 2 in E major, for which he played the solo part, and continued with Suite No. 2 in B minor for flute and strings, four transcriptions from "The Art of Fugue" and Suite No. 4 in D.

As soloist Goldberg is familiar to concertgoers in Springfield. He appeared last season with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra.

Friday the orchestra numbered 30 string players including harpsichord for the concerto. Joriot Anthony Dwyer played flute for the Suite No. 2.

Voices Audience

Goldberg faced the audience during the concerto and sent his instructions to the orchestra with bobs of his head and shoulders.

His work was aggressive [illegible] powerful, delicate, [illegible] stable and characteristic by a gleaming dry tone.

He was not above bending a note romantically now and then, however, or coming up with a little soulful swoop for surprise variation. He allowed no soulful swoops from the orchestra.

More Substantial

It was a nice collaboration. The concerto was pleasing but the suite which followed, and the fugues and Suite No. 4 which came after intermission seemed more substantial.

The fugues were reminiscent of the large orchestrations of some of Bach's organ works made by Stokowski, which is understandable inasmuch as "The Art of the Fugue," although unspecified, is believed by experts to have been composed for keyboard.

They sounded like organ works Friday, smooth and warm, but were without the lush fulsomeness characteristic of Stokowski transcriptions.

Rollicking Moments

Suite No. 4 was played by about 35 musicians including a complement of winds, who provided some of the more entertaining, rollicking moments.

The weekend prelude which began the evening at 7, presented several members of the orchestra with Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 6 and 3 organized according to the original instrumentation (as far as is possible after a couple of hundred years).

The sixth is scored for five instruments — two violas, two viola da gambas, two cellos, a double-bass and a harpsichord.

Called Mixed Blessing

Its dark, deep tone quality, caused by the lack of violins, was kept from becoming too heavy by the smallness of the group.

The chamber-sized group was a mixed blessing, however. Its lean agility helped keep the strands of counterpoint separate, but the vast spaces of the giant (6000-seat) shed swallowed fine details, and the delicate elegance of the piece was muffled.

The same was true of the No. 3 concerto, a piece scored for 11 instruments — three violins, three violas, three cellos, a double-bass and harpsichord.

"Passion" Tonight

Both were delightful, but their best points were lost to all but those listeners in the very front rows.

Tonight the orchestra, Tanglewood Choir and [illegible] soloists will [illegible] Bach's "Passion of Our Lord According to St. John."

Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Circ. 49,594
047
JUL 15 1966

SIGHTS and SOUNDS by REG COX
TELEVISION RADIO

AN ALL-BACH program will mark the start of the third full week of live Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcasts from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood via WGBH-FM; the Boston educational radio station, as noted previously, broadcasts (live or recorded) all major concerts from the famed music center in Lenox. . . . Barbra Streisand arrives home this weekend from London, where she's been appearing in "Funny Girl," for an abbreviated concert tour (including a date in Newport, R. I., July 30), motherhood (in December) and a taping session (probably in January) for her next CBS special; it as of this moment is set for airing next spring. . . . NBC News correspondent Ron Nessen was wounded earlier this week while covering the war in Viet Nam; the 32-year-old newsman is reported in satisfactory condition with chest injuries.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
PARK EAST
W. CIRC. N. AVAIL.
JUL 14 1966

OUT OF TOWN

Connecticut

AMERICAN SHAKESPEARE THEATRE, Stratford. In N.Y.: CA 6-6047. Murder in the Cathedral, Eve., July 14 & 19, Mat., July 17. Julius Caesar, Eve., July 15, 20 & 21. Twelfth Night, Mat., July 16 & 21. Falstaff, Eve., July 16, Mat., July 20.

WESTPORT COUNTRY PLAYHOUSE, Westport. In N.Y.: PE 6-6200. The Thinking Man (thru July 16). Mary, Mary (July 18-23).

Long Island

DOGWOOD HOLLOW AMPHITHEATER, Stony Brook. [illegible]

JOHN DREW THEATER, East Hampton. Life with Father (thru July 16). Gypsy (July 18-23).

MINEOLA THEATRE, Mineola. 516-PL 1-3333. The Subject Was Roses (thru July 23).

WESTBURY MUSIC FAIR, Westbury. 516-333-0533. Oliver (thru July 17). Gentlemen Prefer Blondes (July 19-24).

Massachusetts

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, Tanglewood, Lenox. [illegible] Concert, Friday, July 15. Leinsdorf cond. [illegible] Bach, Sat., July 16. [illegible] July 17.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 51,098
JUL 16 1966

Radio Highlights

Today

"The Prospect of Southeast Asia: Idealism and Reality," with narrator Kenneth T. Young Jr., president of the Asia Society and former U.S. Ambassador to Thailand. WBUR-FM, 6 p.m.

Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. A concert from the 1966 Berkshire Music Festival, broadcast live from the music shed at Tanglewood. Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bach's St. John Passion, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Beverly Wolff, contralto; Ernest Haefliger and Walter Carringer, tenors; Norman Treigle, bass, and the Tanglewood Choir. WGBH-FM, 8 p.m.

...nsdorf Set
...t Lenox

...YMON GOLDBERG

...bany Knickerbocker News
Friday, July 15, 1966

...ANGLEWOOD—Szymon Gold-
...berg conducts the Boston
...Symphony Orchestra in an
...all-Bach program which in...cludes Violin Concerto in E
...major; Suite No. 2, Four
...Fugues from the Art of Fu-
...gue and Suite No. 4 at 9 p.m.
...today, preceded by a week-
...end prelude at 7 p.m. today
...which includes Bach's Brand-
...enberg Concerto No. 6 and
...Brandenberg Concerto No. 3.
...Music Shed
...Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

...Free Press
...PRINGFIELD, Mass.
...eekly Circ. 1,179

...dent
..., Mass.
...Circ. 2,558

...1966.

...D, Lenox, Mass.
...ul, Basso in his
... with the New
...pera will appear
...on Symphony Or-
...anglewood, Erich
...usic Director, in
...final concert, Bee-
...phony No. 9 on
...noon, August 21.
...d earlier this sea-
...ch: St. John Pas-
... 16.

...England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
...2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
...eekly Circ. 3,587

JUL 14 1966

SZYMON GOLDBERG . . . guest conductor and soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood on July 15.

Beverly Wolff

Phyllis Curtin

NEW YORK, N. Y.
PARK EAST
W. CIRC. N. AVAIL.

JUL 14 1966

OUT OF TOWN

Connecticut

AMERICAN SHAKESPEARE THEATRE. Stratford. In N.Y.: CA 6-6047. Murder in the Cathedral, Eve., July 14 & 19, Mat., July 17; Julius Caesar, Eve., July 15, 20 & 21; Twelfth Night, Mat., July 16 & 21; Falstaff, Eve., July 16, Mat., July 20.

WESTPORT COUNTRY PLAYHOUSE. Westport. In N.Y.: PE 6-6400. The Thinking Man (thru July 16). Mary, Mary (July 18-23).

Long Island

DOGWOOD HOLLOW AMPHITHEATER. Stony Brook. Peter Nero, July 16.

JOHN DREW THEATER. East Hampton. Life with Father (thru July 16). Gypsy (July 18-23).

MINEOLA THEATRE. Mineola. 516-PL 1-3353. The Subject Was Roses (thru July 23).

WESTBURY MUSIC FAIR. Westbury. 516-333-0533. Oliver (thru July 17). Gentlemen Prefer Blondes (July 19-24).

Massachusetts

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL. Tanglewood, Lenox. 413-637-4600. Boston Symphony, Goldberg cond., Bach, Eve., July 15; Leinsdorf cond., Eve., July 16, Mat., July 17.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 51,098

JUL 16 1966

Radio Highlights

Today

"The Prospect of Southeast Asia: Idealism and Reality." With narrator Kenneth T. Young Jr., president of the Asia Society and former U.S. Ambassador to Thailand. WBUR-FM, 6 p.m.

Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. A concert from the 1966 Berkshire Music Festival, broadcast live from the music shed at Tanglewood. Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bach's St. John Passion, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Beverly Wolff, contralto; Ernest Haefliger and Walter Carringer, tenors; Norman Treigle, bass, and the Tanglewood Choir. WGBH-FM, 8 p.m.

Weekend at Tanglewood

The second series of three concerts by a chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will take place at Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.) next Friday, Saturday, and Sunday (July 15, 16, 17). The three programs entirely devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach will have Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf sharing the conducting. Mr. Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and also be soloist at Friday evening's concert. The St. John Passion will be conducted by Mr. Leinsdorf on Saturday evening.

Bach's Violin Concerto in E major with Mr. Goldberg, founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra as conductor and soloist will begin Friday's (July 15; 9:00 program. For the balance of his program with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Goldberg has chosen the Suite No. 2, the first four fugues from "Art of the Fugue," and the Suite No. 4.

As soloists in Saturday's (July 16; 8:00 p.m.) performances of the St. John Passion, Mr. Leinsdorf has invited Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Triegle, and Beverly Wolff. The chorus consists of the Tanglewood Choir, and the text will be sung in German.

Sunday afternoon (July 16; 2:30 p.m.) Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the concert with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and continue with the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch" with Mr. Haefliger as soloist. Sunday's program and the Bach weekend at Tanglewood conclude with the Magnificat with Miss Curtin, Messrs. Haefliger and Treigle, and Miss Wolff as soloists.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday evening (July 15) at 7:00 p.m. will consist of two Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 3 performed by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Admission to the Weekend Prelude is provided at no extra cost for those holding tickets to Friday's Boston Symphony Orchestra concert.

On Saturday morning at 10:30 the regular Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund will be held in the Music Shed.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE
Tuesday, July 12, 1966

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

There is plenty to choose from in the culture line this week. There are ballet performances tonight through Sunday at 8:30 at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center by the New York City Ballet Company. Also the west coast debut of the San Diego Ballet takes place this week at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, near Lee, Mass., with performances tonight, tomorrow, Friday and Saturday at 8:40 and matinees on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 3. Tanglewood features music of Johnann Sebastian Bach on Friday at 9, Saturday at 8 and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. The chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players will be conducted by Szymon Goldberg on Friday, and Erich Leinsdorf on Saturday and Sunday.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331

JUL 16 1966

Goldberg Leads, Plays Bach At Tanglewood

By RICHARD C. HAMMERICH

LENOX—Szymon Goldberg's presentation of Bach at Tanglewood seemed to fare somewhat better Friday night when he conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra with a baton than it did when he led with his violin.

Plays Solo Part

The program began with the Concerto for Violin No. 2 in E major, for which he played the solo part, and continued with Suite No. 2 in B minor for flute and strings, four transcriptions from "The Art of Fugue" and Suite No. 4 in D.

As soloist Goldberg is familiar to concertgoers in Springfield. He appeared last season with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra.

Friday the orchestra numbered 30 string players including harpsichord, for the concerto, Doriot Anthony Dwyer played flute for the Suite No. 2.

Faces Audience

Goldberg faced the audience during the concerto and sent his instructions to the orchestra with bobs of his head and shoulders.

His solo work was aggressive without being powerful, definite, rhythmically stable and characterized by a gleaming dry tone.

He was not above bending a note romantically now and then, however, or coming up with a little soulful swoop for surprise or variation. He allowed no soulful swoops from the orchestra, however.

More Substantial

It was a nice collaboration. The concerto was pleasing but the suite which followed, and the fugues and Suite No. 4 which came after intermission seemed more substantial.

The fugues were reminiscent of the large orchestrations of some of Bach's organ works made by Stokowski, which is understandable inasmuch as "The Art of the Fugue," although unspecified, is believed by experts to have been composed for keyboard.

They sounded like organ works Friday, smooth and warm, but were without the lush fulsomeness characteritic of Stokowski's transcriptions.

Rollicking Moments

Suite No. 4 was played by about 45 musicians including a complement of winds, who provided some of the more entertaining, rollicking moments.

The weekend prelude which began the evening at 7, presented several members of the orchestra with Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 6 and 3 organized according to the original instrumentation (as far as is possible after a couple of hundred years).

The sixth is scored for five instruments — two violas, two viola da gambas, two cellos, a double-bass and a harpsichord.

Called Mixed Blessing

Its dark, deep tone quality, caused by the lack of violins, was kept from becoming too heavy by the smallness of the group.

The chamber-sized group was a mixed blessing, however. Its lean agility helped keep the strands of counterpoint separate, but the vast spaces of the giant (6000-seat) shed swallowed fine details, and the delicate elegance of the piece was muffled.

The same was true of the No. 3 concerto, a piece scored for 11 instruments — three violins, three violas, three cellos, a double-bass and harpsichord.

"Passion" Tonight

Both were delightful, but their best points were lost to all but those listeners in the very front rows.

Tonight the orchestra, Tanglewood Choir and seven vocal soloists will present Bach's "Passion of Our Lord According to St. John."

Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Circ. 49,594
047
JUL 15 1966

SIGHTS and SOUNDS

by REG COX

TELEVISION RADIO

AN ALL-BACH program will mark the start of the third full week of live Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcasts from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood via WGBH-FM; the Boston educational radio station, as noted previously, broadcasts (live or recorded) all major concerts from the famed music center in Lenox. . . . Barbra Streisand arrives home this weekend from London, where she's been appearing in "Funny Girl," for an abbreviated concert tour (including a date in Newport, R. I., July 30), motherhood (in December) and a taping session (probably in January) for her next CBS special; it as of this moment is set for airing next spring. . . . NBC News correspondent Ron Nessen was wounded earlier this week while covering the war in Viet Nam; the 32-year-old newsman is reported in satisfactory condition with chest injuries.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 94,357
JUL 16 1966

Boston Chamber Group

All-Bach Program At Tanglewood

By JOHN F. KYES
Gazette Music Critic

LENOX — Some 6,000 music lovers were on hand last night for the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra's all-Bach program at Tanglewood.

The performance, under guest conductor Szymon Goldberg, included a Weekend Prelude at 7 and a concert at 9.

Violin Concerto

Goldberg also was soloist in the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E major, with string orchestra. Doriot Anthony Dwyer was soloist in the Suite No. 2 in B minor for Flute and Strings.

The 5,727 attendance compares with 4,620 on Friday, July

Gazette Review

16, 1965, when the complete orchestra under Leinsdorf gave a program without soloists.

The "Prelude," presented by groups I and II within the orchestra, entertained about 3,000 nearby Festival-comers, while others from greater distances were able to meet the 9 o'clock deadline.

It brought chamber music into the main Berkshire Festival week-ends in the big shed successfully, though last night the projection of tone was variable.

The opening Brandenburg Concerto No. 6 in B flat major, by two violas, two bass viols (viola da gamba), cello, double-bass and harpsichord, was warm, ingratiating music without violins and lacking penetration. The Brandenburg No. 3 in G major, [illegible] each of violins, violas and cellos, also one double-bass and harpsichord, made its mark briskly in the "All-[illegible]" acoustics, the [illegible] inserted from [illegible] known Violin Concerto [illegible] gem, performed only by concertmaster Joseph Silverstein's violin, Jules Eskin's cello and Igor Kipnis' potent harpsichord.

Goldberg as a soloist had substantial and attractive skill. As a conductor, he made many friends, endowing the Bach with warmth and feeling without romanticism, skill without pedantry, and a fine range of dynamics.

Mrs. Dwyer's career with the orchestra has been too long and brilliant to need further praise here. The dance movements of the Suite No. 2 sparkled and sang.

The four sections of Bach's "The Art of Fugue" were fascinating, and the Suite No. 4, with a complement of winds, was a joy.

Tonight's concert under Erich Leinsdorf brings the Bach "St. John Passion" for chorus, orchestra and a lavish array of soloists. Tomorrow afternoon the program features the "Magnificat," a cantata, and the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 16 1966

Music Review

Goldberg Conducts

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST concert of the third Berkshire Festival week was played last night by an orchestra consisting of about half of the Boston Symphony's complete personnel but reduced, as it was last week for Mozart, for the three-concert weekeend of Bach.

Szymon Goldberg was the guest conductor and also the soloist in the E major violin concerto. We have had pianists conducting from the keyboard but this was the first instance at Tanglewood in which a string soloist also led the accompanying orchestra.

Goldberg showed himself to be a thoroughly-permeated Bach authority, both in his playing and his conducting. He plays with unequivocal decision. There was a note of bold assertion in his concerto, which he enhanced by details sieved through long experience and intelligent judgment. The opening sentence was played with separated bow strokes in many situations where ordinarily groups are tied together. This established a tone color, however, which made the ensuing and contrasting second theme all the more effective by the use of long legato lines.

A tone of vigorous health in the slow movement and a spirit of easy humor in the last completed the symmetry of his conception.

The B minor suite for flute and strings has become practically the specialité de la maison with Doriot Anthony Dwyer. The principal flute of the orchestra last night was placed in a chair to the side of the conductor's arm and not in her accustomed seat to the rear of the orchestra. She performed with her usual distinction, and at the finale in the Badinerie her audience gave her more whistles and recalls than if she had dived sixty feet into a bowl of milk and brought up a cracker.

* * *

GOLDBERG invested the suite with great charm, especially in matters of tempo and rhythm by which he gave many of the movements special fascination. After intermission he was to play four movements from "The Art of the Fugue" and then ended with the D major suite.

Szymon Goldberg

As has become the custom on Friday evening this season there was a weekend prelude for any who chose to come at seven o'clock. They were treated to a short program, still of Bach, of the 6th and 3rd Brandenburg concertos played by seven and eleven performers respectively.

New England Newspaper Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,897
JUL 17 1965

Erich Leinsdorf Delights 4620 At Tanglewood

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — It was altogether fitting and proper Friday night that Erich Leinsdorf should honor the virtuosity of his orchestra by scheduling a fully orchestral concert for the patrons at Tanglewood.

First Performance

[illegible] the first performance [illegible] festival utilizing the full-[illegible] 108-member orchestra, [illegible] Esplanade concerts in Boston having come to an end and the Pops ensemble having joined the chamber orchestra (61 members) which was at work at Tanglewood the first two weeks of the festival.

There were 4620 listeners Friday for three works that focused attention on the orchestra and its superior skills.

The opening Beethoven Symphony, No. 8, showed tidy precision and architectural symmetry. The Kodaly "Peacock Variations" was all color and brilliance and instrumental versatility. The six excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung" ranged from whispy, ephemeral enchantment to full-bore blasts from the heights of Valhalla.

Highly Developed

Leinsdorf has a highly developed talent for linear organization, for carefully molding and shaping strands and contours of music, for tieing phrases into neat bundles and fitting them into a firm architectural sequence.

This skill served him exceedingly well Friday, and its application to the three diverging works on the program provided a special point of interest aside from aspects of pure sound.

Applied to the Beethoven, it brought all opportunity for headlong exuberance under control, and buttoned the music tidily into a jacket of delight and caprice.

Kodaly Variations

The Kodaly variations responded in an entirely different fashion because it is, unlike the Beethoven symphony, a disorderly collection of fascinating episodes without definite shape.

Bitter-sweet in variations plus an introduction and a finale, and surprisingly, they seemed not only to follow each other in orderly fashion, but also to have an internal logic.

Leinsdorf conducted them without a score, a virtuosic feat because of their lack of symmetry and structural skeleton. But there was no questioning his detailed knowledge of the notes.

Only Two Sources

The sense of continuity could have come from only two sources other than the conductor's careful phrasing—the pentatonic texture of the colorful orchestration, and the Hungarian folk melodies which run all through it. But such sources are not enough to provide form.

The need for attention to structural shape in the Wagner work is less demanding because of its written-in repetitions of leitmotifs, and its movement from scene to scene in programmatic sequence.

But, of course, if the shape is neglected, the sequence is lost and so is the sence.

Leinsdorf has been a Wagnerian expert for at least 25 years, a fact which should offer a hint of how the full orchestra sounded Friday . . . from Norway's mythological mountain peaks.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 17 1966

MUSIC

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX (Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood) — Today, 2:30 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in three works of Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto [illegible]. Ernst Haefliger [illegible] in the Cantata [illegible] will be joined [illegible] Phyllis Curtin, Beverly [illegible] Norman Treigle [illegible] performance of the [illegible] D major.

[illegible] p.m., Seiji Ozawa will be the guest conductor. The program will include works by Schubert, Mendelssohn, Stravinsky, Chopin and Rachmaninoff.

Saturday, 8 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf will conduct Brahms' Tragic Overture, which will be followed by Schumann's Symphony No. 2. Van Cliburn will play Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

HANOVER (Hopkins Center, Dartmouth) — Wednesday, 8:30 p.m., Chamber Music concert. World Premiere of Entra[illegible] for Woodwind Quinte[illegible] by Miklos Kelemen. Works by Mozart, Britten, Lutoslawski, Scarlatti and Roman. [illegible] Sunday, 8:30 p.m., Dartmouth Symphony Orchestra concert. Mario di Bonaventura conductor. Features [illegible] performance of three works by Witold Lutoslawski.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, July 17, 1966

GUEST SOLOIST — Tenor Ernst Haefliger will make his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this afternoon as soloist in the Bach Cantata 55 and in the Bach "Magnificat."

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277
JUL 17 1966

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30. Boston Symphony, conducted by Erich Leinsdorf; soloists, include Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Norman Treigle, Beverly Wolff.

Bach program: Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 in F; Cantata 55; Magnificat.

FRIDAY, 7 P.M., Weekend Prelude Concert. At 9, conductor, Seiji Ozawa; Joseph Silverstein, violinist.

American Festival Overture ..Schuman
Symphony No. 5 .....Schubert
Violin Concerto .....Mendelssohn
Firebird Suite .....Stravinsky

SATURDAY, 8 P.M. Conductor, Leinsdorf; Van Cliburn, pianist.

Excerpts from Act III, Meistersinger Wagner
Symphony No. 2 .....Schumann
Piano Concerto No. 3 ....Rachmaninoff

NEXT SUNDAY, 2:30. Conductor, Leinsdorf; Lilian Kallir, pianist.

Overture, Coriolanus .....Beethoven
Symphony No. 6 .....Tchaikovsky
Piano Concerto in F minor ....Chopin

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 94,357

JUL 16 1966

Boston Chamber Group

All-Bach Program At Tanglewood

By JOHN F. KYES
Gazette Music Critic

LENOX — Some 6,000 music lovers were on hand last night for the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra's all-Bach program at Tanglewood.

The performance, under guest conductor Szymon Goldberg, included a Weekend Prelude at 7 and a concert at 9.

Violin Concerto

Goldberg also was soloist in the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E major, with string orchestra. Doriot Anthony Dwyer was soloist in the Suite No. 2 in B minor for Flute and Strings.

The 5,727 attendance compares with 4,620 on Friday, July

Gazette Review

16, 1965, when the complete orchestra under Leinsdorf gave a program without soloists.

The "Prelude," presented by groups of 7 and 11 within the orchestra, entertained about 3,000 nearby Festival-comers, while others from greater distances were able to meet the 9 o'clock deadline.

It brought chamber music into the main Berkshire Festival week-ends in the big shed successfully, though last night the projection of tone was variable.

The opening Brandenburg Concerto No. 6 in B flat major, by two violas, two bass viols (viola da gamba), cello, double-bass and harpsichord, was warm, ingratiating music without violins and lacking penetration. The Brandenburg No. 3 in G major, with three each of violins, violas and cellos, also one double-bass and harpsichord, made its points briskly in the "Allegro," [illegible] acoustics, the slow movement inserted from a little-known Violin Concerto, was a gem, performed only by concertmaster Joseph Silverstein's violin, Jules Eskin's cello and Igor Kipnis' potent harpsichord.

Goldberg as a soloist had substantial and attractive skill. As a conductor, he made many friends, endowing the Bach with warmth and feeling without romanticism, skill without pedantry, and a fine range of dynamics.

Mrs. Dwyer's career with the orchestra has been too long and brilliant to need further praise here. The dance movements of the Suite No. 2 sparkled and sang.

The four sections of Bach's "The Art of Fugue" were fascinating, and the Suite No. 4, with a complement of winds, was a joy.

Tonight's concert under Erich Leinsdorf brings the Bach "St. John Passion" for chorus, orchestra and a lavish array of soloists. Tomorrow afternoon the program features the "Magnificat," a cantata, and the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404

JUL 16 1966

Music Review

Goldberg Conducts

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST concert of the third Berkshire Festival week was played last night by an orchestra consisting of about half of the Boston Symphony's complete personnel but reduced, as it was last week for Mozart, for the three-concert weekeend of Bach.

Szymon Goldberg was the guest conductor and also the soloist in the E major violin concerto. We have had pianists conducting from the keyboard but this was the first instance at Tanglewood in which a string soloist also led the accompanying orchestra.

Goldberg showed himself to be a thoroughly-permeated Bach authority, both in his playing and his conducting. He plays with unequivocal decision. There was a note of bold assertion in his concerto, which he enhanced by details sieved through long experience and intelligent judgment. The opening sentence was played with separated bow strokes in many situations where ordinarily groups are tied together. This established a tone color, however, which made the ensuing and contrasting second theme all the more effective by the use of long legato lines.

A tone of vigorous health in the slow movement and a spirit of easy humor in the last completed the symmetry of his conception.

The B minor suite for flute and strings has become practically the specialité de la maison with Doriot Anthony Dwyer. The principal flute of the orchestra last night was placed in a chair to the side of the conductor's arm and not in her accustomed seat to the rear of the orchestra. She performed with her usual distinction, and at the finale in the Badinerie her audience gave her more whistles and recalls than if she had dived sixty feet into a bowl of milk and brought up a cracker.

* * *

GOLDBERG invested the suite with great charm, especially in matters of tempo and rhythm by which he gave many of the movements special fascination. After intermission he was to play four movements from "The Art of the Fugue" and then ended with the D major suite.

Szymon Goldberg

As has become the custom on Friday evening this season there was a weekend prelude for any who chose to come at seven o'clock. They were treated to a short program, still of Bach, of the 6th and 3rd Brandenburg concertos played by seven and eleven performers respectively.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,897

JUL 17 1965

Erich Leinsdorf Delights 4620 At Tanglewood

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — It was altogether fitting and proper Friday night that Erich Leinsdorf should honor the virtuosity of his orchestra by scheduling a fully orchestral concert for the patrons at Tanglewood.

First Performance

It was the first performance in the festival utilizing the full-size 106-member orchestra, the Esplanade concerts in Boston having come to an end and the Pops ensemble having joined the chamber orchestra (51 members) which was at work at Tanglewood the first two weeks of the festival.

There were 4620 listeners Friday for three works that focused attention on the orchestra and its superior skills.

The opening Beethoven Symphony, No. 8, showed tidy precision and architectural symmetry. The Kodaly "Peacock Variations" was all color and brilliance and instrumental versatility. The six excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung" ranged from whispy, ephemeral enchantment to full-bore blasts from the heights of Valhalla.

Highly Developed

Leinsdorf has a highly developed talent for linear organization, for carefully molding and shaping strands and contours of music, for tieing phrases into neat bundles and fitting them into a firm architectural sequence.

This skill served him exceedingly well Friday, and its application to the three diverging works on the program provided a special point of interest aside from aspects of pure sound.

Applied to the Beethoven, it brought all opportunity for headlong exuberance under control, and buttoned the music tidily into a jacket of delight and caprice.

Kodaly Variations

The Kodaly variations responded in an entirely different fashion because it is, unlike the Beethovn symphony, a disorderly collection of fascinating episodes without definite shape.

There are 16 variations plus an introduction and a finale, and surprisingly, they seemed not only to follow each other in orderly fashion, but also to have an internal logic.

Leinsdorf conducted them without a score, a virtuosic feat because of their lack of symmetry and structural skeleton. But there was no questioning his detailed knowledge of the notes.

Only Two Sources

The sense of continuity could have come from only two sources other than the conductor's careful phrasing—the pentatonic texture of the colorful orchestration, and the Hungarian folk melodies which run all through it. But such sources are not enough to provide form.

The need for attention to structural shape in the Wagner work is less demanding because of its written-in repetitions of leitmotifs, and its movement from scene to scene in programmatic sequence.

But, of course, if the shape is neglected, the sequence is lost and so is the sence.

Leinsdorf has been a Wagnerian expert for at least 25 years, a fact which should offer a hint of how the full orchestra sounded Friday . . . from Norway's mythological mountain peaks.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737

JUL 17 1966

MUSIC

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX (Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood) — Today, 2:30 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in three works of Bach, beginning with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 6. Ernst Haefliger will be soloist in the Cantata No. 55, and he will be joined by Phyllis Curtin, Beverly Wolff and Norman Treigle for a performance of the Magnificat in D major.

Friday, 8 p.m., Seiji Ozawa will be the guest conductor. The program will include works by Schubert, Mendelssohn, Stravinsky, Chopin and Rachmaninoff.

Saturday, 8 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf will conduct Brahms' Tragic Overture, which will be followed by Schumann's Symphony No. 2. Van Cliburn will play Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

HANOVER (Hopkins Center, Dartmouth)—Wednesday, 8:30 p.m., Chamber Music Concert. World Premiere of Entrata for Woodwind Quintet by Milko Kelemen. Works by Mozart, Britten, Lutoslawski, Scarlatti and Roman. Next Sunday, 8:30 p.m., Dartmouth Symphony Orchestra concert. Mario di Bonaventura, conductor. Features first performance of three works by Witold Lutoslawski.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, July 17, 1966

GUEST SOLOIST — Tenor Ernst Haefliger will make his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this afternoon as soloist in the Bach Cantata 55 and in the Bach "Magnificat."

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277

JUL 17 1966

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30, Boston Symphony conducted by Erich Leinsdorf; soloists include Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Norman Treigle, Beverly Wolff.
Bach program: Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 in F; Cantata 55; Magnificat.
FRIDAY, 7 P.M., Weekend Prelude Concert. At 9, conductor, Seiji Ozawa; Joseph Silverstain, violinist.
American Festival Overture ..Schuman
Symphony No. 5 .....Schubert
Violin Concerto .....Mendelssohn
Firebird Suite .....Stravinsky
SATURDAY, 8 P.M. Conductor, Leinsdorf; Van Cliburn, pianist.
Excerpts from Act III, Meistersinger Wagner
Symphony No. 2 .....Schumann
Piano Concerto No. 3 ....Rachmaninoff
NEXT SUNDAY, 2:30. Conductor, Leinsdorf; Lilian Kallir, pianist.
Overture, Coriolanus .....Beethoven
Symphony No. 6 .....Tchaikovsky
Piano Concerto in F minor ....Chopin

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 17 1966

Tanglewood Shed Filled With Sound of Worship

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX—The great shed at Tanglewood, like a cathedral, was filled with the sound of Christian worship Saturday night.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Tanglewood choir and seven soloists under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf presented Bach's "Passion of Our Lord according to Saint John" for 7240 listeners.

Major Vocal Work

Although not as popular as Bach's "St Matthew Passion," perhaps because it has some dull repetitious stretches, it is, nevertheless, one of Bach's major vocal works.

Leinsdorf's approach was contemporary in that the attempt was made to follow Bach's score closely, even to the point of having a lute up front on stage to join a trio of strings in accompanying the bass "Betrachte, Meine Seel."

In the same way, there were varying combinations of baroque instruments, (oboe d'amore, viola da gamba, harpsichord, portative organ) to provide continuous support and solo accompaniment as directed by the score.

No Nonsense Approach

The no nonsense approach to style, also, was in the contemporary tradition of baroque performance, and the reduced orchestra was nicely balanced, in volume as well as tone quality, with the 55 voices of the choir.

The pace was leisurely, in keeping with the ecclesiastical nature of the subject matter, and although this did not lead to uncomfortably slow passages, it did not let the audience out in the usual two hours.

Including intermission after Part I, the "Passion" flowed past like a great, wide elderly, wise river until 10.45.

Because the "Passion" is a recital of the arrest, trial and crucifixion of Jesus, interrupted at approriate points by thoughtful comment by persons (solo arias) and groups (choruses and chorales), the narrator (evangelist) is the key to the organization.

Taxing Assignment

He tells the whole story, is on stage from beginning to end with the recitatives that describe the events. It is a taxing assignment.

Ernest Haefliger, a widely-known interpreter of Bach music, sang the evangelist's part with cool security and a storyteller's sensitivity for dramatic emphasis. And he did it with heroic stamina.

All the soloists were well cast.

Words of Jesus

Norman Treigle, baritone, sang the words of Jesus with a full, sturdy, virile baritone. His was a reassuring sound.

Phyllis Curtin's bright, crystalline soprano was bouncing and joyous in the aria "I follow in gladness to meet thee."

Beverly Wolff sang her contralto solo "Chains of bondage that I wrought" with anguish and torment.

Strength and Beauty

Walter Carringer, tenor, was not feeling his best, according to an announcement issued before the concert, but his aria "Ah, my soul" was projected with strength and beauty.

And Thomas Paul, bass, portrayed Pilate with a voice of warm, mellow tones.

In spite of the music's padded stretches and occasional uneventfulness, the performance had a cumulative tension and beauty that one doesn't ordinarily expect from this work.

It was a memorable emotional experience.

The Hartford Times
HARTFORD, CONN.
D. 132,266
JULY 18 1966

'St. John' Is Heard At Lenox

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Bach's St. John Passion may not reach the sublime heights of the composer's more celebrated St. Matthew Passion but it proved a poignant and moving experience at Tanglewood Saturday night.

Much of the credit must go to Erich Leinsdorf who led the Boston Symphony and the Tanglewood Choir through a performance that beautifully fused the dramatic and reflective elements of this extraordinary score. And much credit must go to Ernst Haefliger who sang the Evangelist with technical security and great expressiveness.

* * *

Haefliger, a specialist in this type of music, does not have a commanding tenor but it is invariably used with warmth and communicativeness. His singing of the recitative describing Peter's denial of Christ was extremely touching, as was his final offering—"And he bowed his head and gave up the ghost."

Although none of the other soloists were quite in Mr. Haefliger's class, Thomas Paul gave resonant articulation to the bass solos and the role of Pilate and Warren Carringer (who was slightly indisposed and allotted one of his solos to Haefliger) was solid if a bit constricted sounding. Phyllis Curtin was musicianly and Beverly Wolff was most impressive in the alto solo—"It is Fulfilled."

* * *

Norman Treigle was a rather austere sounding Jesus and Donald Miller was Peter.

Contrary to contemporary practice, Leinsdorf used the full orchestra and a large group of choristers. The chorales, which give a reposeful contrast to this dramatic setting, were gorgeous sounding, although a smaller choir would have been more effective in the more strident interjections.

* * *

Saturday night's performance boasted many incidental soloists performing the numerous obligatti that the score requires. Besides the first desk players of the Boston Symphony, there was Igor Kipnis at the harpsichord and John Ferris for the organ continuo. Leinsdorf even used a lute obliggato at one point (played by Stanley Silverman).

In deference to the great number who were following their own scores or reading the libretto, the house lights in the Shed were kept going. Some 7,240 persons attended the concert and there was a great deal of heartfelt enthusiasm at the end. This was Tanglewood at its best, which was very good indeed.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JULY 18 1966

Goldberg Conducts, Plays Tanglewood Violin Solo

By D. E. RITZ

Szymon Goldberg, founder and conductor of the Netherlands' Chamber Orchestra and violin soloist, conducted at the Friday evening Bach program by the Boston Symphony Orchestra chamber orchestra at Tanglewood and appeared as soloist in the "Concerto in E major" on the same program.

* * *

Goldberg, whom we had neither heard as a soloist or conductor before, is outstanding in both capacities.

A pupil and former protege of Carl Flesch, he has an amazing technique, a warm tone and a magnificent bow arm. He obviously is an authority on Bach and his interpretation had a warmth and humanity which is often lacking in modern performance of the works of the great contrapuntist.

It is seldom in this country that one gets an opportunity to hear a soloist conduct a group at the same time that he plays, but Goldberg is a master at that art.

* * *

With a tone that soared above, yet blended with that of the orchestra, Goldberg gave the concerto a flawless performance. The bite of violin phrases gave the perfect beat for the orchestra, which he only conducted with the baton for a few bars of the slow movement in this. At the close of the final "allegro" movement the soloist and orchestra received a hearty ovation from the audience.

The "Suite number 2 in B minor for flute and strings" featured Doriot Anthony Dwyer as the solo flutist. Including seven movements the work demands a flute technique of the highest order and Mrs. Dwyer charmed not only with her tone but amazed with the speed demanded in performance.

The program concluded with four "Contrapunctus" from "The Art of Fugue" and the "Suite number 4 in D major," the latter including three oboes, a bassoon, three trumpets in D and timpani in addition to the strings and harpsichord.

A string ensemble presented the four "Contrapunctus" and the whole had a charm that belied the intricate writing.

The fivemovements of the Suite, with their richer orchestral color, showed Bach in another light — a master of color.

* * *

Goldberg's first appearance at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood was a huge success as attested by the final lengthy ovation at the close of the concert. By that time we were not quite sure whether we admired him most as a violinist or as a conductor. His conducting is marked by a combination of vigor and finesse and his baton is a joy to behold.

The weekend prelude program, that bonus performance given each Friday evening at 7 o'clock this summer, featured two of the Bach Brandenburg Concertos—"Number 6 in B Flat major" and "Number 3 in G major."

The "number 6" is scored for viola, two viola da gambas, cello, bass and harpsichord. The "number 3" is scored for three violins, three violas, three cellos, bass and harpsichord. They were given as Bach intended, as a chamber music sep-

(Continued on Page 28)

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607
JULY 17 1966

Concluding an all-Bach weekend, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Eric Leinsdorf conducting, will be joined by soprano Phylis Curtin, mezzo-soprano Beverly Wolff, tenor Ernst Haefliger and bass Norman Treigle in a performance of the "Magnificat" this afternoon at 2:30 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The program also includes the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and Cantata 55. Seiji Ozawa will be guest conductor of the Orchestra next Friday evening at 9:00 with violinist Joseph Silverstein as soloist in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto. Van Cliburn will be guest soloist in the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3, Erich Leinsdorf conducting the orchestra, on Saturday evening at Tanglewood, at 8:00. Violinist Roman Totenbury will perform Beethoven Sonatas in this week's Berkshire Festival Chamber Music concert Tuesday evening at 8:00 in the Theatre at Tanglewood . . .

Goldberg Is Success at Tanglewood

(Continued From Page 24)

tet and a work for 11 solo performers. The ensemble for the "number 6" included Burton Fine and Reuben Green, violas; Alfred Zighera and Martha Blackman, viola da gamba players; Jules Eskin, cello; Henry Freeman, bass; and Igor Kipnis, harpsichord. In the "number 3" the ensemble included Joseph Silverstein, Alfred Krips and George Zazofsky, violins; Fine, Green and Eugen Lehner, violas; Eskin and Martin Hoherman, cellos; Freeman on the bass and Kipnis at the harpsichord.

* * *

It was a rewarding evening, though a long one. It was our first Weekend Prelude and were we to go to another we would plan to lunch between the Prelude and the concert program as there was over an hour between the two.

Leinsdorf conducted both the Saturday evening and the program of yesterday afternoon featuring the "Johannespassion" and "Magnificat in D major" respectively.

A total of 5,727 persons attended the Friday evening program and 5,319 attended the Tuesday evening chamber program given by the Guarneri Quartet.

Berkshire Music Festival Scores

By BERNARD LOTH

LENOX, Mass. — The Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Tanglewood Choir, and soloists under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf presented a beautiful and moving rendition of Bach's "St. John Passion" on Saturday evening. The choir of some 60 voices and a like number of instrumentalists responded to Mr. Leinsdorf's direction with remarkable precision, and the conductor's reading of the score was altogether brilliant and beautiful.

Vocally outstanding were Ernst Haefliger, Swiss lyric tenor of the Berlin Opera and outstanding interpreter of oratorio, and Norman Treigle, bass-baritone of the New York City Opera. Mr. Haefliger sang the part of the Evangelist, a very long and taxing role telling the story and introducing or linking together the other soloists and the choir, with delicacy, understanding and emotion in his very lovely and sweet lyric tenor voice.

Mr. Treigle sang the role of Jesus magnificently with all the calm confidence needed in the portrayal. His round and full bass voice was a delight to the ear, and his German diction, together with that of Mr. Haefliger, was clear, authentic and easy to understand.

The five other soloists did not reach the heights of perfection achieved by these two. Phyllis Curtin, soprano must be praised, together with Doriot Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis, flutists, for the beauty of the aria, "Zerfliesse, mein Herze." Thomas Paul, bass, also sang well but not up to the standard set.

The Tanglewood Choir sounded well, responded beautifully to attacks and releases, might have had better diction but acquitted itself very nicely despite the opening chorus in which the real criticism must be aimed at the conductor for calling for more sound from the orchestra than the text, the potential of the choir and the lovely especially in two of the chorales, "Durch dein Gefangnis", and "O hilf, Christe."

The dozen or so microphones suspended from the roof or on stage, were, according to one of the officials, for recording purposes only. If such was not the case, and if amplification was used, it was the finest application of the art that this critic has ever heard, because there was no aural indication whatever of the presence of loudspeakers.

The Boston Symphony and the Berkshire Music Festival are fortunate in having chosen Erich Leinsdorf, formerly a conductor of the Metropolitan Opera, as its music director. Mr. Leinsdorf is a very worthy successor in the line of great conductors of perhaps the leading symphony orchestra in the United States.

The huge Music Shed in which the performance was given is shaped somewhat like a baseball diamond with the performers at home plate. Of course it is many times larger and is open on all sides except the stage corner.

The huge seating capacity and the open lawns covering many acres guarantee admission, but there were few vacant seats for this performance despite ticket prices ranging from $2.50 for the lawn (bring your own chairs and blankets) to a top of $6.50.

The drive to Lenox from the Newburgh or Beacon area takes about two hours at legal speeds via Rt. 84 and the Taconic Parkway. It is suggested that parking at the West Gate will avoid quite a detour on the return journey.

Your reviewer hopes to be able to give you his impressions of the new Saragota Springs Festival when the Philadelphia Orchestra appears in August.

LINES OMITTED — music itself called for. After the opening, their singing was lovely, especially

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607

JULY 1 8 1966

T-U at Tanglewood

'Passion' Offers Subtle Drama

By JOAN SIMMONS

Grand simplicity marked the subetly dramatic performance of Bach's "Johannespassion," more familiarly called "St. John's Passion" at Tanglewood Saturday evening.

Tenor Ernst Haefliger as the Evangelist, by far the most demanding role of the work, carried the development of the passion with natural artistry. Bearing the major portion of the recitatives throughout, his performance of the role brought dramatic as well as musical interest and continuity to the Set back and above the orchestra relation of Christ's passion and death according to St. John.

In addition to his own part, Haefliger sang the tenor solo, "Erwage," for Walter Carringer, who was slightly indisposed and unable to sing the aria. Carringer did give an admirable performance in the remainder of his role as the servant.

Norman Treigle and Thomas Paul, as Jesus and Pilate respectively, were most effective in their roles during the portion of the work devoted to the interogation of Christ by Pilate. Ira on either side of the stage, the singers took advantage of the tensely dramatic aspects provided by Bach in his composition.

The Tanglewood Choir, prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, aided in the roles of the soldiers and the Jewish crowd, particularly performed a functional role not unlike that of a Greek chorus. The chorus was perhaps most effective in the scene before Pilate as the "Kreuzige!" (Crucify Him!) rises amidst the skillfully contrived dialogue.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was used sparingly and sensitively in its accompaniment, as indicated by Bach's score The recitatives were accompanied by harpsichord, organ continuo and string bass. The orchestra functioned chiefly as a doubling of the vocal parts in the chorales and accompanying the choruses.

The final chorus and meditative chorale were majestically achieved as the soloists joined the choir in the mounting triumph of the chorale, the portion in which the congregation originally joined the performers. The effect was perfected as conductor Erich Leinsdorf ended the work abruptly on the crescendo of the final syllable, avoiding any useless restatement.

The Saturday eveinng performance was part of an all-Bach weekend at the Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., which included the Concerto for Violin, No. 2, in E major, Szymon Goldberg as soloist; the Suite No. 2, in B minor, for Flute and Strings, Suite No. 4, in D major and four Contrapunctus from the "Art of the Fugue" on Friday evening with Goldberg conducting. Sunday afternoon's performance, under Erich Leinsdorf, featured the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1, in F major; Cantata 55 and the Magnificat in D major.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331

JUL 1 8 1966

At Tanglewood

Weekend of Bach Music Ends With 'Magnificat'

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Erich Leinsdorf's musical crew at Tanglewood ended this season's Bach weekend Sunday afternoon with one of the composer's most compact vocal masterpieces — the "Magnificat in D major."

Five Soloists

It has most of the attributes of an oratorio except length and a narrative story.

Five soloists, a choir and an orchestra are assigned five arias, a duet, a trio and five choruses. There is a short instrumental introduction, but there are no recitatives.

Best moments Sunday were arias by Phyllis Curtin and Norman Treigle, the duet, the trio and the opening and closing choruses.

Flowing Melody

Curtin'lsi aria, "Quia respexit." was a fine blend of gleaming soprano and accompanying bassoon and English horn. The melody is perhaps the most gracefully flowing melody in the whole work.

Treigle has a deeply resonant bass voice, and although it was not as freely agile as one might have wished, its strength and virility was nicely matched in the aria "Quia fecit" to the accompanying cellos and double basses.

Beverly Wolff, mezzo soprano, and Ernst Haefliger, tenor, seemed to fare best during their duet, "Et misericordia." Their voices were similar in timbre.

Bachian Counterpoint

The coupling of tonal qualities was highly successful in the trio, also. The two sopranos were joined by Batyah Godfrey, contralto, and supported by cellos and a trumpet for a typically closely woven web of Bachian counterpoint.

The Magnificat presented most of the same musical forces that performed the "St. John Passion" Saturday night and it created much the same effect, although, of course, for a much shorter time.

The choir was nimble and well balanced, its 55 voices being just about enough to be heard by the 7475 listeners who overflowed onto the lawn outside the shed without being so many that the five-part fugues were turned into mush.

Neat and Tidy

The general atmosphere of the Magnificat was neat, tidy and somewhat cool, an atmosphere normal for Leinsdorf's Bach (although there were some warmly human passages during the long "St. John Passion" Saturday night.)

Sunday's program opened with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 played by seven violins, three violas, three cellos, a double-bass, harpsichord, two horns, three oboes and a bassoon.

Its first and third movements were routinely perfect, the oboe solo in the second movement was superbly plaintive and the two little wind trios during the fourth movement were wonderfully comic.

Iron Man

Before intermission the iron man of the weekend, Ernest Haefliger, tenor, sang the solo part in Cantata No. 55, "Ich Armer Mensch, Ich Sundenknecht."

Haefliger shouldered the almost endless Evangelist's part in the "St. John Passion" Saturday night, helped the ailing tenor Walter Carringer Saturday night by taking over one of his arias and sang an aria and duet in the Magnificat Sunday.

His opening aria in the cantata was marred at the beginning by a tight, nasal quality in the upper register, but his throat had loosened up when the second aria arrived with its lovely flute obbligato.

Attendance for the weekend, including the Saturday morning open rehearsal, was 23,300. Attendance for the three weekends so far is higher than the first three last season, according to the orchestra's press office. A seasonal record was set last year.

Albany Knickerbocker News
Monday, July 18, 1966

Bach Flutist Extraordinary

At the Concert

By R. E. KRIEGER

LENOX, MASS — It was back to Bach at Tanglewood last weekend with some extraordinary performances by soloists and orchestra alike.

On Friday, the Polish violinist Szymon Goldberg, did double duty as he also conducted the augmented chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony.

He was marvelous in Bach's Concerto for Violin, No 2 in E Major, a work of splendid exuberance, so much so that it has been described "as full of an unconquerable joy of life."

This joy is undoubtedly something that Mr. Goldberg knows about, as during his first world tour in 1938 he was trapped in the Orient by the outbreak of the war and spent three years in 14 different Japanese prisoner-of-war camps.

Before this disaster he had made his first solo appearance with the Berlin Philharmonic at 14, was appointed concertmaster of the Dresden Philharmonic at 16 and at 20 was appointed to the same post with the Berlin Philharmonic.

SZYMON GOLDBERG

In the second work of the evening, the Suite No. 2 in B Minor for flute and strings, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist for the Boston Symphony, was extraordinary despite Bach's vicious demands.

Her performance brought the audience to its feet, calling her back five times before they would let her go. And this was an audience bundled, and coated and scarved against the unexpected night coolness that had decended upon the Music Shed.

The evening closed out with Contrapunctus I, II, III, IV, from Bach's monumental Art of the Fugue showing him at the height of his contrapuntal genius, and the Suite No. 4 in D Major notable for a fiery climax following some wickedly intricate counterpoint.

The St. John Passion was sung Saturday night with soloists Ernst Haefliger, Norman Treigl, Phyllis Curtin, Beverly Wolff, Walter Carringer, Thomas Paul and Donald Miller.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Curtin, Miss Wolff, Mr. Haefliger, Mr. Terigle and Batyak Godfrey sang the Magnificat. Mr. Haefliger was soloist for Cantata 55 and the orchestra performed the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1. The Tanglewood choir under Alfred Nash Patterson did duty on both days.

All that should hold Bach enthusiasts for awhile . . . maybe even for a whole week.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404

JUL 1 8 1966

DOUBLE KISS for the hands of soprano Phyllis Curtin, left, and mezzo sopra[no] Beverly Wolff is administered by conductor Erich Leinsdorf at conclusion of sing[ing] of Bach's "Magnificat" at Sunday's concert of Boston Symphony at Tanglewood

TIGHT BINDING

63 rdinary

yllis Curtin, Beverly Wolff, alter Carringer, Thomas Paul d Donald Miller.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Curn, Miss Wolff, Mr. Haefliger, Mr. Terigle and Batyak Godfrey ng the Magnificat. Mr. Haefger was soloist for Cantata 55 nd the orchestra performed the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1. he Tanglewood choir under lfred Nash Patterson did duty n both days.

All that should hold Bach enusiasts for awhile . . . maybe ven for a whole week.

Whitestone

urtin, left, and mezzo soprano nsdorf at conclusion of singing n Symphony at Tanglewood.

rkshire Eagle (e)
TTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 18 1966

Music Review

Weekend Concerts at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FINAL two concerts of e third Tanglewood weekend ere devoted to two magnifint Bach programs. One rts ascending panegyrical lders when the St. John Pasn and the D Major Magnifi- are mentioned, and one ds himself so swiftly at the mmit that any further mouns steps leads into thin air. ich Leinsdorf conducted the ncerts with crowded stagels of performers, instrumen- and vocal, and maneuvered forces with masterful auority.

Yesterday afternoon the Magicat enlisted Phyllis Curtin, prano, Beverly Wolff, mezzo prano, Batyah Godfrey, conlto, Ernst Haefliger, tenor, d Norman Treigle, bass. They re supported by the Tangleod choir, prepared by Alfred sh Patterson; Igor Kipnis, rpsichord continue; John Fer- organ continue; and a all squad of soloists from the ston Symphony seated two steps forward from the main body of the orchestra.

* * *

THE EXTENT of Bach's imaginative resources and their undeviatingly faithful portrayal, by Leinsdorf gave both concerts great variety and stimulation. No note of the St. John was omitted Saturday night. There were no cuts, no disregard of repeat marks or da capos at any point, no more than there were yesterday in the Magnificat. Leinsdorf did allow a little embellishment in the first Brandenburg concerto, with which he began yesterday's program, and allowed Kipnis at the harpsichord to insert a few lovely turned figures between the spaced chords at the finale of the slow movement. Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein got, or took, a similar lark in the adagio bridge in the allegro.

Silverstein played a violin here which had been tuned up a minor third to simulate, as Bach asks, a violino piccolo, to render a smaller and more piercing tone than the normal violin produces.

Bach's career in church music was similar to the duties of a chef in the cuisine. He had to prepare at regular intervals sustenance for the soul and the senses on ordinary and especially on festive occasions. When he went to Leipzig in 1723, in spite of incredibly heavy duties and ludicrously inadequate and grossly unskilled forces, he wrote a gigantic amount of music, week to week, in which some of the great monuments of music appeared almost as routine matters.

* * *

THE MAGNIFICAT yesterday and the St. John Passion Saturday evening were of this nature. In the main, the same soloists performed on both evenings. The most plentiful assignment fell to tenor Haefliger, whose splendid voice was employed as the Evangelist in the Passion, as was proper, mainly as a narrator, and thus he resorted to his Lieder style. In the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch, ich Suendenknecht" which followed the Brandenburg, he displayed a degree of dramatic art he had not revealed on the previous evening.

Miss Wolff found the Magnificat much more to her vocal comfort than the Passion, and in the duet "Et misericordia" with Haefliger there was exceedingly artistic ensemble. Miss Godfrey was a more than able participant in the Terzett. Treible's bass was of conspicuously fine sonority. Miss Curtin had only a step-child's legacy in the Passion, but she acquitted herself with vocal opulence and a confident majesty. In the Magnificat, her amazing breath-control made it possible for her to use her musical taste with superior judgment and lofty vocal comprehension.

* * *

THE GOSPEL story has been told in many ways. The Oberammergau presentation started almost a century before Bach wrote his Passion. It even fell into dippant hands in which it was played with unsuitable levity. It was Bach who really brought it back up to the level of dignity it deserved, and yet it lay neglected and unknown for a century after he wrote it. Today it constitutes one of the peaks of the Bach range, and there is little prospect now that it ever will be cast into deep or enduring shadow.

But the music itself needs vitalization, and Leinsdorf did just that in these programs. The chorus sang for him with every evidence of having been expertly trained. Not only were their robust assignments fully released, but in the bass solo "Eilt, ihr seelen," their decorative "wohins" were expertly interpolated.

Miss Curtin's lovely aria "Ich folge dir" was highlighted by the flute obbligato of Doriot Anthony Dwyer. Miss Wolff's "Es ist vollbrachet" was notable for the assistance of Alfred Zighera's playing of the viola da gamba. Walter Carringer, despite a temporarily unreliable throat, was perfectly effective in his tenor solo "Erwaege," and Thomas Paul as Pilate answered and retorted to the Evangelist with a well-controlled stentorian voice.

Audiences of 7,475 and 7,240, respectively, yesterday and Saturday evening stayed long after the last note of each program to recall the performers with increasing enthusiasm.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
JUL 19 1966

Bach Week-End

Ernst Haefliger's Performance Shines

By GEORGE GELLES
Globe Critic

LENOX—Bach weekend at Tanglewood was much more pleasant than it has been in the past, and this in large part was because of the superb singing of Ernst Haefliger. Erich Leinsdorf, with the exception of the first Brandenburg, conducted only vocal music, the 'St. John Passion' on Saturday night, with Haefliger as the Evangelist, and 'Cantata 55' for solo tenor and the 'Magnificat,' both on Sunday.

The Passion proved an extremely good choice. If outwardly it is a less descriptive work than the Matthew Passion, Bach's telling of the questioning and eventual trial of Jesus is of dramatic potency equal to any episode of the longer Matthew Passion and, in its brevity, more gripping.

It's hard to imagine a more forceful, yet subtle, Evangelist than Haefliger. His handling of recitative is so beautifully modulated in tone and intensity and so alive to dramatic implications that the 'Passion' would have been a great success on recitative alone.

Examples of Haefliger's musicality and insight might be given at length (as a starter, the hollow, but piercing cry at the parenthetical phrase 'denn es kalt war.') but examining especially beautiful moments out of the whole does no justice to the totality of his conception.

The Pilate, with whom so much of the dialogue takes place in the second past, was Thomas Paul, an extremely intelligent and sensitive musician.

Unfortunately, only these two could hold their own against Leinsdorf's quaint ideas about how Bach should go. His notions about tempos are antique; dance movements, here in vocal setting, are distorted through slowness.

Sometimes an exaggerated staccato takes over, as in the chorus 'Lasset uns,' or moving to the 'Magnificat' for a moment, a music-box prettiness is the goal, as in the 'Esurientes.'

Others in the 'Passion' were Phyllis Curtin, Beverly Wolff and Norman Treigle, all fine within Leinsdorf's framework, though Treigle gives the impression that he is saddled with his enormous voice, so little is he able to vary the color and intensity. A program insert told us that Walter Carringer was 'slightly indisposed,' and so Haefliger sang the mammoth aria 'Erwaege.' But what Carringer did sing was much more impressive than his work at Friday's dress rehearsal.

The Tanglewood Choir, trained by Alfred Nash Patterson, was impressive in its suppleness and responsiveness to Leinsdorf's wishes in the chorales.

Following a fine performance of the Cantata, the Magnificat was a less happy proposition, with tempos slow and textures thick. The BSO was reduced in size for the weekend, but this seemed only a concession to scholarship since the sound that came out could be so impenetrable.

Tomorrow, a report on Szymon Goldberg and the weekend's instrumental music.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 18 1966

Music Review

BSO's Bach at Tanglewood Provides Superb Weekend

The Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in an all Bach weekend. Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf conducting.

By FRANK N. PATTERSON

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

If beauty is the power to create impressions of strength without a display of force, Bach's music is most assuredly all beauty. A beauty that fills both the ear and mind.

With but the singular charm of a pure vocal or flute solo supported by no more than oboe obligati, or the ping of a harpsichord continue one may thrill to a profound aural experience. Even with a maximum of expended energy from the reduced Tanglewood Choir and limited numbers of the Boston Orchestra, one feels more impelled by the thrust of Bach's suggestion than all the coercion of a magnum opus by Beethoven.

But verbiage too provides little more than frustration, at best a kind of baitless hook. It can recall such things as the gaiety of the merry-go-round canons, the sweetness of melody, or the persistent exactitude of time units between answering strings, but the insistence of Bach's charm and ideas can only be spelled by Bach's music.

Friday's 7 o'clock Prelude was provided by members of the Symphony performing Number 6 and Number 3 Brandenburg Concerti. Number 6 was played as written with 7 performers and though it lacked somewhat the robust tempo generally associated with the work, the charm and intent due to sensitive ensemble was far from gone. Number 3 was performed by eleven soloists which this time included first chair personnel of the orchestra.

The slow movement from a little known violin sonata was inserted between the two allegros in place of the standard two slow chords. While this provided a somewhat better contrast, the departure seemed to create, likely due to habit, some undue surprise.

Though criticism is almost always simpler than craftsmanship, there are very few words one could warrant in terms of disappointment at these performances and fewer still that could aptly praise them.

Friday's main concert, conducted by Szymon Goldberg, included Bach's Violin Concerto No. 2 in E major with Mr. Goldberg as soloist. If there were some few moments of inexactitude that momentarily disturbed the music's compelling flow there were even less in Suite No. 2. This flute solo performed by the Orchestra's first chair flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer was provided with liquid clear sounds that sacrifice neither inflection nor shading of musical line.

The remainder of Friday's concert included the first four sections from The Art of the Fugue and Suite No. 4 in D major.

The Passion According to Saint John ran through Saturday night's entire concert. Due to careful choice of instrumental and vocal soloists, plus this year a choir Tanglewood may loudly boast of, the performance had a guarantee of success. Vocal soloists included: Ernst Haefliger, Norman Treigle, Phyllis Curtin, Beverly Wolff, Walter Carringer, Thomas Paul and Donald Miller.

TANGLEWOOD
SUNDAY
by Louise S. Cuccinello
Music Dept.
NASC

It was befitting that the farewell concert of Bach at Tanglewood this season should be worthy of the man acclaimed by many as our most outstanding composer. It was Bach played and sung by those well schooled in his music and its performance.

The first Brandenburg Concerto in F is scored for two horns, three oboes, bassoon and violino piccolo (small violin) in the concertino against the normal strings and continuo as the concerto grosso. Since the violino piccolo has become obsolete the usual practice has been to use a regular violin tuned a minor third higher. The regular three movements of the concerto was augmented by Bach with a minuet, two trios and a polacca following the second allegro.

Most noteworthy yesterday was the oboe and violin duet in the adagio.

Ernest Haefliger was the tenor soloist in the Cantata No. 55. Mr. Haefliger has a fine voice, however, his diction and resonance in the opening aria were not up to the standard of the subsequent sections. The chorale introduced the Tanglewood choir to the Sunday audience. It is a very creditable organization with perfect diction, intonation and balance — testimony to the work done by Mr. Alfred N. Patterson at rehearsal.

Bach's Magnificat was originally meant to be performed at Christmas — the Bible text being interrupted by chorales, Christmas songs, etc. In 1730 it was revised and made suitable for other occasions as well. In discussing the Magnificat Carringer tells us that "It is one of the most compact compositions by Bach, imbued with joy and exultation, and radiating the same happy optimism which had found so irresistible an expression in the Brandenburg Concertos."

The solosits yesterday were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Beverly Wolff, Mezzo soprano; Batyah Godfrey, contralto; Ernst Haefliger, tenor; and Norman Treigle, bass.

The Magnificat was superbly performed. It would be impossible to isolate any segment as outstanding. All the ingredients must be on a par (soloists, choir and orchestra) to result in a performance as heard at Tanglewood Sunday.

TIGHT BINDING

rdinary

hyllis Curtin, Beverly Wolff, alter Carringer, Thomas Paul nd Donald Miller.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Curin, Miss Wolff, Mr. Haefliger, Mr. Terigle and Batyak Godfrey ang the Magnificat. Mr. Haefger was soloist for Cantata 55 nd the orchestra performed the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1. The Tanglewood choir under lfred Nash Patterson did duty n both days.

All that should hold Bach enhusiasts for awhile . . . maybe even for a whole week.

rkshire Eagle (e)
TTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 18 1966

Music Review

Weekend Concerts at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FINAL two concerts of e third Tanglewood weekend ere devoted to two magnifint Bach programs. One rts ascending panegyrical ders when the St. John Pasn and the D Major Magnifit are mentioned, and one ds himself so swiftly at the mmit that any further moung steps leads into thin air. ich Leinsdorf conducted the ncerts with crowded stageds of performers, instrumen and vocal, and maneuvered forces with masterful aurity.

Yesterday afternoon the Magicat enlisted Phyllis Curtin, prano, Beverly Wolff, mezzo prano, Batyah Godfrey, conlto, Ernst Haefliger, tenor, d Norman Treigle, bass. They re supported by the Tangleod choir, prepared by Alfred sh Patterson; Igor Kipnis, rpsichord continue; John Fer organ continue; and a all squad of soloists from the ston Symphony seated two steps forward from the main body of the orchestra.

* * *

THE EXTENT of Bach's imaginative resources and their undeviatingly faithful portrayal, by Leinsdorf gave both concerts great variety and stimulation. No note of the St. John was omitted Saturday night. There were no cuts, no disregard of repeat marks or da capos at any point, no more than there were yesterday in the Magnificat. Leinsdorf did allow a little embellishment in the first Brandenburg concerto, with which he began yesterday's program, and allowed Kipnis at the harpsichord to insert a few lovely turned figures between the spaced chords at the finale of the slow movement. Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein got, or took, a similar lark in the adagio bridge in the allegro.

Silverstein played a violin here which had been tuned up a minor third to simulate, as Bach asks, a violino piccolo, to render a smaller and more piercing tone than the normal violin produces.

Bach's career in church music was similar to the duties of a chef in the cuisine. He had to prepare at regular intervals sustenance for the soul and the senses on ordinary and especially on festive occasions. When he went to Leipzig in 1723, in spite of incredibly heavy duties and ludicrously inadequate and grossly unskilled forces, he wrote a gigantic amount of music, week to week, in which some of the great monuments of music appeared almost as routine matters.

* * *

THE MAGNIFICAT yesterday and the St. John Passion Saturday evening were of this nature. In the main, the same soloists performed on both evenings. The most plentiful assignment fell to tenor Haefliger, whose splendid voice was employed as the Evangelist in the Passion, as was proper, mainly as a narrator, and thus he resorted to his Lieder style. In the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch, ich Suendenknecht" which followed the Brandenburg, he displayed a degree of dramatic art he had not revealed on the previous evening.

Miss Wolff found the Magnificat much more to her vocal comfort than the Passion, and in the duet "Et misericordia" with Haefliger there was exceedingly artistic ensemble. Miss Godfrey was a more than able participant in the Terzett. Treible's bass was of conspicuously fine sonority. Miss Curtin had only a step-child's legacy in the Passion, but she acquitted herself with vocal opulence and a confident majesty. In the Magnificat, her amazing breath-control made it possible for her to use her musical taste with superior judgment and lofty vocal comprehension.

* * *

THE GOSPEL story has been told in many ways. The Oberammergau presentation started almost a century before Bach wrote his Passion. It even fell into flippant hands in which it was played with unsuitable levity. It was Bach who really brought it back up to the level of dignity it deserved, and yet it lay neglected and unknown for a century after he wrote it. Today it constitutes one of the peaks of the Bach range, and there is little prospect now that it ever will be cast into deep or enduring shadow.

But the music itself needs vitalization, and Leinsdorf did just that in these programs. The chorus sang for him with every evidence of having been expertly trained. Not only were their robust assignments fully released, but in the bass solo "Eilt, ihr seelen," their decorative "wohins" were expertly interpolated.

Miss Curtin's lovely aria "Ich folge dir" was highlighted by the flute obbligato of Doriot Anthony Dwyer. Miss Wolff's "Es ist vollbrachet" was notable for the assistance of Alfred Zighera's playing of the viola da gamba. Walter Carringer, despite a temporarily unreliable throat, was perfectly effective in his tenor solo "Erwaege," and Thomas Paul as Pilate answered and retorted to the Evangelist with a well-controlled stentorian voice.

Audiences of 7,475 and 7,240, respectively, yesterday and Saturday evening stayed long after the last note of each program to recall the performers with increasing enthusiasm.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
JUL 19 1966

Bach Week-End

Ernst Haefliger's Performance Shines

By GEORGE GELLES
Globe Critic

LENOX—Bach weekend at Tanglewood was much more pleasant than it has been in the past, and this in large part was because of the superb singing of Ernst Haefliger. Erich Leinsdorf, with the exception of the first Brandenburg, conducted only vocal music, the 'St. John Passion' on Saturday night, with Haefliger as the Evangelist, and 'Cantata 55' for solo tenor and the 'Magnificat,' both on Sunday.

The Passion proved an extremely good choice. If outwardly it is a less descriptive work than the Matthew Passion, Bach's telling of the questioning and eventual trial of Jesus is of dramatic potency equal to any episode of the longer Matthew Passion and, in its brevity, more gripping.

It's hard to imagine a more forceful, yet subtle, Evangelist than Haefliger. His handling of recitative is so beautifully modulated in tone and intensity and so alive to dramatic implications that the 'Passion' would have been a great success on recitative alone.

Examples of Haefliger's musicality and insight might be given at length (as a starter, the hollow, but piercing cry at the parenthetical phrase 'denn es kalt war,') but examining especially beautiful moments out of the whole does no justice to the totality of his conception.

The Pilate, with whom so much of the dialogue takes place in the second past, was Thomas Paul, an extremely intelligent and sensitive musician.

Unfortunately, only these two could hold their own against Leinsdorf's quaint ideas about how Bach should go. His notions about tempos are antique; dance movements, here in vocal setting, are distorted through slowness.

Sometimes an exaggerated staccato takes over, as in the chorus 'Lasset uns,' or moving to the 'Magnificat' for a moment, a music-box prettiness is the goal, as in the 'Esurientes.'

Others in the 'Passion' were Phyllis Curtin, Beverly Wolff and Norman Treigle, all fine within Leinsdorf's framework, though Treigle gives the impression that he is saddled with his enormous voice, so little is he able to vary the color and intensity. A program insert told us that Walter Carringer was 'slightly indisposed,' and so Haefliger sang the mammoth aria 'Erwaege.' But what Carringer did sing was much more impressive than his work at Friday's dress rehearsal.

The Tanglewood Choir, trained by Alfred Nash Patterson, was impressive in its suppleness and responsiveness to Leinsdorf's wishes in the chorales.

Following a fine performance of the Cantata, the Magnificat was a less happy proposition, with tempos slow and textures thick. The BSO was reduced in size for the weekend, but this seemed only a concession to scholarship since the sound that came out could be so impenetrable.

Tomorrow, a report on Szymon Goldberg and the weekend's instrumental music.

Whitestone

urtin, left, and mezzo soprano nsdorf at conclusion of singing n Symphony at Tanglewood.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 18 1966

Music Review

BSO's Bach at Tanglewood Provides Superb Weekend

The Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in an all Bach weekend. Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf conducting.

By FRANK N. PATTERSON

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

If beauty is the power to create impressions of strength without a display of force, Bach's music is most assuredly all beauty. A beauty that fills both the ear and mind.

With but the singular charm of a pure vocal or flute solo supported by no more than oboe obligati, or the ping of a harpsichord continue one may thrill to a profound aural experience. Even with a maximum of expended energy from the reduced Tanglewood Choir and limited numbers of the Boston Orchestra, one feels more impelled by the thrust of Bach's suggestion than all the coercion of a magnum opus by Beethoven.

But verbiage too provides little more than frustration, at best a kind of baitless hook. It can recall such things as the gaiety of the merry-go-round canons, the sweetness of melody, or the persistent exactitude of time units between answering strings, but the insistence of Bach's charm and ideas can only be spelled by Bach's music.

Friday's 7 o'clock Prelude was provided by members of the Symphony performing Number 6 and Number 3 Brandenburg Concerti. Number 6 was played as written with 7 performers and though it lacked somewhat the robust tempo generally associated with the work, the charm and intent due to sensitive ensemble was far from gone. Number 3 was performed by eleven soloists which this time included first chair personnel of the orchestra.

The slow movement from a little known violin sonata was inserted between the two allegros in place of the standard two slow chords. While this provided a somewhat better contrast, the departure seemed to create, likely due to habit, some undue surprise.

Though criticism is almost always simpler than craftsmanship, there are very few words one could warrant in terms of disappointment at these performances and fewer still that could aptly praise them.

Friday's main concert, conducted by Szymon Goldberg, included Bach's Violin Concerto No. 2 in E major with Mr. Goldberg as soloist. If there were some few moments of inexactitude that momentarily disturbed the music's compelling flow there were even less in Suite No. 2. This flute solo performed by the Orchestra's first chair flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer was provided with liquid clear sounds that sacrifice neither inflection nor shading of musical line.

The remainder of Friday's concert included the first four sections from The Art of the Fugue and Suite No. 4 in D major.

The Passion According to Saint John ran through Saturday night's entire concert. Due to careful choice of instrumental and vocal soloists, plus this year a choir Tanglewood may loudly boast of, the performance had a guarantee of success. Vocal soloists included: Ernst Haefliger, Norman Treigle, Phyllis Curtin, Beverly Wolff, Walter Carringer, Thomas Paul and Donald Miller.

TANGLEWOOD
SUNDAY
by Louise S. Cuccinello
Music Dept.
NASC

It was befitting that the farewell concert of Bach at Tanglewood this season should be worthy of the man acclaimed by many as our most outstanding composer. It was Bach played and sung by those well schooled in his music and its performance.

The first Brandenburg Concerto in F is scored for two horns, three oboes, bassoon and violino piccolo (small violin) in the concertino against the normal strings and continuo as the concerto grosso. Since the violino piccolo has become obsolete the usual practice has been to use a regular violin tuned a minor third higher. The regular three movements of the concerto was augmented by Bach with a minuet, two trios and a polacca following the second allegro.

Most noteworthy yesterday was the oboe and violin duet in the adagio.

Ernest Haefliger was the tenor soloist in the Cantata No. 55. Mr. Haefliger has a fine voice, however, his diction and resonance in the opening aria were not up to the standard of the subsequent sections. The chorale introduced the Tanglewood choir to the Sunday audience. It is a very creditable organization with perfect diction, intonation and balance — testimony to the work done by Mr. Alfred N. Patterson at rehearsal.

Bach's Magnificat was originally meant to be performed at Christmas — the Bible text being interrupted by chorales, Christmas songs, etc. In 1730 it was revised and made suitable for other occasions as well. In discussing the Magnificat Geiringer tells us that "It is one of the most compact compositions by Bach, imbued with joy and exultation, and radiating the same happy optimism which had found so irresistible an expression in the Brandenburg Concertos."

The solosits yesterday were Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Beverly Wolff, Mezzo soprano; Batyah Godfrey, contralto; Ernst Haefliger, tenor; and Norman Treigle, bass.

The Magnificat was superbly performed. It would be impossible to isolate any segment as outstanding. All the ingredients must be on a par (soloists, choir and orchestra) to result in a performance as heard at Tanglewood Sunday.

TIGHT BINDING

64

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 51,098
JUL 19 1966

The Sound of Music

Bach Staged In The Berkshires

By Peter M. Knapp

LENOX — The weekend belonged to Johann Sebastian Bach at Tanglewood with three concerts graced by West Berkshire weather crisp and bright as pizzicato.

The Mozart-Bach weekends at the Berkshire Festival are supposed to be chamber concerts. But the magnificent performance on Saturday night of Bach's religious oratorio, The Passion of Our Lord According to St. John, was cathedral sized, far surpassing in opulence anything Bach had at his disposal in Leipzig.

For this festive production attended by 7,500, Erich Leinsdorf led the Boston Symphony, seven vocal soloists arranged at different points on stage to heighten the individuality of the characters, and the Tanglewood Choir prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson. There were spots in which Bach was not terribly well served, but the drama and [illegible] of Leinsdorf's conception and the artistry of the soloists insured a moving performance.

Active Passion

Bach is believed to have composed five musical settings of the Passion of Christ, but only the St. John and the St. Matthew Passions survive today. The St. John is the earlier, more concentrated, less epic of the two passions dating from 1723. Since St. John's version of Christ's suffering is rather brief, the [illegible] concentrates on the events of His arrest, interrogation and crucifixion. The [illegible] develops through the declamations of the Evangelist, interspersed with choruses and solo [illegible].

The Evangelist, tenor [illegible] in the ordinary sense of Bach's [illegible] is an active participant in the drama. [illegible] into tricky chromatic [illegible] such as the musical rendering of Peter weeping bitterly at his denial of Christ) and [illegible] in wide range.

[illegible] has mastered it all, with [illegible] control and enormous sub[illegible] was equally distinguished in the "Erwage," which he took over [illegible] Carringer. The latter was [illegible] but gamely carried on [illegible] the servant and two other tenor [illegible].

Treigle rolled out the part of [illegible] noble bass of startling richness [illegible] that seemed to reflect the [illegible] common. Thomas Paul (solo [illegible] Pilate), Phyllis Curtin (solo [illegible] maid) and Beverly Wolff [illegible] generally contributed to [illegible] of the performance.

[illegible] was notable for the [illegible] her vocal solos, though she [illegible] to sing her way through the [illegible]. Miss Wolff sang her [illegible] "Es ist vollbracht" with a [illegible] far more in focus than [illegible] "Von den Strafen meiner [illegible].

[illegible] Choir gathered in definition through the evening, [illegible] work and the [illegible] contrapuntal [illegible] outstanding [illegible] noteworthy.

ERNST HAEFLIGER
Tanglewood tenor

Igor Kipnis delivered a solid harpsichord continuo as he did the entire weekend.

Sunday's Concert

Tenor Haefliger returned for another triumph at Sunday afternoon's concert. His [illegible] within from the 7,476 present [illegible] Bach's Cantata No. 55, [illegible] Ich armer Mensch" (I'm Wretched Enough). In D Major, Erich Leinsdorf's arrangement was the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 in F.

Few singers would dare return to the stage for the evening solo cantata some 18 hours after the taxing evangelist's role in the St. John Passion. But Haefliger is no ordinary tenor. Though he sings forcefully, it is with such excellence of technique and smoothness of tone production that he apparently can handle these tasks without much problem.

In the cantata, he displayed in addition to his firm top notes a solid [illegible] range. And the way he shades his vocal [illegible] with nuances of weight and dynamics, and the style of his florid passages, places him miles ahead of most of his colleagues.

For all her experience and accomplishment, Phyllis Curtin does not sing Bach's [illegible] with distinction, and her trill was nothing special either in the Magnificat. Norman Treigle's voice is too big to articulate the runs cleanly in "Quia fecit," though both the [illegible] and arioso otherwise were fine. [illegible] Haefliger for a [illegible] Cordia." Former [illegible] Godfrey, a [illegible] and Miss Wolff [illegible] "Magnificat" [illegible] the Magnificat [illegible] Godfrey found the [illegible] negotiating difficult sections as well that [illegible] the opening of the "Gloria" was so slushy. And the close tenor Leinsdorf chose for the "Sicut locutus est" chorus just doesn't work. Among the [illegible] Lawrence [illegible] Carringer's [illegible] contributions were noteworthy.

In the Brandenburg Concerto, the horns were hard-pressed to keep up with Leinsdorf's pace in the opening movement, and a sharper rhythmic profile with more of an accented pulse would have been welcome in the second allegro. The adagio, however, was lovely, featuring deft solos by oboist Ralph Gomberg and Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, who had a rough time in the next movement.

Szymon Goldberg, founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, conducted Friday night before an audience of 5,727. He also was a distinguished soloist in Bach's E major violin concerto in a program that held few other delights.

The Original

In the concerto, Goldberg's feathery playing produced a solo line that floated in [illegible] of the ensemble passages. It was a [illegible] as was Goldberg's directing with [illegible] of the bow and by example, that the [illegible] violinist in Bach's day was the first member of the ensemble and very much a part of it, rather than a featured performer who set off his skills from those of the orchestra.

Goldberg's phrasing was always supple, provided for sharp, quick accents and a dramatic sense of dynamics. In the air of [illegible] spun arcing legato lines in [illegible] somewhat grainy tone quality. He had [illegible] problems with pitch in the final movement, but even so his playing was far more exciting than the orchestra's logy and shapeless accompaniment.

Whatever the merits of playing portions of "Art of the Fugue" with no less than 30 strings, the four fugues presented by Goldberg were reasonably well done. There was good tone from the BSO players, clarity of lines for the most part and a decent balance, though one wished for more tension.

But what happened in the two orchestral suites, No. 2 in B minor and No. 4 in D, was criminal. Both overtures nearly fell apart. Instead of the grandly expansive style of the French overture (in No. 4, festive with the additional coloration of trumpets, oboes and bassoons), there were coarse sounds and tentative fumblings for the beat. The lower strings trumped through their parts with heavy-footed inelegance.

Broken Baroque

In truth, the Bostonians — with a handful of exceptions — showed little feeling for Bach. The pulse one should get from the continuo, that baroque rhythm section, just wasn't there. Without that underpinning of rhythmic drive, Bach's music sounds overly academic or at worst, merely slushy.

In both suites, the rhythm was eventually found and a certain amount of clarity gained. Goldberg, curiously, gave the sarabande and polonaise sections of the Second Suite a broadly romantic reading. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the flute soloist, played cleanly enough, as usual, though with no great impact except for the [illegible] reading the overture [illegible] had a lot to contend with.

For the second prelude preceding the main concert, it was good to hear Bach's Brandenburg concerto No. [illegible] in G, one of the [illegible] number of [illegible] strings and harpsichord for No. [illegible] strings and harpsichord for No. [illegible]. For the slow movement of No. 5, an [illegible] minor from a little known violin [illegible] in G was substituted, with Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as soloist.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUL 21 1966

TANGLEWOOD REVIEWED

TANGLEWOOD
FRIDAY — By D. D.

The Boston Symphony, this evening under the direction of Szymon Goldberg, presented an all Bach program. Mr. Goldberg, renowned both as conductor and violinist, performed in these two capacities in the opening number, the Violin Concerto in E Major. This music demands a strong, vigorous touch and this is what was received from both orchestra and soloist. A rich, powerful violin tone, blending beautifully with the massed strings, provided an exciting musical experience.

Mr. Goldberg continued with the Suite No. 2 in B minor for flute and strings. Here was one of the highlights of the evening, playing by Doriot Anthony Dwyer, who, along with the orchestra, conveyed to the full all the melodic charm and tonal color of this lighter Bach work.

Four sections of the Art of the Fugue followed. Although intended for smaller string groups, the effect obtained with large orchestra was striking. Every contrapuntal figure emerged with transparent precision in a framework of rich, textured sound.

The last piece on the program, the Suite No. 4 in D major, was projected with sensitivity and vigor. The charm of the Suites lies in their lyrical rhythmic patterns and their dancing melodies. Mr. Goldberg succeeded in conveying these with unusual force and virility.

SATURDAY — by A. C. S.

The central concert of three devoted to music by Johann Sebastian Bach presented the Passion According to St. John. Conductor Erich Leinsdorf assembled an impressive array of soloists for the occasion: Ernst Haefliger as the Evangelist, Norman Treigle as Jesus, Phyllis Curtin as soprano, Beverly Wolff as solo contralto, Walter Carringer as solo tenor, Thomas Paul as solo bass, and Donald Gramer as Peter.

Mr. Haefliger, who has won an international reputation as an oratorio singer, sang the taxing narration with authority. He also took on the tenor aria "Erwage", which Mr. Carringer had to relinquish due to a last minute indisposition. It was an admirable gesture but did little to enhance his reputation.

Special mention should be made of the Tanglewood Choir, excellently prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson. Tonal vitality and good diction added immeasurably to the performance. The instrumental playing was equally effective, both from the solo and ensemble standpoint. Great effort and expense were obviously lavished on this concert. A new "portative" organ by Noak was used; a handsome libretto was provided listeners (although one would question the inclusion of such a stilted English translation).

A larger audience than had been expected (nearly 7500) turned out for the occasion. For many it was an exhilarating experience. This listener found the performance heavy-handed and earth-bound.

SUNDAY — by A. C. S.

The Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 began the last of three concerts of music by Johann Sebastian Bach. It was a delight to hear. Erich Leinsdorf chose relatively brisk tempos which, with an orchestra less accomplished than the Boston Symphony, could have meant trouble. However, excellence was the order of the day in both ensemble and solo playing (especially the French horns).

The Cantata 55, Ich armer Mensch was sung by Ernst Haefliger. He was in fine voice after the demands of the previous evening and was especially effective in the beautiful aria Erbarme dich.

The Tanglewood Choir and most of the Saturday night soloists (Phyllis Curtin, Beverly Wolff, Norman Triegle, Mr. Haefliger, and Batyah Godfrey) joined the orchestral group in presenting the Magnificat in D Major. Here again, the fine singing of the Choir must be cited. The most felicitous solo singing came from Miss Wolff and Mr. Haefliger in the duet Qui misericordia, and later in Miss Wolff's aria Esurientes implevit bonis. Mr. Treigle, a wonderfully resonant and powerful bass, was effective in the aria Quia fecit. I have long admired Miss Curtin's singing, but she has never met my expectations in the Tanglewood shed. She is splendid in the middle and upper register but the lower one fails to project.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02108 • 742-4200
Review
DARIEN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,965
JUL 21 1966

Tanglewood Gives Bach "Passion"

Reviewed by Ray Yates

The Music Shed at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood was filled with glorious music when we attended a stellar performance of Bach's "Saint John Passion" last Saturday evening at Lenox, Massachusetts. Erich Leinsdorf conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Tanglewood Choir, the organ and harpsichord and the special soloists with inspired devotion that won a standing ovation at the close of the program.

Ernst Haefliger gave the role of the Evangelist beauty and strength of voice that seemed to mount with intensity and feeling in every recitative. The Chorus sections were compelling and lovely or sad and forboding as the music demanded. Beverly Wolff's contralto arias were [illegible] meaning. Phyllis Curtin [illegible] her glorious voice with [illegible] at several points with [illegible] tery and was outstanding in the other passages for the soprano. Walter Carringer reduced his singing somewhat due to a slight indisposition and Mr. Haefliger took over the "Erwage" aria to relieve his colleague at short notice.

Beyond description, was the bass baritone work of Norman Teigle as Jesus. There was strength, dignity, authority in every line that he uttered. One had the feeling that the Christ was himself speaking as the artist managed a complete fulfillment of his challenging role.

Thomas Paul, singing the words of Pilate with all the thrilling effect he placed in the multitude and [illegible] over "The King of the [illegible] Jews" the clamorous mob and the [illegible] Priests, had deep meaningfulness and forthright beauty in his contribution to the score.

The absolute dedication of soloists, accompanying orchestra sections and full string contingent when required as well as the entire chorus, gave a soaring transcendent rendering under Leinsdorf's baton to every portion of the magnificent music and performance.

We counted ourself fortunate among the grateful audience at the end which brought back the soloists and the conductor [illegible] and applauded the exceptional work of the choir, organist, harpsichordist and the entire orchestra with flutists Doriot [illegible] and James Pappoutsakis [illegible] special bows.

TIGHT BINDING

64

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 51,098
JUL 19 1966

The Sound of Music

Bach Staged In The Berkshires

By Peter M. Knapp

LENOX — The weekend belonged to Johann Sebastian Bach at Tanglewood in three concerts graced by ideal Berkshire weather crisp and bright as pizzicato.

The Mozart-Bach weekends at the Berkshire Festival are supposed to be chamber concerts. But the magnificent performance on Saturday night of Bach's religious oratorio, The Passion of Our Lord According to St. John, was cathedral-sized, far surpassing in opulence anything Bach had at his disposal in Leipzig.

For this festive production attended by 7,240 Erich Leinsdorf led the Boston Symphony, seven vocal soloists arranged at different points on stage to heighten the individuality of the characters, and the Tanglewood Choir, prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson. There were spots in which Bach was not especially well served, but the drama and grandeur of Leinsdorf's conception and the artistry of the soloists insured a moving performance.

Active 'Passion'

Bach is believed to have composed five musical settings of the Passion of Christ, but only the St. John and the St. Matthew Passions survive today. The St. John is the earlier, more concentrated, less epic of the two passions, dating from 1723. Since St. John's version of Christ's suffering is rather brief, the action concentrates on the scene of His arrest, interrogation and crucifixion. The action develops through the declamations of the evangelist, interspersed with chorales, choruses and solo arias.

Swiss tenor Ernst Haefliger was an extraordinary evangelist, molding the inflections of Bach's musical oratory into natural speech patterns with remarkably clear diction (a distinction shared by the other soloists, especially the men).

The St. John Passion is perhaps less demanding than the St. Matthew for the evangelist, but the recitative is tough enough, supported only by bare chords, curling into tricky chromaticisms (such as the musical rendering of Peter weeping bitterly at his denial of Christ) and leaping in wide skips.

Haefliger has mastered it all, with consummate control and enormous subtlety. He was equally distinguished in the tenor aria, "Erwaege," which he took over from Walter Carringer. The latter was slightly indisposed but gamely carried on the part of the servant and two other tenor arias.

Norman Treigle rolled out the part of Jesus in a noble bass of startling richness and power that seemed to reflect the strength of the cosmos. Thomas Paul (solo bass and Pilate), Phyllis Curtin (solo soprano and maid) and Beverly Wolff (solo contralto) generally contributed to the excellence of the performance.

Miss Curtin was notable for the loveliness of her vocal solos, though she was inclined to slur her way through the embellishments. Miss Wolff sang her second aria, "Es ist vollbracht," with a lovely tonal quality far more in focus than her work in "Von den Stricken meiner Sunden."

The Tanglewood Choir gained in definition and effectiveness through the evening, although the basses are weak and the chorus cannot manage complex contrapuntal sections without sounding muddy. John Ferrie played the organ continuo. Alfred Zighera's viola da gamba obbligato was outstanding for its beauty of tone, and Igor Kipnis delivered a solid harpsichord continuo as he did the entire weekend.

ERNST HAEFLIGER
. . . Tanglewood tenor

Sunday's Concert

Tenor Haefliger returned for another triumph at Sunday afternoon's concert. He received an ovation from the 7,475 present for the solo work in Bach's Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch, ich Suendenknecht," and in the Magnificat in D. Also in Erich Leinsdorf's program was the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 in F.

Few singers would dare return to the stage for the exacting solo cantata some 16 hours after the taxing evangelist's role in the St. John Passion. But Haefliger is no ordinary tenor. Though he sings forcefully, it is with such excellence of technique and smoothness of tone production that he apparently can handle these tasks without much problem.

In the cantata, he displayed in addition to his firm top notes a solid lower range. And the way he shades his vocalism with nuances of weight and dynamics, and the style of his florid passages places him miles ahead of most of his colleagues.

For all her experience and accomplishment, Phyllis Curtin does not sing fioriture with distinction, and her trill was nothing special either in the Magnificat. Norman Treigle's voice is too big to articulate the runs cleanly in "Quia fecit," though both the bass and soprano otherwise were fine. Mezzo Beverly Wolff joined Haefliger for a superb duet in "Et misericordia." Former Tanglewood student Batyah Godfrey, a contralto, Miss Curtin and Miss Wolff were ill-matched for their terzett.

Mixed 'Magnificat'

Aside from these distractions, the Magnificat proceeded well under Leinsdorf's direction. The opening chorus found the Tanglewood Choir negotiating difficult sections so well that one wondered why the opening of the "Gloria" was so slushy. And the slow tempo Leinsdorf chose for the "Sicut locutus est" chorus just doesn't work. Among the instrumentalists, Armando Ghialla's high trumpet and Laurence Thorstenberg's oboe d'amore contributions were noteworthy.

In the Brandenburg Concerto, the horns were hard-pressed to keep up with Leinsdorf's pace in the opening movement, and a sharper rhythmic profile with more of an accented pulse would have been welcome in the second allegro. The adagio, however, was lovely, featuring deft solos by oboist Ralph Gomberg and Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, who had a rough time in the next movement.

Szymon Goldberg, founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, conducted Friday night before an audience of 5,727. He also was a distinguished soloist in Bach's E major violin concerto in a program that held few other delights.

The Original

In the concerto, Goldberg's feathery bowing produced a solo line that floated in an out of the ensemble passages. It was a reminder, as was Goldberg's directing with strokes of the bow and by example, that the solo violinist in Bach's day was the first member of the ensemble and very much a part of it, rather than a featured performer who set off his skills from those of the orchestra.

Goldberg's phrasing was always supple, propelled by sharp, quick accents and a dramatic sense of dynamics. In the air of the adagio, he spun arcing legato lines in a warm, somewhat grainy tone quality. He had some problems with pitch in the final movement, but even so his playing was far more exciting than the orchestra's logy and shapeless accompaniment.

Whatever the merits of playing portions of "Art of the Fugue" with no less than 30 strings, the four fugues presented by Goldberg were reasonably well done. There was good tone from the BSO players, clarity of lines for the most part and a decent balance, though one wished for more tension.

But what happened in the two orchestral suites, No. 2 in B minor and No. 4 in D, was dismal. Both overtures nearly fell apart. Instead of the grandly expansive style of the French overture (in No. 4, festive with the additional coloration of trumpets, oboes and bassoons), there were coarse sounds and tentative fumblings for the beat. The lower strings tromped through their parts with heavy-footed inelegance.

Broken Baroque

In truth, the Bostonians — with a handful of exceptions — showed little feeling for Bach. The pulse one should get from the continuo, that baroque rhythm section, just wasn't there. Without this underpinning of rhyhmic drive, Bach's music sounds overly academic or at worst merely slushy.

In both suites, the rhythm was eventually found and a certain amount of clarity gained. Goldberg curiously gave the sarabande and polonaise sections of the Second Suite a broadly romantic reading. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the flute soloist, played cleanly enough, as usual, though with no great impact except for the rapid, driving passages ending the overture. But she had a lot to contend with.

For the weekend prelude preceding the main concert, it was good to hear two of Bach's Brandenburg concerti, No. 6 in B-flat, and No. 3 in G, performed with the number of players Bach intended — six strings and harpsichord for No. 6, and 10 strings and harpsichord for No. 3. For the slow movement of No. 3, an adagio in G minor from a little known violin sonata in G was substituted, with Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as soloist.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUL 21 1966

TANGLEWOOD REVIEWED

TANGLEWOOD
FRIDAY — By D. D.

The Boston Symphony, this evening under the direction of Szymon Goldberg, presented an all Bach program. Mr. Goldberg, renowned both as conductor and violinist, performed in these two capacities in the opening number, the Violin Concerto in E Major. This music demands a strong, vigorous touch, and this is what was received from both orchestra and soloist. A rich, powerful violin tone, blending beautifully with the massed strings, provided an exciting musical experience.

Mr. Goldberg continued with the Suite No. 2 in B minor for flute and strings. Here was one of the highlights of the evening, playing by Doriot Anthony Dwyer, who, along with the orchestra, conveyed to the full all the melodic charm and tonal color of this lighter Bach work.

Four sections of the Art of the Fugue followed. Although intended for smaller string groups, the effect obtained with larger orchestra was striking. Every contrapuntal figure emerged with transparent precision in a framework of rich, textured sound.

The last piece on the program, the Suite No. 4 in D major, was projected with sensitivity and vigor. The charm of the Suites lies in their bold rhythmic patterns and their entrancing melodies. Mr. Goldberg succeeded in conveying these with unusual force and virility.

SATURDAY — by A. C. S.

The central concert of three devoted to music by Johann Sebastian Bach presented the Passion According to St. John. Conductor Erich Leinsdorf assembled an impressive array of soloists for the occasion: Ernst Haefliger as the Evangelist, Norman Treigle as Jesus, Phyllis Curtin as solo soprano, Beverly Wolff as solo contralto, Walter Carringer as solo tenor, Thomas Paul as solo bass, and Donald Muller as Peter.

Mr. Haefliger, who has won an international reputation as an oratorio singer, sang the taxing narration with authority. He also took on the tenor aria "Erwage" which Mr. Carringer had to relinquish due to a last minute indisposition. It was an admirable gesture but did little to enhance his reputation.

Special mention [illegible] ould be made of the Tangl[illegible] od Choir, excellently prepar[illegible] y Alfred Nash Patterson. [illegible] vitality and good diction [illegible]dded immeasurably to the [illegible]formance. The instrumental [illegible]ing was equally effective, [illegible] from the solo and ensemb[illegible] ndpoint. Great effort and [illegible]se were obviously lavished [illegible] his concert. A new "por[illegible]" organ by Noak was used; [illegible]ndsome libretto was provi[illegible] listeners (although one wo[illegible] question the inclusion of [illegible] a stilted English translation.

A larger audienc[illegible] than had been expected (nearly 7500) turned out for the occasion. For many it was an exhilarating experience. This listener found the performance heavy-handed and earth-bound.

SUNDAY — by A. C. S.

The Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 began the last of three concerts of music by Johann Sebastian Bach. It was a delight to hear. Erich Leinsdorf chose relatively brisk tempos which, with an orchestra less accomplished than the Boston Symphony, could have meant trouble. However, excellence was the order of the day in both ensemble and solo playing (especially the French horns).

The Cantata 55, Ich armer Mensch was sung by Ernst Haefliger. He was in fine voice after the demands of the previous evening and was especially effective in the beautiful aria Erbarme dich.

The Tanglewood Choir and most of the Saturday night soloists (Phyllis Curtin, Beverly Wolff, Norman Triegle, Mr. Haefliger, and Batyah Godfrey) joined the orchestral group in presenting the Magnificat in D Major. Here again, the fine singing of the Choir must be cited. The most felicitous solo singing came from Miss Wolff and Mr. Haefliger in the duet Et misericordia, and later in Miss Wolff's aria Esurientes implevit bonis. Mr. Treigle, a wonderfully resonant and powerful bass, was effective in the aria Quia fecit. I have long admired Miss Curtin's singing, but she has never met my expectations in the Tanglewood shed. She is splendid in the middle and upper register but the lower one fails to project.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Review
DARIEN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,965
JUL 21 1966

Tanglewood Gives Bach "Passion"

Reviewed by Ray Yates

The Music Shed at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, was filled with glorious music when we attended a stellar performance of Bach's "Saint John Passion" last Saturday evening at Lenox, Massachusetts. Erich Leinsdorf conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Tanglewood Choir, the organ and harpsichord and the special soloists with inspired devotion that won a standing ovation at the close of the program.

Ernst Haefliger gave the role of the Evangelist beauty and strength of voice that seemed to mount with intensity and feeling in every recitative. The Chorus sections were compelling and lovely or sad and forboding as Bach's music demanded. Beverly Wolff's contralto arias were rich with meaning. Phyllis Curtin blended her glorious voice with the flutes at several points with superb mastery and was outstanding in the other passages for solo soprano. Walter Carringer reduced his singing somewhat due to a slight indisposition and Mr. Haefliger took over the "Erwage" aria to relieve his colleague at short notice.

Beyond description, was the bass baritone work of Norman Teigle as Jesus. There was strength, dignity, authority in every line that he uttered. One had the feeling that the Christ was himself speaking as the artist managed a complete fulfillment of his challenging role.

Thomas Paul, singing the words of Pilate with all the thrilling efforts to placate the multitude and not turn over "The King of the Jews" to theclamorous mob and the Chief Priests, had deep mellowness and forthright beauty in his contribution to the score.

The absolute dedication of soloists, accompanying orchestra sections and full string contingent when required as well as the entire chorus, gave a soaring and transcendent rendering under Mr. Leinsdorf's baton to every portion of the magnificent music and the performance.

We counted ourself fortunate to be among the grateful audience at the end which brought odes to the soloists and the conductor many times and applauded the excellent work of the choir, organist, harpsichordist and the entire orchestra, with flutists Doriot Dwyer and James Pappoutsakis taking special bows.

TIGHT BINDING

65

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
JUL 18 1966

JOHANNESPASSION' AT TANGLEWOOD

An All-Bach Weekend

By McLAREN HARRIS

LENOX — A performance which brought together an ensemble of fine singers and instrumentalists, molding continuity and unity into a lengthy and diverse-expressioned work, made Saturday night's "Johannespassion" the highlight of an all-Bach weekend at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Exalting, Sincere, Awkward

The "St. John Passion" is porter than the more celerated St. Matthew (68 numers as opposed to 78 for the atter). Yet the concert reuired 2½ hours. The moods ange from excitment to sorow, rest and resignation hile the text, supposedly reised by Bach from the work f another author, is variously xalting, sincere and awkward. ong recitatives, Da Capo arias nd choral interjections made he Passion somewhat unruly n matters of sustaining musical interest and dramatic purose.

It is much to Erich Leinsorf's credit that his varied acing of the number avoided taint of monotony or repetiious feeling. Even the slow empi contained a gradual weep and lifted broad arches f line, either melodic or conrapuntal, in stirring fashion.

BATTERY OF SOLOISTS

The battery of soloists was ormidable. Ernst Haefliger, the vangelist, exhibited such comand of the angular recitatives, modulating his tenor to each every requirement of the ext, as to mark him as one of he finest concert tenors in he business. Thomas Paul, bass (Pilate). Phyllis Curtin, soprano, and Beverly Wolff, contralto, were of like stature both ocally and interpretively. Such an ensemble, it may be said, is somewhat unusual to behold.

Bass Norman Treigle, who sang Jesus in the slow manner which is supposed to give the role its divine bearing, did so in full voice and with a minimum of hesitance; Walter Carringer, who was announced as "slightly indisposed," belied his condition with a secure and essentially relaxed tenor. The Tanglewood choir was disciplined, clear-voiced and generally well balanced. Finally, among the instrumentalists there was Alfred Zighera, who produced as fine an example of viola da gamba-playing as I have heard.

Sunday's program was again principally vocal. Haefliger returned to do a superlative job with the Solo Cantata 55, "Ich Armer Mensch," sewing smoothness into the tender arias and even the recitatives, whose leaps are absolutely precipitous.

DEMANDING 'MAGNIFICAT'

The major work was the "Magnificat," which is at the same time packed with esthetic worth, Baroque symbolism and technical pitfalls; virtuosic demands are made on practically every member of the ensemble. Misses Curtin and Wolff were in the best straits for their respective arias, and were joined by Batyah Godfrey, contralto, for the "Suscepit Israel." Treigle contributed his strong bass to the "Quia Fecit" and Haefliger did his best with the "Deposuit," one of Bach's more unsingable pieces. Again the choir was able and alert.

Leinsforf has his own ideas about tempo here as well, most of which are good; we may exclude from that the "Et Exultavit," which left Miss Curtin slightly breathless, and a somewhat ponderous fugal chorus, "Sicut Locutus Est."

The orchestra was on top of most everything, from trumpet to coninuo, as they were for the opening "Brandenburg Concerto No. 1" (minus trumpets), which came off in alternately brisk and contemplative fashion.

Szymon Goldberg appeared in Friday's program as both conductor and violinist. His solo performance outweighed his conducting; not a perfectionist, he succeeded nevertheless in making the "Concerto in E Major" both hushed and exciting, while his direction in the remaining works (Suites Nos. 2 and 4), and "Art of the Fugue," (contrapuncti 1-4) placed too much emphasis on the rhythmic pulses, expanding the contrast and giving them a slightly forbidding sternness. Doriot Anthony Dwyer's controlled flute-playing in the Suite No. 2 was thoroughly praiseworthy.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078 Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186
JUL 20 1966

Concerts At Tanglewood

The first concert of the Berkshire Festival weekend at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, devoted to Johann Sebastian Bach was preceded by a short prelude of two Brandenburg concerti, No. 6 in B-flat major and No. 3 in G major. Each was played by the number of instrumentalists for which it is scored, without conductor, for which one felt the need quite often, in spite of the excellent playing. The bass viols were quite outstanding in their unfortunate intonation, the whole three movements rather lugubrious, even the robust finale.

The third concerto fared better, played in a contained style; one felt each musician was holding back in order not to stand out from the others. For this reason, a director might have drawn the lines and nuances for better effect.

At 9, Szymon Goldberg, violinist and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, heard at UMass. a while ago, was the visiting leader, beginning with Bach's Violin Concerto, No. 2, in E major, played and directed simultaneously by him with clear-cut decisiveness, the opening theme crisp and detached, the second long and legato. The Adagio was a beautiful thing, especially the melodic sustained lines of the celli against the other strings, beginning and ending it. All was lovely and lively, Mr. Goldberg having a deep sympathy for this great composer.

This was obvious, too, in the charming second suite, heard so many times at Tanglewood, a repeated tour de force for flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, sitting up front at the left of Mr. Goldberg, complementing the players in a white-topped black skirt, sashed in red. This was different reading from those we've heard previously, not as free or rushed, a more delicate, and yet definite outlining of each phrase, in solo and concert.

The audience whistled and recelled Mrs. Dwyer with unlimited approval, a bit overdone, many felt, although the Badinerie is such a captivating bit the spirits are lifted high and wide.

After intermission Mr. Goldberg directed finely drawn interpretations of the Art of the Fugue and the fourth suite in D Major.

The fourth weekend will see the full complement of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Friday's concert directed by Sejii Ozawa, his third appearance at Tanglewood; the romantic concerto theme featuring Joseph Silverstein in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto; Saturday, Van Cliburn playing Rachmaninoff's third concerto, and Sunday, Lillian Kallir in Chopin's Violin and piano; the Tanglewood choir, directed by Alfred Nash Patterson in songs for Mrs. Silverstein will perform mixed chrous by Mendelssohn. Brahms' A Major Sonata for F Minor piano concerto. At Friday's Prelude Miss Kallir and Mr. Silverstein will perform mixed chrous by Mendelssohn.

Singers At Tanglewood

Phyllis Curtin, American operatic singer, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, in the Bach St. John Passion on July 16 and will appear again on July 17 in the Bach Magnificat. Miss Curtin will give a recital on Tuesday, August 2 as part of the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music events. She is also a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty as Chairman of the Voice Teaching and Performance seminar.

Ernst Haefliger, Swiss Tenor, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, in the Bach St. John Passion on Saturday evening, July 16 and again on Sunday, July 17 as soloist in the Bach Cantata 55, "Ich armer Mensch" and in the Bach Magnificat. This will be Mr. Haefliger's debut at Tanglewood.

The second series of three concerts by a chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians will take place at Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.) this Friday, Saturday, and Sunday (July 15, 16, 17). The three programs entirely devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach will have Szymon Goldberg and Erich Leinsdorf sharing the conducting. Mr. Goldberg, making his first appearance at the Berkshire Festival, will conduct and also be soloist at Friday's evening's concert. The St. John Passion will be conducted by Mr. Leinsdorf on Saturday evening.

Bach's Violin Concerto in E major with Mr. Goldberg, founder and conductor of the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, as conductor and soloist will begin Friday's (July 15; 9:00 p.m.) program. For the balance of his program with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Goldberg has chosen the Suite No. 2, the first four fugues from "Art of the Fugue," and the Suite No. 4.

As soloists in Saturday's (July 16; 8:00 p.m.) performances of the St. John Passion, Mr. Leinsdorf has invited Walter Carringer, Phyllis Curtin, Ernst Haefliger, Thomas Paul, Norman Triegle, and Beverly Wolff. The chorus consists of the Tanglewood Choir, and the text will be sung in German.

Sunday afternoon (July 16, 2:30 p.m.) Mr. Leinsdorf will begin the concert with the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 and continue with the Cantata No. 55, "Ich armer Mensch" with Mr. Haefliger as soloist. Sunday's program and the Bach weekend at Tanglewood conclude with the Magnificat with Miss Curtin, Messrs. Haefliger and Treigle, and Miss Wolff as soloists.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
JUL 20 1966

Goldberg's Debut at Tanglewood Lacking Precision

By GEORGE GELLES
Globe Critic

LENOX — Szymon Goldberg made his Tanglewood debut last Friday night, before an audience of more than 5000, presumably won over to the Goldberg approach through recordings that the violinist-conductor has made with his Netherlands Chamber Orchestra.

His program was badly put together: the E Major Violin Concerto, Suite No. 2, four fugues from 'Art of Fugue', and the Fourth Suite. Even a reversal of the first two pieces would have helped.

Goldberg's performances were characterized by excessive naivety. His is a very cultivated amateurism which stops a good deal short of being real professionalism. How else can one account for the shabby state of violin playing in the concerto. That things were not eltter-perfect is, granted, not a guarantee of a bad performance, but we got technical sloppiness coupled with little grasp of the shape of the piece. The lovely sound that Goldberg got was never put in pursuit of any structural goal, and a mindless playing was the result.

The fugues that were heard from Bach's puzzling, unscored collection were not numbers 1 through 4, as the program stated, but numbers 1, 3, 2 and 5. These were played, the outer ones rather fast and loud, the inner ones slow and soft, by four-part strings alone. What the reading conclusively proved at least for this listener, is that Bach did not want his pieces played by strings alone, for the result was hopelessly drab and colorless in a very un-Bachian 'Art of Fugue' has had its orchestral arrangements (though it's a shame that Schoenberg, who did several intermittently brilliant Clavierue bung and Chorale Prelude arrangements, never worked on this), and Goldberg would have given an equally authentic and undoubtedly more colorful impression of these pieces if he had turned to one of them.

The Second Suite was disappointingly slow and sluggish until the very last movement when the texture lightened and the tempo picked up. Mrs. Dwyer played the solo flute part excellently. The Fourth Suite, however, was unfairly put at a disadvantage by coming last on the program, since the winds had for hours been in cold storage backstage. But after some pretty brutal playing in the opening movement, the Suite was enjoyable, if too slow-paced.

As a conductor, Goldberg is a pleasure to watch, his movements being economical, his gestures getting a definite response from the players. When he feels no metronome is needed, in duet passages especially, he stops beating altogether. All this is a welcome contrast to Leinsdorf, who opened Sunday's concert with the First Brandenburg. Not of great musicality, though with wonderfully light and agile horn playing by James Stagliano, the performance was graced,

New England Newspaper Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Springfield Herald
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Bi-Weekly
Circ. 111,573
JUL 21 1966

Last Friday's All-Bach program at Tanglewood included a prelude at 7 p.m. of Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 6, in B-flat major, and the Brandenburg Concerto No. 3, in G major.

The Brandenburg Concerto No. 6 was played by five "solo" instruments: 2 violas, 2 bass viols, cello, bass, and harpsicord. In the Allegro movement, the violas began a canon over a simple chord accompaniment. As the music developed, whole bows of the entire string section swept toward a spirited presto. The slow Adagio, ma non troppo, softly played as light baritone conversation between the violas. The final Allegro built momentum toward an animated finale.

SZYMON GOLDBERG

Born in Poland. Concert-master of the Berlin Philharmonic at twenty. Imprisoned by the Japanese in the Dutch East Indies and spent three years in fourteen prison camps. Released in 1945, and after recuperation resumed his international concertizing.

Next on the prelude was the Brandenburg Concerto No. 3, which had eleven "solo" instrumentalists: three violins, three violas, three cellos, one double bass, and harpsichord. This concerto consisted of two fast movements, the Allegro, and a slow movement, the Adagio. The Allegros were separated by two slow chords. At this performance, a slow E minor movement was adapted from a little known Violin Sonata in G major. This was played by the eleven "solo" players as Bach wished it to be. Bach wrote these concertos while he was experimenting with polyphonic sound or a blending of different melodies during his "second period" to rhis patron, the Prince of Cothen.

At 9:00 p.m., the concert was highlighted by Szymon Goldberg, conductor and violin soloist of Bach's Concerto for Violin, No. 2, in E major. Only the Boston Symphony string section accompanied. The Allegro movement contained a sparkling perpetual motion with polyphonic and homophonic (harmonic) arrangements. The adagio whispered in the form of a chaconne, a graceful slow Spanish movement. Such sustained delicate diminuendos were executed that no one dared cough to disturb the quietude.

The final movement, the Allegro, was a complete change of mood toward a brisk, uncomplicated melody. At the finish of the Violin Concerto, a standing ovation expressed the audience's delighted reaction.

The Suite No. 2, in B Minor was next on the program with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as Flute soloist and Szymon Goldberg conducting. Seven movements began with the usual overture, a much-ornamented firm introduction, then a Rondeau, a dance, the Sarabonde, 2 Bourrees, a Polonaist and Double, a Minuet and a Badinerie, which was a delightful witty, nonsensical flourish for the flute. Mr. Goldberg selected the flutist, 8-1st violins, 8-rnd violins, 6 violas, 4 cellos, 2 double basses and a harpsichord.

Highlights of Miss Dwyer's flute solos and tutti passages were her "conversations" with the first violin, harpsichord, and triple-tongued galloping finale with the entir ensemble.

Next week, the first "Variety" program will be heard. On friday, July 22 at 9:00 p.m. Seiji Ozawa, a Tschaikovsky int'l. contest winner, will be guest conducter. The B.S.O. will play Schuman's American Festival Overture, Schubert's Symphony No. 8, the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, soloist, and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite. On Saturday July 23, at 8:00 p.m. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Brahms Tragic Overture, Schumann's Symphony No. 2, and Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3 with guest soloist, Van Cliburn. Sunday, July 24, at 2:30 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf conducts Beethoven's Overture "Coriolanus", Tchiakovsky's Symphony No. 6, and Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor with Kallir as guest pianist.

NE. 7/26/66

Tanglewood Puts Crowd Under Spell

BY THOMAS WILLIS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., July 25—It has been a long time since I last looked in on the Boston Symphony orchestra's beautiful summer home in the Berkshires. The verdant estate in the heart of a luxuriant resort region is surrounded by the charming villages of Lee, Lenox, and Stockbridge. Its next door neighbors are the tailored lawns and tidy colonial brick "cottages" which give the well-to-do portions of rugged New England the unreal etched and tinted quality of an early American print.

• • •

Tanglewood, too, remains for this outsider a little hard to believe, especially on concert nights. The float in front of the music shed stretches beyond clipped box hedges to a lake all but lost in the misty dusk, with an even dimmer bluer mountain beyond providing a final backdrop. As darkness comes and the program begins, a dowager in a mink cape and ivory brocade long dress threads her way thru much loved formal clutches of listeners on the lawn, some around glowing hibachis sharing a bottle of wine. Then quiet sets in, and with it the music.

It is quieter music than we are accustomed to at Ravinia or Grant park, for what amplification there is is confined to instruments otherwise inaudible outdoors, such as the harpsichord in Bach's Passion According to Saint John the night we stopped in. Both in the pavilion and on the lawn, the sound is lighter and less obvious in dynamic contrast. At no time does a climax assault the ears, commanding attention by sheer weight of sound. The softest sections sound at enchanting distance, requiring the utmost attention from selective ears.

• • •

There are next to no outside distractions, however, and from where we were sitting you could hear everything. The focusing panels installed about eight years ago on the stage and over the audience's heads bring the music up and out, allowing maximum projection of solo instruments as well as full orchestra and chorus. [To be absolutely fair, it must be said that there are no brass and timpani in the "Saint John" and as a consequence I did not really hear the full orchestra.] Erich Leinsdorf had disposed his vocal forces in an unusual and effective manner, placing Thomas Paul's outspoken Pilate and Norman Treijle's Christ far upstage on raised platforms left and right and Ernst Haefliger's always magnificent Evangelist front and center near the conductor. The opposing antiphonal dialog threw redemptive drama into sharp auditory focus, with the chorus at the rear participating as a third party now and then. Near the end, Mr. Haefliger's pianissimo telling of the final moments of Christ on the cross came floating thru on a bare minimum of vibrant air.

• • •

Mr. Leinsdorf's conception of Bach's sublime masterwork was an interesting compromise between the historical verities of authentic performance and the facts of its modern surroundings. A fine little pipe organ, harpsichord, and the unusual strings were used, but both chorus and orchestra were much more assertive than would have been necessary in optimum surroundings. Always aware of dramatic values, the conductor paced recitatives and arias with minimal interruption and built climaxes in large, quasi-operatic unities, leaving the maximum effect for the "Ruhet Wohl" chorus and triumphant final chorale. The other fine soloists were Phyllis Curtin, Beverly Wolff, Donald Miller, and Walter Carringer.

• • •

A few days later, I had a chance to observe Mr. Leinsdorf wearing his second summer hat, instructing at the concurrent Berkshire Music center, also held at Tanglewood. The music director regards the program here as "a bridge from school to profession—a summer finishing, post-graduate affair. I treat these kids as professionals, altho I tell them a few more basic things than I would the big symphony. After all, they are starting out on their careers and they should consciously know what the problems are. You don't get that in conservatories."

Mr. Leinsdorf was speaking of the center's accomplished orchestra, which he had just finished rehearsing. Later, he took a conducting class thru the intricacies of preparatory beats, using recitatives from "The Magic Flute" to illustrate the necessary flexibility.

• • •

Meanwhile, the regular Friday, Saturday, and Sunday Boston Symphony concerts have been augmented this year by Friday evening curtain-raisers —chamber and vocal music programs at 7 o'clock, with the regular concerts delayed until 9. The response has been gratifying, management says, with many in the audience coming for the early program and eating picnic suppers on the lawn in between. Both concerts are offered for the regular evening ticket price. As we said, Tanglewood is a little hard to believe.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Circ. 115,186
AUG 7 1966

Guest conductor Szymon Goldberg rehearses with his violin. He played and conducted at the same time on the Bach weekend. Goldberg takes a break to converse with friends.

Register Photos By Eugene Seder

A Pleasant Interlude Behind The Scenes At Tanglewood

By EUGENE SEDER
Register Staff Reporter

LENOX, Mass.—For those who like to have their great music in a less formal atmosphere and perhaps mix it with a picnic in a truly elegant setting, Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has made some special arrangements.

The "open rehearsal" is the occasion. It starts about 10:30 a.m. Saturdays and is usually over about two hours later. Informality is the rule in dress for both spectators and musicians. As a rehearsal, of course, the music is interrupted by the conductor for special comments and advice to the orchestra. This may spoil the grand flow of the music for some but adds a piquant interest for others.

The musicians stop for a coffee break and the more enterprising open rehearsals watchers can step back and listen or snap a candid photograph of them.

When the open rehearsal is over, the rehearsal-goer may roam the 210 acre, magnificently groomed estate, open up his picnic basket and have a luncheon in the shade of the trees which in days gone by sheltered Emerson, Holmes, Melville and Nathaniel Hawthorne.

The open rehearsal brings an especially good opportunity to introduce great music to the children.

Admission for children, too, is $2 against the $3.50 to $7 for the seats for the evening performances. The money goes to the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. Good deportment is demanded of the children.

Usually it is the program listed for Sunday afternoon which is rehearsed on Saturday morning. The programs for the Saturday night and Friday night performances are rehearsed earlier in the week at non-open rehearsals.

Besides the open rehearsals, Tanglewood has a number of other programs during the week of interest to good music lovers and at very reasonable cost.

These are performances by music students who spend the summer studying at Tanglewood. A walk through the grounds reveals rustic sheds dotted here and there from which boom the sounds of horns, clarinets, bassoons.

On Wednesday and Thursday evenings and Sunday mornings, the makers of these sounds are drawn together in a special musical theater to present performances of many kinds of music, contemporary, chamber, barque, to mention some.

The Wednesday and Thursday evening performances at 8 p.m. and the Sunday morning one at 10 a.m. are called the Berkshire Music Center Concerts. They are open to the "Friends of the Berkshire Music Center." To become a friend, one need only make a contribution at an office provided in front of the center. The contribution is unspecified and need not be large.

The Tuesday evening performances at 8 are Chamber Music recitals featuring special groups such as players from the Boston Symphony, a composers' quartette and other professional groups. Admission is $3 and $3.50 for these performances.

The regular Boston Symphony Orchestra performances for those who will go first class, are in the 6,000 seat music shed, Friday night at 9, Saturday night at 8 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Seats for these performances are $3.50 to $7.00 Some prefer to sit on the grass outside and for them admission to the grounds alone may be purchased.

A special "weekend prelude" is offered on Friday nights at 7 p.m. before the regular performance at 9 p.m.

Small fry peek under the doors at the musical theater at Tanglewood at a closed rehearsal of music students. The student orchestra is playing some rather unusual contemporary music

FILMED AS BOUND

68

FOURTH WEEK - JULY 22, 23 AND 24.

Los Angeles Times
LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE WEST
D. 839,735 SUN. 1,175,396
JUN 25 1966

American Singers in Tchaikovsky Finals

BY ANDREW WALLER
Exclusive to The Times from Reuters

MOSCOW—Four young American singers have been chosen to sing in the final of the Moscow Tchaikovsky competition. They are Barbara Rondelli, Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes.

The four Americans join other singers from the Soviet Union, Romania and Bulgaria in the final round. The winners are expected to be announced Sunday.

Simon Estes, a 28-year-old bass, sings for the State Opera Theater in Luebeck, West Germany. He was trained at Iowa State University.

Barbara Rondelli, from Kansas, is also planning to work in West Germany.

Veronica Tyler, who comes from Baltimore, plans to sing an aria from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" for the final round.

Jane Marsh has only been a professional singer for a year, beginning her career with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
ADVOCATE
W. 26,500
JUN 25 1966

BROOKLYN HEIGHTS PRESS
Thursday, June 9, 1966

BROOKLYN ACADEMY OF MUSIC — Tenth Annual Excursion to Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will take place July 24th. The public is invited to spend Sunday in the Berkshires, enjoying a concert [illegible] for the low price of $15.00. [illegible] in the price of the ticket are round trip transportation via air-[illegible] rest room, equipped buses of the Campus Coach Lines, [illegible] box lunch at Tanglewood, and [illegible] July [illegible] the [illegible]

Springfield Herald
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Bi-Weekly
Circ. 111,573
JUN 19 1966

YWCA SCHEDULE OF SUMMER TRIPS

Why not plan on taking some trips this summer? If you can't head for faraway places, consider the comfortable and enjoyable bus trips planned by the Springfield YWCA to nearby theatre and concert attractions. The schedule is as follows:

1. Friday evening, July 1 — American Shakespeare Theatre, Stratford, Conn. The play is "Twelfth Night". Bus leaves YWCA, 28 Howard St., at 6 p.m. — time for a snack in Stratford before the 8:30 curtain.

2. Sunday, July 24, matinee — Tanglewood, Boston Symphony. Bus leaves YWCA at 1 p.m., arriving at 2:30.

3. Saturday, August 6, matinee — Jacob's Pillow, Lee, Mass. — American Ballet and Modern Dancers. Bus leaves YWCA at 1 p.m. Stop for a meal on the return trip.

Full information about all trips can be obtained from Mrs. Jean Howard, Adult Program Director, or Mrs. Helen [illegible] at the YWCA office — phone 732-[illegible]. Reservations for the Tanglewood trip on July 1 should be made by Monday, June 27.

BROOKLYN HEIGHTS PRESS
Thursday, June 30, 1966

Tanglewood Program Announced

Mrs. Monroe B. Stein, Chairman of the Tanglewood Excursion Committee of the Women's Committee for the Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts in Brooklyn has announced the program for the Brooklyn Academy's 10th annual Tanglewood excursion.

Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct Beethoven's "Coriolanus" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 6, and Chopin's Piano Concerto in F Minor. Lillian Kallir, world famous pianist will be soloist.

The price for the trip to Tanglewood, the ticket to the concert inside the Music Shed, a box lunch there and a supper snack on the way home, is $15.00.

Campus Coach Lines will again supply their air-conditioned rest room equipped buses for the guests of the Academy of Music. Last year over 300 music lovers in nine buses made the trip.

The reservation deadline for the excursion is Tuesday, July 19 at the Membership Office (third floor) of the Academy of Music. Reservations may be made by mail (if post marked no later than July 15) or in person.

For further information call Mrs. Sarah Waider at STerling 3-6700.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277
JUN 27 1966

NEW YORK SINGER WINS SOVIET PRIZE

Jane Marsh First From U.S. to Get Tchaikovsky Award Since Van Cliburn in '58

GETS $2,750 AND MEDAL

Baltimore Girl and Bulgarian Tie for 2d—Local Basso Places in Men's Division

MOSCOW, June 26 (AP)—Jane Marsh, a 24-year-old soprano from New York, today became the first American to win a prestigious top prize in the Tchaikovsky International Music Contest since Van Cliburn won the piano award in 1958.

A 28-year-old Baltimore girl, Veronica Tyler, tied for second, and Simon Estes, 28, a New York basso, took second prize in the men's division.

Miss Marsh won 2,500 rubles (the equivalent of $2,750) and a gold medal.

Miss Tyler shared her award with Evelina Stroitseva of Bulgaria. First prize in the men's division went to Vladimir Atlantov of the Soviet Union.

The award was announced by Prof. Aleksandr Sveshnikov of the Moscow Conservatory, chairman of the jury.

Kissed by Conductor

Miss Marsh sang arias by Verdi and Tchaikovsky in the final round of competition Friday night. She was cheered and greeted with a wild round of applause.

The conductor, Boris Haikin, kissed her hand when she finished singing—the only time in the contest he had so honored a singer.

Miss Tyler was especially cheered here for her arias from "Porgy and Bess." The Gershwin folk opera is a favorite with Moscow audiences.

This was the first competition for singers in the Tchaikovsky contest. The other divisions are for piano, violin and cello. Entrants from the Soviet Union won the violin and cello divisions.

Helped by the Met

Miss Marsh was born in San Francisco on June 25, 1942. After receiving a degree in music from Oberlin College in Ohio, she traveled to New York to study with Lili Wexberg and Otto Guth. While in New York, she received financial assistance from the Metropolitan Opera and from the Martha Baird Rockefeller Foundation.

The soprano made her professional debut at the opening concert in the Boston Symphony's 1965-66 season. She is scheduled to perform with the Boston Symphony at this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Miss Marsh has also sung with the New York Philharmonic. She made her operatic debut at the Festival of Two Worlds in Spoleto, Italy, last summer.

First place in the Tchaikovsky violin competition was won by Viktor Tretiakov, 19, of the Soviet Union. Erick Friedman, 26, of New York, tied for sixth prize, and Charles Castleman, 25, of Braintree, Mass., won eighth prize.

2 U.S. Cellists Honored

The cello prize went to Karine Georgyan of the Soviet Union. Stephen E. Kates, a 25-year-old graduate of the Juilliard School of Music who now lives in Los Angeles, tied for second place, and Laurence D. Lesser, 27, an instructor at the University of Southern California, took fourth. Nathaniel K. Rosen, 17, of Pasadena, Calif., was awarded a contest diploma.

The three American cellists are students of Gregor Piatigorsky at Southern California.

Three American pianists are among the 14 finalists in the piano competition—James Dick of Hutchinson, Kan., Mischa Dichter of Los Angeles, and Edward Auer of New York. The piano winners are expected to be announced tomorrow.

Tass, via Associated Press

Jane Marsh performing at the competition in Moscow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Telegraph (e)
NASHUA, N. H.
Circ. 14,916
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Post (e)
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Circ. 81,654
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Circ. 40,258
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Call (e)
WOONSOCKET, R. I.
Circ. 29,084
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Circ. 15,399
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 26,024
JUN 27 1966

THE CANTON REPOSITORY
CANTON, OHIO
D. 71,964 SUN. 82,710
JUN 27 1966

AMSTERDAM RECORDER
Monday, June 27, 1966

MOUNT VERNON ARGUS
Monday, June 27, 1966

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Monday, June 27, 1966

OLEAN TIMES HERALD
Monday, June 27, 1966

PORT CHESTER ITEM
Monday, June 27, 1966

NEWBURGH-BEACON NEWS
Monday, June 27, 1966

ROCHESTER TIMES UNION
Monday, June 27, 1966

POUGHKEEPSIE JOURNAL
Monday, June 27, 1966

CATSKILL MAIL
Monday, June 27, 1966

SYRACUSE HERALD JOURNAL
Monday, June 27, 1966

FOURTH WEEK - JULY 22, 23 AND 24.

Los Angeles Times
LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE WEST
D. 839,735 SUN. 1,175,396

JUN 25 1966

American Singers in Tchaikovsky Finals

BY ANDREW WALLER
Exclusive to The Times from Reuters

MOSCOW—Four young American singers have been chosen to sing in the final of the Moscow Tchaikovsky competition. They are Barbara Rondelli, Jane Marsh, Vernoica Tyler and Simon Estes.

The four Americans join other singers from the Soviet Union, Romania and Bulgaria in the final round. The winners are expected to be announced Sunday.

Simon Estes, a 28-year-old bass, sings for the State Opera Theater in Luebeck, West Germany. He was trained at Iowa State University.

Barbara Rondelli, from Kansas, is also planning to work in West Germany.

Veronica Tyler, who comes from Baltimore, plans to sing an aria from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" for the final round.

Jane Marsh has only been a professional singer for a year, beginning her career with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
ADVOCATE,
W. 26,500

JUN 25 1966

BROOKLYN HEIGHTS PRESS
Thursday, June 9, 1966

BROOKLYN ACADEMY OF MUSIC -- Tenth Annual Excursion to Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will take place July 24th. The public is invited to spend Sunday in the Berkshires, enjoying a concert [illegible] the Music Shed of Tanglewood, for the low price of $15.00. [illegible] in the price of the ticket are round trip transportation via air [illegible] rest room equipped buses of the Campus Coach Lines [illegible] lunch at Tanglewood, and a [illegible] July [illegible] the [illegible] call [illegible] STerling 3-6700.

Springfield Herald
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Bi-Weekly
Circ. 111,573

JUN 19 1966

YWCA SCHEDULE OF SUMMER TRIPS

Why not plan on taking some trips this summer? If you can't head for faraway places, consider the comfortable and enjoyable bus trips planned by the Springfield YWCA to nearby theatre and concert attractions. The schedule is as follows:

1. Friday evening, July 1 — American Shakespeare Theatre, Stratford, Conn. The play is "Twelfth Night". Bus leaves YWCA, 26 Howard St., at 6 p.m. — time for a snack in Stratford before the 8:30 curtain.

2. Sunday, July 24, matinee — Tanglewood, Boston Symphony. Bus leaves YWCA at 1 p.m., arriving at 2:30.

3. Saturday, August 6, matinee — Jacob's Pillow, Lee, Mass. — American Ballet and Modern Dancers. Bus leaves YWCA at 1 p.m. Stop for a meal on the return trip.

Full information about all trips can be obtained from Mrs. Jean Howard, Adult Program Director, or Mrs. Helen Jones at the YWCA office — phone 732-[illegible]21. Reservations for the Stratford trip on July 1 should be made by Monday, June 27.

BROOKLYN HEIGHTS PRESS
Thursday, June 30, 1966

Tanglewood Program Announced

Mrs. Monroe B. Stein, Chairman of the Tanglewood Excursion Committee of the Women's Committee for the Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts in Brooklyn has announced the program for the Brooklyn Academy's 10th annual Tanglewood excursion.

Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct Beethoven's "Coriolanus" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 6, and Chopin's Piano Concerto in F Minor. Lillian Kallir, world famous pianist will be soloist.

The price for the trip to Tanglewood, the ticket to the concert inside the Music Shed, a box lunch there and a supper snack on the way home, is $15.00.

Campus Coach Lines will again supply their air-conditioned, rest room equipped buses for the guests of the Academy of Music. Last year over 300 music lovers in nine buses made the trip.

The reservation deadline for the excursion is Tuesday, July 19 at the Membership Office (third floor) of the Academy of Music. Reservations may be made by mail (if post marked no later than July 15) or in person.

For further information call Mrs. Sarah Waider at STerling 3-6700.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277

JUN 27 1966

NEW YORK SINGER WINS SOVIET PRIZE

Jane Marsh First From U.S. to Get Tchaikovsky Award Since Van Cliburn in '58

GETS $2,750 AND MEDAL

Baltimore Girl and Bulgarian Tie for 2d—Local Basso Places in Men's Division

MOSCOW, June 26 (AP)—Jane Marsh, a 24-year-old soprano from New York, today became the first American to win a prestigious top prize in the Tchaikovsky International Music Contest since Van Cliburn won the piano award in 1958.

A 28-year-old Baltimore girl, Veronica Tyler, tied for second, and Simon Estes, 28, a New York basso, took second prize in the men's division.

Miss Marsh won 2,500 rubles (the equivalent of $2,750) and a gold medal.

Miss Tyler shared her award with Evelina Stroitseva of Bulgaria. First prize in the men's division went to Vladimir Atlantov of the Soviet Union.

The award was announced by Prof. Aleksandr Sveshnikov of the Moscow Conservatory, chairman of the jury.

Kissed by Conductor

Miss Marsh sang arias by Verdi and Tchaikovsky in the final round of competition Friday night. She was cheered and greeted with a wild round of applause.

The conductor, Boris Haikin, kissed her hand when she finished singing—the only time in the contest he had so honored a singer.

Miss Tyler was especially cheered here for her arias from "Porgy and Bess." The Gershwin folk opera is a favorite with Moscow audiences.

This was the first competition for singers in the Tchaikovsky contest. The other divisions are for piano, violin and cello. Entrants from the Soviet Union won the violin and cello divisions.

Helped by the Met

Miss Marsh was born in San Francisco on June 25, 1942. After receiving a degree in music from Oberlin College in Ohio, she traveled to New York to study with Lili Wexberg and Otto Guth. While in New York, she received financial assistance from the Metropolitan Opera and from the Martha Baird Rockefeller Foundation.

The soprano made her professional debut at the opening concert in the Boston Symphony's 1965-66 season. She is scheduled to perform with the Boston Symphony at this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Miss Marsh has also sung with the New York Philharmonic. She made her operatic debut at the Festival of Two Worlds in Spoleto, Italy, last summer.

First place in the Tchaikovsky violin competition was won by Viktor Tretyakov, 19, of the Soviet Union. Erick Friedman, 26, of New York, tied for sixth prize, and Charles Castleman, 25, of Braintree, Mass., won eighth prize.

3 U.S. Cellists Honored

The cello prize went to Karine Georgyan of the Soviet Union. Stephen E. Kates, a 25-year-old graduate of the Juilliard School of Music who now lives in Los Angeles, tied for second place, and Laurence D. Lesser, 27, an instructor at the University of Southern California, took fourth. Nathaniel K. Rosen, 17, of Pasadena, Calif., was awarded a contest diploma.

The three American cellists are students of Gregor Piatigorsky at Southern California.

Three American pianists are among the 14 finalists in the piano competition—James Dick of Hutchinson, Kan., Mischa Dichter of Los Angeles and Edward Auer of New York. The piano winners are expected to be announced tomorrow.

Tass, via Associated Press

Jane Marsh performing at the competition in Moscow.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Telegraph (e)
NASHUA, N. H.
Circ. 14,916
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Post (e)
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Circ. 81,654
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald News (e)
FALL RIVER, Mass.
Circ. 40,258
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Call (e)
WOONSOCKET, R. I.
Circ. 29,084
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Circ. 15,399
JUN 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 26,024
JUN 27 1966

THE CANTON REPOSITORY
CANTON, OHIO
D. 71,964 SUN. 82,710
JUN 27 1966

AMSTERDAM RECORDER
Monday, June 27, 1966

MOUNT VERNON ARGUS
Monday, June 27, 1966

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Monday, June 27, 1966

OLEAN TIMES HERALD
Monday, June 27, 1966

PORT CHESTER ITEM
Monday, June 27, 1966

NEWBURGH-BEACON NEWS
Monday, June 27, 1966

ROCHESTER TIMES UNION
Monday, June 27, 1966

POUGHKEEPSIE JOURNAL
Monday, June 27, 1966

CATSKILL MAIL
Monday, June 27, 1966

SYRACUSE HERALD JOURNAL
Monday, June 27, 1966

4.

69

Variety
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Weekly Amusements
JUN 29 1966

Broadway

Gary Youngman, son of the comic, joined with Alan Gordon in a new firm servicing ad agencies with television plugs.

Rosalie and Joseph Euripedes Levine celebrated their 28th anni last week (19) on the family yacht, strictly avec family.

Mike Manuche's 52d street showbiz-sports eatery shuttering July 2-19 for renovation of premises and staff recuperation.

Restaurant Associates exec George Lang turning author of "Hungarian Cookbook" for K. S. Giniger Pub. Corp.

Frank Sinatra has been named honorary chairman of the music industry division of the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York.

Jewish Theatrical Guild of America elected Harry E. Gould, Abe Lastfogel, Nat Lefkowitz, William Morris Jr., Robert K. Shapiro and Jonas T. Silverstone as directors.

Paul Kaijzer, an Amsterdam producer and theatre owner, arrived in New York last week to tie up several details for his Netherlands edition of "Fiddler on the Roof," due to open next December.

The Bob Considines opened their Central Park South digs to a cocktailery for Italian actress Sandra ("Juliet of the Spirits") Milo. On hand were Carlo Ponti, Virginia Graham and Jack Dempsey.

Brooklyn Academy of Music's 10th annual excursion to Tanglewood, including concert by the Boston Symphony, scheduled for July 24. For $15 ticket, buyer gets round trip transport on airconditioned bus, box lunch, concert and supper on way back.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 177,755
JUN 28 1966

By Carolyn Mason Jones

Happy winner

Jane Marsh, who sang the soprano solos last season in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the Boston Symphony, has won first prize in the noted Tchaikovsky Competition, just held in Moscow. She is the first American since Van Cliburn to win the top award.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
JUN 30 1966

Moscow Winners At Lenox

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX—Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the singing competition of the recent Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow, will make her first appearance in the United States since receiving the coveted award at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood concert Sunday, July 24. The young American soprano will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, basso, the other American prize winners in the singing competition.

Miss Marsh, first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, made her professional debut in this country at the opening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1965-1966 season, when she appeared in seven Boston performances.

Prior to the Moscow contest she had been engaged to perform in Mozart's "Magic Flute" at Tanglewood on August 6 and again in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the Berkshire Festival's final concert of the Summer, August 21.

Veronica Tyler, who tied for second prize, sang with the orchestra in two Bach concerts in the Berkshires last Summer and again during the past Winter season in Boston Symphony performances in Boston and New York.

Simon Estes, third prize winner in the men's division, received a fellowship from the Berkshire Music Center for the current season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177
JUN 30 1966

Jane Marsh To Sing at Tanglewood

Won Top Prize In Tchaikovsky Music Contest

LENOX — Jane Marsh, first prizewinner in the singing competition of the recent Tchaikovsky International Music competition, will make her first appearance in the United States, since receiving the coveted award, at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood concert Sunday, July 24.

The young American soprano will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, basso, the other American prizewinners in the singing competition.

Made Debut With BSO

Miss Marsh, the first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, made her professional debut in this country at the opening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1965-66 season when she appeared in seven Boston performances of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9. Prior to the Moscow contest, she had been engaged to perform in Mozart's "Magic Flute" at Tanglewood on Aug. 6, and in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the Berkshire Festival's final concert of the summer, Aug. 21.

Veronica Tyler, who tied for second prize, sang with the orchestra in two Bach concerts in the Berkshires last summer. During the past winter, she appeared in the BSO's Boston and New York performances of Schumann's scenes from Goethe's "Faust."

Before going to the Tchaikovsky contest, Simon Estes, third prizewinner in the men's division, received a fellowship from the Berkshire Music Center for the season. He has also been engaged by Gunther Schuller, chairman of the music center's contemporary music activities, to sing in the world premiere of the composer's opera, "The Visitation," in October 1966 at Hamburg, Germany. Mr. Estes is expected to arrive at Tanglewood in a few days.

Music Committee Selection

The three American singers were among those selected to participate in the Tchaikovsky International music competition by the music committee of the Institute of International Education.

Winners of the Moscow contest had been invited to appear as soloists for the Berkshire Festival concerts of Aug. 13 and 14; at that time, prizewinners of the instrumental competitions will be heard. Program details on these concerts will be announced later. The revised festival program for Sunday, July 24, will be announced shortly after the return of the three singers to this country.

Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, considered it appropriate to change the previously announced program for July 24 to bring the Tchaikovsky prizewinners before the Tanglewood audience. Lilian Kallir, the originally scheduled soloist for the program, has consented to share the stage with her colleagues.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
ADVOCATE
W. 26,500
JULY 2 1966

BROOKLYN ACADEMY OF MUSIC... The chairman of the Tanglewood Excursion Committee has announced the program for the annual trip to Tanglewood. The bargain price for the trip, the ticket for the concert inside the Music Shed, a box lunch there and a supper snack on the way home is $15.00. Campus Coach Lines will again supply their superb air conditioned, rest room equipped buses for the guests. Last year over 300 music lovers in nine buses made the trip. Reservation deadline is July 19. For information, call Mrs. Sarah Walder at STerling 3-6700.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
JUN 27 1966

Jane Marsh, a 24-year-old soprano who made her professional debut with the Boston Symphony last season, won the Tchaikovsky International Singer's contest in Moscow. She sung arias by Verdi and Tchaikovsky in the final round. First prize is $2750 and a gold medal, plus international prestige of the kind carried off by Van Cliburn when he won the piano section of the competition in 1958.

DAILY NEWS
NEW YORK'S PICTURE NEWSPAPER
D. 2,097,578 SUN. 3,070,836
JUN 30 1966

Tanglewood Gets Moscow Winner

Jane Marsh, first-prize winner in the singing competition of the Tchaikovsky international music contest in Moscow, will make her first appearance in the United States since receiving the award at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood concert July 24. The young soprano will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, Basso, the other American prize winners in the competition. Miss Marsh was the first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since pianist Van Cliburn won in 1958.

The Philadelphia Inquirer
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
D. 522,941 SUN. 956,206
JUL 3 1966

Tanglewood to host Moscow winners

Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, prize winners in the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition for singers, will appear [illegible] with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. The program will be announced.

Miss Marsh, the first prize winner, had already been engaged to sing Aug. 6 in the Tanglewood performance of "The Magic Flute" and in the closing Beethoven Symphony No. 9 on Aug. 21.

Erich Leinsdorf had announced that winners in all categories at Moscow would be invited to perform Aug. 13-14, but since Russians captured the top violin, cello and piano prizes and are unable to accept the invitation, those programs will be announced later with other soloists.

New England Newsclip Agency
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
JUN 30 1966

Moscow Winner To Appear Here

Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the singing competition of the recent Tchaikovsky International Music Contest in Moscow, will make her first subsequent appearance in the United States at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood concert on Sunday, July 24. The young soprano will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, basso, the other American prize winners in the vocal competition.

Miss Marsh, the first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, made her professional debut in this country at the opening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1965-1966 season when she appeared in seven performances of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 66,826
JUN 30 1966

First Prize Soprano To Be at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass. —(AP)— Jane Marsh, the soprano who won first prize at the Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow, will make her first appearance in the United States since the contest in a concert at Tanglewood on July 29.

Miss Marsh, the first American to win a first prize in the competition since Van Cliburn, the pianist, did in 1958, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Tanglewood officials announced yesterday. She will appear with Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, basso, other American winners in the singing competition.

Miss Marsh also will apear Aug. 6 and Aug. 21 in accordance with commitments made before the contest.

4.

69 37

Variety
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Weekly Amusements

JUN 29 1966

Broadway

Gary Youngman, son of the comic, joined with Alan Gordon in a new firm servicing ad agencies with television plugs.

Rosalie and Joseph Euripedes Levine celebrated their 28th anni last week (19) on the family yacht, strictly avec family.

Mike Manuche's 52d street showbiz-sports eatery shuttering July 2-19 for renovation of premises and staff recuperation.

Restaurant Associates exec George Lang turning author of "Hungarian Cookbook" for K. S. Giniger Pub. Corp.

Frank Sinatra has been named honorary chairman of the music industry division of the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York.

Jewish Theatrical Guild of America elected Harry E. Gould, Abe Lastfogel, Nat Lefkowitz, William Morris Jr., Robert K. Shapiro and Jonas T. Silverstone as directors.

Paul Kaijzer, an Amsterdam producer and theatre owner, arrived in New York last week to tie up several details for his Netherlands edition of "Fiddler on the Roof," due to open next December.

The Bob Considines opened their Central Park South digs to a cocktailery for Italian actress Sandra ("Juliet of the Spirits") Milo. On hand were Carlo Ponti, Virginia Graham and Jack Dempsey.

Brooklyn Academy of Music's 10th annual excursion to Tanglewood, including concert by the Boston Symphony, scheduled for July 24. For $15 ticket, buyer gets round trip transport on airconditioned bus, box lunch, concert and supper on way back.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 177,755

JUN 28 1966

By Carolyn Mason Jones

Happy winner

Jane Marsh, who sang the soprano solos last season in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the Boston Symphony, has won first prize in the noted Tchaikovsky Competition, just held in Moscow. She is the first American since Van Cliburn to win the top award.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
ADVOCATE
W. 26,500

JULY 2 1966

BROOKLYN ACADEMY OF MUSIC... The chairman of the Tanglewood Excursion Committee has announced the program for the annual trip to Tanglewood. The bargain price for the trip, the ticket for the concert inside the Music Shed, a box lunch there and a supper snack on the way home is $15.00. Campus Coach Lines will again supply their superb air conditioned, rest room equipped buses for the guests. Last year over 300 music lovers in nine buses made the trip. Reservation deadline is July 19. For information, call Mrs. Sarah Walder at STerling 3-6700.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733

JUN 27 1966

Jane Marsh, a 24-year-old soprano who made her professional debut with the Boston Symphony last season, won the Tchaikovsky International Singer's contest in Moscow. She sung arias by Verdi and Tchaikovsky in the final round. First prize is $2750 and a gold medal, plus international prestige of the kind carried off by Van Cliburn when he won the piano section of the competition in 1958.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733

JUN 30 1966

Moscow Winners At Lenox

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX—Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the singing competition of the recent Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow, will make her first appearance in the United States since receiving the coveted award at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood concert Sunday, July 24. The young American soprano will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, basso, the other American prize winners in the singing competition.

Miss Marsh, first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, made her professional debut in this country at the opening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1965-1966 season, when she appeared in seven Boston performances.

Prior to the Moscow contest she had been engaged to perform in Mozart's "Magic Flute" at Tanglewood on August 6 and again in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the Berkshire Festival's final concert of the Summer, August 21.

Veronica Tyler, who tied for second prize, sang with the orchestra in two Bach concerts in the Berkshires last Summer and again during the past Winter season in Boston Symphony performances in Boston and New York.

Simon Estes, third prize winner in the men's division, received a fellowship from the Berkshire Music Center for the current season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,177

JUN 30 1966

Jane Marsh To Sing at Tanglewood

Won Top Prize In Tchaikovsky Music Contest

LENOX — Jane Marsh, first prizewinner in the singing competition of the recent Tchaikovsky International Music competition, will make her first appearance in the United States, since receiving the coveted award, at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood concert Sunday, July 24.

The young American soprano will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, basso, the other American prizewinners in the singing competition.

Made Debut With BSO

Miss Marsh, the first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, made her professional debut in this country at the opening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1965-66 season when she appeared in seven Boston performances of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9. Prior to the Moscow contest, she had been engaged to perform in Mozart's "Magic Flute" at Tanglewood on Aug. 6, and in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the Berkshire Festival's final concert of the summer, Aug. 21.

Veronica Tyler, who tied for second prize, sang with the orchestra in two Bach concerts in the Berkshires last summer. During the past winter, she appeared in the BSO's Boston and New York performances of Schumann's scenes from Goethe's "Faust."

Before going to the Tchaikovsky contest, Simon Estes, third prizewinner in the men's division, received a fellowship from the Berkshire Music Center for the season. He has also been engaged by Gunther Schuller, chairman of the music center's contemporary music activities, to sing in the world premiere of the composer's opera, "The Visitation," in October 1966 at Hamburg, Germany. Mr. Estes is expected to arrive at Tanglewood in a few days.

Music Committee Selection

The three American singers were among those selected to participate in the Tchaikovsky International music competition by the music committee of the Institute of International Education.

Winners of the Moscow contest had been invited to appear as soloists for the Berkshire Festival concerts of Aug. 13 and 14; at that time, prizewinners of the instrumental competitions will be heard. Program details on these concerts will be announced later. The revised festival program for Sunday, July 24, will be announced shortly after the return of the three singers to this country.

Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, considered it appropriate to change the previously announced program for July 24 to bring the Tchaikovsky prizewinners before the Tanglewood audience. Lilian Kallir, the originally scheduled soloist for the program, has consented to share the stage with her colleagues.

DAILY NEWS
NEW YORK
D. 2,097,578 SUN. 3,670,835

JUN 30 1966

Tanglewood Gets Moscow Winner

Jane Marsh, first-prize winner in the singing competition of the Tchaikovsky international music contest in Moscow, will make her first appearance in the United States since receiving the award at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood concert July 24. The young soprano will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, Basso, the other American prize winners in the competition. Miss Marsh was the first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since pianist Van Cliburn won in 1958.

The Philadelphia Inquirer
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
D. 522,000 SUN. 1,056,503

JUL

Tanglewood to host Moscow winners

Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, prize winners in the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition for singers, will appear July 24 with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. The program will be announced.

Miss Marsh, the first prize winner, had already been engaged to sing Aug. 6 in the Tanglewood performance of "The Magic Flute" and in the closing Beethoven Symphony No. 9 on Aug. 21.

Erich Leinsdorf had announced that winners in all categories at Moscow would be invited to perform Aug. 13-14, but since Russians captured the top violin, cello and piano prizes and are unable to accept the invitation, those programs will be announced later with other soloists.

New England Newsclip Agency
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508

JUN 30 1966

Moscow Winner To Appear Here

Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the singing competition of the recent Tchaikovsky International Music Contest in Moscow, will make her first subsequent appearance in the United States at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood concert on Sunday, July 24. The young soprano will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, basso, the other American prize winners in the vocal competition.

Miss Marsh, the first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, made her professional debut in this country at the opening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1965-1966 season when she appeared in seven performances of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 66,826

JUN 30 1966

First Prize Soprano To Be at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass. —(AP)— Jane Marsh, the soprano who won first prize at the Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow, will make her first appearance in the United States since the contest in a concert at Tanglewood on July 29.

Miss Marsh, the first American to win a first prize in the competition since Van Cliburn, the pianist, did in 1958, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Tanglewood officials announced yesterday. She will appear with Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, basso, other American winners in the singing competition.

Miss Marsh also will apear Aug. 6 and Aug. 21 in accordance with commitments made before the contest.

10

Albany Knickerbocker News
Friday, July 1, 1966

Jane Marsh Booked For July Concert

NE

LENOX, Mass.—Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the singing competition of the recent Tchaikovsky International Competition in Moscow, will make her first appearance in the United States (since receiving the coveted award) at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood concert on July 24.

The young American soprano will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano, and basso Simon Estes, the other American prize winners in the singing competition.

Miss Marsh, the first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, made her professional debut in this country at the opening concerts of the Boston Symphony's 1965-66 season when she appeared in seven Boston performances of Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9."

Prior to the Moscow contest she had been engaged to perform in Mozart's "Magic Flute" at Tanglewood on Aug. 6 and again in Beethoven's Ninth, the work scheduled to end the Tanglewood concert on Aug. 21, thus enabling Tanglewood audiences to hear Miss Marsh on three occasions this summer.

Miss Tyler, who tied for second prize, sang with the orchestra in two Bach concerts at Tanglewood last summer and again during the past winter season in the Boston Symphony performances of Schumann's Scenes from Goethe's "Faust."

VERONICA TYLER

Before going to the Moscow competition Mr. Estes, third prize winner in men's division, received a fellowship from the Berkshire Music Center for the current session.

He will also sing in the world premiere of Gunther Schuller's opera "The Visitation," to be performed in October in Hamburg, Germany.

The revised festival program for July 24 will be announced shortly after the three singers return to this country.

Lillian Kallir, the announced piano soloist for the day, will share the stage with her prize-winning colleagues and will play the Chopin Concert in F Major.

LATHAM TOWNSMAN
Thursday, July 7, 1966

AREA ARTS theatre dance concert painting

JULY CONCERT — Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the singing competition of the recent Tchaikovsky International Competition in Moscow, will make her first appearance in the United States since receiving the coveted award at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood Concert on July 24. She will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano and basso Simon Estes, the other American prize winners in the singing competition. The revised festival program for July 24 will be announced shortly after the three singers return to this country. Lillian Kallir, the announced piano soloist for the day, will share the stage with her prize-winning colleagues and will play the Chopin Concert in F Major.

* * * * *

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
W. 167,000

JUL 2 1966

A day's excursion to Tanglewood and back, being offered by the Brooklyn Academy of Music, includes bus transportation to and from Lenox, Massachusetts, a reshed seat ticket for Sunday afternoon's concert; a box lunch to be enjoyed noon the grounds, and a snack on the return trip. Cost is $15 and the date is July 24. Program includes Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture, Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, and Chopin's Piano Concerto in F Minor. Erich Leinsdorf conducts, and Lillian Kallir is soloist. Reservation deadline by mail is July 15; write the Academy, 30 Lafayette Place, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11217. Phone Mrs. Walder, ST 3-6700.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331

JUN 30 1966

Prize Winners Appear July 24 At Tanglewood

Jane Marsh to Head Top Singers in Moscow Competition

By R. C. HAMMERICH
Union Music Critic

LENOX — Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the singing competition of the recent Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow, will make her first appearance in the United States since receiving the coveted award at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood concert Sunday, July 24.

Miss Tyler to Sing

The young American soprano will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, basso, the other American prize winners in the singing competition.

Miss Marsh, the first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, made her professional debut in this country at the opening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1965-1966 season when she appeared in seven Boston performances of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Before the Moscow contest she had been engaged to perform in Mozarts "Magic Flute" at Tanglewood Aug. 6 and again in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the Berkshire Festival's final concert, Aug. 21, thus enabling Tanglewood audiences to hear Miss Marsh on three occasions this summer.

Won Second Prize

Veronica Tyler, who tied for second prize, sang with the orchestra in two Bach concerts in the Berkshires last summer and again during the past winter in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Boston and New York performances bf Schumann's sequences from Goethe's "Faust."

Before going to the Tchaikovsky contest Simon Estes, third prize winner in the men's division, received a fellowship from the Berkshire Music Center for the current session. He also has been engaged by Ghunther Schuller, chairman of the Music Center's contemporary music activities, to sing in the world premiere of the composer's opera, "The visitation," in October, 1966, at Hamburg, Germany. Estes is expected to arrive at Tanglewood in a few days.

Leinsdorf Pleased

Of the forthcoming concert Erich Leinsdorf, music director said, "I could not be happier if my own children had won a major prize, and it is a particular pleasure for me that the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present these three young American singers in a concert at Tanglewood—their first in this country since their success in Moscow. I am proud and grateful that the orchestra and I have already worked closely with two of these young artists and that the third will join us at the Berkshire Music Center this summer."

The three American singers were among those selected to participate in the Tchaikovsky International Music competition by the music committee of the Institute of International Education.

BILLBOARD
NEW YORK, N. Y.
W. 50,000

JULY 9 1966

U. S. Soprano Wins Award In Tchaikovsky Tourney

MOSCOW — Soprano Jane Marsh of New York won a top prize in the Tchaikovsky International Music Competition on June 26, the first American first-prize winner since 1958, when the piano award launched a successful concert and recording career for Van Cliburn. Miss Marsh, 24, sang Verdi and Tchaikovsky arias in her final round of competition on June 24.

She made her professional debut at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's opening concert of its 1965-1966 season and is scheduled to appear with the orchestra at Tanglewood this summer. While studying voice in New York, the San Francisco native received financial assistance from the Metropolitan Opera and the Martha Baird Rockefeller Foundation. In addition to the gold medal, Miss Marsh received the equivalent of [illegible] for the competition, [illegible] for singers in [illegible] series.

[illegible] Tyler, 28, of Baltimore, shared second-place honors with [illegible] Stroitseva of [illegible] Atlantov of [illegible] was first and bass Simon Estes of New York, second in the men's division.

Viktor Tretyakov, 19, of the Soviet Union finished first in the violin competition; Erick Friedman, 26, of New York tied for sixth, while Charles Castleman, 25, of Braintree, Mass., finished eighth. Among cello winners were Karine Georgyan of the Soviet Union, first; Stephen E. Kates, 25, of Los Angeles, a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music, tied for second, and Laurence D. Lesser, 27, an instructor at the University of Southern California, fourth. The two American winners and Nathiel K. Rosen, 17, of Pasadena, Calif., who received a contest diploma, are students of Gregor Piatigorsky at Southern California.

Gregory Sokolov, 16, of the Soviet Union won the piano competition last Wednesday (29), topping Mischa Bichter, 20, of Beverly Hills, Calif., who was warmly applauded by the Russian audience. Edward Auer, 24, of Los Angeles, Dichter's roommate at Juilliard, tied for fifth with Edward Dick, 25, of Hutchinson, Kan., who gained his master's in music from the University of Texas in 1963. Francois Thiollier of Manhasset, L. I., a native of France, was sixth.

NEW YORK POST
Tuesday, July 12, 1966

Soprano Jane Marsh, the first American to win the [illegible] Competition [illegible] 1958, will sing [illegible] at Tanglewood with the Boston Symphony on July 24th.

The News American
BALTIMORE, MD.
D. 211,932 SUN. 310,264

JULY 13 1966

SINGER — Veronia Tyler, Baltimore soprano who won 2nd prize at International Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow, will be soloist with Boston Symphony in Tanglewood concert, at Lenox, Mass., July 24.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331

JUL 11 1966

Tanglewood Trip

According to the Springfield YWCA, there is still time to register for the July 24 trip to Tanglewood, sponsored by the YW, to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Erich Leinsdorf conducting. The reasonable cost includes bus fare and ticket for the matinee performance. The bus leaves the YW, 26 Howard St., at 1. Anyone interested may contact the YW for reservations. Arrangements are in charge of Miss Jean Howard, program director and Mrs. Helen Jones.

Instrumental Winners

Winners of the Tchaikovsky contest had been invited to appear as soloists for the Berkshire Festival concerts of Aug. 13 and 14, and at that time prize winners of the instrumental will be heard.

The Soviet prize winners will be unable to appear at Tanglewood and program details on these concerts will be announced later. The revised festival program for Sunday, July 24, will be announced shortly after the return of the three singers to this country.

Leindorf has deemed it particularly appropriate to change the announced program for July 24 [illegible] these young singers [illegible] the Tanglewood audiences. Lillian Kallir, the announced soloist for that [illegible] will share the stage with her prize-winning colleagues and will play the Chopin Concerto in F Major.

Albany Knickerbocker News
Friday, July 1, 1966

Jane Marsh Booked For July Concert

NE

LENOX, Mass.—Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the singing competition of the recent Tchaikovsky International Competition in Moscow, will make her first appearance in the United States (since receiving the coveted award) at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood concert on July 24.

The young American soprano will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano, and basso Simon Estes, the other American prize winners in the singing competition.

VERONICA TYLER

Miss Marsh, the first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, made her professional debut in this country at the opening concerts of the Boston Symphony's 1965-66 season when she appeared in seven Boston performances of Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9."

Prior to the Moscow contest she had been engaged to perform in Mozart's "Magic Flute" at Tanglewood on Aug. 6 and again in Beethoven's Ninth, the work scheduled to end the Tanglewood concert on Aug. 21, thus enabling Tanglewood audiences to hear Miss Marsh on three occasions this summer.

Miss Tyler, who tied for second prize, sang with the orchestra in two Bach concerts at Tanglewood last summer and again during the past winter season in the Boston Symphony performances of Schumann's Secenses from Goethe's "Faust."

Before going to the Moscow competition Mr. Estes, third prize winner in men's division, received a fellowship from the Berkshire Music Center for the current session.

He will also sing in the world premiere of Gunther Schuller's opera "The Visitation," to be performed in October in Hamburg, Germany.

The revised festival program for July 24 will be announced shortly after the three singers return to this country.

Lillian Kallir, the announced piano soloist for the day, will share the stage with her prize-winning colleagues and will play the Chopin Concert in F Major.

BILLBOARD
NEW YORK, N. Y.
W. 50,000

JULY 9 1966

U. S. Soprano Wins Award In Tchaikovsky Tourney

MOSCOW — Soprano Jane Marsh of New York won a top prize in the Tchaikovsky International Music Competition on June 26, the first American first-prize winner since 1958, when the piano award launched a successful concert and recording career for Van Cliburn. Miss Marsh, 24, sang Verdi and Tchaikovsky arias in her final round of competition on June 24.

She made her professional debut at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's opening concert of the 1965-1966 season and is slated to appear with that orchestra at Tanglewood this summer. While studying voice in New York, the San Francisco native received financial assistance from the Metropolitan Opera and the Martha Baird Rockefeller Foundation. In addition to a gold medal, Miss Marsh received the equivalent of $2,750 in cash. The competition was the first for singers in the Tchaikovsky series.

Veronica Tyler, 28, of Baltimore, shared second-place honors with Edelina Stroitseva of Bulgaria. Vladimir Atlantov of the Soviet Union was first and bass Simon Estes of New York, second in the men's division.

Viktor Tretyakov, 19, of the Soviet Union finished first in the violin competition; Erick Friedman, 26, of New York tied for sixth, while Charles Castleman, 25, of Braintree, Mass., finished eighth. Among cello winners were Karine Georgyan of the Soviet Union, first; Stephen E. Kates, 25, of Los Angeles, a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music, tied for second, and Laurence D. Lesser, 27, an instructor at the University of Southern California, fourth. The two American winners and Nathiel K. Rosen, 17, of Pasadena, Calif., who received a contest diploma, are students of Gregor Piatigorsky at Southern California.

Gregory Sokolov, 16, of the Soviet Union won the piano competition last Wednesday (29), topping Mischa Bichter, 20, of Beverly Hills, Calif., who was warmly applauded by the Russian audience. Edward Auer, 24, of Los Angeles, Dichter's roommate at Juilliard, tied for fifth with Edward Dick, 25, of Hutchinson, Kan., who gained his master's in music from the University of Texas in 1963. Francois Thiollier of Manhasset, L. I., a native of France, was sixth.

LATHAM TOWNSMAN
Thursday, July 7, 1966

AREA ARTS — theatre, dance, concert, painting

JULY CONCERT — Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the singing competition of the recent Tchaikovsky International Competition in Moscow, will make her first appearance in the United States since receiving the coveted award at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood Concert on July 24. She will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano and basso Simon Estes, the other American prize winners in the singing competition. The revised festival program for July 24 will be announced shortly after the three singers return to this country. Lillian Kallir, the announced piano soloist for the day, will share the stage with her prize-winning colleagues and will play the Chopin Concert in F. Major.

* * * * *

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
W. 167,000

JUL 2 1966

A day's excursion to Tanglewood and back, being offered by the Brooklyn Academy of Music, includes bus transportation to and from Lenox, Massachusetts; a shed seat ticket for Sunday afternoon's concert; a box lunch to be enjoyed on the grounds, and a snack on the return trip. Cost is $15 and the date is July 24. Program includes Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture, Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, and Chopin's Piano Concerto in F Minor. Erich Leinsdorf conducts, and Lillian Kallir is soloist. Reservation deadline by mail is July 15; write the Academy, 30 Lafayette Place, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11217. Phone Mrs. Walder, ST 3-6700.

NEW YORK POST
Tuesday, July 12, 1966

Soprano Jane Marsh, the first American to win the Tchaikovsky Competition since 1958, will appear at Tanglewood with the Boston Symphony on July 24th.

The News American
BALTIMORE, MD.
D. 211,932 SUN. 210,294

JULY 1 3 1966

SINGER — Veronia Tyler, Baltimore soprano who won 2nd prize at International Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow, will be soloist with Boston Symphony in Tanglewood concert, at Lenox, Mass., July 24.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331

JUL 1 1 1966

Tanglewood Trip

According to the Springfield YWCA, there is still time to register for the July 24 trip to Tanglewood, sponsored by the YW, to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Erich Leinsdorf conducting. The reasonable cost includes bus fare and ticket for the matinee performance. The bus leaves the YW, 26 Howard St., at 1. Anyone interested may contact the YW for reservations. Arrangements are in charge of Miss Jean Howard, program director and Mrs. Helen Jones.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331

JUN 3 0 1966

Prize Winners Appear July 24 At Tanglewood

Jane Marsh to Head Top Singers in Moscow Competition

By R. C. HAMMERICH
Union Music Critic

LENOX — Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the singing competition of the recent Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow, will make her first appearance in the United States since receiving the coveted award at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood concert Sunday, July 24.

Miss Tyler to Sing

The young American soprano will be joined by Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, basso, the other American prize winners in the singing competition.

Miss Marsh, the first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, made her professional debut in this country at the opening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1965-1966 season when she appeared in seven Boston performances of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Before the Moscow contest she had been engaged to perform in Mozarts "Magic Flute" at Tanglewood Aug. 6 and again in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the Berkshire Festival's final concert, Aug. 21, thus enabling Tanglewood audiences to hear Miss Marsh on three occasions this summer.

Won Second Prize

Veronica Tyler, who tied for second prize, sang with the orchestra in two Bach concerts in the Berkshires last summer and again during the past winter in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Boston and New York performances of Schumann's sequences from Goethe's "Faust."

Before going to the Tchaikovsky contest Simon Estes, third prize winner in the men's division, received a fellowship from the Berkshire Music Center for the current session. He also has been engaged by Ghunther Schuller, chairman of the Music Center's contemporary music activities, to sing in the world premiere of the composer's opera, "The visitation," in October, 1966, at Hamburg, Germany. Estes is expected to arrive at Tanglewood in a few days.

Leinsdorf Pleased

Of the forthcoming concert Erich Leinsdorf, music director said, "I could not be happier if my own children had won a major prize, and it is a particular pleasure for me that the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present these three young American singers in a concert at Tanglewood—their first in this country since their success in Moscow. I am proud and gratified that the orchestra and I have already worked closely with two of these young artists and that the third will join us at the Berkshire Music Center this summer."

The three American singers were among those selected to participate in the Tchaikovsky International Music competition by the music committee of the Institute of International Education.

Instrumental Winners

Winners of the Tchaikovsky contest had been invited to appear as soloists for the Berkshire Festival concerts of Aug. 13 and 14, and at that time prize winners of the instrumental will be heard.

The Soviet prize winners will be unable to appear at Tanglewood and program details on these concerts will be announced later. The revised festival program for Sunday, July 24, will be announced shortly after the return of the three singers to this country.

Leindorf has deemed it particularly appropriate to change the announced program for July 24 to bring these young singers before the Tanglewood audience. Lillian Kallir, the announced soloist for that day, has consented to share the stage with her prize-winning colleagues and will play the Chopin Concerto in F Major.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277
JUL 1 2 1966

Jane Marsh Tells of Tough Russian Competition

Soprano, Back in U.S., Found Audiences 'Marvelous'

She Will Sing at Tanglewood Four Times This Summer

By THEODORE STRONGIN

Thoroughly poised and in command of herself, Jane Marsh, the current darling of Moscow, returned home to the United States in triumph yesterday.

During the last five weeks in the Soviet capital, the soprano sang, conquered the hearts of music lovers and made off with a first prize in the Tchaikovsky International Music Competition. She was the first American to win a first Tchaikovsky prize since the pianist, Van Cliburn, won in 1958.

Miss Marsh was calm but happy yesterday over her victory. "Even if I hadn't won, it was an experience I never would miss. I'd go back and do it again even if I didn't win," she said. "They are marvelous people," she said of her Russian fans.

Faced Tough Competition

In Moscow, she survived three exacting rounds (tours, they are called there) of the competition. Her greatest triumph came in the Letter Scene from Tchaikovsky's "Eugen Onegin," where she met the Russians on their own territory. "Every single one of them knows it from beginning to end," she said. "Pronunciation is especially difficult because the speech is very flowery." She out-Russianed several Russians in the course of winning the competition.

Attractive, tall and a brunette, Miss Marsh has been a musician for a scant three years. "It was an impulsive decision," she said. She graduated from Oberlin College in Ohio with plans to do graduate work in psychology.

Suddenly, she said, she decided to be a singer. The following season she came to New York to study with Otto Guth and Lili Wexberg.

There has been nothing impulsive about her career since. Her talent was quickly recognized and she received financial help from the Metropolitan Opera and from the Martha Baird Rockefeller Foundation. "I was able to study with a capital S," she said.

The New York Times
Jane Marsh here yesterday

Worked on Her Voice

"I stayed away from workshops and just concentrated on my voice," Miss Marsh explained. She was determined not to make public appearances prematurely.

But the word got around. Thomas Schippers and Erich Leinsdorf, the conductors, heard her sing and hired her on the spot—Mr. Schippers for her professional debut at the Spoleto Festival in Italy last summer and Mr. Leinsdorf for the opening of the Boston Symphony's 1965-66 season. She sang Desdemona in Verdi's "Otello" at Spoleto and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in Boston.

Mr. Leinsdorf is quoted as having said that he "needed a soprano that never had sung the Ninth because then she wouldn't know how difficult it is."

This February, she made her New York debut with the Philharmonic, singing in Mendelssohn's "Elijah" with Mr. Schippers conducting.

Additional Performances

Even before her Moscow victory, Mr. Leinsdorf had engaged her twice to sing at Tanglewood this summer, in Mozart's "The Magic Flute" on Aug. 6 and in the Beethoven Ninth on Aug. 21. She will now sing there two more times, on July 24 and on Aug. 13, along with other Moscow winners.

Since the victory, she has had all kinds of offers. But she told her managers: "Please let us go slow and keep cool heads." One of the cool-headed steps has been to turn down an offer from the Metropolitan Opera Company because she doesn't feel herself ready yet.

She knows that she will return to Moscow—she has been invited to sing with the Bolshoi Opera as well as give recitals. She is less sure about when she can return to her home in San Francisco and see her parents. What with her Tanglewood commitments and the airline strike, it may take time.

Needless to say, her parents are delighted over her Moscow victory. "But then they would have been delighted if I became a professional swimmer or horsewoman, they're that kind of people."

She just might have become a professional swimmer. She was a champion while at school, and feels lost unless she can swim four days a week.

Swimming was what she missed most in Moscow. Her chief regret was that she didn't have time for sightseeing, and only on her last day there did she discover a huge, beautiful pool. "I went flappy when I saw it," she said. She is looking forward to it on the return trip.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,007
JULY 1 9 1966

JANE MARSH

Van Cliburn, Jane Marsh In Concerts

The only two Americans ever to win first prize honors at the annual Tchaikovsky International Music Contest in Moscow will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in concerts this weekend at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

Van Cliburn, winner of the piano competition in 1958 and Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the 1966 singing competition, will be heard with the orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf.

Van Cliburn will perform Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3 in Saturday evening's concert which will also include Brahms' Tragic Overture and Schumann's Symphony No. 2.

Miss Marsh, along with Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, who placed second and third in this year's Tchaikovsky competition, will make their first United States appearances since returning from Moscow on Sunday afternoon, Miss Marsh will sing the "O patria mia" aria from Act III of Verdi's "Aida" and Tatania's Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin" which she sang in her prize winning performance in Moscow.

Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes will also be heard in the music they sang in the Tchaikovsky competition.

THE EVENING SUN
BALTIMORE, MD.
D. 206,715
JUL 1 1966

The Week's Music

By Francis Rackemann

Baltimore soprano Veronica Tyler, who tied for second place with Evelina Stroitseva, of Bulgaria, in the vocal part of the third International Tchaikovsky Music Competitions in Moscow, will be a soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at its July 24 Tanglewood concert at Lenox, Mass.

Appearing with Miss Tyler will be Jane Marsh, of New York, who won first prize in the vocal competition and Simon Estes, basso, also of New York, who placed second in the men's division.

Miss Tyler, a 1960 graduate of the Peabody Conservatory, sang with the Boston Symphony in two Bach concerts in the Berkshires last summer and again during the past winter season in the orchestra's Boston and New York performances of Schumann's scenes from Goethe's "Faust."

Miss Marsh, who made her professional debut in the United States at the opening concerts of the Boston Symphony's season last year, is the first American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky contest since Van Cliburn in 1958.

Of the forthcoming concert at Tanglewood on July 24, Erich Leinsdorf, music director, said: "I couldn't be happier if my own children had won a major prize, and it is a particular pleasure for me that the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present these three young American singers in a concert at Tanglewood—their first in this country since their success in Moscow."

POUGHKEEPSIE JOURNAL
Sunday, July 17, 1966

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277
JUL 1 1966

TANGLEWOOD LISTS TCHAIKOVSKY STARS

The three American singers who won prizes in the recent Tchaikovsky International Music Contest in Moscow will be soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood on Sunday, July 24.

The concern will mark the first American appearance since the contest for Jane Marsh and Veronica Tyler, sopranos, and Simon Estes, bass.

The revised program for July 24 will be announced after the singers return to this country. However, Lillian Kallir will still be soloist in the Chopin F minor piano concerto, as originally scheduled.

Some of the instrumentalists who won in the Tchaikovsky contest will be presented at two later Tanglewood concerts, on Aug. 13 and 14, as was announced previously. Their names will be made known later, but the top Soviet prize-winners will not be able to appear.

Miss Marsh was the first American first-prize winner at the Tchaikovsky competition since Van Cliburn took the piano award in 1958. Miss Tyler tied for second place in the women's singing division. Mr. Estes was third in the men's singing divison.

Miss Marsh will also appear with the Bostonians at Tanglewood on Aug. 6 and 21. These engagements were made before her Moscow victory.

Jane Marsh to Sing In Concert at Lenox

Miss Jane Marsh, who returned to this country Monday after winning a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Competition, will make her first concert appearance in the United States at the Berkshire Festival next Sunday. For that concert she will join Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra with whom she made her American professional debut last autumn in Symphony Hall, Boston.

As the only American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Music Contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, Miss Marsh received wide acclaim in the Soviet Union in concerts immediately after the competition. For next Sunday's program at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the 24-year-old soprano will sing two Tchaikovsky arias, Lisa's Scene and Arioso from "Pique Dame" and the Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin."

Buffalo Evening News
D. 279,780 SAT. 292,741
JULY 1 6 1966

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL will present youthful soprano Jane Marsh, winner of the recent Tchaikowsky International Music Contest in Moscow, next Saturday evening with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Erich Leinsdorf. Also appearing with Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, who won second and third prizes in the famed competition won in 1958 by American pianist Van Cliburn.

THE MORNING TELEGRAPH
NEW YORK, N. Y.
NEW YORK
D. 80,159 SUN. 86,532
JUL 1 6 1966

Berkshire Festival Lists Jane Marsh

Jane Marsh, who won a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Competition in Russia will make her first concert appearance in the United States at the Berkshire Festival on July 24. For that concert she will join Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra with whom she made her American professional debut last autumn in Symphony Hall, Boston.

As the only American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Music Contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, Miss Marsh received wide acclaim in the Soviet Union in concerts immediately after the competition. For the July 24 program at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home, Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., the 24 year old soprano will sing two Tchaikovsky arias: Lisa's Scene and Arioso from "Pique Dame" and the Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin."

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
JEWSIH COMMUNITY
BULLETIN
W. 11,492
JUL 1 1966

In the World of Music

A TRIUMPH FOR JOSEF KRIPS

By MAX LOEW
Music and Arts Editor, Jewish Community Bulletin

Names and notes in the news of San Francisco music . . .

In 1963, the San Francisco Symphony Association engaged Josef Krips, the eminent, Vienna-born conductor, to rebuild the orchestra into one of the great symphonic ensembles in the United States. In 1966, at the end of Krips' third season, his efforts and determination to give Northern California a truly great orchestra began to pay off, to the acknowledgement of music critics and the concert-going public alike. The orchestra and Krips received credit in the national press as well. As evidence, the orchestra received invitations to perform in Vienna, Montreal, Osaka, Amsterdam and in the Scandinavian countries. The future for fine music in Northern California looks bright.

THE AMERICAN violinist Isaac Stern has just concluded another dual mission to eastern Europe to improve east-west relations through the medium of culture. He had discussions with the Soviet Minister of Culture about Soviet-American cultural relations and is engaged in an all-out effort to arrange a concert tour to Communist China. In Warsaw Isaac Stern talked with United States Ambassador John Gronouski about the possibilities of expanding American and Polish cultural exchanges. Next year the Poles will send to the United States Warsaw's famed Jewish Theater.

THE ISRAEL Philharmonic Orchestra has decided to lift a 28-year-old ban on the playing of works by Richard Wagner and Richard Strauss. The music of Wagner became associated with the Nazi period in Germany after Hitler was attracted by its alleged swaggering heroics. Wagner's earlier anti-Semitic remarks added to the distaste here for his music. Richard Strauss lived through the Nazi period and was openly identified with it. His work was banned during the war, although in 1963 the violinist Jascha Heifetz presented a Strauss sonata. Now the ban is lifted because it is felt that sufficient time has passed for the works of the German composers no longer to offend the Israeli public.

JANE MARSH of Mill Valley was awarded first prize for women singers in the Tschaikovsky competition. She is to sing with the Boston Symphony again this summer at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

NEWSWEEK
NEW YORK, N.Y.
D. 1,531,000

JULY 1 1 1966

MUSIC

Broncobuster in Moscow

Before she turned to singing, Jane Marsh was a champion [illegible] and a professional horsewoman. "I've even done some broncobusting," says the beautiful 5-foot 11-inch soprano. For the [illegible] Tchaikovsky International Music Competition, held every four years [illegible], Jane trained like an athlete. Galloping a Gertrude Ederle-like endurance in the month-long contest with a [illegible] that shook off the obstacle of [illegible] in unfamiliar Russian, the 24-year-old Californian last week galloped off with the first prize among women vocalists, the first American winner since pianist Van Cliburn in 1958.

[illegible] was the first year vocal competition was added to the Olympics of music competitions, which attracted a record [illegible] contestants from 28 countries. [illegible] juries heard such virtuosos [illegible] pianist [illegible], cellist Mstislav Rostropovich [illegible] violinist David [illegible]. Of the 20 finalists [illegible] contestants collectively [illegible] medals. But [illegible] twelve awards [illegible] by 23-year-old [illegible] Stephen Kates, [illegible] Boston soprano [illegible], a 20-year-old [illegible] Angeles.

To the raucous [illegible] of the audience, Dichter lost to Russia's Grigori Sokolov, 16, the contest's youngest competitor. "I was very surprised, as were many people, that the young Russian was first," said Dichter, a Juilliard student. "He's very young."

But Jane Marsh's victory over 57 rivals was clear-cut and popular. Bass George London, the American judge, said: "Jane nearly sabotaged herself in the first round by singing both Pamina from 'The Magic Flute' and 'Aida.' You are either one or the other. She just scraped through. From then on she was relentlessly efficient and swept through the next two rounds."

Taking: The young American's triumph was all the sweeter for having mastered compulsory arias in Russian. "I think learning Russian was the hardest part," she said. In the finals both her musical and athletic training paid off. She chose one of the most taxing of all arias, "Tatiana's Letter Scene" from Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin." "It lasts about twenty minutes. The others sang arias of about five minutes. I'm sure this impressed the judges," she said. "People said my characterization was more Russian than any singer's."

Miss Marsh's success did not surprise everyone. Erich Leinsdorf, musical director of the Boston Symphony, with which she made her first appearance with a major U.S. orchestra last fall, said, "I unhesitatingly picked her out of five singers who auditioned. She had the goods, the kind of voice not heard since Elisabeth Rethberg. I immediately signed her for Tanglewood this summer."

In Mill Valley, a San Francisco suburb, Jane's father, Dr. Earle Marsh, a gynecologist, said: "Actually I thought she could do it. She always had determination. When she was 10 I asked her why she was so good at sports and she said, 'I think about it and when I have a feeling I can do it—I do it'."

Jane first began to have that feeling as a singer at Oberlin College, where she graduated in 1963. A finalist in the Metropolitan auditions of that year, she made her first professional operatic appearance as Desdemona last summer at Spoleto. She has turned down offers from both the San Francisco Opera and the Met as "a bit premature."

Contracts: In the few days since her Moscow victory she has been deluged with offers from opera and record companies. But success is not likely to turn her head. Before the contest she had tentative offers to sing in Italy. "I'm holding off now to see what the future will bring. I say with pride that I think I know myself well enough to know when I'm ready and not to leap into big contracts if I'm not ready. I refuse to ruin what might be a good thing."

One thing is certain—her return to Moscow next fall. She can take only 25 per cent of her prize money, 2,500 rubles ($2,775)—out of Russia. "I've got to spend a lot of money here," she said. Upon reflection, she added, "Maybe I'll put part of it in a Russian bank." She is not a girl who is about to blow her cool.

Sovfoto

"She had the goods"

BROOKLYN TIMES
Thursday, June 16, 1966

Brooklyn Academy Offers Excursion To Tanglewood

The Brooklyn Academy of Music's Tenth Annual Excursion to Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will take place July 24th. The public is invited to spend Sunday in the Berkshires, enjoying a concert inside the Music Shed at Tanglewood, for the low price of $16.00.

These excursions organized by the Academy of Music are one of the great summer fun bargains. Included in the price of the ticket are round trip transportation via air conditioned, rest room equipped buses of the Campus Coach Lines, a truly delicious box lunch at Tanglewood, and a supper snack on the way home.

Each year the Academy of Music is the host to hundreds of Brooklynites who have made this trip a regular part of their summer schedule. Last year nine buses were filled to capacity for the run to Tanglewood.

The reservation deadline is Tuesday, July 19th at 5:00 p.m. at the Membership Office (third floor) of the Academy. You may make your reservation by mail (postmarked no later than July 15th) or in person.

Mrs. Monroe D. Stein is the Chairman of this year's Tanglewood Excursion Committee of the Women's Committee for the Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts in Brooklyn.

NEW YORK NEWS
Sunday, July 17, 1966

Lures Offered On Music Tour

Berkshire mountain [illegible] air-conditioned buses to get you there and back and music by the masters, performed by the Boston Symphony [illegible] lures offered New Yorkers by the Brooklyn Academy of Music, on its tenth annual Tanglewood trip next Sunday.

Last year more than 300 music lovers made the excursion. Buses leave from Grand Central Terminal at 8:30 A.M. and return at about 10 P.M. The $15 package deal includes the round trip, reserved seats in the Music Shed, a box lunch and a return-home supper snack. Works by Beethoven, Tschaikovsky and Chopin will highlight the program, with Erich Leinsdorf conducting.

Reservations will be accepted until 5 P.M. Tuesday, and may be made by telephone, 783-6700.

KINGSTON, N.Y.
FREEMAN
D. 18,000

JUL 1 9 1966

Program Changes for Tanglewood Concerts Are Noted; Moscow Winners Will Perform

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.—Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced the complete program for the July 24 concert at Tanglewood which will bring Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes before an American audience for the first time since their prize winning performances in Moscow. At the same time Mr. Leinsdorf stated that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has released Miss Marsh from her contract to sing in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on August 21 in order for her to appear in her native state on August 20 in the Hollywood Bowl. Phyllis Curtin, a summer resident of the Berkshires and a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, has graciously consented to replace Miss Marsh in the ninth symphony.

The program for the Berkshire Festival concert on July 24 will begin with Beethoven's Overture to Coriolan and continued with Lilian Kallir performing Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor. Following the intermission, Jane Marsh, the only American first prize winner in the entire 1966 Tchaikovsky competition, will be heard in "O patria mia" from Act III of Verdi's Aida and Tatiana's Letter Scene from Eugene Onegin which she sang in her prize winning performance in Moscow. Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third prize winners, will also be heard in music they sang in the Tchaikovsky competition. [illegible] and Mr. Estes will [illegible] giammai m'amo: Dormire sol[illegible] from Verdi's Don Carlo.

Following her performance in Mozart's The Magic Flute on August 6, an appearance scheduled prior to the Moscow contest, Miss Marsh will return to Tanglewood for a third time this summer on August 13. Several months ago the Boton Symphony Orchestra announced that it would present prize winners from the Tchaikovsky competition at its August 13 and 14 Tanglewood concerts. The Orchestra regrets that the Soviet winners were unable to come to this country for these concerts but is pleased to be able to present Miss Marsh and the three second place winners in the instrumental competitions.

The concert on August 13 will begin with Hindemith's Symphonic Metemorphosis to be followed by the American cellist Stephen Kates, second prize in Moscow, playing the Shostakovitch Cello Concerto. Jane Marsh will then be heard in Letter Scene and Arioso from Tchaikovsky's Pique Dame and Verdi's Introduction, Willow Song, and Ave Maria from Otello. The concert will close with orchestral excerpts from Wagner's Gotterdammerung.

On Sunday afternoon, August 14 Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist who placed second in the Tchaikovsky competition and Misha Dichter American pianist and second prize winner will perform with Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The works they will play will be determined as soon as the prize winners return from abroad. Also on this program the orchestra will play the Prelude from Act III of Wagner's Lohengrin excerpts from Schuller's Seven Studies on Themes of Paul Klee and Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 18,000

JULY 1 4 1966

Jane Marsh to Sing With Boston Symphony; First Appearance Since Moscow Triumph

Jane Marsh, who returned to this country Monday, July 11 after winning a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Competition, will make her first concert appearance in the United States at the Berkshire Festival on July 24. For that concert she will join Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra with whom she made her American professional debut last autumn in Symphony Hall, Boston.

As the only American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Music Contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, Miss Marsh received wide acclaim in the Soviet Union in concerts immediately after the competition. For the July 24 program at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home, Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., the 24 year old soprano will sing two Tchaikovsky arias, Lisa's Scene and Arioso from "Pique Dame" and the Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin."

Veronica Tyler, second prize winner in Moscow, and Simon Estes, recipient of third prize, will also be heard at the July 24 Tanglewood concert. Miss Tyler will sing Et incarnatus est from Mozart's Mass in C minor and Mr. Estes will be heard in King Philipp's aria from Verdi's "Don Carlo."

Miss Marsh will sing on two other occasions this summer with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. On August 6 she performs in a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," an appearance scheduled prior to her departure for Moscow, and again on August 13 she will be heard in a program which will also include Stephen Kates, second prize winner in the Tchaikovsky cello competition. Two other prize winners in Moscow, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist and second prize winner, and 20 year old Misha Dichter, second prize in the piano competition, will be heard on Sunday afternoon, August 14. These engagements fulfill the invitation extended several months ago by the Orchestra to the Moscow Competition officials for appearances at Tanglewood by the prize winners. Messrs. Dichter and Kates were the highest ranking Americans in their respective competitions.

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,615

JULY 1 3 1966

Tchaikovsky Victor to Sing at Tanglewood

Jane Marsh, who returned to this country Monday after winning a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Competition, will make her first concert appearance in the United States at the Berkshire Festival on July 24. For that concert she will join Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra with whom she made her American professional debut last autumn in Symphony Hall, Boston.

As the only American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Music Contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, Miss Marsh received wide acclaim in the Soviet Union in concerts immediately after the competition. For the July 24 program at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home, Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., the 24 year old soprano will sing two Tchaikovsky arias, Lisa's Scene and Arioso from "Pique Dame" and the Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin."

Veronica Tyler, second prize winner in Moscow, and Simon Estes, recipient of third prize, will also be heard at the July 24 Tanglewood concert. Miss Tyler will sing 'Et incarnatus est' from Mozart's Mass in C minor, and Mrs. Estes will be heard in King Philipp's aria from Verdi's "Don Carlo."

Miss Marsh will sing on two other occasions this summer with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. On August 6 she performs in a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," an appearance scheduled prior to her departure for Moscow, and again on August 13 she will be heard in a program which will also include Stephen Kates, second prize winner in the Tchaikovsky cello competition. Two other prize winners in Moscow, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist and second prize winner, and 20-year-old Misha Dichter, second prize in the piano competition, will be heard on Sunday afternoon, August 14. These engagements fulfill the invitation extended several months ago by the Orchestra to the Moscow Competition officials for appearances at Tanglewood by the prize winners. Messrs. Dichter and Kates were the highest ranking Americans in their respective competitions.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766

JULY 1 3 1966

Hikers Plan Tanglewood Trip July 23

The Mohawk Valley Hiking Club plans to go to Tanglewood on Saturday, July 23 to hear pianist Van Cliburn.

* * *

The group will leave from the State Armory on Washington Avenue at 1 p.m.

Reservations should be made with Miss Regina [illegible] 75 [illegible] William [illegible] Boulevard.

72

NEWSWEEK
NEW YORK, N.Y.
W. 1,531,000

JULY 1 1 1966

MUSIC

Broncobuster in Moscow

Before she turned to singing, Jane Marsh was a champion swimmer and a professional horsewoman. "I've even done some broncobusting," says the beautiful, 5-foot 11-inch soprano. For the third Tchaikovsky International Musical Competition, held every four years in Moscow, Jane trained like an athlete. Combining a Gertrude Ederle-like endurance in the month-long contest with a poise that shook off the obstacle of singing in unfamiliar Russian, the 24-year-old Californian last week galloped off with the first prize among women vocalists, the first American winner since pianist Van Cliburn in 1958.

This was the first year vocal competition was added to the Olympics of musical competitions, which attracted a record 242 contestants from 38 countries. Before juries headed by such virtuosos as pianist Emil Gilels, cellist Mstislav Rostropovitch and violinist David Oistrakh, the 30 Russian contestants collected four of the five gold medals. But the 44 Americans won twelve awards, including silver medals by 23-year-old New York cellist Stephen Kates, [illegible]-year-old Baltimore soprano Veronica Tyler and Mischa Dichter, a 20-year-old pianist from Los Angeles.

To the raucous dismay of the audience, Dichter lost to Russia's Grigori Sokolov, 16, the contest's youngest competitor. "I was very surprised, as were many people, that the young Russian was first," said Dichter, a Juilliard student. "He's very young."

Sovfoto

Marsh: 'She had the goods'

But Jane Marsh's victory over 57 rivals was clear-cut and popular. Bass George London, the American juror, said: "Jane nearly sabotaged herself in the first round by singing both Pamina from 'The Magic Flute' and 'Aida.' You are either one or the other. She just scraped through. From then on she was relentlessly efficient and swept through the next two rounds."

Taxing: The young American's triumph was all the sweeter for having mastered compulsory arias in Russian. "I think learning Russian was the hardest part," she said. In the finals both her musical and athletic training paid off. She chose one of the most taxing of all arias, "Tatiana's Letter Scene" from Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin." "It lasts about twenty minutes. The others sang arias of about five minutes. I'm sure this impressed the judges," she said. "People said my characterization was more Russian than any singer's."

Miss Marsh's success did not surprise everyone. Erich Leinsdorf, musical director of the Boston Symphony, with which she made her first appearance with a major U.S. orchestra last fall, said, "I unhesitatingly picked her out of five singers who auditioned. She had the goods, the kind of voice not heard since Elisabeth Rethberg. I immediately signed her for Tanglewood this summer."

In Mill Valley, a San Francisco suburb, Jane's father, Dr. Earle Marsh, a gynecologist, said: "Actually I thought she could do it. She always had determination. When she was 10 I asked her why she was so good at sports and she said, 'I think about it and when I have a feeling I can do it—I do it'."

Jane first began to have that feeling as a singer at Oberlin College, where she graduated in 1963. A finalist in the Metropolitan auditions of that year, she made her first professional operatic appearance as Desdemona last summer at Spoleto. She has turned down offers from both the San Francisco Opera and the Met as "a bit premature."

Contracts: In the few days since her Moscow victory, she has been deluged with offers from opera and record companies. But success is not likely to turn her head. Before the contest she had tentative offers to sing in Italy. "I'm holding off now to see what the future will bring. I say with pride that I think I know myself well enough to know when I'm ready and not to leap into big contracts if I'm not ready. I refuse to ruin what might be a good thing."

One thing is certain—her return to Moscow next fall. She can take only 25 per cent of her prize money—2,500 rubles ($2,775)—out of Russia. "I've got to spend a lot of money here," she said. Upon reflection, she added, "Maybe I'll put part of it in a Russian bank." She is not a girl who is about to blow her cool.

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,615

JULY 1 3 1966

Tchaikovsky Victor to Sing at Tanglewood

Jane Marsh, who returned to this country Monday after winning a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Competition, will make her first concert appearance in the United States at the Berkshire Festival on July 24. For that concert she will join Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra with whom she made her American professional debut last autumn in Symphony Hall, Boston.

As the only American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Music Contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, Miss Marsh received wide acclaim in the Soviet Union in concerts immediately after the competition. For the July 24 program at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home, Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., the 24-year-old soprano will sing two Tchaikovsky arias: Lisa's Scene and Arioso from "Pique Dame" and the Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin."

Veronica Tyler, second prize winner in Moscow, and Simon Estes, recipient of third prize, will also be heard at the July 24 Tanglewood concert. Miss Tyler will sing 'Et incarnatus est' from Mozart's Mass in C minor, and Mrs. Estes will be heard in King Philipp's aria from Verdi's "Don Carlo."

Miss Marsh will sing on two other occasions this summer with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. On August 6 she performs in a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," an appearance scheduled prior to her departure for Moscow, and again on August 13 she will be heard in a program which will also include Stephen Kates, second prize winner in the Tchaikovsky cello competition. Two other prize winners in Moscow, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist and second prize winner, and 20-year-old Misha Dichter, second prize in the piano competition, will be heard on Sunday afternoon August 14. These engagements fulfill the invitation extended several months ago by the Orchestra to the Moscow Competition officials for appearances at Tanglewood by the prize winner. Messrs. Dichter and Kates were the highest ranking Americans in their respective competitions.

BROOKLYN TIMES
Thursday, June 16, 1966

Brooklyn Academy Offers Excursion To Tanglewood

The Brooklyn Academy of Music's Tenth Annual Excursion to Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will take place July 24th. The public is invited to spend Sunday in the Berkshires, enjoying a concert inside the Music Shed at Tanglewood, for the low price of $15.00.

These excursions organized by the Academy of Music are one of the great summer fun bargains. Included in the price of the ticket are round trip transportation via air conditioned, rest room equipped buses of the Campus Coach Lines, a truly delicious box lunch at Tanglewood, and a supper snack on the way home.

Each year the Academy of Music is the host to hundreds of Brooklynites who have made this trip a regular part of their summer schedule. Last year nine buses were filled to capacity for the run to Tanglewood.

The reservation deadline is Tuesday, July 19th at 5:00 p.m. at the Membership Office (third floor) of the Academy. You may make your reservation by mail (postmarked no later than July 15th) or in person.

Mrs. Monroe D. Stein is the Chairman of this year's Tanglewood Excursion Committee of the Women's Committee for the Boston Symphony Orchestra Concerts in Brooklyn.

NEW YORK NEWS
Sunday, July 17, 1966

Lures Offered On Music Tour

Berkshire mountain breezes, air-conditioned buses to get you there and back, and music by the masters, performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are lures offered New Yorkers by the Brooklyn Academy of Music, on its tenth annual Tanglewood trip next Sunday.

Last year more than 300 music lovers made the excursion. Buses leave from Grand Central Terminal at 8:15 A.M. and return at about 10 P.M. The $15 package deal includes the round trip, reserved seats in the Music Shed, a box lunch and a return-home supper snack. Works by Beethoven, Tschaikovsky and Chopin will highlight the program, with Erich Leinsdorf conducting.

Reservations will be accepted until 5 P.M. Tuesday, and may be made by telephone, 783-6700.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 18,000

JUL 1 9 1966

Program Changes for Tanglewood Concerts Are Noted; Moscow Winners Will Perform

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.—Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced the complete program for the July 24 concert at Tanglewood which will bring Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes before an American audience for the first time since their prize winning performances in Moscow. At the same time Mr. Leinsdorf stated that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has released Miss Marsh from her contract to sing in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on August 21 in order for her to appear in her native state on August 20 in the Hollywood Bowl. Phyllis Curtin, a summer resident of the Berkshires and a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, has graciously consented to replace Miss Marsh in the ninth Symphony.

The program for the Berkshire Festival concert on July 24 will begin with Beethoven's Overture to Coriolan and continued with Lilian Kallir performing Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor. Following the intermission, Jane Marsh, the only American first prize winner in the entire 1966 Tchaikovsky competition, will be heard in "O patria mia" from Act III of Verdi's Aida and Tatanina's Letter Scene from Eugene Onegin which she sang in her prize winning performance in Moscow. Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third prize winners, will also be heard in music they sang in the Tchaikovsky competition. Miss Tyler will sing "Et incarnatus est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor, K. 427, and Mr. Estes will sing "Ella giammai m'amo: Dormiro sol" from Verdi's Don Carlo.

Following her performance in Mozart's The Magic Flute on August 6, an appearance scheduled prior to the Moscow contest, Miss Marsh will return to Tanglewood for a third time this summer on August 13. Several months ago the Boton Symphony Orchestra announced that it would present prize winners from the Tchaikovsky competition at its August 13 and 14 Tanglewood concerts. The Orchestra regrets that the Soviet winners were unable to come to this country for these concerts but is pleased to be able to present Miss Marsh and the three second place winners in the instrumental competitions.

The concert on August 13 will begin with Hindemith's Symphonic Metemorphosis to be followed by the American cellist Stephen Kates, second prize in Moscow, playing the Shostakovitch Cello Concerto. Jane Marsh will then be heard in List's Scene and Arioso from Tchaikovsky's Pique Dame and Verdi's Introduction, Willow Song, and Ave Maria from Otello. The concert will close with orchestral excerpts from Wagner's Gotterdammerung.

On Sunday afternoon, August 14, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist who placed second in the Tchaikovsky competition and Misha Dichter American pianist and second prize winner will perform with Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The works they will play will be determined as soon as the prize winners return from abroad. Also on this program the orchestra will play the Prelude from Act III of Wagner's Lohengrin excerpts from Gunther Schuller's Seven Studies on Themes of Paul Klee, and Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 18,000

JULY 1 4 1966

Jane Marsh to Sing With Boston Symphony; First Appearance Since Moscow Triumph

Jane Marsh, who returned to this country Monday, July 11 after winning a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Competition, will make her first concert appearance in the United States at the Berkshire Festival on July 24. For that concert she will join Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra with whom she made her American professional debut last autumn in Symphony Hall, Boston.

As the only American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Music Contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, Miss Marsh received wide acclaim in the Soviet Union in concerts immediately after the competition. For the July 24 program at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home, Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., the 24 year old soprano will sing two Tchaikovsky arias: Lisa's Scene and Arioso from "Pique Dame" and the Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin."

Veronica Tyler, second prize winner in Moscow, and Simon Estes, recipient of third prize, will also be heard at the July 24 Tanglewood concert. Miss Tyler will sing Et incarnatus est from Mozart's Mass in C minor and Mr. Estes will be heard in King Philipp's aria from Verdi's "Don Carlo."

Miss Marsh will sing on two other occasions this summer with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. On August 6 she performs in a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," an appearance scheduled prior to her departure for Moscow, and again on August 13 she will be heard in a program which will also include Stephen Kates, second prize winner in the Tchaikovsky cello competition. Two other prize winners in Moscow, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist and second prize winner, and 20 year old Misha Dichter, second prize in the piano competition, will be heard on Sunday afternoon, August 14. These engagaments fulfill the invitation extended several months ago by the Orchestra to the Moscow Competition officials for appearances at Tanglewood by the prize winners. Messrs. Dichter and Kates were the highest ranking Americans in their respective competitions.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,765

JULY 1 3 1966

Hikers Plan Tanglewood Trip July 23

The Mohawk Valley Hiking Club plans to go to Tanglewood on Saturday, July 23 to hear pianist Van Cliburn.

* * *

The group will leave from the State Armory on Washington avenue at 1 p.m.

Reservations should be made with Miss Regina [illegible], 75 Miles Standish [illegible] William H. Tregurtha, [illegible] wood boulevard, by [illegible]

TIGHT BINDING

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 16 1966

SYRACUSE HERALD AMERICAN
Sunday, July 17, 1966

Van Cliburn, Jane Marsh To Perform at Tanglewood

The only two Americans to win first-prize honors at the Tchaikovsky International Music Contest will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival's fourth week. Van Cliburn, winner of the piano competition in 1958, and Jane Marsh, first-prize winner in the 1966 singing competition, will be heard with the orchestra under music director Erich Leinsdorf.

Cliburn will play on Saturday, July 23, and Miss Marsh, along with Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, who placed second and third, respectively, in this year's contest, will make their first U.S. appearances since returning from Moscow, on Sunday afternoon, July 24. Lilian Kallir will also appear on Sunday's program as previously announced. Seiji Ozawa will be the guest conductor for the concert at 9 p.m. on Friday, July 22, with Joseph Silverstein as soloist.

Ozawa, music director of the Toronto Symphony and Ravinia Festival, attended the Berkshire Music Center in 1960 and on Friday will make his third guest appearance at Tanglewood in as many years. The first half of his program will include William Schuman's "American Festival" overture and Schubert's Symphony No. 5. Following two weeks of chamber orchestra concerts, the festival programs will return to the summer's theme of the romantic concerto; Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will perform the Mendelsohn Violin Concerto with Ozawa and the orchestra. Friday's concert will conclude with Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite."

Saturday Program

Saturday evening's program will begin at 8 p.m. in the music shed with Leinsdorf conducting Brahms' Tragic Overture, which will be followed by Schumann's Symphony No. 2. Van Cliburn will play Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

With the advent of the three prizewinning singers to Tanglewood, the program for Sunday's concert as previously announced has been changed. The concert will begin with Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture. Lilian Kallir will be soloist in a performance of Chopin's Piano Concerto in F Minor. Veronica Tyler will sing "Et Incarnatus Est" from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K. 427. Simon Estes will then be heard in "Ella gimmai m'amo," King Philipp's monologue from "Don Carlo" by Verdi. Jane Marsh will join Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two arias by Tchaikovsky: Lisa's Scene and Arioso from "Pique Dame" and the Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin."

Friday's weekend prelude at 7 p.m. will include Brahms' Sonata for Violin and Piano in A Major, Opus 100, performed by Silverstein and Miss Kallir. The Tanglewood choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson will be heard in songs for mixed chorus by Mendelsohn. Tickets for Friday's Boston Symphony Orchestra concert include admission to the weekend prelude.

The open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will take place at 10:30 on Saturday morning in the music shed.

Chamber Concert

Roman Totenberg, violinist, will be the guest artist for the Berkshire Festival chamber music concert on Tuesday evening. Mr. Totenberg's program will begin with Handel's Sonata a Cinque, in which he will be joined by several of his students. The chamber music program will continue with Beethoven's Sonata in G, Opus 96, a sonata by Debussy, and the Sonata in D Major by Prokofief.

Three Berkshire Music Center concerts will be available this week to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. On Wednesday, there will be a program of chamber music at 8 p.m. in the chamber music hall, and on Sunday morning at 10 there will be a baroque program in the Tanglewood Theatre. Leinsdorf and Charles Wilson, the Boston Symphony orchestra's new assistant conductor, will share the conducting of Thursday evening's Berkshire Music Center Orchestra concert. This program at 8 in the theatre will include Berlioz' Corsair Overture and Beethoven's Symphony No. 4, conducted by Wilson, and the Violin Concerto by Berg, with a soloist to be announced, and Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel," conducted by Leinsdorf.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 14 1966

Tanglewood Hosts Winners Of Tchaikovsky Contest

Jane Marsh, who returned to this country Monday after winning a first prize in the Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow, will make her first concert appearance in the United States at the Berkshire Festival on July 24. For that concert she will join Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with whom she made her American professional debut last autumn in Symphony Hall, Boston.

As the only American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Music Contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, Miss Marsh received wide acclaim in the Soviet Union in concerts immediately after the competition. For the July 24 program at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home at Tanglewood, the 24-year-old soprano will sing two Tchaikovsky arias: "Lisa's Scene" and "Arioso" from "Pique Dame" and the "Letter Scene" from "Eugene Onegin."

Veronica Tyler, second prize winner in Moscow, and Simon Estes, recipient of a third prize, will also be heard at the July 24 Tanglewood concert. Miss Tyler will sing "Et Incarnatus Est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor, and Mr. Estes will be heard in King Philip's aria from Verdi's "Don Carlos."

Miss Marsh will sing on two other occasions this summer with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. On Aug. 6 she performs in a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," an appearance scheduled prior to her departure for Moscow, and on Aug. 13 she will be heard in a program which will also include Stephen Kates, second prize winner in the Tchaikovsky cello competition. Two other prize winners in Moscow, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist and second prize winner, and 20-year-old Misha Dichter, second prize winner in the piano competition, will be heard on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14.

The Sunday program will be televised live by NBC-TV as a color special, entitled "An Afternoon at Tanglewood." During the intermission, NBC News correspondent Edwin Newman will interview the two soloists, as well as Mr. Leinsdorf.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 41,630
JUL 18 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 13,202
JUL 15 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 52,173
JUL 17 1966

The News American
BALTIMORE, MD
D. 211,555
JUL 10 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
JUL 18 1966

Newsday
GARDEN CITY, N. Y.
D. 400,124
JUL 14 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,179
JUL 16 1966

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607
JUL 10 1966

St. Louis
Globe-Democrat
D. 305,904 SUN. 343,016
JULY 16 1966

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Circ. 115,186
JUL 17 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 19 1966

JANE MARSH, soprano, will make her first American appearance at Tanglewood following the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition. Miss Marsh, the first American to win First Prize since 1958, will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on July 24. She will sing Lisa's Scene and Arioso from "Pique Dame" and The Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin" of Tchaikovsky. Also appearing will be Veronica Tyler, Second Prize winner and Simon Estes, Third Prize winner.

Around Berkshire

May Set Midseason Record

PITTSFIELD — Berkshire County's tourist business is expected to set a mid-season record this coming weekend.

John V. Geary, executive director of the Bershire Hills Conference, area tourist promotion agency, said reservations indicate that most commercial establishments in the county already are sold out for Friday and Saturday nights.

It will be parents' weekend at most of the 35 private camps in the Berkshires. This coupled with the appearance of Van Cliburn at Tanglewood Saturday evening accounts for the heavy advance bookings, according to Mr. Geary.

The Berkshire Hills Conference executive said reports from several area attractions and commercial establishments indicate that the summer tourist business is running ahead of the 1965 record.

* * *

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,910
JUL 17 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
JUL 14 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 56,740
JUL 17 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 17 1966

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JULY 16 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 15 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 286,021
JUL 17 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,914
JUL 15 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bulletin (e)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 146,612
JUL 16 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Circ. 49,594
JUL 18 1966

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUL 21 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Evening Eagle-Tribune
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Comb. Circ. 43,410
JUL 16 1966

Van Cliburn At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) —Pianist Van Cliburn and soprano Jane Marsh will perform with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood next weekend.

The two are the only Americans to win first prize at the Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow.

Cliburn, who won the piano competition in 1958, will play Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3 during the July 23 concert at Tanglewood.

Miss Marsh will appear with the orchestra the following day in her first U.S. concert since winning the Moscow singing competition earlier this year.

Also performing in the Sunday concert will be Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, who placed second and third in this year's singing contest.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 18 1966

Tourist Business Expected To Break Weekend Record

Berkshire County's tourist business is expected to set a midseason record this coming weekend.

John V. Geary, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, area tourist promotion agency, said reservations indicate that most commercial establishments in the county already are sold out for Friday and Saturday nights.

It will be parents' weekend at most of the 35 private camps in the Berkshires. This coupled with the appearance of Van Cliburn at Tanglewood Saturday evening accounts for the heavy advance bookings, according to Mr. Geary.

The Berkshire Hills Conference executive said reports from several area attractions and commercial establishments indicate that the summer tourist business is running ahead of the 1965 record.

74

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 26,029
JUL 18 1966

Tanglewood Concert Set Sunday

LENOX, Mass. — Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced the complete program for the July 24 concert at Tanglewood which will bring Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes before an American audience for the first time since their prize - winning performances in Moscow.

At the same time Leinsdorf said the Boston Symphony Orchestra has released Miss Marsh from her contract to sing in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Aug. 3 in order for her to appear in her native state on Aug. 20 in the Hollywood Bowl. Phyllis Curtin, a summer resident of the Berkshires and a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will replace Miss Marsh in the Ninth Symphony.

The program for the Berkshire Festival concert on July 24 will begin with Beethoven's Overture to Coriolan and continue with Lilian Kallir performing Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor. Following the intermission, Jane Marsh, the only American first prize winner in the entire 1966 Tchaikovsky competition, will be heard in "O patria mia" from Act III of Verdi's Aida and Tatania's Letter Scene from Eugene Onegin which she sang in her prize winning performance in Moscow. Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third prize winners, will also be heard in music they sang in the Tchaikovsky competition. Miss Tyler will sing "Et incarnatus est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor, K. 427, and Estes will sing "Ella giammai m'amo" and "Dormiro sol" from Verdi's Don Carlo.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
JUL 18 1966

Van Cliburn To Appear Saturday At Berkshire Music Festival

The all-Bach weekend at Tanglewood, blessed with perfect weather, drew more than 23,000 people to the three concerts presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This is the last of the preliminary programs; next weekend the full Berkshire Festival opens with the whole orchestra on hand.

Friday night, Szymon Goldberg was guest conductor and also violin soloist in Bach's Concerto for Violin No. 2 in E major. The program also included Suite No. 2 in B minor for flute and strings, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as flautist, four transcriptions from "The Art of the Fugue" and Suite No. 4 in D.

The "weekend prelude" — an hour's program early in the evening—offered Brandenburg Concertos No. 6 and 3 with the small orchestral groups, strings and harpsichord, that the composer intended.

On Saturday evening director Erich Leinsdorf led the orchestra, with the Tanglewood choir and seven soloists, in the Passion of St. John. A number of baroque instruments were used, to stick closely to Bach's intent. It was a long and moving program, rewarding to an audience of more than 7000 listeners.

"The Magnificat in D Major", with soloists and choir again performing with the Boston Symphony, was the main presentation on Sunday afternoon, preceded by the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1, and Cantata No. 55, sung by Ernst Haefliger.

Next weekend Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct the Saturday and Sunday concerts, while Seiji Ozawa will be guest conductor on Friday night. The big attraction will be Van Cliburn's appearance on Saturday, playing the Rachmaniboff Piano Concerto No. 3. Lilian Kallir will be soloist Sunday afternoon, playing Chopin's Piano Concerto in F Minor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUL 14 1966

SOPRANO — Veronica Tyler will make her first American Appearance at Tanglewood following the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition. Miss Tyler is a second prize winner and will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director on the 24th of July. Miss Tyler will sing the "Et incarnatus est," from the Mass in C Minor, K. 427 of Mozart. Also appearing will be Jane Marsh, First Prize winner and Simon Estes, Third Prize winner.

BROOKLYN KINGS COURIER
Saturday, July 23, 1966

BROOKLYN CANARSIE DIGEST
Tuesday, July 26, 1966

FLATBUSH LIFE
Saturday, July 23, 1966

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUL 14 1966

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUL 14 1966

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL STARS: Jane Marsh, left, Soprano, will make her first American appearance at Tanglewood following the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition. Miss Marsh is the first American to win First Prize since 1958. Miss Marsh will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director on July 24. Lilian Kallir, right, will be piano soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the same program. She will play the Chopin Concerto in F minor on July 24. She will play Koncertstuck in G major on July 30. Miss Marsh will sing "Lisa's Scene and Arioso from "Pique Dame" and The Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin" of Tchaikovsky. Also appearing on July 30 will be Veronica Tyler, Second Prize Winner in the Tchaikovsky Competition, and Simon Estes, Third Prize Winner.

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUL 14 1966

—Jane Marsh will make her first American appearance at Tanglewood following the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition. Miss Marsh is the first American to win First Prize since 1958. Miss Marsh will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director on the 24th of July. She will sing "Lisa's Scene and Arioso from "Pique Dame" and The Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin" of Tchaikovsky. Also appearing will be Veronica Tyler, second prize winner and Simon Estes, Third Prize win-

PIANO SOLOIST—Lilian Kallir will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director. She will play the Chopin Concerto in F minor on July 24 and the Schumanns Koncertstuck in G major on July 30, with Erich Leinsdorf conducting.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, July 17, 1966

SELL-OUT PERFORMANCE — Van Cliburn will perform the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3 with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf conducting, at Tanglewood on Saturday evening. Tickets for the Music Shed in Lenox, Mass., music festival have been sold out

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUL 14 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 17 1966

TROY MORNING RECORD
Monday, July 25, 1966

10,596 Hear Cliburn At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — America's only first prize winners in Moscow's Tchaikovsky music competition — Van Cliburn and Jane Marsh — brought their talents to yesterday's performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Tanglewood Music Festival.

Cliburn, 1958 winner at the piano, and Miss Marsh, 1966 voice competitition winner from New York City, were returned for several curtain calls after their performances before a crowd of 10,596.

It was the first American concert appearance for Miss Marsh since returning from Moscow.

The Boston Symphony wound up a three-concert series at the festival that brought out a total of 32,291 persons—the largest turnout for three concerts since Tanglewood's closing weekend in 1959.

Miss Marsh was joined by Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third prize winners in voice competition at this year's Moscow competition.

Miss Marsh, a soprano, sang Tatiana's letter scene from Tchaikovsky opera's "Eugene Onegin" and the aria "O Patria Mia" from Verdi's "Aida," both of which she performed in Mos-

EAST HAMPTON STAR
Thursday, July 28, 1966

Herbert E. Worthington is taking a vacation trip through upper New York State and New England; he was at Tanglewood last weekend to hear Van Cliburn.

BROOKLYN RECORD
Friday, July 29, 1966

TANGLEWOOD: Bklyn Academy Music trek to Tanglewood, July 24 for $15.00. Mrs. Monroe D. Stein, chairman. Mrs. Sarah Walder at STerling 3-[illegible] for information.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 26,024
JUL 18 1966

Tanglewood Concert Set Sunday

LENOX, Mass. — Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced the complete program for the July 24 concert at Tanglewood which will bring Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes before an American audience for the first time since their prize - winning performances in Moscow.

At the same time Leinsdorf said the Boston Symphony Orchestra has released Miss Marsh from her contract to sing in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Aug. 21 in order for her to appear in her native state on Aug. 20 in the Hollywood Bowl. Phyllis Curtin, a summer resident of the Berkshires and a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will replace Miss Marsh in the Ninth Symphony.

The program for the Berkshire Festival concert on July 24 will begin with Beethoven's Overture to Coriolan and continue with Lilian Kallir performing Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor. Following the intermission, Jane Marsh, the only American first prize winner in the entire 1966 Tchaikovsky competion, will be heard in "O patria mia" from Act III of Verdi's Aida and Tatania's Letter Scene from Eugene Onegin which she sang in her prize winning performance in Moscow. Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third prize winners, will also be heard in music they sang in the Tchaikovsky competition. Miss Tyler will sing "Et incarnatus est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor, K. 427, and Estes will sing "Ella giammai m'amo: Dormiro sol" from Verdi's Don Carlo.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
JUL 18 1966

Van Cliburn To Appear Saturday At Berkshire Music Festival

The all-Bach weekend at Tanglewood, blessed with perfect weather, drew more than 23,000 people to the three concerts presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This is the last of the preliminary programs; next weekend the full Berkshire Festval opens with the whole orchestra on hand.

Friday night, Szymon Goldberg was guest conductor and also violin soloist in Bach's Concerto for Violin No. 2 in E major. The program also included Suite No. 2 in B minor for flute and strings, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as flautist, four transcriptions from "The Art of the Fugue" and Suite No. 4 in D.

The "weekend prelude" — an hour's program early in the evening—offered Brandenburg Concertos No. 6 and 3 with the small orchestral groups, strings and harpsichord, that the composer intended.

On Saturday evening director Erich Leinsdorf led the orchestra, with the Tanglewood choir and seven soloists, in the Passion of St. John. A number of baroque instruments were used, to stick closely to Bach's intent. It was a long and moving program, rewarding to an audience of more than 7000 listeners.

"The Magnificat in D Major", with soloists and choir again performing with the Boston Symphony, was the main presentation on Sunday afternoon, preceded by the Brandenburg Concerto No. 1, and Cantata No. 55, sung by Ernst Haefliger.

Next weekend Mr. Leinsdorf will conduct the Saturday and Sunday concerts, while Seiji Ozawa will be guest conductor on Friday night. The big attraction will be Van Cliburn's appearance on Saturday, playing the Rachmaniboff Piano Concerto No. 3. Lilian Kallir will be soloist Sunday afternoon, playing Chopin's Piano Concerto in F Minor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUL 14 1966

SOPRANO — Veronica Tyler will make her first American Appearance at Tanglewood following the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition. Miss Tyler is a second prize winner and will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director on the 24th of July. Miss Tyler will sing the "Et incarnatus est," from the Mass in C Minor, K. 427 of Mozart. Also appearing will be Jane Marsh, First Prize winner and Simon Estes, Third Prize winner.

BROOKLYN KINGS COURIER
Saturday, July 23, 1966
BROOKLYN CANARSIE DIGEST
Tuesday, July 26, 1966

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL STARS: Jane Marsh, left, Soprano, will make her first American appearance at Tanglewood following the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition. Miss Marsh is the first American to win First Prize since 1958. Miss Marsh will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, on July 24. Lilian Kallir, right, will be piano soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the same program. She will play the Chopin Concerto in F minor on July 24. She will play Schumann Koncertstuck in G major on July 30. Miss Marsh will sing "Lisa's Scene and Arioso from 'Pique Dame'" and The Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin" of Tchaikovsky. Also appearing on July 30 will be Veronica Tyler, Second Prize Winner in the Tchaikovsky Competition, and Simon Estes, Third Prize Winner.

FLATBUSH LIFE
Saturday, July 23, 1966
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUL 14 1966

—Jane Marsh will make her first American appearance at Tanglewood following the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition. Miss Marsh is the first American to win First Prize since 1958. Miss Marsh will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director on the 24th of July. She will sing "Lisa's Scene and Arioso from 'Pique Dame'" and The Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin" of Tchaikovsky. Also appearing will be Veronica Tyler, Second Prize winner and Simon Estes, Third Prize winner.

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUL 14 1966

PIANO SOLOIST—Lilian Kallir will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director. She will play the Chopin Concerto in F minor on July 24 and the Schumann Koncertstuck in G major on July 30, with Erich Leinsdorf conducting.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, July 17, 1966

SELL-OUT PERFORMANCE — Van Cliburn will perform the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3 with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf conducting, at Tanglewood on Saturday evening. Tickets for the Music Shed at the Lenox, Mass., music festival have been sold out weeks ago.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUL 14 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 17 1966

TROY MORNING RECORD
Monday, July 25, 1966

10,596 Hear Cliburn At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — America's only first prize winners in Moscow's Tchaikovsky music competition — Van Cliburn and Jane Marsh — brought their talents to yesterday's performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Tanglewood Music Festival.

Cliburn, 1958 winner at the piano, and Miss Marsh, 1966 voice competitition winner from New York City, were returned for several curtain calls after their performances before a crowd of 10,596.

It was the first American concert appearance for Miss Marsh since returning from Moscow.

The Boston Symphony wound up a three-concert series at the festival that brought out a total of 32,291 persons—the largest turnout for three concerts since Tanglewood's closing weekend in 1959.

Miss Marsh was joined by Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third prize winners in voice competition at this year's Moscow competition.

Miss Marsh, a soprano, sang Tatiana's letter scene from Tchaikovsky opera's "Eugene Onegin" and the aria "O Patria Mia" from Verdi's "Aida," both of which she performed in Moscow.

EAST HAMPTON STAR
Thursday, July 28, 1966

Herbert E. Worthington is taking a vacation trip through upper New York State and New England; he was at Tanglewood last weekend to hear Van Cliburn.

BROOKLYN RECORD
Friday, July 29, 1966

TANGLEWOOD: Bklyn Academy Music trek to Tanglewood, July 24 for $16.00. Mrs. Monroe D. Stein, chairman. Mrs. Sarah Walder at STerling 3-6700 for information.

TIGHT BINDING

Courier EXPRESS
BUFFALO
Western New York's Greatest Newspaper
D. 158,172 SUN. 299,377

JULY 2 4 1966

READY FOR CONCERT—Van Cliburn, left, pianist and winner of the 1958 Tchaikovsky Music Competition in Moscow, and Jane Marsh, 1966 winner of the competition in the same contest, discuss a score with Erich Leinsdorf at Tanglewood, Mass. Both are performing this weekend with the Buffalo Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Leinsdorf.

The Courier-Journal
LOUISVILLE, KY.
D. 229,925 SUN. 338,841

JULY 2 5 1966

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Monday, July 25, 1966

Van Cliburn Plays to 14,375 at Tanglewood

By MICHAEL PILLEY

The Berkshire Music Festival may have lost some of the limelight as a summer attraction to its neighbor across the state border the Saratoga Performing Arts Center, but it certainly hasn't lost any of its appeal to music-lovers from all over the country.

This was emphasised anew Saturday and Sunday when pianist Van Cliburn and soprano Jane Marsh provided some of the highlights of a truly splendid musical program.

There was a unique touch to this occasion. Van Cliburn was a first prize winner at the 1958 Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow. Miss Marsh was the only American first prize winner in this year's competition.

Add to them this year' second and third prize winners, Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, and a Boston Symphony Orchestra exhilaratingly responsive to conductor Erick Leinsdorf and the reasons for a standout weekend are apparent.

It was a standout in more than performance. On Saturday, 14,375 arrived in busses and cars — bearing plates from all over America and many parts of Canada — to hear Van Cliburn. Sunday 10,596 turned up to hear Miss Marsh and her fellow-competitors. Tanglewood officials said the weekend was the biggest this year and one of the biggest ever.

Van Cliburn has long been a crowd-pluller — last week he played to a New York audience of more than 20,000 — and he didn't disappoint his admirers Saturday.

(There was, incidentally, another interesting aspect. Van Cliburn played Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor, which was written in 1909 when the composer made his first visit to America. He made a tour of some 20 concerts, many of which were with the Boston Symphony under conductor Max Fiedler. He afterwards wrote: "It was an incomparable pleasure to work with this excellent orchestra.")

Seemed Effortless

The pianist spanned the years between creation of the concerto and today with depth of understanding and deceptive ease of technique. His rendition seemed effortless but in fact was an admirable marriage with the conception of the composition.

The orchestra, properly unobtrusive in the concerto, was at its best in Schumann's Symphony No. 2 in C Major, a moving blend of quiet reflection and joyously vibrant power. Leinsdorf showed himself fluid but decisive and demanding.

The third rendering Saturday was Brahms' Tragic Overture, Op. 81, most sensitively played.

The three singers dominated Sunday's program with Miss Marsh providing the finale, "O Patria Mia," from Verdi's "Aida" and Tatiana's Letter Scene from Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin." Her clarity and control more than endorsed her Moscow award.

Splendidly sung also were "Et Incarnatus Est," from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K.427, by Miss Tyler, and "Ella giammai m'amo: Dormiro Sol," from Verdi's "Don Carlo," by Estes.

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.
WEEKLY - CIRC.N.AVAIL.

JUL 1 3 1966

Jane Marsh's Moscow Win Recalls Cliburn Impact

When U.S. soprano Jane Marsh recently won in Moscow the Tchaikovsky Vocal Competition it looked like a distaff version of the Van Cliburn overnight bursting to fame and big concert fees. The conditions were not parallel, of course, nor is a soprano identical as a booking commodity to a pianist. Nonetheless it seems evident that history will repeat, at least to a degree. Miss Marsh will make her first "triumphal return" date July 24 at Tanglewood in Massachusetts. The runnersup, soprano Veronica Tyler and basso Simon Estes, also American, will be included.

For a really Russian flavor, Tanglewood has Cliburn on piano the Saturday night (23) preceding.

The Marsh-Tyler-Estes three will also appear Aug. 20 at the Hollywood Bowl. Miss Marsh herself makes a solo television debut Sept. 17 on the Hollywood Palace program, of which Bing Crosby will be emcee. (It is taped July 28 while she is west.)

RCA Victor meanwhile is putting Miss Marsh under contract for disks. First sessions will be with the Boston Symphony and Eric Leisndorf July 24 and again on Aug. 13.

Prizewinning singer arrived in New York Monday (11) from Paris and was "received" by Mayor John V. Lindsay. Carl Dahlgren of Columbia Artists is handling her.

News (e)
NEWPORT, R. I.
Circ. 12,963

JUL 2 3 1966

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 94,357

JUL 25 1966

THE KANSAS CITY STAR
KANSAS CITY, MO.
D. 335,705 SUN. 332,378

JULY 2 5 1966

Soviet Music Victory a Thrill

In the following interview, the first granted since she returned from the Soviet Union —Jane Marsh explains how it feels to be a first-place winner in the Tchaikovsky contest for musicians, the second American to win the contest.

By Joseph Kaye
(The Star's New York Correspondent)

LENOX, MASS. — Miss Jane Marsh talked about the phenomenal event that suddenly made her at this time the most famed American singer.

"This is certainly a thrill," she said as she sat in a little room back of the huge orchestral platform of the Tanglewood concert shed. She had declined her manager's suggestion to lie down on the couch. "I'm fine," she told him and sat up with ease on the couch.

She Won't Push

"Winning the contest, and all that followed is a challenge, but I don't do more than I think I can, or should do until I have the experience I believe I need.

"People expect much of you—they expect a great deal."

Although she could have sung at the Metropolitan the coming season she said she "bowed out" for the time being. She has some operatic roles in mind and feels she is not yet ready for them. But she is going back to Russia this year for a concert tour.

Miss Marsh's development as a singer is almost unique. She had no thought of singing—any kind of singing—until she was 19. "I did no singing whatever anywhere," she said, "not even in a church choir and not even at school graduation. When we had to sing the school song I just mouthed it."

How did she become aware of her voice?" I don't know," she said. "I suppose the voice was dormant and had to come out sometime. When she did begin voice study, did her voice come out full? "It did," she replied. Was it possible there was some psychological influence? "It's quite possible," she said seriously. It was when she came to Oberlin college (from which she was graduated only three years ago) that the vocal revelation came to her. Of course, Oberlin has a reputation for music study and she agreed that helped her awareness of a musical interest.

Interests Were Sports

Until then she had been primarily concerned with sports—she is a champion swimmer and horsewoman.

The new star is a tall, pretty girl with light brown hair and an athletic physique.

With her hair piled high, Slavic fashion, she resembles a Russian girl quite closely. "I was taken for a Russian by the persons I met in Moscow," she said. "But then I have been taken for a Scandinavian, or Spanish and Italian. I guess I look like an international type. I learned to understand a good deal of Russian, and to speak a little. In my little speech after I won the prize I said in Russian, "I've learned to love you, your language and your beautiful music." I loved to say that and they loved to hear me say it."

Following the award, a reception was held in the Kremlin Miss Marsh related, and although it was a "standup" party, there were few tables for high officials and Alexei Kosygin, premier of Russia invited her to sit with him at his table. "We spoke of many things," she said. "But Kosygin did not mention politics. He merely emphasized the value of such competitions as the Tchaikovsky to further friendship between nations." The conversation was very formal at first, but after Mr. Kosygin drank a toast or two (of wine) and I did the same I became more respectfully formal and he relaxed into a less formal attitude."

Discussing her career again, Miss Marsh said that she did not intend to do anything, "that might ruin what I have." She has the patience to make progress intelligently.

Asked whether she was engaged or married she said no, but added with one of her friendly laughs, "six months ago I might have given you a different answer."

entertainment and the arts

At Tanglewood

Van Cliburn Plays Rachmaninoff No. 3

By JOHN F. KYES
Gazette Music Critic

LENOX — Saturday's audience at Tanglewood was one of the largest ever, when 14,375 heard Van Cliburn in the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor, with Erich Leinsdorf leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The entire weekend was a triumph, with 7,320 on Friday, 10,596 yesterday afternoon, and a total for the week of 37,224, including the Saturday rehearsal and Tuesday chamber music.

Gazette Review

Cliburn's conception of this Rachmaninoff work was the most virile and expressive that I have heard. Stockier than in other seasons, he sat comfortably erect, getting tremendous power into his arms and hands without crouching.

Results Dazzling

His pace at times seemed to tax the leader and ensemble, but the results were dazzling. At the evening's end, Cliburn and Leinsdorf embraced fervently, delighted with their mutual achievement.

Cliburn produced intense sonorities from the instrument without seeming to exceed its capacity for choice tone. His rapid and lighter passages had not only charming deftness but a fresh and silvery sheen.

Early in the work, there was a lovely effect, when the piano's voice seemed to be "riding" the tones of the wind choir, an eloquent part of them.

The whole evening on Saturday was a symphonic triumph. The Brahms "Tragic" Overture was of great dignity and beauty. Ominously assertive brasses at the beginning and end gave way in the midsections to quieter combinations, richly introspective, with chromatic changes typical of Brahms.

The orchestra continued to sound inspired in the Schumann Symphony No. 2 in C major, a generally happy and wholesome work in spite of temporary stresses and conficts.

Violins

The magnificent Boston violins showed their versatility. Dignity and sustained quality marked the first movement. The capricious, quaint and sensitive initial themes of the Scherzo brought out other aspects, and the splendidly slow and thoughtful exposition of the "Adagio espressivo" found the violins singing their hearts out.

Seiji Ozawa, guest conductor, was in the limelight Friday, with Joseph Silverstein, concert master, as soloist. Friday's Prelude had Silverstein, Lilian Kallir, pianist, and the Tanglewood Choir under Alfred Nash Patterson.

Miss Kallir was heard on Sunday and also this country's exciting prizewinners in the vocal section of the recent Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow: Jane Marsh, soprano (first); Veronica Tyler, soprano (second); and Simon Estes, bass (third prize).

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,615

JULY 2 1 1966

Seiji Ozawa To Conduct at Tanglewood

Seiji Ozawa will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Friday at 9 p.m. in music by Schumann, Schubert, Mendelssohn and Stravinsky, with Joseph Silverstein as solosit.

The "American Festival Overture" by Schuman; Schubert's "Symphony No. 5 in B flat," Mendelssohn's "Concerto for Vielin and Orchestra in E Minor" and Stravinsky's Suite from the Ballet, "L'Oiseua de feu" (Firebird) will be on the Friday night program.

With Erich Leinsdorf at the helm Saturday at 8 p.m., the concert program with Van Cliburn soloing in Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto No. 3 in D Minor" will include Brahms' "Tragic Overture" and Schumann's "Symphony No. 2 in C Major."

Sunday at 2:30 p.m., the Boston Symphony will perform Beethoven's Overture to "Coriolan" and Lilian Kallir will be soloist in Chopin's "Piano Concerto No. 2 in F Minor." Veronica Tyler will be soprano soloist in Mozart's "Et incarnatus est" from the Mass in C Minor; Simon Estes will be bass solosit in Verdi's "Ella giammai m'amo: Dormiro sol," and Jane Marsh will be soprano soloist in Verdis "O patria mia" from "Aida" and Tchaikovsky's Tatiana's Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin."

Springfield Herald
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Bi-Weekly
Circ. 111,573
JUL 28 1966

Last Friday at Tanglewood, the prelude included Brahms and Mendelssohn. The Brahms Sonata in A major for Piano and Violin was performed by violinist, Joseph Silverstein, and pianist, Lilian Kallir. This Sonata was written during the composer's summer vacation when Brahms felt especially happy, and the composition reflected his tranquility.

The second movement, the Andante tranquillo, Vivace, was particularly interesting because of its intermingling of two opposite moods; a delightful, simple melody and a sprightly, even humorous vivace. A brief animated pizzicato passage separated the melody and vivace.

Songs for Mixed Chorus, by Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy was next on the prelude. The combination of polyphony and harmony made these songs uniquely attractive for the singers and the audience. The subject of the songs was nature. Birds, flowers and streams dominated the subjects. An unusual staging of varying the singers positions after each number helped maintain the audience's complete attention, and created an apparent broader stereo effect.

JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN
Born in Detroit. Studied at Curtis. At 23, became youngest member of Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1955. Concertmaster in 1962.

9 P.M. FRIDAY CONCERT

The Evening Concert varied from the contemporary William Schuman, to Schubert, Mendelssohn and Stravinsky. The Boston Symphony Orchestra was guest-conducted by Seiji Ozawa, a graduate of the Toho School of Music in Tokyo, and winner of several international competitions for conducting.

First on the program was William Schuman's American Festival Overture. William Schuman is a graduate of Columbia University and is presently president of Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts. He composed this Overture from a recollected boyhood "festive occasion". It opened with a lively, heavy precussion, and Sousa-type brass combo set to Jazz. His entire middle section, the highlight of his overture, wa sgiven to a Fugue, starting with strings alone, then woodwinds, a contrapuntal combination of perpetual strings and dissonant brass tied together by percussion ending in a delightful contrast.

Next on then program was chuberts Symphony No. 5, in B-flat. It reflected Schubert's undisciplined bohemian existance, with long, repeated endless strains. He intermittedly "boulevardiered" from gay Mozart to somber Bethoven. The andante slowly conversed with deep, melancholic refrains between strings, solo oboe, and somber flutes. His final movement ,the Allegro Vivace, returned to the light Mozartian gaiety with more repeated refrains.

HIGHLIGHT OF THE EVENING

Afer the intermission, the virtuoso's popular "Violin Concerto in E minor" by Mendelssohn, was played. Composed by "the happiest life in musical history," this concerto was completed three years before his death, though Mendelssohn allegedly began two attempts of its form as a boy of fourteen.

Performed by Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestea, the concerto proceeded at once with the songful main theme accompanied by the string section only.

The second theme was intoned with soft harmony by the flutes and clarinets. The Andante followed without break, and Silverstein masterfully presented the lyrical colorful theme. In the finale, the violin smoothly double-stopped the scherzo-like theme, followed by a constant sparkle of dexterous technique (with unusual up-bow accents) building to a powerful, hammer-hitting brilliant ending. A standing ovation relieved the audience's pent-up excitement.

Next Friday the 29, at 7 P.M., the prelude will include two selections by Schumann. The 9 P.M. concert will vary with Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride"; Debussy's Three Nocturnes; and Schumann's Cello Concerto with Jules Eskin as guest cello solist. Saturday, July 30, will contain Weber's Overture "Der Freischutz"; Schumann's Koncertstuck in G major with solo pianist, Lilian Kallir; Schumann's Fantasy in C major with solo violinist, Joseph Silverstein; and finally, Dvorak's Symphony No. 8. Sunday, July 31, guest conductor Schippers will conduct Rossini's Overture, "La Gazza Ladra", Schumann's Piano Concerto with guest soloist Frank; and Mussorgsky-Ravel; Pictures at an Exhibition.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
JUL 25 1966

Record Crowds At Tanglewood Hear Van Cliburn, Jane Marsh

Tanglewood had its biggest weekend since Erich Leinsdorf became leader of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with a crowd of 14,375 present Saturday night to hear Van Cliburn and 10,596 on Sunday afternoon to hear this country's only other first prize-winner of the Tchaikovsky competition, soprano Jane Marsh. Friday night there were 7320 in the audience to hear the young Seiji Ozawa lead the orchestra as guest conductor.

Names do draw high attendance at the Berkshire Festival at the major concerts, but it must be kept in mind that the full program of musical offerings over a week's time at Tanglewood offers a variety of musical fare for those knowledgeable enough to be selective.

On Friday night Mr. Ozawa, a former student at the Berkshire Music Center, brought the audience to its feet chering after leading the Boston Symphony with a great display of energy, style, and flexibility. A modest young man who sometimes disappears into the orchestra when taking his, bows, Ozawa has borrowed a touch of the Leinsdorf tensile manner, but one feels a special commitment to the performance watching their young conductor listen while he leads.

A heterogeneous program started off with a rousingly bright "American Festival Overture" by William Schuman, written for the Boston orchestra in 1939. This has lots of brass and drums, a cheerful piece which Ozawa virtually danced his way through. It was followed by Schubert's lovely Symphony No. 5, all silk and handled with a sharp change in conducting style. The mood continued with Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E Minor, with Joseph Silverstein as soloist. Mr. Silverstein, concertmaster of the orchestra, is well appreciated at Tanglewood, where his frequent solo appearances reveal fidelity to the highest performing level with no histrionics. The Concerto has a particularly sweet melodic line, and, of course, Silverstein and the orchestra play in perfect balance.

The concert returned to full orchestra and 20th Century color effects with the "Fire-Bird" suite by Igor Stravinsky. Flutes sound better in the wide open spaces of Tanglewood than anywhere else, it seems, and the haunting notes of the flute, with the shimmering fabric of the whole work, ended the evening on a romantic level, heightened by an ovation which the audience had just been waiting to award the young conductor.

The weekend prelude, given at seven on Friday nights, provided a real plum in the Brahms Sonata in A major for piano and violin, played by Silverstein and Lillian Kallir. This was followed by the Tanglewood Choir singing a group of songs by Mendelssohn.

It was celebrity night on Saturday with the crowds streaming in to hear the famous pianist, Van Cliburn, give his famous presentation of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3, a tremendous show piece. Mr. Cliburn played this during the Tchaikowsky competition in Moscow in 1958, where he triumphed, and he masters it, with full help from the orchestra. The program also included Brahms' Tragic Overture and Schumann's Symphony No. 2. Leinsdorf was the conductor.

He also conducted the Sunday afternoon concert at which the latest Moscow winner, Jane Marsh, appeared with two other American singers who won awards there this year, Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes. The concert opened with Beethoven's Overture to "Coriolan." Lillian Kallir was piano soloist, presenting Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 2. Veronica Tyler, soprano, sang "Et Incarnatus Est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor, followed by Simon Estes, bass, singing Verdi's "Ella Giammai M'ame: Dormiro Sol" from "Don Carlo." Miss Marsh concluded the program with the aria "O Patria Mia" from Aida by Verdi, and the letter scene from "Eugene Onegin" by Tchaikowsky.

On Aug. 3 the annual Pops concert will be given at Tanglewood, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. Arthur Fiedler will conduct, with Stan Getz the saxophonist as special guest. Among other things the Pops will play Tales of the Vienna Woods with Toni Noichl as zither soloist.

(By Anabel B. Murphy)

New York Post
D. 324,256 SUN. 243,637
JULY 25 1966

Jane Marsh Stars With Van Cliburn

Lenox, Mass., July 25 (AP)—America's only first prize winners in Moscow's Tchaikovsky music competition—Van Cliburn and Jane Marsh—brought their talents to yesterday's performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Tanglewood Music Festival.

Cliburn, 1958 winner at the piano, and Miss Marsh, 1966 voice competition winner from New York City, were returned for several curtain calls after their performances before a crowd of 10,596.

It was the first American concert appearance for Miss Marsh since returning from Moscow.

Miss Marsh was joined by Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third prize winners in voice competition at this year's Moscow competition.

DAILY NEWS
NEW YORK'S PICTURE NEWSPAPER
D. 2,097,578 SUN. 3,070,836
JULY 22 1966

Jane Marsh, the 24-year-old American first prize winner of the Tchaikovsky Music Competition, will be featured on NBC-TV's Telephone Hour special on the Tanglewood Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., due Oct. 23. A spokesman for the program confirmed yesterday that the soprano will be filmed Saturday as she rehearses with the Boston Symphony Orch.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 25 1966

At Tanglewood

Contact With Romanticists At Near Peak of Pleasure

The Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Seiji Ozawa and Erich Leinsdorf conducting.

By FRANK N. PATTERSON

Warmly spiced by a sprinkling of both reknown or newly acclaimed soloists, and gently cooled by the Berkshires' atmosphere of rare weather, Tanglewood's encounter with the Romanticists this weekend almost reached the peak of pleasure domes.

It is close to a painful experience in today's protesting and explosive environment to reflect justly on the seemingly vague disturbances the Romanticists were wont to find important. The text of one of the Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy songs that was sweetly presented by the Tanglewood Choir during the Friday's weekend Prelude, perhaps furnished a fair example of the problem: "All is lovely as long as the heavens are blue, all is well in whatever troubles your heart." seems indeed an unlikely story.

However, as one rests in Tanglewood's rarified zephers gazing out on the fresh green, there is an all too brief encounter with the lush harmonies and sentiment that follows: "Why do you foolishly look within your narrow room? Come into the green country and find how sweet the air is. The wind has taken your grief with it!".

In such a strain the performance of Brahms' Sonata in A for piano and violin performed by Joseph Silverstein, violinist and Lilian Kallir, piano swept one into vagaries of mild, sweet-sad emotion. The most poignant portion of which seemed a tranquil transparent pleasure.

Mr. Silverstein again produced superb solo work later in the evening in performance of Mendelssohn's melancholy but amiable; unassuming but smoothly polished Concerto in E. Mr. Silverstein's delicate and svelt tone admirably matched the character of the work as did the intense and sympathetic conducting of Seiji Ozawa.

The almost urchin charm Mr. Ozawa presents with his wraith-like figure as he approaches the podium is dramatically swallowed up by his lithe tiger approach to conducting. The approach seems effective, even electrifying to the orchestra and whether it be the zap of William Schuman's American Festival Overture or the Pow of Stravinsky's Firebird, his energetic conducting has an unmatchable discipline.

Though one senses the Romantic composer felt the modern orchestra frustratingly inadequate, it is such discipline and intellect as Ozawa's that modern orchestra can sound adequate for Romantic works as Schubert's Fifth Symphony and Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto.

Saturday's concert conducted by Leinsdorf included a rousing performance of Brahms' Tragic Overture, a less than brilliatn performance of Schumann's less than spectacular 2nd Symphony and a glittering performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

Van Cliburn was the soloist and one would assume, probably erroneously, that Russian-born composers were Cliburn's meat. Like the rest of this weekend, the concerto suggested we were born 30 years too late. However, if we can afford it, a renaissance of world wide Romanticism is long, long overdue.

SUNDAY

By Louis Cuccinello
Music Dept.
NASC

Undoubtedly, the exceptionally was promoted by the announced was promoted by the announced appearance, of Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, first, second and third place winners of their division at the Tchaikovsky International Vocal competition in Moscow last month.

Seats were as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth at concert time and those with choice positions on the lawn were not straying without assurance that proper precautionary measures were taken to reserve their envied piece of real estate.

Nor can it be said that those who came to hear this display of youthful American talent were disappointed with what they heard and saw. Our artists gave a good account of themselves Sunday and any extensive coverage by this reviewer would be a repetition of the adjectives and superlatives radioed from Moscow.

The most impressive feature of the trio was musicianship with capital "M" — phrasing, diction and interpretation "seemed to come naturally." Miss Tyler has an exceptionally beautiful "velvet" tone, Mr. Estes a rich voice with a strong upper range and Miss Marsh a maturity and resonance that belies her youth.

The opening half of the program featured Beethoven's "Overture to Coriolan" and Piano Concerto No. 2, in F minor by Chopin with Lilian Kallir as soloist.

The Overture is really a concert piece — the subject of which is the famous scene from the play "Coriolan" in which the inner struggle of honor, pride and love reach its climax.

Miss Kallir is a fine technician whose overuse of the pedal blur well executed passages. Leinsdorf knows the Tanglewood Shed and its acoustics. The orchestral tone as a unit and its relationship to the soloist was excellent. Unfortunately there were moments when it was difficult for the conductor to keep orchestra and soloist together.

TIGHT BINDING

77 37

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ 61,129

JUL 25 1966

AMERICA'S THREE TCHAIKOVSKY COMPETITION WINNERS AT TANGLEWOOD
From left, Veronica Tyler, Jane Marsh and Simon Estes

Music: Showcase of Soloists at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The fourth week of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood ended yesterday afternoon with a showcase of soloists.

An audience of 10,596 made a weekend total of 37,224, breaking the record for the festival's 19-year history. Closest comparable figures were Erich Leinsdorf's opening weekend as conductor of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood in 1963, and the closing weekend of 1959.

Big moment was the first appearance of soprano Jane Marsh since she recently won first prize for singers at the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow.

Other Soloists

Also singing with the Boston Symphony under Leinsdorf were Veronica Tyler, soprano, second-prize winner in Moscow, and Simon Estes, bass, recipient of the third prize.

Holding her own in this glamorous vocal company was Lilian Kallir, soloist in Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor, Opus 21.

Apart from providing superb support for this impressive entourage, the orchestra had its brief moment with Beethoven's "Coriolan" Overture, Opus 62.

The 24-year-old Miss Marsh is the only American to win Moscow's first prize since Van Cliburn in 1958. The presence of 14,375 persons to hear him at Tanglewood Saturday night shows what the Tchaikovsky Prize has done for him.

Last fall, Miss Marsh made her professional debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Miss Tyler, 29, has had an active career for the past five years. She is warmly remembered in Worcester for her performance in Handel's "Messiah" in 1964. Estes, 28, has enjoyed notable successes in Europe and this country for the past few seasons.

Performance Recorded

It would be a grave injustice to assume that their successful careers started in Moscow a few weeks ago.

One could also presume that their world-publicized prizes gave them the kind of pro-and-con incentives to perform as they did yesterday. Adding to the challenging situation was the fact that the performance was being recorded for early release.

Miss Marsh is tall, attractive, poised, and an excellent musician. She had to be to make noteworthy Tatiana's Letter Scene from Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin," a rather unhappy choice for this particular occasion. In concert performance, its tepid stretches bordered on the dreary.

Nevertheless, Miss Marsh's voice rang with warmth. It was strong and controlled. Verdi's aria from "Aida," "O My Homeland" had intensity, pathos and persuasion. This indeed unfolded Aida's ecstatic awaiting of her lover Radames.

Vibrant Voice

Order of Moscow prizes was not confirmed by the Tanglewood audience.

Estes created something of a furore. Miss Tyler was cordially received.

The young bass has a vibrant, rolling voice and a rare gift for intensifying an operatic personality with his own. In this instance it was Philip II's passionate soliloquy, "She never Loved Me," from Verdi's "Don Carlo."

Despite a slight tremor in his low range, Estes made of it a scene of steadfast drama. The voice was magnificent, and the style musicianly.

There were traces of nervousness in Miss Tyler's performance. Nevertheless, it was evident that she has perfected qualities that were obvious in her Worcester appearance.

Mozart Mass

She sang "Et Incarnatus Est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor with tonal purity and facility. Concentration was on mechanics, not quite attaining the aria's outburst of religious fervor and sublime expression.

Without such aura of international pomp, Miss Kallir gave a lyrically attractive account of the Chopin Piano Concerto. Tone was conspicuously light. Technique was fluent and the pianist utilized rhythmic flexibilities to which the orchestra responded.

The aggressive orchestration and light-textured piano tone occasionally bred casual, if not trivial results. Piano phrase endings did not always penetrate orchestral fiber.

Miss Kallir approached the sentimetal slow movement in good taste, without gush or sentimentality. A true mazurka rhythm was achieved in the Finale, but gentility prevailed even in heavier passagework.

Leinsdorf ordered and received gruff effects in Beethoven's "Coriolan." The playing was agitated and Beethoven's music responded by raging an almost unabated tempest.

The festival resumes next Friday night, when Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony in Smetana's "Bartered Bride" Overture, Three Nocturnes by Debussy, and Elgar's "Enigma Variations." Jules Eskin of the orchestra will be soloist in Schumann's Cello Concerto.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277

JULY 2 5 1966

Music: Young Singers at Tanglewood

3 Winners of Moscow Competition Perform

By THEODORE STRONGIN
Special to The New York Times

LENOX, Mass., July 24—Three expert young American singers made a strong impression in their anxiously awaited appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this afternoon. They are a thoroughly accomplished, perfectly schooled lot.

The three, all of whom excelled in the Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow last month, gave a total impression of the firmest kind of confidence in their first American appearance since their return from the Soviet Union. Beyond that, each had a personal appeal that explained the choices of the Moscow judges.

Jane Marsh, a 24-year-old soprano and the only American first-prize winner, displayed a voice of utter purity. At times, up high, her voice touched on a ravishing timbre that indicated the great vistas that lie in her future; she has been singing professionally for only a year.

One's first impression on listening to Veronica Tyler, the 29-year-old soprano who shared a Moscow second prize, was of complete inner conviction. One did not hear tones primarily, even though her tones were shimmery, velvety and homogeneous in quality. What came across with Miss Tyler was the depth of her musical involvement.

Simon Estes, bass, 28 and a third-prize winner at Moscow, was prepossessing with his great ease of tone production, and the pleasant, true timbre of his voice.

All the singers offered selections that they had sung during the competition. Miss Marsh's choices were Tatiana's Letter Scene from Tchaikovsky's "Eugen Onegin" and the aria "O patria mia" from Verdi's "Aida."

The Letter Scene is not easy to give without operatic trappings—scenery, costume, lighting, the works. There are many orchestral interludes that cry out for room for the singer to move around in, and emote. Miss Marsh made the best of concert limitations and suggested a bent for dramatic soprano roles. But under the circumstances, she was restricted. What came through was flawless vocalism, not theatrical personality.

United Press International
Jane Marsh

Her "Aida" scene was the revelatory one. Here she was freer, and her voice floated over the orchestra at times in the genuine, thrilling, Verdi manner.

Miss Tyler sang the "Et Incarnatus Est" from Mozart's C minor Mass (K. 427). It was a comfortable, placid, warming performance that suggested that she has a strong future in lieder, too. She may have a future in opera, but the mass excerpt did not shed light on that sort of ability.

Mr. Estes's "Ella giammai m'amo" from Verdi's "Don Carlos" was a musical—if not dramatic—gem. He built phrases smoothly by well-placed changes in the quality and intensity of his voice rather than by dramatic manipulation of phrases. Mr. Estes will make his New York debut next year when he sings a leading role in Gunther Schuller's "The Trial," with the Hamburg Opera.

Verdi and Tchaikovsky Given by Jane Marsh

•

Erich Leinsdorf, who conducted, and the Bostonians provided the most sympathetic and subtle kind of support imaginable for the young singers.

Earlier in the concert, Lillian Kallir played the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor with the orchestra. Miss Kallir's performance was the other side of the coin from that of another Tschaikovsky winner in Moscow (in 1958), Van Cliburn, who played his trademark, the Rachmaninoff Third Piano Concerto with Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra on Saturday night. (Mr. Cliburn drew a record crowd of 14,375 for the season.)

Miss Kallir did not have Mr. Cliburn's pianistic splendor, nor his steel-trap perfection. But her playing was very feminine, charming and graceful, and a thorough delight.

The three-concert weekend that started Friday night drew a total audience of more than 32,200, plus almost 4,000 at yesterday's open dress rehearsal. This was the largest weekend at Tanglewood for Mr. Leinsdorf since he took over as music director in 1963.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 635,619 SUN. 1,337,277

JULY 2 4 1966

SINGER

Jane Marsh, the soprano who won a first prize in the ional Music Competition in Moscow, will appear on the "Bell Telephone Hour" over N. B. C. television on Sunday, Oct. 23, at 6:30 P. M. Her appearance will be part of a documentary on events this summer at the Berkshire Music Festival on the Tanglewood estate in Lenox, Mass. Henry Jaffe, producer of the Bell series, said Miss Marsh was filmed yesterday during a rehearsal for a Boston Symphony Orchestra concert to be presented at Tanglewood tonight. For her television appearance in the fall, Miss Marsh also will be filmed when she performs at Tanglewood on Aug. 6 and 21.

Moscow Winner Marsh Sings at Tanglewood

By JAMES FELTON
Of The Bulletin Staff

LENOX, MASS., July 25—Tanglewood seemed like a bit of Moscow transplanted yesterday afternoon. Soprano Jane Marsh, who won first prize in the Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow last month, made her first appearance in the United States since then.

The ample, 24-year-old singer is the first American to take top prize since it was won in 1958 by Van Cliburn.

If this was Miss Marsh at her best, the Russian jurors were generous in their standards. Standing motionless in a yellow gown, Miss Marsh sang Tatianas Letter Scene from Tchaikovsky's opera, "Eugene Onegin," the selection that won her the prize. Tatiana's passionate confession of love for Onegin failed to materialize in the lyrical cast of Miss Marsh's voice.

• • •

SHE DID at least display the lightness and clarity of a lyrical soprano, but it was stiff, well-drilled, almost expressionless in her delivery and projection. One felt more that here was a singer of some promise, of basic good musicianship, but one who is formative at best.

Miss Marsh managed the aria "O Patria Mia" from Verdi's "Aida" somewhat more effectively. Here and there a high tone flashed out from a soft beginning to a bright if brief climax. But warmth and nuance were missing. Perhaps there is bigger future in store for Miss Marsh.

Conductor Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony were too heavy in their accompaniment not only for Miss Marsh but for two other winners in the Tchaikovsky competition who sang yesterday.

• • •

THEY WERE soprano Veronica Tyler, who won second prize, and bass Simon Estes, who took third prize in the category of male singers. Both are 28 years old.

Miss Tyler revealed a light, pleasant quality in her solo, "Et Incarnatus Est," from Mozart's Mass in C Minor (K.427). Estes sang acceptably in the aria "Ella Giammai M'amo" from Verdi's "Don Carlo."

Both singers, like Miss Marsh, were almost monochromatic in expression.

The Evening Bulletin
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
D. 672,235

JULY 2 5 1966

San Francisco Examiner
D. 275,000
JULY 29 1966

Local Soprano Adds Eastern Laurels

By ARTHUR BLOOMFIELD

Soprano Jane Marsh, the 24 year old local girl who garnered top honors in the recent Tchaikovsky Contest at Moscow, picked up more raves at the Berkshire Festival in Massachusetts when she sang with Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony the other day.

According to the New York Times' critic, Theodore Strongin, Miss Marsh "displayed a voice of utter purity. At times, up high, her voice touched on a ravishing timbre that indicated the great vistas that lie in her future."

At Tanglewood Miss Marsh's selections were Tatiana's Letter Scene from "Eugen Onegin" and "O Patria Mia" from "Aida."

Strongin pointed out that the Letter Scene is not easy to bring off without operatic trappings. "Miss Marsh," he said, "made the best of concert limitations and suggested a bent for dramatic soprano roles. But under the circumstances she was restricted. What came through was flawless vocalism, not theatrical personality.

"Her 'Aida' scene was the revelatory one. Here she was freer, and her voice floated over the orchestra in the genuine, thrilling Verdi manner."

JANE MARSH
"Flawless vocalism"

Back in 1963 Miss Marsh was a member of the Merola Opera Program here, and she appeared at Masson Vineyards in the final scene from Verdi's "Forza." We'll never quite forget the intense look of anguish she brought to Leonora's face.

San Francisco Opera director Kurt Herbert Adler offered Miss Marsh major assignments in 1965 and 1966, but the very conscientious Miss Marsh declined, saying she doesn't want to appear on the home grounds until she's absolutely sure she's ready.

The Evening Gazette
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 94,357
JUL 22 1966

VAN CLIBURN

The only two Americans to win first prizes at the international music competition in Moscow — pianist Van Cliburn and soprano Jane Marsh — are the stars of this Saturday's Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. The complete summer series at Tanglewood is being broadcast live. Radio broadcasts start at 2 p.m. Saturdays on WAAB.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607
JULY 25 1966

Van Cliburn Plays to 14,375 at Tanglewood

By MICHAEL PILLEY

The Berkshire Music Festival may have lost some of the limelight as a summer attraction to its neighbor across the state border the Saratoga Performing Arts Center, but it certainly hasn't lost any of its appeal to music-lovers from all over the country.

This was emphasised anew Saturday and Sunday when pianist Van Cliburn and soprano Jane Marsh provided some of the highlights of a truly splendid musical program.

There was a unique touch to this occasion. Van Cliburn was a first prize winner at the 1958 Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow. Miss Marsh was the only American first prize winner in this year's competition.

Add to them this year' second and third prize winners, Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, and a Boston Symphony Orchestra exhilaratingly responsive to conductor Erick Leinsdorf and the reasons for a standout weekend are apparent.

It was a standout in more than performance. On Saturday, 14,375 arrived in busses and cars — bearing plates from all over America and many parts of Canada — to hear Van Cliburn. Sunday 10,596 turned up to hear Miss Marsh and her fellow-competitors. Tanglewood officials said the weekend was the biggest this year and one of the biggest ever.

Van Cliburn has long been a crowd-pluller — last week he played to a New York audience of more than 20,000 — and he didn't disappoint his admirers Saturday.

(There was, incidentally, another interesting aspect. Van Cliburn played Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor, which was written in 1909 when the composer made his first visit to America. He made a tour of some 20 concerts, many of which were with the Boston Symphony under conductor Max Fiedler. He afterwards wrote: "It was an incomparable pleasure to work with this excellent orchestra.")

Seemed Effortless

The pianist spanned the years between creation of the concerto and today with depth of understanding and deceptive ease of technique. His rendition seemed effortless but in fact was an admirable marriage with the conception of the composition.

The orchestra, properly unobtrusive in the concerto, was at its best in Schumann's Symphony No. 2 in C Major, a moving blend of quiet reflection and joyously vibrant power. Leinsdorf showed himself fluid but decisive and demanding.

The third rendering Saturday was Brahms' Tragic Overture, Op. 81, most sensitively played.

The three singers dominated Sunday's program with Miss Marsh providing the finale, "O Patria Mia," from Verdi's "Aida" and Tatiana's Letter Scene from Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin." Her clarity and control more than endorsed her Moscow award.

Splendidly sung also were "Et Incarnatus Est," from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, K.427, by Miss Tyler, and "Ella giammai m'amo: Dormiro Sol," from Verdi's "Don Carlo," by Estes.

The Kansas City Times
KANSAS CITY, MO.
D. 338,026
JULY 25 1966

Prize Winners at Berkshire Festival

By Joseph Kaye
(The Star's New York Correspondent)

Lenox, Mass.—The three American singers who were prize winners in the celebrated Russian Tchaikovsky International music competition took part yesterday in the concert of the Berkshire festival, at Tanglewood, the summer home here of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

Among them was the now famous Jane Marsh, who won first prize in the Moscow contest last month. The others were Veronica Tyler, the second-prize winner; and Simon Estes, who was awarded third prize.

First Since Return

Miss Marsh, a San Francisco woman of 24, sang at this performance for the first time since her return from Moscow. To make the appearance of these prize-winners more noteworthy, Van Cliburn, the pianist who was the first American to win the Russian prime award eight years ago, was the soloist with the orchestra Saturday night.

The immense popularity achieved by Cliburn as a result of his award was evidenced by the audience of 14,375. Yesterday, with national emphasis focused on Miss Marsh, the audience numbered almost 11,000.

Miss Marsh, a prima donna vision in a chiffon gown, sang in Russian the "Letter Scene" from Tchaikovsky's opera "Eugene Onegin" (which helped her win the first prize) and the aria from the Nile in Verdi's "Aida." She has a voice of purity, clarity and volume, able to soar to an effortless fullness, and descend to the most elegant of pianissimos.

Those who heard her at the rehearsal Saturday must have been more impressed than by her performance yesterday. Nervousness obviously set in and Miss Marsh did not do herself justice. But as she herself said in private Saturday, she is in no hurry to gain the success heights. She wants experience first.

Has Many Offers

The many offers she already has and which she is accepting with cool judgment will take care of that.

Miss Tyler, 28, sang an excerpt from Mozart's Mass in C minor. She is a flexible soprano of pure quality, though without the expanse of volume that is popularly expected of divas.

Simon Estes, also 28, who sang an aria from Verdi's "Don Carlo," made a deep impression on the audience with a bass voice of sure tone and solid quality.

All three Americans have a destiny with high artistry and undoubtedly material rewards.

Cliburn Repeats Concert

The ovations remain for Van Cliburn. He repeated his familiar Rachmaninoff's third concerto, which made him such a musical hero in Moscow.

He displayed the same dazzling technique, and a power that overwhelms the concert shed with sound. In his solo passages and cadenzas, he didn't need an orchestra—he was the orchestra. At the end he was impulsively embraced and kissed by Erich Leinsdorf, the conductor of the Boston symphony and director of the Berkshire festival.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y.
RECORDER & DEMOCRAT
D. 13,500
JUL 25 1966

14,000 Hear Van Cliburn At Tanglewood; Saratoga Performance Slated Aug. 6

Pianist Van Cliburn is scheduled to appear at Saratoga Performing Arts Center on Saturday, Aug. 6, when he will join conductor Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra as it moves into its new summer home at the Center for a three-week season.

Area residents who heard Van Cliburn's concert here several years ago will want to hear him again in his all-Rachmaninoff program featuring the "Concerto No. 3 in D Minor."

Van Cliburn and soprano Jane Marsh provided highlights at Saturday and Sunday's musical program at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center attended by over 14,375 on Saturday for Van Cliburn's appearance, [illegible] 10,596 on Sunday to hear Miss Marsh.

Van Cliburn was a first prize winner at the 1958 Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow and Miss Marsh was the only American first prize winner in this year's competition, both proving popular crowd-pullers.

Director Ormandy is celebrating his 30th year as music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra. The orchestra has recently completed a 15,000 mile goodwill tour of Latin America. It will give 17 concerts in the Center's new 5,100-seat amphitheater from Aug. 4-24, including three student-teacher matinees Aug. 3, 10 and 17.

Three all-Beethoven programs, including the opening orchestral concert on Aug. 4 will be presented. The opening concert will feature a quartet of soloists from the Metropolitan Opera, the Cornell University Chorus and Glee Club and the Capitol Hill Choral Society.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sun (m)
LEWISTON-AUBURN, Me.
Circ. 31,803
JUL 25 1966

TWO TOP ARTISTS PERFORM IN MASS.

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—America's only first prize winners in Moscow's Tchaikovsky Music Competition — Van Cliburn and Jane Marsh — brought their talents to Sunday's performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Tanglewood Music Festival.

Cliburn, 1958 winner at the Piano, and Miss Marsh, 1966 voice competition winner, were returned for several curtain calls after their performances before a crowd of 10,596.

It was the first American concert appearance for Miss Marsh since returning from Moscow.

The Boston Symphony wound up a three-concert series at the festival Sunday that brought out a total of 32,291 persons — the largest turnout for three concerts since Tanglewood's closing weekend in 1959.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 55,425
JULY 25 1966

SEIJI OZAWA

[illegible] nglewood had been Jer[illegible] walls should have come [illegible] down Friday evening [illegible] ox, Mass. Delighted con[illegible] ers brought conductor [illegible] zawa back to center stage [illegible] than a half-dozen times [illegible] end of the performance [illegible] underous ovation follow[illegible] derous ovation.

[illegible] ductor Ozawa, who sport[illegible] kings of a Beetle haire[illegible] ly led the Boston S[illegible] Orchestra through S[illegible] "American Festi[illegible] re," Schubert's "Sy[illegible] No. 5 in B-flat," M[illegible] n's "Concerto for Vio[illegible] chestra in E minor, Op[illegible] nd Stravinsky's "Suite [illegible] he Ballet Fire Bird."

[illegible] of "brayo" also capped [illegible] Silverstein's violin solo [illegible] Mendelssohn selection. The audience—a near-full house—relished the concertmaster's playing as much as he. The close observer could see him chant "boom boom boom" to the tune of the Stravinsky finale even as he played.

Favorite of the night obviously was the ballet suite, as superb strings created musical pictures of a beautiful bird in a flash of motion. The "Infernal Dance of All the Subjects of Kastchei" contrasts boldly, with great crashes of sound conjuring up dinosaurs on the attack.

C.S.

Herald (m)
RUTLAND, Vt.
Circ. 20,515
JUL 26 1966

Tanglewood Piano, Voice Stars Perform

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—America's only first prize winners Moscow's Tchaikovsky Competition — Van Cliburn Jane Marsh — brought talents to Sunday's performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Tanglewood Festival.

Cliburn, 1958 winner at Piano, and Miss Marsh, voice competition winner, returned for several curtain calls after their performances before a crowd of 10,596.

It was the first American concert appearance for Miss Marsh since returning from Moscow.

The Boston Symphony wound up a three-concert series festival Sunday that brought total of 32,291 persons largest turnout for three concerts since Tanglewood's closing weekend in 1959.

TIGHT BINDING

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 55,425
JULY 25 1966

Weekend at Tanglewood

SEIJI OZAWA

If Tanglewood had been Jericho, the walls should have come tumblin' down Friday evening at Lenox, Mass. Delighted concert-goers brought conductor Seiji Ozawa back to center stage more than a half-dozen times at the end of the performance, with thunderous ovation following thunderous ovation.

Conductor Ozawa, who sports the makings of a Beetle haircut, skillfully led the Boston Symphony Orchestra through Schuman's "American Festival Overture," Schubert's "Symphony No. 5 in B-flat," Mendelssohn's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in E minor, Opus 64" and Stravinsky's "Suite from the Ballet Fire Bird."

Cries of "bravo" also capped Joseph Silverstein's violin solo in the Mendelssohn selection. The audience—a near-full house—relished the concertmaster's playing as much as he. The close observer could see him chant "boom boom boom" to the tune of the Stravinsky finale, even as he played.

Favorite of the night obviously was the ballet suite, as superb strings created musical pictures of a beautiful bird in a flash of motion. The "Infernal Dance of All the Subjects of Kastchei" contrasts boldly, with great crashes of sound conjuring up dinosaurs on the attack.

C.S.

VAN CLIBURN AT TANGLEWOOD

Van Cliburn, a young perfectionist of the highest order, stood a capacity Tanglewood audience on its ear Saturday night in Lenox, Mass., with a hurricane performance of the finale of Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto.

The pianist was given a raucous 10-minute standing ovation by the season's biggest crowd, 14,375. There were shouts of bravo and a few less conventional phrases. With the Boston Symphony Orchestra members standing, Cliburn gave the venerable conductor Erich Leinsdorf a congratulatory kiss.

The entire concerto was beautifully balanced between the orchestra and soloist. Both were flawless in the dramatic first movement and the lush second. But it was the finale, enhanced by excellent lower register strings and a series of crescendos, that received the brunt of Cliburn's overwhelming musicianship. He swept from lacy pianissimo to the mightiest flurry of keys with total control. It was unforgettable.

The Schumann Symphony No. 2 in C major was respectfully, if less spectacularly, treated by Leinsdorf and the orchestra. It had a spotless opening of subdued brass and flowing strings. Woodwinds were notable throughout. The bouncy happiness of the second movement was well drawn and finely contrasted to the black despair of other segments in this schizophrenic work. The booming percussive finale was excellent.

A vigorous attack of the program opener, the beautiful Brahms Tragic Overture (Opus 81), was climaxed by the gigantic closing seasaw effect.

C.R.B.

JANE MARSH

Austrian-born pianist Lillian Kallir came to Tanglewood yesterday to play and she did . . . Chopin's Concerto No. 2 in F Minor for Piano and Orchestra . . . in the most brilliant fashion.

But to most in the audience she was an added and welcome bonus to the program they had come for . . . the first United States appearance of the Tchaikovsky competition winners . . . soprano Jane Marsh, first; soprano Veronica Tyler, second and basso Simon Estes, a third prize winner in the men's division.

Miss Marsh, the possessor of a stunning voice, sang Tatania's letter scene from "Eugene Onegin," which she performed in her Moscow winning performance, and "O Patra mia" from Act III of Verdi's "Aida."

After her performance at Lenox the audience went wild as they did (but to a lesser degree) for Miss Tyler who sang "Et incarnatus est" from Mozart's Mass in C Minor and for Mr. Estes who performed "Ella who performed "Ella giammai m'amo: Dormiro sol" from Verdi's "Don Carlo."

The crashing applause for the latter was punctuated with a thunder of thumpings . . . the musicians pounding their heels on the platforms where they sat.

It was a most auspicious weekend . . . the only two Americans to win at Moscow . . . Van Cliburn and Miss Marsh . . . performing at Tanglewood.

R.E.K.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
JUL 25 1966

Leads B.S.O.

Ozawa Is Elegant In Lenox Concert

By GEORGE GELLES
Globe Critic

LENOX — Seiji Ozawa, the 30-year-old who in 1960 won the Berkshire Music Center's Koussevitzky Award in conducting, returned to Tanglewood Friday night to lead the Boston Symphony.

That the Schubert Fifth Symphony received the most polished, elegant reading shows how far Ozawa has come since he conducted the Berkshire Music Center student orchestra six years ago. Then, I remember, he was unbeatable at the more agressive chestnuts, Tchaikovsky's fourth, and so on. The one "classic" performance I remember, Mozart's string symphony concertante, was a bit jerky, although the tempi were lively and the conducting precise.

Now, judging from the Schubert, Ozawa would seem to be one of the best classical conductors around. The reading of this was beautifully mellowed, even in the music's more forceful moments. The playing Ozawa got from the orchestra, especially the woodwinds, was particularly beautiful, with a precision and enthusiasm uncommon to the orchestra.

Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein joined Ozawa in the Mendelssohn E. Minor Concerto, and until the last movement the performance was splendid. Tempi were bright, the solo playing clean and the conducting incisive, but in the final movement things seemed to get away from both principles, and the tempo began to sound not virtuosic but uncomfortably fast.

Silverstein also made an appearance at the week-end prelude, playing the Brahms A Major Sonata with Lillian Kallir. Although a less dazzling piece than the Mendelssohn concerto, and not terribly interesting in its solo part, Silverstein's reading was convincing and well coordinated both in sound and mood to Miss Kallir's fine piano playing.

Also heard at the prelude were some Mendelssohn part songs, sung by 27 members of the Tanglewood Choir. If these were less than emminently successful, blame goes to conductor Alfred Nash Patterson for his gimmicky staging of the pieces. He spread the 27 over the stage of the shed in a way that guaranteed poor coordination and resulted in poor intonation as well.

Back to Ozawa's concert. Opening and closing the program were William Schumann's "American Festival Overture" and Stravinsky's "Firebird" suite, both pieces which Ozawa did extremely well. The Schumann, with its schoolbook fugues stemming from gedalge and its "American" sound of melodies built on fourths, seems even less a piece of Americana than the composer's "Chester Overture," but it was an effective showpiece for the orchestra, and Ozawa's tempo made the string players work more strenuously than they had all Summer.

The Firebird, too was an impressive piece of conducting and playing. Again, Ozawa got beautiful playing out of the orchestra, both in the smaller solos in the "Berceuse" and "Final" and in the electric "Danse Infernale."

One small gripe. The program suggested that Ozawa is limited in choice of repertoire, but he told me after the concert that in Ravinia he conducts only modern music. It seems a shame that his Tanglewood program wasn't more representative of his talents.

Herald (m)
RUTLAND, Vt.
Circ. 20,515
JUL 26 1966

Tanglewood Piano, Voice Stars Perform

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—America's only first prize winners in Moscow's Tchaikovsky Music Competition — Van Cliburn and Jane Marsh — brought their talents to Sunday's performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Tanglewood Music Festival.

Cliburn, 1958 winner at the Piano, and Miss Marsh, 1966 voice competition winner, were returned for several curtain calls after their performances before a crowd of 10,596.

It was the first American concert appearance for Miss March since returning from Moscow.

The Boston Symphony wound up a three-concert series at the festival Sunday that brought out a total of 32,291 persons — the largest turnout for three concerts since Tanglewood's closing weekend in 1959.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 177,755
JUL 20 1966

By Whitestone

Seiji Ozawa

. . . will conduct the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood Friday night at 9 o'clock. This young Japanese conductor is the regular music director of the Toronto Symphony.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099
JUL 24 1966

JANE MARSH, soprano, will make her first American appearance at Tanglewood today following the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competitions. She will sing Tchaikovsky arias this afternoon. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Circ. 115,186
JUL 24 1966

Moscow Music Winners In Tanglewood Concert

Two winners of the Third International Tchaikovsky Competition, held last month in Moscow, will appear as soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "An Afternoon at Tanglewood," an NBC News color special on the NBC Television Network Sunday, Aug. 14 (2:30-5 p.m. NYT).

They are Misha Dichter, a 20-year-old pianist from Beverly Hills, Calif., and Miss Masuko Yushioda, a 19-year-old violinist from Japan. The two were among 240 young musicians from 37 countries who entered the month-long contest in hopes of launching professional careers with victories in the world-famous competition.

Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the 2½ hour Aug. 14 concert, which will be colorcast live direct from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, the orchestra's permanent Summer home at Lenox, Mass.

Dichter will be soloist with the orchestra in Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 in B-flat, and Miss Yushioda will be soloist with the orchestra in Prokofiev's Violin Concerto No. 2 in G. The balance of the concert will be made up of the Prelude to Act 3 of Wagner's "Lohengrin," Brahms's Symphony No. 1, and Ravel's "Alborada del Gracioso."

Times (m)
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Circ. 635,619
JUL 25 1966

Music: Young Singers at Tanglewood

3 Winners of Moscow Competition Perform

By THEODORE STRONGIN

LENOX, Mass., July 24—Three expert young American singers made a strong impression in their anxiously awaited appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this afternoon. They are a thoroughly accomplished, perfectly schooled lot.

The three, all of whom excelled in the Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow last month, gave a total impression of the firmest kind of confidence in their first American appearance since their return from the Soviet Union. Beyond that, each had a personal appeal that explained the choices of the Moscow judges.

Jane Marsh, a 24-year-old soprano and the only American first-prize winner, displayed a voice of utter purity. At times, up high, her voice touched on a ravishing timbre that indicated the great vistas that lie in her future; she has been singing professionally for only a year.

One's first impression on listening to Veronica Tyler, the 29-year-old soprano who shared a Moscow second prize, was of complete inner conviction. One did not hear tones primarily, even though her tones were shimmery, velvety and homogeneous in quality. What came across with Miss Tyler was the depth of her musical involvement.

Simon Estes, bass, 28 and a third-prize winner at Moscow, was prepossessing with his great ease of tone production, and the pleasant, true timbre of his voice.

All the singers offered selections that they had sung during the competition. Miss Marsh's choices were Tatiana's Letter Scene from Tchaikovsky's "Eugen Onegin" and the aria "O patria mia" from Verdi's "Aida."

The Letter Scene is not easy to give without operatic trappings—scenery, costume, lighting, the works. There are many orchestral interludes that cry out for room for the singer to move around in and emote. Miss Marsh made the best of concert limitations and suggested a bent for dramatic soprano roles. But under the circumstances, she was restricted. What came through was flawless vocalism, not theatrical personality.

United Press International
Jane Marsh

Her "Aida" scene was the revelatory one. Here she was freer, and her voice floated over the orchestra at times in the genuine, thrilling, Verdi manner.

Miss Tyler sang the "Et Incarnatus Est" from Mozart's C minor Mass (K. 427). It was a comfortable, placid, warming performance that suggested that she has a strong future in lieder, too. Sse may have a future in opera, but the mass excerpt did not shed lgiht on that sort of ability.

Mr. Estes's "Ella giammai m'amo" from Verdi's "Don Carlos" was a musical—if not dramatic—gem. He built phrases smoothly by well-placed changes in the quality and intensity of his voice rather than by dramatic manipulation of phrases. Mr. Estes will make his New York debut next year when he sings a leading role in Gunther Schuller's "The Trial," with the Hamburg Opera.

Verdi and Tchaikovsky Given by Jane Marsh

•

Erich Leinsdorf, who conducted, and the Bostonians provided the most sympathetic and subtle kind of support imaginable for the young singers.

Earlier in the concert, Lillian Kallir played the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor with the orchestra. Miss Kallir's performance was the other side of the coin from that of another Tschaikovsky winner in Moscow (in 1958), Van Cliburn, who played his trademark, the Rachmaninoff Third Piano Concerto with Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra on Saturday night. (Mr. Cliburn drew a record crowd of 14,375 for the season.

Miss Kallir did not have Mr. Cliburn's pianistic splendor, nor his steel-trap perfection. But her playing was very feminine, charming and graceful, and a thorough delight.

The three-concert weekend that started Friday night drew a total audience of more than 32,200, plus almost 4,000 at yesterday's open dress rehearsal. This was the largest weekend at Tanglewood for Mr. Leinsdorf since he took over as music director in 1963.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186
JUL 26 1966

Weekend At Tanglewood

For the Berkshire Festival's fourth weekend series, Friday's bonus Prelude at 7 preceding the concert at 9 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by guest Ozawa Seji, was a promising foretaste of more musical delights to come.

Playing the Brahms Sonata in A-major for piano and violin, Op. 100, Austrian-born Lillian Kallir, displayed a richness of tone (she also plays the right piano) and sensitivity that matched concert master's Joseph Silverstein's, and in some instances, surpassed it. Her shadings were more manifest than his; but both were marvelously restrained in interpretation, Mr. Silverstein producing sounds sweet and soft as the finest silk (he also plays the right violin), all in the inherent classic-romantic style, as tranquil and undisturbed as Brahms himself when he wrote the sonata. In keeping with the informal chamber atmosphere, the Tanglewood Choir, under Alfred Nash Patterson's modest yet chorally knowing direction, then presented a group of Part Songs by Mendelssohn, charming, in simple harmony, diction and vocalism projected with superb control and sound; at one point some of the singers were distributed at varius levels and distances for an unusually light (air-sifted) effect.

Again at Tanglewood, the dynamic, young, endearing, Seiji Ozawa, conductor of the Toronto Symphony, appeared as guest conductor for the third season. His dynamism is evident as soon as he walks on stage; the audience bursts into immediate applause, and again at the program's finish, when all the musicians join in an ovation.

Every number directed by this dedicated young man, has a freshness and spontaneity about it, as if being played for the first time. A slight figure, there is nothing awesome about Ozawa until he begins to conduct.

Not a member of the orchestra relaxes; each is supremely alert. And yet gestures from Ozawa are minimal; there is always a firm and distinctly visible beat; a gentle arc of his hand, a finger raised, he knows the Boston Symphony will respond as he wishes.

William Schumann's American Festival Overture opened the program, stirring and forceful; no overworked directions from Ozawa, the music spoke, as it did all evening, perhaps not quite as he wished for the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto, with Silverstein tossing it off with consummate ease, in good taste, and with no subtleties, the orchestra's woodwinds striving to keep pace in the molto vivace, so typically Mendelssohnian.

Stravinsky's Suite "L'Oiseau de feu" and all its enchantments closed an electrically exciting evening. We'll look forward to the talented and youthful Ozawa's return for the continuation in all Festival series, for many years to come.

A little more than 7,000 people were fortunate tnough to attend Friday's concert, but with a name like Van Cliburn it was almost double that number who arrived to give homage to another youth, with a talent we hope will develop even further. It was the second Rachmaninoff concerto that enkindled his listeners, powerfully played absorption seemingly complete and oblivious to anything but the music, and the superb soundings reached by Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Brahms' "Tragic Overture" Op. 81 and Schumann's Second Symphony comprised the first half, sonorous, radiant, and musically memorable with Leinsdorf's sentient direction and his musicians' dependable artistry.

Three of this year's Moscow Tschaikovsky competition winners appeared on Sunday's program, Jane Marsh and Veronica Tyler, first and second prize winners, respectively, and bass Simon Estes, who received his professional baptism with European opera companies, the young ladies having sung with the Boston Symphony Orchestra last season. This was a publicized change from the originally scheduled Tschaikovsky sixth symphony, pleasing some listeners, disappointing others.

But there was no disappointment with the sweep and flow of Lillian Kallir's effortless playing in Chopin's Second Piano Concerto. The sensitive oneness with her instrument that marked Friday's Brahms Sonata performance with Silverstein, deepened with this romantic composer's music. Again Leinsdorf presided over the Boston Symphony, opening his program with a reserved reading of Beethoven's "Coriolan" Overture. —M deB.R.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. —VAN CLIBURN will perform the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3 with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, conducting on Saturday evening, July 23. Also on the program will be Brahms Tragic Overture and the Schumann Symphony No. 2.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Review
DARIEN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,965
JUL 21 1966

Independent
AGAWAM, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 2,558
JUL 21 1966

Record-American (m) (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 411,789
JUL 23 1966

AT TANGLEWOOD — Veronica Tyler, Jane Marsh and Simon Estes, the three American prize winners in the recent Tchaikovsky voice competition in Moscow, make their first U. S. concert appearances since the contest with Erich Leinsdorf and Boston Symphony on Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Miss Marsh is the only American first prize winner since 1958. Miss Tyler was awarded second prize and Estes third in the Moscow contest. Jane will also be heard at Tanglewood on Aug. 6 and 13. Prize winners in the instrumental portions of the Tchaikovsky competition will also be soloists at Tanglewood on Aug. 13, 14.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 517,080
JUL 24 1966

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099
JUL 24 1966

(AP Wirephoto)
TANGLEWOOD TRIO—Pianist Van Cliburn (left), 1958 winner of the Tchaikovsky Music Competition, and Jane March, 1966 winner of the voice competition in the Moscow contest, discuss score with Erich Leinsdorf, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They will perform at Tanglewood in Lenox this weekend with the BSO under Leinsdorf's direction.

Sunday Sun
LOWELL, Mass.
Circ. 35,480
JUL 24 1966

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 182,632
JUL 24 1966

Bulletin (e)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 146,612
JUL 23 1966

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 56,740
JUL 24 1966

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266
JUL 25 1966

Jane Marsh Heard Sunday In Program at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Jane Marsh, the first American since Van Cliburn to win top honors at the Tchaikowsky Competition at Moscow, was given an ovation when she sang for more than 10,000 at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon.

Despite her 24 years, Miss Marsh has the poise of a veteran and a voice that is beautifully produced from top to bottom. Yesterday she offered Verdi's "O Patria Mia" and the aria that won her the prize in Moscow—"Tatiana's Letter Scene" from Tchaikowsky's "Eugen Onegin"—which she performed in Russian.

* * *

Erich Leinsdorf, who led the Boston Symphony in Sunday's concert, has compared her voice to that of Rethberg and the comparison seems just, particularly after listening to her in the "Aida" selection. She knows how to produce a floating tone and she knows how to achieve a smooth crescendo, as she did at the beginning of the aria.

However, Miss Marsh was only one of three singers at Tanglewood Sunday. Simon Estes, a third-prize winner at Moscow, raised his large and sonorous voice in "Ella Giammai," the great bass aria from Verdi's "Don Carlo." And, preceding him was Veronica Tyler, a second-prize winner at the same competition, who sang "Et Incarnatus Sum" from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427).

Mr. Estes made an excellent impression, even though he had to compete with the full sonority of the Boston Symphony. Physically and vocally, he is a commanding figure. I did not feel Miss Tyler was at her best in the Mozart because her voice is too sharply focused.

Although Lillian Kallir's contribution as soloist in the Chopin Concerto No. 2 was somewhat overshadowed by the excitement of hearing the Tchaikowsky Competition winners, she gave an efficient and musicianly account of herself. There is little of the "grand tradition" in her playing because she eschews the use of rubato for the most part.

Her playing in the finale was the most ingratiating pianism of the evening, although the second movement had its charm and piquancy. Leinsdorf and the Bostonians made the most of Chopin's rather skimpy accompaniment.

* * *

At this concert RCA Victor recorded the performances by the singers which will, no doubt, be made available to the general public in the near future. Miss Marsh recently signed an exclusive recording contract with Victor.

Saturday night's concert, which featured Van Cliburn as soloist in the Rachmaninoff 3d Piano Concerto, drew well over 14,000 customers to Tanglewood, which is undoubtedly the house record for the season.

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 25,302
JUL 26 1966

Seiji Ozawa A Hit At Tanglewood

The fourth weekend of the Boston Symphony orchestra concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., got off to a rousing start Friday at 9 p.m. with Seiji Ozawa, director of the Toronto Orchestra, and frequent visitor to the Tanglewood podium, conducting the American Festival Overture by William Schuman.

The tempo of this work is fast; it is boisterous and spirited, with clashes and flashes of brilliance, and Ozawa, who is 29, performed with inspiration and with verve. His conducting of the remainder of the program, the Schubert Symphony No. 5, in B-flat, vaguely reminiscent of both Mozart and Beethoven, the Mendelssohn Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, in E minor, Op. 64, performed by Joseph Silverstein, concert master of the Boston, and Stravinsky's Suite from the Ballet, "L'Oiseau de feu", was masterful. Ozawa is exciting to watch, as he is to listen to.

The program for Friday's Prelude Concert at 7 p.m. was the Brahms Sonata in A major for Piano and Violin, performed by Joseph Silverstein, violin, and Lilian Kallir, piano, and the Mendelssohn Songs for mixed chorus, sung by the Tanglewood Choir, under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson.

Saturday's concert at 8 p.m. was the highlight of the weekend, and featured the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3, in D minor, with soloist Van Cliburn returning to the Tanglewood stage. Cliburn won the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow in 1958—and since then has enjoyed an amazing career. He played this showpiece concerto with a confident, assertive, masculine style, and a force and power that made it seem almost that there were 10 pianos playing instead of one. This was appreciated by Leinsdorf, as he kissed and embraced the soloist after his performance, and by the audience of 14,375 whose enthusiasm reached the point of ecstasy.

Also included on Saturday's program was the beautiful Schumann Symphony No. 2 in C major, Op. 61, whose movements are written in reverse order. Here the Scherzo is in the second movement, the Adagio is the third. The format for most symphonies is the reverse. The Tragic Overture by Brahms began the program.

Sunday afternoon Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony made history on the Tanglewood stage. Leinsdorf is the first to feature the winners of this year's Tchaikovsky International Voice Competition, which was held in Moscow last month. Sunday's concert brought to Tanglewood Miss Jane Marsh, the young, talented, and beautiful soprano who won first prize in the competition. She sang Sunday the arias with which she won the prize, Tchaikowsky's Tatiana's Letter Scene from Eugene Onegin, and the aria, "O patria mia," from "Aida". Her tone and talent are powerful and exciting.

Also featured Sunday were the second and third prize winners of the Competition, Miss Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, bass. Both artists are young and vibrant. Miss Tyler sang the Mozart "Et incarnatus est," from the Mass in C minor, K. 427. Her voice is lovely and rich. Estes, who sang "Ella giammai m'amo: Dormiro sol" from "Don Carlo", has a mellow and beautifully full bass voice.

The program began with Beethoven's Overture to "Coriolan" (After Collin), Op. 62, after which Miss Lillian Kallir performed the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 2, in F minor, Op. 21. She is a fine and sensitive pianist.

SCM

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
JUL 21 1966

Moscow Winners At Tanglewood Sunday, July 24

Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has announced the complete program for the July 24 concert at Tanglewood which will bring Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler, and Simon Estes before an American audience for the first time since their prize winning performances in Moscow. At the same time Mr. Leinsdorf stated that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has released Miss Marsh from her contract to sing in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on August 21 in order for her to appear in her native state on August 20 in the Hollywood Bowl. Phyllis Curtin, a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will replace Miss Marsh.

The program for the Berkshire Festival concert on July 24 will begin with Beethoven's Overture to Coriolan and continued with Lillian Kallir performing Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor. Jane Marsh, the only American first prize winner in the 1966 Tchaikovsky competition, will be heard in "O patria mia" from Act III of Verdi's Aida and Tatana's Letter Scene from Eugene Onegin which she sang in her prize winning performance in Moscow. Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third prize winners, will also be heard in music they sang in the Tchaikovsky competition. Miss Tyler will sing "Et incarnatus est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor, K. 427, and Mr. Estes will sing "Ella giammai m' amo: Dormiro sol" from Verdi's Don Carlo.

Following her performance in Mozart's The Magic Flute on August 6, an appearance scheduled prior to the Moscow contest, Miss Marsh will return to Tanglewood for a third time this summer on August 13.

On Sunday afternoon, August 14, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violist who placed second in the Tchaikovsky competition, and Misha Dichter, American pianist and second prize winner, will perform with Erich Leinsdorf and the orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Gazette (e)
TAUNTON, Mass.
Circ. 12,817
JUL 28 1966

PERFORM AT TANGLEWOOD — Van Cliburn, center, pianist and 1958 winner of the Tchaikovsky Music Competition, and Jane Marsh, right, 1966 winner of voice competition in the Moscow contest discuss program with Erich Leinsdorf at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. They performed this weekend with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Leinsdorf. (AP)

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUL 28 1966

TANGLEWOOD, LOW KEY REVIEWED

TANGLEWOOD
Friday — By A. C. S.

Friday night is bonus night at Tanglewood — two concerts for the price of one, and well worth it. Works by Brahms and Mendelssohn comprised the "Weekend Prelude." The latter was represented by nine songs for mixed chorus which were beautifully sung by the Tanglewood Choir. Brahms' A Major Sonata for Violin and Piano was given a robust presentation by Joseph Silverstein and Lilian Kallir.

Mr. Silverstein is certainly an asset to the Boston Symphony. When not in his usual seat as concertmaster, he often appears as soloist in one of the major concertos. This time it was the Mendelssohn E minor Concerto and a bouncy performance it was. The concerto was his only appearance of the season. He is a joy to watch and listen to. His Schumann's American Festival Overture served as a rousing opener. Then came Schubert's Symphony No. 5, a wonderful contrast in style and dynamics. If the tempos seemed slightly brighter than usual (as was evident also in the Mendelssohn concerto), they were decidedly in character with the music.

The "Fire-Bird" Suite by Stravinsky, with its wide range of coloristic effects, offered Mr. Ozawa an opportunity to display other facets of his conducting ability. The results were electrifying — a spirited close to a memorable evening of music.

Saturday — By A. C. S.

The biggest Saturday night crowd I have ever seen at Tanglewood — some sort of record must have been set — filled the Shed and covered the lawns for one purpose only: to hear (and see, for his fans clearly love him) Van Cliburn. The B.S.O. has adopted the star system, at any rate during the summer, and it is paying big dividends at the box office. The Shed was sold out weeks ago. As we picked our way through the mob scene on the lawns, I could almost feel the warming of the cockles of the trustees' hearts. Otherwise it was a refreshing evening.

And what of the music we heard? There was not a single [illegible] work on the program. The [illegible] Overture [illegible] fore it has scarcely begun. The Schumann Symphony No. 2, in C major can boast a witty scherzo and a beautiful adagio, but the first movement is too long.

Which leaves us with Cliburn and the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3, in D minor. This work is filled with echoes of the earlier, and more deservedly popular, C minor concerto, but it never quite hits the nail on the head as that work does. Although there are plenty of keyboard pyrotechnics and lush orchestration, there are no unforgettable melodies, and I have the impression that it has always needed the composer's personal magic to bring it off. Cliburn played superbly, even so, with both strength and sensitivity. The formidable technical demands were, of course nothing [illegible]

[illegible] — By E. M. [illegible]

[illegible] Lillian Kallir and prize-wi[illegible] Tchaikovsky Inter[illegible] Competition, held [illegible] last month, were [illegible] soloists in Sunda[illegible] of the Boston S[illegible] Orchestra, with Erich Leinsdorf conducting.

Miss Kallir earned a standing [illegible]ation for the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 2, as she and the orchestra, which was in especially fine [illegible] to present a stirring reading of this romantic highpoint. Strong and confident, Miss Kallir kept her playing in the foreground, resisting the tendency to become merged in the lush music to the point where she could not be heard. For this reviewer she reached her high point in the dramatic, often startling second movement, and then proceeded with great poise and assertion through the rhythmic finale.

Soprano Veronica Tyler was perhaps most successful in overcoming the difficulties singers meet in the massive shed. Her performance of "Et incarnatus est," from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, benefited from the lighter orchestral accompaniment, and showed her great range and pure voice to advantage. Simon Estes, bass, has force and dramatic sense, but was occasionally overshadowed by the orchestra in "Elle giammai m'amo" from Verdi's Don Carol, as was soprano Jane Marsh in the Letter Scene from Eugene Onegin. Miss Marsh, however, [illegible] with strength, confi[illegible] and sureness.

Sunday Sun
LOWELL, Mass.
Circ. 35,480
JUL 24 1966

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 182,632
JUL 24 1966

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266
JUL 25 1966

Jane Marsh Heard Sunday In Program at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Jane Marsh, the first American since Van Cliburn to win top honors at the Tchaikowsky Competition at Moscow, was given an ovation when she sang for more than 10,000 at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon.

Despite her 24 years, Miss Marsh has the poise of a veteran and a voice that is beautifully produced from top to bottom. Yesterday she offered Verdi's "O Patria Mia" and the aria that won her the prize in Moscow—"Tatiana's Letter Scene" from Tchaikowsky's "Eugen Onegin"—which she performed in Russian.

* * *

Erich Leinsdorf, who led the Boston Symphony in Sunday's concert, has compared her voice to that of Rethberg and the comparison seems just, particularly after listening to her in the "Aida" selection. She knows how to produce floating tone and she knows how to achieve a smooth crescendo, as she did at the beginning of the aria.

However, Miss Marsh was only one of three singers at Tanglewood Sunday. Simon Estes, a third-prize winner at Moscow, raised his large and sonorous voice in "Ella Giammai," the great bass aria from Verdi's "Don Carlo." And, preceding him was Veronica Tyler, a second-prize winner at the same competition, who sang "Et Incarnatus Sum" from Mozart's Mass in C minor (K. 427).

Mr. Estes made an excellent impression, even though he had to compete with the full sonority of the Boston Symphony. Physically and vocally, he is a commanding figure. I did not feel Miss Tyler was at her best in the Mozart because her voice is too sharply focused.

Although Lillian Kallir's contribution as soloist in the Chopin Concerto No. 2 was somewhat overshadowed by the excitement of hearing the Tchaikowsky Competition winners, she gave an efficient and musicianly account of herself. There is little of the "grand tradition" in her playing because she eschews the use of rubato for the most part.

Her playing in the finale was the most ingratiating pianism of the evening, although the second movement had its charm and piquancy. Leinsdorf and the Bostonians made the most of Chopin's rather skimpy accompaniment.

* * *

At this concert RCA Victor recorded the performances by the singers which will, no doubt, be made available to the general public in the near future. Miss Marsh recently signed an exclusive recording contract with Victor.

Saturday night's concert, which featured Van Cliburn as soloist in the Rachmaninoff 3d Piano Concerto, drew well over 14,000 customers to Tanglewood, which is undoubtedly the house record for the season.

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 25,302
JUL 26 1966

Seiji Ozawa A Hit At Tanglewood

The fourth weekend of the Boston Symphony orchestra concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., got off to a rousing start Friday at 9 p.m. with Seigi Ozawa, director of the Toronto Orchestra, and frequent visitor to the Tanglewood podium, conducting the American Festival Overture by William Schuman.

The tempo of this work is fast; it is boisteroun and spirtied, with clashes and flashes of brilliance, and Ozawa, who is 29, performed with inspiration and with verve. His conducting of the remainder of the program, the Schubert Symphony No. 5, in B-flat, vaguely reminiscent of both Mozart and Beethoven, the Mendelssohn Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, in E. minor, Op. 64, performed by Joseph Silverstein, concert master of the Boston, and Stravinsky's Suite from the Ballet, "L'Oiseau de feu", was masterful. Ozawa is exciting to watch, as he is to listen to.

The program for Friday's Prelude Concert at 7 p.m. was the Brahms Sonata in A major for Piano and Violin, performed by Joseph Silverstein, violin, and Lilian Kallir, piano, and the Mendelssohn Songs for mixed chorus, sung by the Tanglewood Choir, under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson.

Saturday's concert at 8 p.m. was the highlight of the weekend, and featured the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3, in D minor, with soloist Van Cliburn returning to the Tanglewood stage. Cliburn won the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow in 1958—and since then has enjoyed an amazing career. He played this showpiece concerto with a confident, assertive, masculine style, and a force and power that made it seem almost that there were 10 pianos playing instead of one. This was appreciated by Leinsdorf, as he kissed and embraced the soloist after his performance, and by the audience of 14,375 whose enthusiasm reached the point of ecstasy.

Also included on Saturday's program was the beautiful Schumann Symphony No. 2 in C major, Op. 61, whose movements are written in reverse order. Here the Scherzo is in the second movement, the Adagio is the third. The format for most symphonies is the reverse. The Tragic Overture by Brahms began the program.

Sunday afternoon Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony made history on the Tanglewood stage. Leinsdorf is the first to feature the winners of this year's Tchaikovsky International Voice Competition, which was held in Moscow last month. Sunday's concert brought to Tanglewood Miss Jane Marsh, the young talented, and beautiful soprano who won first prize in the competition. She sang Sunday the aria with which she won the prize, Tchaikovsky's Tatiana's Letter Scene from Eugene Onegin", and the aria "O patria mia," from "Aida". Her tone and talent are powerful and exciting.

Also featured Sunday were the second and third prize winners of the Competition, Miss Veronica Tyler, soprano, and Simon Estes, bass. Both artists are young and vibrant. Miss Tyler sang the Mozart "Et incarnatus est," from the Mass in C minor. K. 427. Her voice is lovely and rich. Estes, who sang "Ella giammai m'amo: Dormiro sol" from "Don Carlo", has a mellow and beautifully full bass voice.

The program began with Beethoven's Overture to "Coriolan" (After Collin), Op. 62, after which Miss Lillian Kallir performed the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 2, in F minor, Op. 21. She is a fine and sensitive pianist.

SCM

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
JUL 21 1966

Moscow Winners At Tanglewood Sunday, July 24

Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has announced the complete program for the July 24 concert at Tanglewood which will bring Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler, and Simon Estes before an American audience for the first time since their prize winning performances in Moscow. At the same time Mr. Leinsdorf stated that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has released Miss Marsh from her contract to sing in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on August 21 in order for her to appear in her native state on August 20 in the Hollywood Bowl. Phyllis Curtin, a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will replace Miss Marsh.

The program for the Berkshire Festival concert on July 24 will begin with Beethoven's Overture to Coriolan and continued with Lillian Kallir performing Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor. Jane Marsh, the only American first prize winner in the 1966 Tchaikovsky competition, will be heard in "O patria mia" from Act III of Verdi's Aida and Tatania's Letter Scene from Eugene Onegin which she sang in her prize winning performance in Moscow. Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third prize winners, will also be heard in music they sang in the Tchaikovsky competition. Miss Tyler will sing "Et incarnatus est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor, K. 427, and Mr. Estes will sing "Ella giammai m' amo: Dormiro sol" from Verdi's Don Carlo.

Following her performance in Mozart's The Magic Flute on August 6, an appearance scheduled prior to the Moscow contest, Miss Marsh will return to Tanglewood for a third time this summer on August 13.

On Sunday afternoon, August 14, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violist who placed second in the Tchaikovsky competition, and Misha Dichter, American pianist and second prize winner, will perform with Erich Leinsdorf and the orchestra.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUL 28 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Gazette (e)
TAUNTON, Mass.
Circ. 12,817
JUL 26 1966 Thursday

PERFORM AT TANGLEWOOD — Van Cliburn, cehter, pianist and 1958 winner of the Tchaikovsky Music Competition, and Jane Marsh, right, 1966 winner of voice competition in the Moscow contest discuss program with Erich Leinsdorf at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. They performed this weekend with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Leinsdorf. (AP)

TANGLEWOOD, LOW KEY REVIEWED

TANGLEWOOD
Friday — By A. C. S.

Friday night is bonus night at Tanglewood — two concerts for the price of one, and well worth it. Works by Brahms and Mendelssohn comprised the "Weekend Prelude." The latter was represented by nine songs for mixed chorus which were beautifully sung by the Tanglewood Choir. Brahms' A Major Sonata for Violin and Piano was given a robust presentation by Joseph Silverstein and Lilian Kallir.

Mr. Silverstein is certainly an asset to the Boston Symphony. When not in his usual seat as concertmaster, he often appears as soloist in one of the major concertos. This time it was the Mendelssohn E minor Concerto and a bouyant performance.

The conductor was Seiji Ozawa making his only appearance of the season. He is a joy to watch and listen to. His Schumann's American Festival Overture served as a rousing opener. Then came Schubert's Symphony No. 5, a wonderful contrast in style and dynamics. If the tempos seemed slightly brighter than usual (as was evident also in the Mendelssohn concerto), they were decidedly in character with the music.

The "Fire-Bird" Suite by Stravinsky, with its wide range of coloristic effects, offered Mr. Ozawa an opportunity to display other facets of his conducting ability. The results were electrifying — a spirited close to a memorable evening of music.

Saturday — By A. C. S.

The biggest Saturday night crowd I have ever seen at Tanglewood — some sort of record must have been set — filled the Shed and covered the lawns for one purpose only: to hear (and see, for his fans clearly love him) Van Cliburn. The B.S.O. has adopted the star system, at any rate during the summer, and it is paying big dividends at the box office. The Shed was sold out weeks ago. As we picked our way through the mob scene on the lawns, I could almost feel the warming of the cockles of the trustees' hearts. Otherwise it was a refreshing cool evening.

And what of the music we heard? There was not a single great work on the program. The Tragic Overture is admittedly echt Brahms, but it is over before it has scarcely begun. The Schumann Symphony No. 2, in C major can boast a witty scherzo and a beautiful adagio, but the first movement is too long.

Which leaves us with Cliburn and the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3, in D minor. This work is filled with echoes of the earlier, and more deservedly popular, C minor concerto, but it never quite hits the nail on the head as that work does. Although there are plenty of keyboard pyrotechnics and lush orchestration, there are no unforgettable melodies, and I have the impression that it has always needed the composer's personal magic to bring it off. Cliburn played superbly, even so, with both strength and sensitivity. The formidable technical demands were, of course nothing to him.

Sunday — By E. M.

Pianist Lilian Kallir and prize-winners of the Tchaikovsky International Vocal Competition, held in Moscow last month, were featured soloists in Sunday concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Erich Leinsdorf conducting.

Miss Kallir earned a standing ovation for the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 2, as she and the orchestra, which was in especially fine form, combined to present a stirring reading of this romantic highlight. Strong and confident, Miss Kallir kept her playing in the forefront, resisting the tendency to become merged in the lush music to the point where she could not be heard. For this reviewer she reached her high point in the dramatic, often startling second movement, and then proceeded with great poise and assertion through the rhythmic finale.

Soprano Veronica Tyler was perhaps most successful in overcoming the difficulties singers meet in the massive shed. Her performance of "Et incarnatus est," from Mozart's Mass in C Minor, benefited from the lighter orchestral accompaniment, and showed her great range and pure voice to advantage. Simon Estes, bass, has force and dramatic sense, but was occasionally overshadowed by the orchestra in "Elle giammai m'amo," from Verdi's Don Carol, as was soprano Jane Marsh in the Letter Scene from Eugene Onegin. Miss Marsh, however, concluded with strength, confidence and sureness.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 21 1966

Program Changes Listed For Coming BSO Concerts

Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced the complete program for the July 24 concert at Tanglewood which will bring Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes before an American audience for the first time since their prize-winning performances in Moscow. Mr. Leinsdorf said the Boston Symphony Orchestra has released Miss Marsh from her contract to sing in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Aug. 21 in order for her to appear in her native state on Aug. 20 in the Hollywood Bowl. Phyllis Curtin, a summer resident of the Berkshires and a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will replace Miss Marsh in the Ninth Symphony.

The program for the Berkshire Festival concert on July 24 will begin with Beethoven's Overture to "Coriolan" and continue with Lilian Kallir performing Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor. Following the intermission, Miss Marsh, the only American first prizewinner in the 1966 Tchaikovsky competition, will be heard in "O Patria Mia" from Act III of Verdi's "Aida" and Tatania's Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin," which she sang in her prize-winning performance in Moscow. Miss Tyler and Estes, second and third prize-winners, will also be heard in music they sang in the Tchaikovsky competition. Miss Tyler will sing "Et Incarnatus Est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor, K. 427, and Estes will sing "Ella Giammai M'amo: Dormiro Sol" from Verdi's "Don Carlo."

Following the performance in Mozart's "The Magic Flute" on Aug. 6, an appearance scheduled prior to the Moscow contest, Miss Marsh will return to Tanglewood for a third time this summer on Aug. 13.

Several months ago the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced that it would present prizewinners from the Tchaikovsky competition at its Aug. 13 and 14 Tanglewood concerts. The Soviet winners were unable to come to this country for these concerts, but Miss Marsh and the three second-place winners in the instrumental competitions will participate. The concert on Aug. 13 will begin with Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis, to be followed by the American cellist, Stephen Kates, second prize in Moscow, playing the Shostakovitch Cello Concerto. Miss Marsh will be heard in Lisa's Scene and Arioso from Tchaikovsky's "Pique Dame" and Verdi's "Introduction," "Willow Song," and "Ave Maria" from "Otello." The concert will close with orchestral excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung."

On Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist who placed second in the Tchaikovsky competition, and Misha Dichter, American pianist and second prizewinner, will perform with Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The works they will play will be determined as soon as they return from abroad. Also on this program the orchestra will play the Prelude from Act III of Wagner's "Lohengrin," excerpts from Gunther Schuller's "Seven Studies on Themes of Paul Klee," and Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 25 1966

Music Review

Moscow Winners Set Record

By JAY ROSENFELD

TANGLEWOOD set an all-time attendance record this fourth weekend of its season. The Berkshire Music Festival management scored a coup of unsurpassed showmanship by bringing to the stage of the great Shed the winner and those who placed next highest in last month's Tchaikovsky International Music Competition at Moscow, as well as the winner of the 1958 piano competition in the same city, all Americans.

By the uniquely swift encouragement and astute exploitation of the young singers, audiences of unprecedented numbers flocked to the Shed and the adjacent lawns and accorded the performers hysterical applause. The melting point of Tanglewood audiences drops in inverse ratio to the attendance figures. A word of caution might be inserted here, however, for possibly next year if a mere Isaac Stern or a Serkin plays, the headline may read "Tanglewood slipping!"

The last to sing yesterday afternoon was the first-prize winner, Jane Marsh. The second-prize winner, Veronica Tyler, is a tall slender girl with a head set on her shoulders by Modigliani. Her "Et incarnatus est" from Mozart's C Minor Mass K-427 disclosed a voice of ample power and easy emission, beautifully schooled and intelligently used. Third-prize winner, basso Simon Estes, an extremely tall and also slender young man, sang with increasing fervor as he dug into his aria "Ella Giammi, 'amo: Dormiro sol" from Verdi's "Don Carlo." And when he threw back his shoulders and looked roof-ward, immersed in the spirit of his song, he sang and looked like a famous baritone of a preceding era, Paul Robeson. Miss Marsh first sang Tatiana's letter scene from Tchaikovsky's "Eugen Onegin" and then closed the afternoon with the aria "O Patro mia," from Verdi's "Aida." She did not do herself full justice in her first offering but in the Verdi there was more expressiveness and greater release of her talents. She did not give complete evidence of sensing the import of the words she sang. But the purity of her tone, especially in the higher ranges, bespoke the promise of great potentiality.

* * *

IT IS POSSIBLY pertinent to note that the Boston Symphony Orchestra had given the two sopranos recognition already last year before they gained national attention by their Russian victories, and Mr. Estes had first planned to come to the Berkshire Music Center this year before he decided to enter the Soviet competition.

Before intermission Erich Leinsdorf had conducted Beethoven's overture to "Coriolan" and then the orchestra accompanied Lilian Kallir in the Chopin F minor concerto. The handsome and graceful Miss Kallir played with complete command of her assignment, but the concerto is of questionable impact for a program played under such circumstances. The decorative arabesques which Miss Kallir did not attempt to distort from their evanescent shapes are not of a weight to carry tonefully or to impress more than superficially. The bucolic reveries of the first two movements were played with extremely secure fingers, and she injected a frolic and gaiety to the Polish dance, but it is music more suitable to a smaller hall.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT an audience of 14,375 jammed the Shed and its every environ to hear the 1958 Moscow piano competition winner, Van Cliburn, play the Rachmaninoff 3rd concerto. This is the third time the tall Texan has played at Tanglewood and each time his artistic stature has grown. He displayed an impressive eloquence in the narrow range of the simple opening of his concerto. As the music unfolded and plunged into its melodramatic episodes, Cliburn generated sparks and flames. Leinsdorf did not lay his hand too heavily, if at all, on the curbs or checks, and allowed his virtuoso orchestra a loose rein in the lush pages of the concerto to weld and meld with Cliburn's dynamic performance. After the brilliant cadenzas and the volcanic climaxes the first movement can end only by subsiding to a modest hush. The rhapsodical events of the remaining two movements could not budge Cliburn from his steady saddle and he rode them like the experienced bronco-buster he has indubitably become. Leinsdorf, wearing his overcoat, accompanied Cliburn from the wings at one of the last of many recalls and gesticulated that he at least wanted to go home even if the insatiable audience didn't.

The Brahms Tragic Overture had opened that program and had been followed by the Schumann C major symphony, a sequence of not incontestible musical logic. After the glorious tone the strings and reeds of the orchestra had produced in the slow movement, the final bombardment became excessive. The scherzo had humor and wit to a degree we found most agreeable when we recalled the vertiginous tempo set the last time this symphony was heard from that stage.

The attendance at the three concerts was 32,291, and, counting the rehearsal and the chamber music program totaled 37,224.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Kennebec Journal (m)
AUGUSTA, Me.
Circ. 14,684
JUL 25 1966

Cliburn Gets Curtain Calls

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—America's only first prize winners in Moscow's Tchaikovsky Music Competition — Van Cliburn and Jane Marsh — brought their talents to Sunday's peerformanc of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Tanglewood Music Festival.

Cliburn, 1958 winner at the Piano, and Miss Marsh, 1966 voice competition winner, were returned for several curtain calls after their performances before a crowd of 10,596.

It was the first American concert appearance for Miss Marsh since returning from Moscow.

The Boston Symphony wound up a three-concert series at the festival today that brought out a total of 32,291 persons — the largest turnout for three concerts since Tanglewood's closing weekend in 1959.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 24 1966

MUSIC

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX (Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood) — Today, 2:30 p.m. The American prize winners of the recent Tchaikovsky International Voice Competition will make their first United States appearances since returning from Moscow. Jane Marsh, first prize winner, will sing arias from Eugene Onegin and Pique Dame by Tchaikovsky, Veronica Tyler, second prize winner, will be heard in Et incarnatus est from Mozart's Mass in C minor, and Simon Estes, third prize winner, will sing King Phillip's aria from the opera Don Carlo by Verdi. Lilian Kallir will play the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor in the opening portion of the program.

Friday evening's concert at 9 will begin with Erich Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to The Bartered Bride followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Jules Eskin will then perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's Enigma Variations.

Weber's Overture to Der Freischutz will be the opening work on Saturday at 8 p.m. with Lilian Kallir then joining Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzerstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. Following the intermission Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,179
JUL 23 1966

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. —VAN CLIBURN will perform the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3 with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director conducting on Saturday evening, July 23. Also on the program will be Brahms Tragic Overture and the Schumann Symphony No. 2.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 66,826
JUL 25 1966

Moscow Music Winners Appear At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass. — (AP) — America's only first prize winners in Moscow's Tchaikovsky music competition —Van Cliburn and Jane Marsh brought their talents to yesterday's performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Tanglewood Music Festival.

Mr. Cliburn was 1958 winner at the piano, and Miss Marsh was 1966 voice competition winner.

It was the first American con- at the piano, and Miss Marsh since returning from Moscow.

The Boston Symphony wound up a three-concert series at the festival yesterday that brought out a total of 32,291 persons, the largest turnout for three concerts since Tanglewood's closing weekend in 1959.

Miss Marsh was joined by Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third prize winners in voice competition at this year's Moscow competition.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 6,975
JUL 21 1966

Berkshire Festival

The weekend of July 22 marks the fourth week of the Berkshire Festival with the Boston Symphony Orchestra performing. Friday night's program includes work of Schuman, Schubert and Mendelssohn. The Weekend Prelude will be a performance of Chopin, Rachmaninoff and Mendelssohn by the Tanglewood Choir. Saturday night Eric Leinsdorf will conduct selections from Wagner, Schumann and Rachmaninoff with Van Cliburn as concert soloist. Sunday night will again have Leinsdorf conducting a program of Beethoven, Tchaikovsky and Chopin. Tickets for any of these performances may be purchased at the gate.

Radio Notes

WGBH-FM presents a live concert by the Boston Symphony from Tanglewood today at 2:30 p.m. The program includes Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture, Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 6 and Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor, with Lilian Kallir, soloist.

Two outstanding experts on law enforcement join news director Dave MacNeill to discuss "The American Police Dilemma," on WCRB at 2:10 this afternoon. Dean Robert Sheehan, of the Northeastern Univ. department of law enforcement, and Newton Police Chief Philip Purcell are MacNeill's guests.

WCRB presents a repeat, in stereo, of "Wellesley College Night at the Pops" this afternoon at 5:05. Arthur Fiedler conducts, with Joela Jones, piano soloist.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600
JUL 24 1966

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,378

JUL 21 1966

VAN CLIBURN

LILLIAN KALLIR

VERONICA TYLER

JANE MARSH

SEIJI OZAWA

Top Stars Due This Week At Tanglewood Festival

The only two Americans to win first prize honors at the Tchaikovsky International Music Contest will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival's fourth week. Van Cliburn, winner of the piano competition in 1958, and Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the 1966 singing competition, will be heard with the orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf. Mr. Cliburn will play on Saturday, July 23, and Miss Marsh, along with Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, who placed second and third in this year's contest, will make their first United States appearances since returning from Moscow, on Sunday afternoon July 24. Lilian Kallir will also appear on Sunday's program as previously announced. Seiji Ozawa will be the guest conductor for the concert at 9 p.m. on Friday, July 22, with Joseph Silverstein as soloist.

Mr. Ozawa, Music Director of the Toronto Symphony and Ravinia Festival, attended the Berkshire Music Center in 1960 and on Friday will make his third guest appearance at Tanglewood in as many years. The first half of his program will include William Schuman's American Festival Overture and Schubert's Symphony No. 5. Following two weeks of chamber orchestra concerts the Festival programs will return this week to the summer's theme of the Romantic Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Concermaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, performing the Mendelsohn Violin Concerto with Mr. Ozawa and the Orchestra. Friday's concert will conclude with Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suit.

Saturday evening's program will begin at 8 p.m. in the Music Shed with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Brahms' Tragic Overture, which will be followed by Shumann's Symphony No. 2 Van Cliburn will play Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

With the advent of the three prize winning singers to Tanglewood, the program for Sunday's concert has been changed. The concert will begin with Beethoven's "Coriolanus" Overture. Lilian Kallir will be soloist in a performance of Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor. At press time the works to be sung by Miss Tyler and Mr. Estes were not definite but it is expected that Miss Tyler and Mr. Estes will each sing an aria and possibly a duet. Miss Marsh will be heard in Tchaikovsky arias from "Eugene Onegin" and "Pique Dame."

Friday's Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. will include Brahms' Sonata for Violin and Piano in A major, OP. 100, performed by Joseph Silverstein and Lilian Kallir. The Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson will be heard in songs for mixed chorus by Mendelsohn. Tickets for Friday's 9 p.m. Boston Symphony Orchestra concert include admission to the Weekend Prelude.

The Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will take place at 10:30 on Saturday morning in the Music Shed.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404

JUL 25 1966

Whitestone

PIANIST Van Cliburn acknowledges enthusiastic applause from crowd of 14,000 at conclusion of Saturday night's BSO concert at Tanglewood. BSO director Erich Leinsdorf, to quell prolonged applause, donned coat for final bow. Review appears on Page 6A.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966

JUL 24 1966

Van Cliburn Big Wow at Tanglewood

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — In spite of the frequently melancholy mood of the music at Tanglewood Saturday night, the listeners had an aura of celebration about them.

There were 14,375 present.

Rhapsodic Showpiece

They had come to see Van Cliburn play one of the pieces that helped him become the first American winner (1958) in the Tchaikovsky competitions in Moscow.

It was Rachmaninoff's piano concerto No. 3, a rhapsodic showpiece written to wow the audiences who showed up for the composer-pianist's 1909 concert tour of America, his first.

The piece is still wowing audiences, especially when entrusted to a pianist who has a feeling for it like Van Cliburn.

Prodigious Technique

It is a spectacular tour de force in the late romantic style of Tchaikovsky and it demands a prodigious technique.

Van Cliburn still has that

(See VAN CLIBURN Page 31A)

Similar Sound

Before intermission there was Brahm's "Tragic Overture," Op. 81, and Schumann's Symphony No. 2, Op. 61 and it may come as no surprise to a few that they had a similar sound.

The overture was strong, definite, frowning and, although it showed astonishingly a couple of ragged edges near the end, it was characterized by tone colors of dark, oiled walnut. It was powerfully like Beethoven.

The symphony provided for these ears the most beautiful, spine-tingling moments of the evening—the electric second movement and especially the famous, slow, third movement.

Velvety Radiance

Its liquid motion, soaring phrases and velvety radiance were magnificent.

Let Van Cliburn's fans shout and scream and stamp their feet and clap their hands all they wish and they did. That third movement by Schuman and Leinsdorf's magicians provided moments to remember.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,897

JUL 25 1966

Tchaikovsky Winners Sing At Tanglewood

Jane Marsh Makes First U. S. Appearance Since Moscow Triumph

By R. C. HAMMERICH
Union Music Critic

LENOX—The main attraction at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon was Jane Marsh, 24, San Francisco soprano who was making her first appearance in America since winning first prize in the vocal division of the Tchaikovsky competitions in Moscow this last June.

Second U. S. Winner

She is the second American to have won a first prize in the Moscow competitions. The first, in 1958, was Van Cliburn.

With her on Tanglewood's stage were two other winners at Moscow, Veronica Tyler, 29, soprano, a second prize winner, and Simon Estes, 28, bass, a third-place winner in the men's division.

Miss Marsh's performance did not have the emotional impact it was expected to have, probably because of the prize-winning circumstances, perhaps partly because of her choice of program, but it was impressive, nevertheless.

Bright, Shining Tones

She is a big, handsome, athletic girl with a young, strong voice that had moments Sunday of great beauty. She sang with security, apparently effortlessly and with bright, shining tones.

The arias she chose are two of the more profound expressions of love in the operatic repertory, "O, Patria Mia" from Verdi's "Aida" and Tatiana's day.

See TCHAIKOVSKY Page Two

The audience of 10,596, added to Friday's 7320, Van Cliburn's 14,375 Saturday night and the 3940 who attended the open rehearsal Saturday morning brought the weekend total to 37,224, the largest weekend total in the four years Leinsdorf has been at Tanglewood.

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,378

JUL 21 1966

VAN CLIBURN

VERONICA TYLER

JANE MARSH

Top Stars Due At Tanglewood

The only two Americans to win first prize honors at the Tchaikovsky International Music Contest will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival's fourth week. Van Cliburn, winner of the piano competition in 1958, and Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the 1966 singing competition, will be heard with the orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf. Mr. Cliburn will play on Saturday, July 23, and Miss Marsh, along with Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, who placed second and third in this year's contest, will make their first United States appearances since returning from Moscow, on Sunday afternoon July 24. Lilian Kallir will also appear on Sunday's program as previously announced. Seiji Ozawa will be the guest conductor for the concert at 9 p.m. on Friday, July 22, with Joseph Silverstein as soloist.

Mr. Ozawa, Music Director of the Toronto Symphony and Ravinia Festival, attended the Berkshire Music Center in 1960 and on Friday will make his third guest appearance at Tanglewood in as many years. The first half of his program will include William Schuman's American Overture and Schu[illegible] phony No. 5. Follow[illegible] weeks of chamber orches[illegible] concerts the Festival programs will return this week to the summer's theme of the Romantic Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Concermaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, performing the Mendelsohn Violin Concerto with Mr. Ozawa and the Orchestra. Friday's concert will conclude with Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suit.

Saturday evening's program will begin at 8 p.m. in the Music Shed with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Brahms' Tragic Overture, which will be followed by Shumann's Symphony No. 2 Van Cliburn will play Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

With the advent of the three prize winning singers to Tanglewood, the program for Sunday's concert has been changed. The concert will begin with Beethoven's "Coriolanus" Overture. Lilian Kallir will be soloist in a performance of Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor. At press time the works to be sung by Miss Tyler and Mr. Estes were not definite but it is expected that Miss Tyler and Mr. Estes will each sing an aria and possibly a duet. Miss Marsh will be heard in Tchaikovsky arias from "Eugene Onegin" and "Pique Dame."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404

JUL 25 1966

Whitestone

PIANIST Van Cliburn acknowledges enthusiastic applause from crowd of 14,000 at conclusion of Saturday night's BSO concert at Tanglewood. [illegible] Erich Leinsdorf, to quell prolonged applause, donned coat for final bow. Review appears on Page 6.

ublican
Mass.
6

VAN CLIBURN

(Continued From Page 1A)

technique, or did Saturday anyway. He sailed through the thunderous runs and arpeggios and splashes of glittering notes with head high, eyes closed and all flags flying.

And the quieter, moodier moments of sombre melodies were smoothly spread. They were awash with atmospheric chromaticism.

It was done with a manner of seemingly absolute surety as if the piece could be played no other way.

Sonic Splendor

Perhaps it can't. The air was full of sonic splendor Saturday night, anyway, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra provided a sizeable piece of it.

Granted Cliburn can play with such big sound he made the piano seem almost like its own orchestra Saturday, but it was Leinsdorf's orchestra which provided the support and set the stage for the rhythmic and harmonic tension that kept the giant audience enthralled.

It was another victory for Van Cliburn and Rachmaninoff. With Tchaikovsky's First Piano Concerto, it is really Cliburn's piece. He can play nothing else better.

Similar Sound

Before intermission there was Brahm's "Tragic Overture," Op. 81, and Schumann's Symphony No. 2, Op. 61 and it may come as no surprise to a few that they had a similar sound.

The overture was strong, definite, frowning and, although it showed astonishingly a couple of ragged edges near the end, it was characterized by tone colors of dark, oiled walnut. It was powerfully like Beethoven.

The symphony provided for these ears the most beautiful, spine-tingling moments of the evening—the electric second movement and especially the famous, slow, third movement.

Velvety Radiance

Its liquid motion, soaring phrases and velvety radiance were magnificent.

Let Van Cliburn's fans shout and scream and stamp their feet and clap their hands all they wish and they did. That third movement by Schuman and Leinsdorf's magicians provided moments to remember.

Tchaikovsky

Continued From Page 1

letter scene from Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin."

Miss Tyler sang Mozart's beautiful "Et Incarnatus Est" from the mass in C. Minor, K.427, with smooth and mellow grace, and Estes sang "Ella Giammai M (Amo) Dormiro Sol" from Verdi's "Don Carlo" with sombre and tragic intensity.

Subtlety, Tastefulness

Before intermission the audience was treated to a truly delightful performance of Chopin's piano concerto No. 2, F Minor, Op. 62, by Lilian Kallir.

The subtlety and tastefulness of her understanding and expression of this charming music grew more and more effective as the concerto progressed.

Her discreet handling of accents, rhythms, little crescendos and the slight pushing and slowing of speeds so crucial to the success of this piece was entirely satisfying, sometimes exciting.

Patrician Demeanor

There were moments when more substance would have been appropriate, but the lack of it can be attributed more to the slight character of the concerto (Chopin wrote it when he was 20) than to the performance.

Miss Kallir's warm and gracious way with Chopin was in colorful contrast to her cool, patrician demeanor, much as her scarlet gown was in contrast to the white shirts and trousers of the orchestra members.

The program opened with a neat as well as dramatic performance of Beethoven's overture to "Coriolan," OP. 62, but the orchestra's special talent for masterly accompaniment was its major contribution Sunday.

The audience of 10,596, added to Friday's 7320, Van Cliburn's 14,375 Saturday night and the 3940 who attended the open rehearsal Saturday morning brought the weekend total to 37,224, the largest weekend total in the four years Leinsdorf has been at Tanglewood.

Shell H

Lerna played the long, gruelling tour with a nonchalance few other big name stars achieved.

"It's a matter of having a winning mental attitude," he explained. "I have forced myself to accept the good with the bad."

Made Good on Promise

He won the tournament in a three-hole sudden death playoff against Bob Rosburg and promptly made good on his promise.

Lerna turned professional in 1955 but did not win a tournament until the summer of 1962.

Nicknamed "Champagne Tony," Lerna was one of the most popular players on the tour. He acquired his nickname while talking to golf writers in the press room following the third round of the Orange County Open in 1962. He held up an empty can of beer at the end of the press conference and remarked:

"Fellows, if I win tomorrow it's champagne for all."

Turned Pro in '55

Lerna turned professional in 1955 but did not win a tournament until the summer of 1962.

Nicknamed "Champagne Tony," Lerna was one of the most popular players on the tour. He acquired his nickname while talking to golf writers in the press room following the third round of the Orange County Open in 1962. He held up an empty can of beer at the end of the press conference and remarked:

"Fellows, if I win tomorrow it's champagne for all."

Made Good on Promise

He won the tournament in a three-hole sudden death playoff against Bob Rosburg and promptly made good on his promise.

Lerna played the long, gruelling tour with a nonchalance few other big name stars achieved.

"It's a matter of having a winning mental attitude," he explained. "I have forced myself to accept the good with the bad."

83 37

84

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,910
JUL 24 1966

Music: Van Cliburn At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — An audience of 14,375 made it emphatically clear last night at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Festival that Van Cliburn was tops in its affection and esteem.

Cliburn was soloist in Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3 in D Minor with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Erich Leinsdorf. Balance of the program was Brahms' "Tragic" Overture, Opus 81, and Schumann's Symphony No. 2 in C Major, Opus 61.

Three things distinguished Cliburn's performance of the Rachmaninoff concerto — untarnished musicianship, a superb unanimity of objectives by soloist, conductor and orchestra, and complete performance of the concerto — not the familiar abbreviated version.

Audience Enraptured

It has been eight years since Cliburn was precipitated to world fame by winning the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow. The woods are full of splashy keyboard technicians and passionate piano poets. Had Cliburn been either of these, his light would have dimmed long ago.

Last night's audience wasn't merely captivated by Cliburn's personality. His magnetism lies in his disarming simplicity. The audience was also enraptured with the music.

We repeat, he played the uncut version. Frankly, this would be highly imprudent for most pianists. Even Rachmaninoff himself usually used the shorter version in the interest of compactness.

Gorgeous Melody

Cliburn's treatment, fully confirmed by orchestra, was a persistent search for Slavic temperament and gorgeous melody. From the start, piano and orchestra were imbued with the work's throbbing emotion.

The prearranged tempo of the first movement was unusually, but not unduly slow. Cliburn was sure-fingered, he phrased with finesse and embraced a wide range of sonority. It was outstanding musicianship by a pianist who happens to be famous.

Leinsdorf's concept of the Brahms "Tragic" Overture was no less astute. Some might take issue with his heavy use of brass, turning it somewhat into a "hip-hip-hurrah" performance. At times the masses virtually submerged important string matter.

On the other hand, Leinsdorf made way for frail woodwinds to be clearly heard.

Results Absorbing

In general, there was a sweep in string emphasis in brasses, and powerful rhythmic drive. Summary impression was a commanding, stern account of the overture's spectral character. Motivation was clear and results absorbing.

High point of Schumann's Second Symphony (with its overly drawn - out stretches) was the Scherzo, or Second Movement. Here was string-playing that has long been the Boston Symphony's specialty. Equally telling were sections of fluctuating tempos, not possible without unanimous response to direction.

This cannot be accomplished with heads in scores.

The combined four movements were a compelling apotheosis of struggle and survival.

Tanglewood is all agog over this afternoon's concert. Three American prize-winners of the recent Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow will make their first American appearances since that event.

They are Jane Marsh, soprano (first prize); Veronica Tyler, soprano, (second prize), Simon Estes, bass (third prize).

Lilian Kallir will be soloist in Chopin's Second Piano concesto and Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony in Beethoven's "coriolanus" overture.

PERFORMERS AT BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL
Van Cliburn (left) and Jane Marsh with Erich Leinsdorf

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 61,129
JUL 23 1966

Music: Soloist Silverstein Is Busy at Tanglewood

By RAY MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX, Mass. — Personable double-duty violinist J.F. Silverstein was the busiest musician at Tanglewood last night at the Berkshire music festival's opening concert of the fourth weekend. Attendance was 7,320.

The concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was soloist in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto with the orchestra. He was also heard in the Brahms' Sonata in A Major for Piano and Violin, Opus 100, in joint performance with Lillian Kallir.

Dynamic Japanese Seiji Ozawa conducted the orchestra in William Schuman's American Festival Overture, F. Schubert's Symphony No. 5 in D Flat, and the Suite from Stravinsky's Ballet Music, "Firebird."

Preludes

Friday night concerts by the Boston Symphony are preceded by "Weekend Preludes" beginning at 7 p.m. These programs are chamber music appetizers, without additional charge to patrons.

Purpose is to delay the main event to accommodate persons who cannot reach Tanglewood earlier on Fridays and to entertain those who arrive early. Last night's prelude was in the Music Shed for an audience of 4,500.

Ozawa and the orchestra were in particuarly fine form.

Schubert's Fifth Symphony was at its lightsome best. Ozawa neither tried to inflate its happy-go-lucky character, nor treated it like a whimsical imitation of Haydn or Mozart.

For example, the finale was taken at an unusually conservative speed.

The two principal themes of the movement were sources of calm with strings and woodwinds. The sound was rich and pitched spotless. It was carefree, breezy music. The slow movement was thoughtful and expressive, certainly not depressed.

Ozawa balanced sections to bring forward the themes that are sneaked into the minuet by bassoons and horns.

Schumann's "American Festival Overture" was a noisy concert opener with rambunctious rhythms, abetted by extensive use of percussion.

It is however, a well-constructed piece that speaks in a loud, but convincing contemporary language. Orchestra and conductor gave it a lively performance, highlighted by a fugue, as clearly outlined as a road map.

Silverstein gave a splendid account of the Mendelssohn Concerto. While his tone was moderate in substance, it had vitality and warmth. Played without pause, the opening movement was built page by page, into a solid ornate structure. The soloist's technique was more reliable than dazzling, but reached a state of brilliance in the cadenza.

The Music Shed and its stage made a rather gargantuan setting for the gem-like Brahms Sonata. Acoustics are such that every fragment of tone was heard clearly and fully.

Silverstein and Miss Kallir played the Brahms with ebullience and discernment. Miss Kallir's technique was secure. Her performance's real excitement was in the prompt and consistent beat of melody by each instrument. It was a beautiful fusion of purposes, wholly in accord with Brahms' purposes. Applause was long and evenly shared.

Second part of the "Prelude" was nine Mendelssohn songs of nature worship by the Tanglewood Choir of 30 mixed voices directed by Alfred Nash Patterson.

Generated From Podium

Unaccompanied for the most part, and singing in German, the group demonstrated well-schooled coordination producing work of knowing character in style, pronunciation, and interpretive finesse. Obviously, these were generated from the podium.

In such as the "Lark's Song," "May Song," "Nightingale" and "Hunting Song" there was a particularly wide scope of nuances and phrased contours. Songs of penchant style, like "In the Verdure," and "Song of the Year," were quietly wilting and emotional.

For some of these songs Patterson spread out his singers about the stage, giving an effect of expansiveness.

Tonight, Van Cliburn will be soloist in Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony in Brahms' Tragic Overture and Schumann's Second Symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02108 • 742-4200
Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Circ. 21,114
JUL 30 1966

CLIBURN'S CONCERTO AT TANGLEWOOD THRILLS REVIEWER

The only two Americans who won first prize honors at the Tschaikowsky International Music Contest, the first since Van Cliburn won the piano competition in 1958, plus Cliburn, appeared at the Tanglewood Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass., the fourth week of the Boston Symphony's summer season, and made history thereby.

Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the 1966 singing competition was heard with the orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf, and Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third places in this year's contest were also heard in their first United States appearances since returning from Moscow.

And the handclapping still goes on in the hearts and memories of the thousands who heard both concerts — the electrifying performance of Van Cliburn, in the third Rachmaninoff Piano concerto, an extremely vigorous composition, with powerful demands upon any executing artist, proved no problem in the hands of this most dexterous and sky- rocketing genius. To this reviewer, it was the strongest artistry he has yet exhibited, at the Tanglewood festival, or in any concert — and with a depth of feeling and interpretation that transported the entire audience to such realms that they would not let him cease from coming back to the stage again and again and yet again. That the beloved Boston director was in accord that this was the consummate performance was evidenced by the warm embrace he spontaneously gave at the great concerto's conclusion; perhaps musical history will record the continuation of curtain calls for both soloist and director by including the priceless little bit about the final "call", Leinsdorf wrapped in a greatcoat, as though emerging from a storm, or at least a shower — preparatory to going home.

It was teamed up with an equally strong first half of the program, which comprised Brahms Tragic Overture, which produced a performance of such grandeur that tragedy seemed to have no part.

There have been a lot of concerts poured into my long listening ear over the last half century, yet none like this seemed to reach such heavenly heights that it was as though entrance had been made through the gate of celestial harmony — that perhaps, here, at last, that lost chord had been re-traced and found! ! The 2nd Symphony of Robert Schumann upheld the perfect rapport between concert connoisseur and orchestral body, and director.

This coming week-end will feature as soloists: Jules Eskin, cello; Joseph Silverstein, violin; Lillian Kalir, and Clude Frank, piano.

Friday concerts this year feature week-end preludes at 7, prior to the major offering at 9 P. M. Saturday evening concerts are at 8:30 and Sunday afternoons at 2 P. M.

Tanglewood on Parade, with the Boston Pops at Tanglewood, with Arthur Fiedler conducting is scheduled for Wednesday evening. Another gala evening for the benefit of the Berkshire Music center will be on Aug. 10.

....r. e. h.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Bi-Weekly Circ. 1,200
JUL 21 1966

Tanglewood

The only two Americans to win first prize honors at the Tchaikovsky International Music Contest will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival's fourth week. Van Cliburn, winner of the piano competition in 1958, and Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the 1966 singing competition, will be heard with the orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf. Mr. Cliburn will play on Saturday and Miss Marsh, along with Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, who placed second and third in this year's contest, will make their first United States appearance since returning from Moscow, on Sunday afternoon. Lilian Kallir will also appear on Sunday's program as previously announced. Seiji Ozawa will be the guest conductor for the concert at 9:00 p.m. tomorrow (Friday) with Joseph Silverstein as soloist.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
JUL 25 1966

The ARTS

American Singers May Be Best, But Nobody's Perfect

By MICHAEL STEINBERG
Globe Critic

LENOX—The recent Moscow competition had one pleasing result in that it gave due publicity to the fact that American singers tend to be the best in the world, although one would not necessarily infer that from the work of the actual winners.

Two sopranos from this country, Jane Marsh and Veronica Tyler, took first and second prizes respectively, and an American bass, Simon Estes, took a third prize in the men's division, and on Sunday afternoon, all three participated in the Boston Symphony concert at Tanglewood.

The first half of the concert began with Beethoven's Coriolanus Overture, given a strong performance by the orchestra under Erich Leinsdorf. Next, Lilian Kallir played Chopin's F Minor Concerto with musical taste and fluency that made it agreeable to hear, but without the strength of articulation or the coloristic resource that would have made it a completely interesting performance. The playing had character and a commanding power of projection only in the rhetorical middle section of the larghetto. Incidentally, the contention in the program notes that the F Minor concerto is "superior in every detail to the E Minor" seems quite unjustifiable.

Then the singers, beginning with Veronica Tyler, who sings the "Et Incarnatus Est" from Mozart's C Minor Mass. As in the past, she appears to be a vocalist on the verge of trouble. The jaw vibrates madly and the voice sounds tense. Possibly this inhibits her musical impulses. At any rate, the singing is uneventful and without strong sense of continuity. The flute, oboe and bassoon obbligatos are done rather fussily by the Dwyer-Gomberg-Walt trio.

Simon Estes sings King Philipp's monolgue from Verdi's "Don Carlo." His voice, without being notably large or sumptuous, is warm, steadily and confidently produced, and the tone quality is even from top to bottom. The sound, with its rather fast vibrato and with a certain baritonal pathos I associate with some of the German lieder singers, has something quite individual, even haunting.

It also develops at once that Estes' artistry is imposing. The recitative is tellingly inflected, and uncharacteristically and startlingly stiff only for a moment at "gl' spunta il di'." The aria is beautifully phrased and grandly sustained. It is a noble, musical, aware realization of a magnificent tragic portrait. The orchestra, except for some rigidity in the aria, makes a strong contribution, and Jules Eskin's cello solo is very fine.

Then Jane Marsh, fist in the 'letter' scence from Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin," then in "O Patria Mia!" from Verdi's "Aida." Tatiana is very young, but to bring her to life on stage needs a singer of resplendent maturity, and Miss Marsh, at 23, is not yet all there. Her voice is a pure, easily produced lyric soprano, attractive, impersonal. It is used musically and with taste. Any one phrase of her letter scene would impress one as admirable and many of them convey the pathos of youth and innocence touchingly. Altogether, they are monotonous. Leinsdorf's conducting is careful and the orchestra plays well, but he does not come close to producing anything like the marvelously sensitive and live context that Kondrashin made for Vishnevskaya's recreation of the scene with the Moscow Philharmonic in Boston last winter.

In the "Aida" excerpt there is again vocal excellence and an estimable musical taste that causes Miss Marsh carefully to integrate the climactic high C into the larger line of the aria and that keeps her from snarling in the low register. The prevailing impression is that of well schooled playing of a fine instrument. Aida, her despairing homesickness, the black waters of the Nile, the luminous Ethiopian sky, are not evoked. With her uninteresting colors and dynamics, especially with her placid temperament, Miss Marsh is a flavorless bore.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 22 1966

Record Weekend In Area Hinges On Weather

The flow of traffic into the Berkshires today and tomorrow is expected to result in a record or near record weekend for the tourist business, John V. Geary, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference. He said that weather would be the factor that would determine whether the records would be broken.

Tanglewood business is slightly ahead of a year ago at this point, Geary has been informed. The Van Cliburn concert Saturday night has been sold out except for those who want to hear the concert from the lawn.

Commercial rooming facilities are sold out 100 per cent, he reported, although rooming accommodations in private homes are still available.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 146,293
JUL 21 1966

Tanglewood

JANE MARSH, first American to win first prize at the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition since 1958, will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon.

San Francisco Chronicle
THE VOICE OF THE WEST
D. 475,000
JULY 23 1966

Jane Marsh To Appear At Tanglewood

Jane Marsh, Bay Area soprano, will make her first appearance at Tanglewood, Mass., tomorrow with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Miss Marsh was the recent winner of the voice competition at the Tschaikowsky International Music Contest in Moscow.

The 24-year-old soprano yesterday signed an exclusive recording contract with RCA Victor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 23 1966

Music Review

Concert at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY Orchestra last night went into its fourth weekend, the half-way mark of the season, with the first concert of a brilliantly conceived trio of programs. If there is anything more convincing than a 10-strike, credit Erich Leinsdorf and the Berkshire Music Festival with whatever you may call it for their achievement in being the first in America to book the winners of the recent Tchaikovsky voice competitions in Moscow, who will appear here Sunday. (The instrumental contest winners are to appear in the weeks to come.)

In last night's program, there was vitality, charm, boldness and a dab of almost everything an orchestra can produce. Between the stark drive of William Schuman's "American Festival Overture," and the glowing ballet music of Stravinsky's "Firebird" suite, there was the comparatively gentle Fifth Symphony of Schubert, and the Mendelssohn violin concerto with the orchestra's concertmaster, Joseph Silverstein, as soloist.

• • •

SCHUBERT'S symphony employs but a small orchestra, no clarinets in the reeds, only horns in the brass, and no percussion. Considering that it is from the pen of a 19-year-old boy, our pleasure is compounded; it would take a computer to measure the roguish and, in turn, serene spirit of this symphony. Guest conductor Seiji Ozawa of Japan played it with the finesse of chamber music, saving his fire and reinforcements for the Stravinsky, which he played in its concert-length revision as did the composer in a performance he conducted last March at the Eastman School in Rochester.

Joseph Silverstein

THERE IS nothing of the violin literature which Mr. Silverstein's style of playing [illegible] better than the Mendelssohn. The superlative suavity of his bow and instant vibrato of his left hand ignite the easily combustible pages of the instrument's most popular concerto. Note and line, phrase and movement, detail and perspective, all had a part in his performance. Silverstein, like Ferdinand David 120 years ago and every violinist since then, did not need a second invitation to observe the "molto vivace" motto for the last movement. He made it dazzling and wizardly.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733

JUL 25 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404

JUL 23 1966

The ARTS

American Singers May Be Best, But Nobody's Perfect

By MICHAEL STEINBERG
Globe Critic

LENOX—The recent Moscow competition had one pleasing result in that it gave due publicity to the fact that American singers tend to be the best in the world, although one would not necessarily infer that from the work of the actual winners.

Two sopranos from this country, Jane Marsh and Veronica Tyler, took first and second prizes respectively, and an American bass, Simon Estes, took a third prize in the men's division, and on Sunday afternoon, all three participated in the Boston Symphony concert at Tanglewood.

The first half of the concert began with Beethoven's Coriolanus Overture, given a strong performance by the orchestra under Erich Leinsdorf. Next, Lilian Kallir played Chopin's F Minor Concerto with musical taste and fluency that made it agreeable to hear, but without the strength of articulation or the coloristic resource that would have made it a completely interesting performance. The playing had character and a commanding power of projection only in the rhetorical middle section of the larghetto. Incidentally, the contention in the program notes that the F Minor concerto is "superior in every detail to the E Minor" seems quite unjustifiable.

Then the singers, beginning with Veronica Tyler, who sings the "Et Incarnatus Est" from Mozart's C Minor Mass. As in the past, she appears to be a vocalist on the verge of trouble. The jaw vibrates madly and the voice sounds tense. Possibly this inhibits her musical impulses. At any rate, the singing is uneventful and without strong sense of continuity. The flute, oboe and bassoon obbligatos are done rather fussily by the Dwyer-Gomberg-Walt trio.

Simon Estes sings King Philipp's monolgue from Verdi's "Don Carlo." His voice, without being notably large or sumptuous, is warm, steadily and confidently produced, and the tone quality is even from top to bottom. The sound, with its rather fast vibrato and with a certain baritonal pathos I associate with some of the German lieder singers, has something quite individual, even haunting.

It also develops at once that Estes' artistry is imposing. The recitative is tellingly, inflected, and uncharacteristically and startlingly stiff only for a moment at "gi' spunta il di'." The aria is beautifully phrased and grandly sustained. It is a noble, musical, aware realization of a magnificent tragic portrait. The orchestra, except for some rigidity in the aria, makes a strong contribution, and Jules Eskin's cello solo is very fine.

Then Jane Marsh, fist in the 'letter' scence from Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin," then in "O Patria Mia" from Verdi's "Aida." Tatiana is very young, but to bring her to life on stage needs a singer of resplendent maturity, and Miss Marsh, at 23, is not yet all there. Her voice is a pure, easily produced lyric soprano, attractive, impersonal. It is used musically and with taste. Any one phrase of her letter scene would impress one as admirable and many of them convey the pathos of youth and innocence touchingly. Altogether, they are monotonous. Leinsdorf's conducting is careful and the orchestra plays well, but he does not come close to producing anything like the marvelously sensitive and live context that Kondrashin made for Vishnevskaya's recreation of the scene with the Moscow Philharmonic in Boston last winter.

In the "Aida" excerpt there is again vocal excellence and an estimable musical taste that causes Miss Marsh carefully to integrate the climactic high C into the larger line of the aria and that keeps her from snarling in the low register. The prevailing impression is that of well schooled playing of a fine instrument. Aida, her despairing homesickness, the black waters of the Nile, the luminous Ethiopian sky, are not evoked. With her uninteresting colors and dynamics, especially with her placid temperament, Miss Marsh is a flavorless bore.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404

JUL 22 1966

Record Weekend In Area Hinges On Weather

The flow of traffic into the Berkshires today and tomorrow is expected to result in a record or near record weekend for the tourist business, John V. Geary, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference. He said that weather would be the factor that would determine whether the records would be broken.

Tanglewood business is slightly ahead of a year ago at this point, Geary has been informed. The Van Cliburn concert Saturday night has been sold out except for those who want to hear the concert from the lawn.

Commercial rooming facilities are sold out 100 per cent, he reported, although rooming accommodations in private homes are still available.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 146,293

JUL 21 1966

Tanglewood

JANE MARSH, first American to win first prize at the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition since 1958, will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon.

San Francisco Chronicle
THE VOICE OF THE WEST
D. 475,000

JULY 23 1966

Jane Marsh To Appear At Tanglewood

Jane Marsh, Bay Area soprano, will make her first appearance at Tanglewood, Mass., tomorrow with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Miss Marsh was the recent winner of the voice competition at the Tschaikowsky International Music Contest in Moscow.

The 24-year-old soprano yesterday signed an exclusive recording contract with RCA Victor.

Music Review

Concert at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY Orchestra last night went into its fourth weekend, the half-way mark of the season, with the first concert of a brilliantly conceived trio of programs. If there is anything more convincing than a 10-strike, credit Erich Leinsdorf and the Berkshire Music Festival with whatever you may call it for their achievement in being the first in America to book the winners of the recent Tchaikovsky voice competitions in Moscow, who will appear here Sunday. (The instrumental contest winners are to appear in the weeks to come.)

In last night's program, there was vitality, charm, boldness and a dab of almost everything an orchestra can produce. Between the stark drive of William Schuman's "American Festival Overture," and the glowing ballet music of Stravinsky's "Firebird" suite, there was the comparatively gentle Fifth Symphony of Schubert, and the Mendelssohn violin concerto with the orchestra's concertmaster, Joseph Silverstein, as soloist.

* * *

SCHUBERT'S symphony employs but a small orchestra, no clarinets in the reeds, only horns in the brass, and no percussion. Considering that it is from the pen of a 19-year-old boy, our pleasure is compounded; it would take a computer to measure the roguish and, in turn, serene spirit of this symphony. Guest conductor Seiji Ozawa of Japan played it with the finesse of chamber music, saving his fire and reinforcements for the Stravinsky, which he played in its concert-length revision as did the composer in a performance he conducted last March at the Eastman School in Rochester.

Joseph Silverstein

THERE IS nothing in the violin literature which lets Silverstein's style of playing better than the Mendelssohn. The superlative suavity of his bow and instant vibrato of the left hand ignite the easily combustible pages of the instrument's most popular concerto. Note and line, phrase and movement, detail and perspective, all had a part in his performance. Silverstein, like Ferdinand David 120 years ago and every violinist since then, did not need a second invitation to observe the "molto vivace" motto for the last movement. He made it dazzling and wizardly.

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Circ. 15,399

JUL 21 1966

Tchaikovsky Competition Winners Slated At Tanglewood This Week

The only two Americans to win first prize honors at the Tchaikovsky International Music Contest will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the weekend concerts of the Berkshire Festival's fourth week. Van Cliburn, winner of the piano competition in 1958, and Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the 1966 singing competition, will be heard with the orchestra under Music Director Erich Leinsdorf. Mr. Cliburn will play on Saturday, and Miss Marsh, along with Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, who placed second and third in this year's contest, will make their first United States appearances since returning from Moscow, on Sunday afternoon. Lilian Kallir will also appear on Sunday's program as previously announced. Seiji Ozawa will be the guest conductor for the concert at 9:00 p.m. on Friday with Joseph Silverstein as soloist.

Mr. Ozawa, Music Director of the Toronto Symphony and Ravinia Festival, attended the Berkshire Music Center in 1960 and on Friday will make his third guest appearance at Tanglewood in as many years. The first half of his program will include William Schuman's American Festival Overture and Schubert's Symphony No. 5. Following two weeks of chamber orchestra concerts the Festival programs will return this week to the summer's theme of the Romantic Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, performing the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto with Mr. Ozawa and the Orchestra. Friday's concert will conclude with Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite.

Saturday evening's program will begin at 8:00 p.m. in the Music Shed with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Brahms' Tragic Overture, which will be followed by Schumann's Symphony No. 2. Van Cliburn will play Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

With the advent of the three prize winning singers to Tanglewood, the program for Sunday's concert has been changed. The concert will begin with Beethoven's "Coriolanus" Overture. Lilian Kallir will be soloist in a performance of Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor. At press time, the works to be sung by Miss Tyler and Mr. Estes were not definite but it is expected that they will each sing an aria and possibly a duet. Miss Marsh will be heard in Tchaikovsky arias from "Eugene Onegin" and "Pique Dame."

Friday's Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. will include Brahams' Sonata for Violin and Piano in A major, Op. 100, performed by Joseph Silverstein and Lilian Kallir. The Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Alfred Nash Patterson will be heard in songs for mixed chorus by Mendelssohn. Tickets for Friday's 9 p.m. Boston Symphony Orchestra concert include admission to the Weekend Prelude.

The Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony's Orchestra Pension Fund will take place at 10:30 on Saturday morning in the Music Shed.

Three Berkshire Music Center concerts will be available this week to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Center's activities.

Sunday morning at 10 will be a Baroque program in the Tanglewood Theatre. Erich Leinsdorf and Charles Wilson, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's new assistant conductor, will share the conducting of Thursday evening's Berkshire Music Center Orchestra concert. This program at 8 in the theatre will include Berlioz' Corsair Overture and Beethoven's Symphony No. 4 conducted by Mr. Wilson, and the Violin Concerto by Berg, with a soloist to be announced, and Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel conducted by Mr. Leinsdorf.

Program and ticket information on all Berkshire Festival events may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240, or by calling (413) 637-1600.

Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 13,202

JUL 22 1966

SUMMER LIFE

Moscow Prize Winners To Sing At Tanglewood

LENOX — Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced the complete program for the Sunday concert at Tanglewood which will bring Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler, and Simon Estes before an American audience for the first time since their prize winning performances in Moscow.

At the same time Leinsdorf stated that the Boston Symphony Orchestra has released Miss Marsh from her contract to sing in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on Aug. 21 in order for her to appear in her native state on Aug. 20 in the Hollywood Bowl.

Phyllis Curtin, a summer resident of the Berkshires and member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, has consented to replace Miss Marsh in the ninth Symphony.

The program for the Berkshire Festival concert Sunday will begin with Beethoven's Overture to Coriolan and continued with Lilian Kallir performing Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor.

Following the intermission Jane Marsh, the only American first prize winner in the entire 1966 Tchaikovsky competition, will be heard in "O patria mia" from Act III of Verdi's Aida and Tatania's Letter Scene from Eugene Onegin which she sang in her prize winning performance in Moscow.

Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third prize winners, will also be heard in music they sang in the Tchaikovsky competition. Miss Tyler will sing "Et incarnatus est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor, K. 427, and Mr. Estes will sing "Ella giammai m'amo: Dormiro sol" from Verdi's Don Carlo.

Following her performance in Mozart's The Magic Flute on Aug. 6, an appearance scheduled prior to the Moscow contest, Miss Marsh will return to Tanglewood for a third time this summer on Aug. 13. Several months ago the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced it would present prize winners from the Tchaikovsky competition at its Aug. 13 and 14 Tanglewood concerts. The Orchestra regrets the Soviet winners were unable to come to this country for these concerts, but it pleased to be able to present Miss Marsh and the three second place winners in the instrumental competitions.

The Aug. 13 concert will begin with Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis to be followed by the American cellist, Stephen Kates, second prize in Moscow, playing the Shostakovitch Cello Concerto. Jane Marsh will then be heard in Lisa's Scene and Arioso from Tchaikovsky's Pique Dame and Verdi's Introduction, Willow Song, and Ave Maria from Otello. The concert will close with orchestral excerpts from Wagner's Gotterdammerung.

On Aug. 14, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist who placed second in the Tchaikovsky competition, and Misha Dichter, American pianist and second prize winner, will perform with Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The works they will play will be determined as soon as the prize winners return from abroad.

Also on this program the orchestra will play the Prelude from Act III of Wagners Lohengrin excerpts from Gunther Schuller's Seven Studies Themes of Paul Klee, and Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,897

JUL 23 1966

Lively Concert Is Given at Tanglewood

Schuman, Schubert Marches Conducted by Nimble Seiji Ozawa

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Seiji Ozawa is a slight, nimble, boyish, bouncing conductor. He led the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday night through a lively concert at Tanglewood that ran from Schubert to Schuman.

Brilliant Colors

William Schuman was first. His "American Festival Overture" opened the festivities with a wide spread of brilliant orchestral colors. Most predominant were drums, brass and sonority.

The drums rattled and boomed, the brass blared with blinding clarity and the double-basses were joined by the tubas and bass trombones to lay a foundation of gravelly sonority.

Schubert followed. His symphony No. 15 is a real beauty, full of the stuff of Mozart and Haydn plus a little of Beethoven. But this is not to say it was written in imitation. Its style has a healthy measure of the classic, but its melodies are all Schubert.

Extra Warmth

And Ozawa gave it an extra measure of fluidity and warmth Friday, partly by slowing up the middle sections a bit.

But even when letting the beginnings of the 19th century's romanticism show through, the orchestra never lost the unity of ensemble, which sometimes seems magical and is, probably, unmatched in the world.

Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster, appeared after intermission as soloist in Mendelssohn's E Minor Violin Concerto, Op. 64.

"Light, Silvery Tone"

He was, as usual, nimble and placid, nimble on the strings and placid in manner.

The sound of his violin, as it was earlier during the concert prelude program, was sweet and glistening. He played with a light, silvery tone that sliced through the subdued orchestra and was never overshadowed.

His view of this popular warhorse was more vigorous than it seemed, however, because he has such a placid appearance. The excitement of the music was more evident, to this listener, at least, when the eyes were not on the violinist.

Dramatic Color

The concert ended with Stravinsky's suite from the ballet "The Fire-Bird" — another demonstration, like the Schuman overture, of dramatic orchestral color.

It seems fairly safe to say that the concert was another example of virtuosic orchestral playing. It was the orchestra rather than the soloist or the visiting conductor that provided the entertainment.

There were 7320 listeners, but the size of the audience which arrived early for the weekend prelude was, once again, somewhat surprising to a couple of Tanglewood regulars.

Choir Lively

More than 4000 were there to hear Silverstein and Lillian Kallir play Brahms' Violin Sonata in A Major, Op. 100, and the Tanglewood Choir under the guidance of Alfred Nash Patterson sing nine songs by Mendelssohn.

The sonata is a benign expression of tranquility, and Silverstein's delicate tone and Kallir's warm and flowing piano style were nicely appropriate.

The choir, however, lent more liveliness and variety to the prelude program, partly because some of Mendelssohn's songs were full of fun, partly because of the choir's expert craftsmanship.

Action as Well as Music

Its precision was slightly frayed during the first few minutes, but that soon was gone. Otherwise all of the attributes of a well-chosen and well-drilled choir were evident, particularly balance, tonal blend, pitch accuracy and cleanliness of attacks and stops.

Not only that, some of the words were understandable in spite of the grand spaciousness of the shed.

And there was action as well as music in Mendelssohn's songs.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503

JUL 22 1966

This Weekend

Tchaikovsky Prizewinners To Sing at Tanglewood

The complete program for the Sunday concert at Tanglewood, which will bring Jane Marsh, Veronica Tyler, and Simon Estes before an American audience for the first time since their prize winning performances in Moscow, has been announced.

The program for the Berkshire Festival concert Sunday will begin with Beethoven's Overture to Coriolan and continue with Lilian Kallir performing Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor.

Following the intermission, Jane Marsh, the only American first prize winner in the entire 1966 Tchaikovsky competition, will be heard in "O patria mia" from Act III of Verdi's Aida and Tatania's Letter Scene from Eugene Onegin which she sang in her prize winning performance in Moscow.

Veronica Tyler and Simon Estes, second and third prize winners, will also be heard in music they sang in the Tchaikovsky competition.

Miss Tyler will sing "Et incarnatus est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor, and Mr. Estes will sing "Ella giammai m'amo: Dormiro sol" from Verdi's Don Carlo.

87 37

Sunday Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Circ. 1,355,614

JUL 31 1966

Brainy, Good-Looking and Vocal, Too

By THEODORE STRONGIN

LENOX, Mass.

SOPRANOS, according to an old saw, have resonance where their brains should be. That this saw is as full of sawdust as most others was proven at Tanglewood last weekend where the three American singers who won prizes at the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow last month, came to sing with the Boston Symphony.

One of the singers, Simon Estes, is a bass, and so legend allows him to be intelligent. But during a weekend chat, Jane Marsh and Veronica Tyler, both sopranos, turned out — along with Mr. Estes — to be as brainy and articulate as up-and-comers in any other profession.

And as good-looking, too, which is no handicap to a stage career. Miss Marsh, the only American first prize winner since Van Cliburn in 1958, is a tall brunette with blue eyes and an assured manner. Miss Tyler is willowy and has an elfin glint. Mr. Estes is slim, tall, boyish looking and speaks with an easy manner. In conversation at least, none of the three is a prima donna.

The Moscow competition was still vivid in their minds. "I don't think I've ever sung for an audience so receptive," said Estes. "It meant a lot, singing for those people who love music so much," added Miss Tyler. "They are extremely knowing about music," said Miss Marsh.

Critical of Contests

All three are naturally happy about their prizes. But they are not uncritical of competitions as such. "It's difficult to judge talent," said Miss Tyler. "If you have five Van Cliburns, how can you choose only one?"

"That brings up a point," Miss Marsh said. "You seldom find a person who is both a competitor and a performer. I'm not a competitor. I went in to do my best as a performer." There is a fine line of etiquette, she explained, between being polite and responsive to the audience and being just aloof enough from it so that the judges won't think you are grandstanding.

"Competitions are strange," Estes said, "but I always look forward to the chance to communicate to another two, three or four people, or any number."

As to the effect of the competition on their lives, "it certainly got our names in the papers," Estes said. "A few more people happen to know we exist."

"It means that I've skipped a few stages in my career," said Miss Marsh. "My difficulties lie ahead now. There is a tremendous amount of pressure on me." She keeps telling her managers to "take it easy, move carefully." She has already turned down an engagement with the Metropolitan Opera. She isn't ready for it, she thinks.

Miss Tyler feels that "a lot remains to be seen, still." But before she won the prize, there had been quibbling over the amount of a fee she will earn for an appearance at St. Thomas, V. I. When the prize came, the quibbling stopped.

Not So Difficult

Singing is supposed to be a difficult profession to break into. But the three Moscow winners had no trouble when they started. "I came to New York one day, and sang the next, practically," Miss Tyler said. Now 29 years old and a native of Baltimore, she graduated from Peabody Conservatory in 1960. She came to the Juilliard School for graduate work. By the end of 1961, she had made her New York debut in the American Opera Society's performance of Monteverdi's "The Coronation of Poppea" and had been a soloist with Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic at a Young People's Concert.

Miss Marsh, who turned 24 while in Moscow, originally headed for sports, not music. She was born in Mill Valley, Calif., and very early discovered a bent for swimming. She almost tried out for the last Olympic team.

She began college in her home state, but liked to sing, and so transferred to Oberlin College in Ohio as a voice major. Narrowly escaping a career either in physical education or psychology, she decided (suddenly, she says) after graduation in 1963 to come to New York and be a professional singer.

She made her debut at the Spoleto Festival in Italy last summer, and she opened the Boston Symphony season of 1965-66 singing in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony under Erich Leinsdorf. Her latest step forward is an exclusive contract with RCA Victor.

Estes, 28, was born in Centerville, Iowa, and went to the University of Iowa. "I always did a little singing," he said, "but just for myself." At college, he was convinced that he should take music seriously, and so came to the Juilliard School. Starting in 1963, after Juilliard, Estes went off to Europe, where he has been making the rounds of European houses.

Finally, New York will hear him when he makes his debut in Gunther Schuller's new opera based on a Kafka subject, which the Hamburg Opera will do at Lincoln Center next year. He is spending the summer at Tanglewood, working with Schuller.

And so, patently, the three Moscow winners are launched. Last weekend they took time to reflect on what it means to be a singer definitely on the way. "It's not just a matter of talent," Miss Marsh said, "but how broad the talent. A voice doesn't necessarily mean you've got it. There is also physical stamina, insight into your own career so that those helping can work with you, and the ability to want to perform, to want the public to hear you."

Miss Tyler said, "For me, personally, any kind of musical career begins with love and respect for the genius of the composers we represent. Then one must want to communicate this to an audience."

And Estes: "First of all you must have a voice. Then you must have a feeling of love for music, and a feeling that you must communicate it. Then you must study what each song and poem you sing is about.

"But the most important thing is to go out and communicate," he added. "You have to have a sense of dynamic magnetism."

Resonance with brains?

Clemens Kalischer

Jane Marsh, Simon Estes and Veronica Tyler at the Berkshire Music Festival
"A few more people happen to know we exist."

88

The Evening Bulletin
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
D. 672,235

SEP 8 1966

AP Wirephoto

UNITED STATES WINNERS in the Tchaikovsky International Music Competition in Moscow last June take a rehearsal break before performing at the White House. They are (from left) Stephen Kates, Jane Marsh, Simon Estes, Veronica Tyler and Misha Dichter.

Johnson Salutes Musicians for Prizes Won in Moscow

Washington, Sept. 8—(AP)—President Johnson has hailed 13 young American musicians—winners of an international competition in Moscow—for doing more than diplomats to inspire understanding between the United States and Russia.

He bestowed the title "national treasures" on the winners last night before a White House audience that included some of the elite of America's world of music and the performing arts.

With Russia's minister counselor, Alexander I. Zinchuk, in a front row seat, Mr. Johnson declared:

"I hope history will record this example of how music has reached across the oceans, the walls and the ideologies that separate us, and found response in the hearts of the Russian people. I hope that it will be followed by other actions in other fields so that other threads of understanding can be strung across the space between us."

Russian Agrees

Afterwards, at a buffet supper in the State Dining Room, diplomat Zinchuk said Mr. Johnson's remarks were "very true."

Five of the winners—three singers, a pianist and a cellist—staged an hour-long concert, receiving ovations from the 350 White House guests and congratulations from the President and Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson and pianist Van Cliburn, winner of the international Tchaikovsky competition when it was inaugurated in 1958.

The star of the evening was soprano Jane Marsh, 24, of Mill Valley, Calif., and New York, who won first prize in the vocal division of the Moscow competition—the first American to receive that honor.

Leinsdorf Is Accompanist

Erich Leinsdorf, conductor of the Boston Symphony, was piano accompanist for soprano Veronica Tyler, 29, of Baltimore, a second-place winner in the vocal competition.

The other performers were a third prize winner, baritone Simon Estes of New York City; second prize winner, pianist Misha Dichter, of Los Angeles, and second prize winner, cellist Stephen Kates, Los Angeles.

BILLBOARD
NEW YORK, N. Y.
W. 50,000

AUG 6 1966

RCA Bows Vocal Talent At Tanglewood Concert

LENOX, Mass. — Not only does RCA Victor have the consistently immaculate and irreproachable distinguished Boston Symphony and Erich Leinsdorf on records, but now it moves into the new vocal talent area with a rather brilliant beginning.

Moving quickly, the company signed Jane Marsh, the soprano who won first prize in the Tchaikovsky International Vocal Competition in Moscow, and set up a live recording session at Tanglewood. In addition, on the record will be soprano Veronica Tyler, a second-prize winner in the same competition, and Simon Estes, bass, a third-prize winner.

Appearing in the second half of the Sunday (24) program, the talented trio excelled in solo performances which should give RCA a prize record. Miss Tyler sang "Et incarnatus est," from the second part of the "Mass in C Minor," by Mozart, with a rich, textural quality that was poignant and exact. Estes, with more maturity, should rank with the best. Singing "Ella Giammai m'amo: Dormiro Sol" from "Don Carlo," he gave an inspiring performance. He displayed a resonant tone, good range, and his phrasing shone.

As to Miss Marsh, it is small wonder she took first prize. She sang Tatiana's letter scene from "Eugene Onegin" (especially difficult in Russian) with majesty of tone, graced with feeling and quality. As Princess Aida, she gave to the aria "O Patria Mia" a dramatic, moving rendition which showed off the lyrical gracefulness in her voice. She is the recording catch in quite some time.

Friday night was given over to the young Japanese conductor, Seiji Ozawa. His translation of the Schubert No. 5 was a little thin, but after intermission he came back with a highly satisfactory interpretation of the suite from Stravinsky's "The Firebird." Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein gave a gemlike performance of Mendelssohn's violin concerto.

On Saturday, Leinsdorf gave a masterful, ch[illegible] Symphony No. 2 by Schu[illegible]n. And Van Cliburn, who c[illegible]ues to turn in brilliant per[illegible]ances, was heard in sparkli[illegible]rm playing Rachmaninoff's [illegible]o Concerto No. 3. The yo[illegible]anist drew the biggest cro[illegible] the season thus far, with [illegible]han 14,000 enthusiastic pa[illegible] giving him six standing o[illegible]

Pianist Lilli[illegible]r was featured soloist in [illegible]irst part of the Sunday [illegible]am. She played Chopin [illegible]o Concerto No. 2 with a [illegible]ng, expressive and well [illegible]uted style which was deli[illegible] listening.

[illegible]B SOBEL

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 56,795

AUG 7 1966

Van Cliburn Scores at Tanglewood

By EARL J. DIAS
Standard-Times Music Critic

Music director Erich Leinsdorf of the Boston Symphony Orchestra displayed his shrewdness as a program maker on the recent weekend of concerts I attended at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood — a weekend that attracted a total audience of more than 32,000.

What contributed to the box-office bonanza was, of course, the appearance on Saturday night (before an audience of 14,235) of pianist Van Cliburn, playing the work that has come to be his trademark, Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto No. 3 in D Minor." This is a bravura piece calling for runs and trills of pin-point accuracy, the generation of plenty of musical excitement, crashing chords alternating with romantically melancholy passages.

Mr. Cliburn performed the work with a prodigious technique and in the grand manner. So electrifying was his playing that he was called to the stage again and again and received a genial bear hug and an avuncular kiss from Mr. Leinsdorf.

The other outstanding attraction of the weekend was the appearance of the three recent winners of the Tschaikovsky vocal competition in Moscow — first prize winner, Jane Marsh; second prize winner, Veronica Tyler, and third prize winner, Simon Estes. All are highly capable vocalists.

In "O Patria Mia" from "Aida" and Tatiana's letter song from "Eugene Onegin," Miss Marsh demonstrated phenomenal poise, a voice of unusual power and projection, and some thrilling tones. Miss Tyler, whose voice is lighter but exquisitely controlled, made "Et Incarnatus Est" from Mozart's "Mass in C Minor" a selection of shimmering beauty, and Mrs. Estes, in "Ella Giammai M'Amo: Dormiro Sol" from "Don Carlo" used his rich basso to splendid effect and was notable for his lucid phrasing.

Two other soloists performed during the weekend programs. On Friday night, Joseph Silverstein, concert master of the orchestra, played the Mendelssohn violin concerto with commendable precision and his customary sure technique, although not always with the requisite flamboyance.

And on Sunday afternoon, pianist Lillian Kallir, who has performed here in the Friends of Music Series, gave a thoroughly delightful and beautifully sensitive reading of Chopin's "Piano Concerto No. 2 in F Minor."

On Friday night, the young Japanese conductor, Seiji Ozawa, had the orchestra in fine fettle in William Schuman's "American Festival Overture," Schubert's "Symphony No. 5," and Stravinsky's "Firebird." On Saturday night, Mr. Leinsdorf led a good performance of Brahm's "Tragic Overture" and a rendition of Schumann's "Symphony No. 2 in C Major," which was somewhat rushed for my liking. On Sunday, the orchestra played Beethoven's "Overture to 'Coriolan' " to perfection.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508

JUL 25 1966

Three Prize-Winning Singers at Tanglewood

By McLAREN HARRIS

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox — Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood America had its first post-contest hearing of three prize winning vocalists in this year's Moscow Tchaikovsky competition. If the appearance of all three on a single program proved anything, it was how keen and exacting the competition really is.

Jane Marsh and Veronica Tyler, sopranos who won first and second prizes, respectively, are not strangers to the U.S. musical scene, both having appeared with the Boston Symphony Orchestra last season at Symphony Hall. Bass Simon Estes, a third prize-winner, got his professional start with European opera companies, while his U.S. performances, somewhat limited, have been as an oratorio singer.

Not Tchaikovsky

Most of the works performed Sunday were not by Tchaikovsky, as that composer is being reserved for a later weekend. Miss Marsh, appearing last, sang Tatiana's Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin" and "O Patria Mia," from Verdi's "Aida". Her voice is full, though not overpowering, with a dramatic ring and a flexibility which allows her to fill the dynamic contour of her phrases with ease. She did not appear to exert herself, either vocally—the intonation sagged—or emotionally, in the letter scene; her interpretation was of a narrative sort, more contemplative than stormy, exhibiting a detachment as if the object of her devotion were removed by distance (in the opera it is). Erich Leinsdorf's tempos and phrasing, it must be admitted, were in accord.

In the Verdi work, more concise and expressively direct, Miss Marsh enlarged on her potential. Here the voice grasped gentle sweeps of melody with an almost reverent hush; the tone was as complete in the lesser volumes as in the greater, while her Italian diction was overly soft, perhaps wrongly in the service of smooth phrasing.

Veronica Tyler's work was the "Et incarnatus est" from Mozart's C minor Mass. Here vocal support and breath control were well-nigh flawless; they gave her complete facility for quick and leaping changes of register and enabled her to sustain lines of such evenness that they did not seem tied to an air supply. Her diction was also on the muted side, and her vowels were apt to change with the register; what was "ah" in the middle became "uh" in the lower and somewhat spread in the highest.

Large Potential

The case of Simon Estes illustrates how one must often display credentials before being asked to perform, no matter what the artistic prowess. Estes, as heard Saturday, has a considerable potential for music drama and the vocal attributes to fulfill it. His bass filled the music shed with pure tone, intense but not booming, and with an edge which commands authority.

The stage trappings of Verdi's "Don Carlo" might have helped him to realize the content of "Ella giammai m'amo: Dormiro sol" more completely, but the notes of despair and imploring were yet well in evidence. If the Moscow competitions are anyone's springboard, they may be his. Only propriety placed him third in this notice (or fashioned any order, for that matter).

In the program's first half, Lilian Kallir swept through Chopin's Second Piano Concerto with grace and ease, the flourishes and melodic embellishments flowing from her fingers with utmost assurance. The opener was Beethoven's "Coriolanus" overture, given a forward moving, though not hurried reading by Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra, which turned in strong accounts all afternoon.

90

FIFTH WEEK - JULY 29, 30, AND 31

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 24 1966

Boston Symphony Orchestra To Play Schumann Works

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox—Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at next weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist: Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orhestra; Claude Frank, piano; and Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster.

Conduct Program

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on July 29 and the 30th evenings with Thomas Schippers as guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 p. m. will begin with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride" followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy, Jules Eskin will then perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" Variations.

Weber's Overture

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work on Saturday with Lilian Kallir then joining Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. Following the intermission Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist with Mr. Schippers and the Orchestra will be Claude Frank who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

The Weekend Prelude on July 29 at 7 p. m. will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann. Mr. Frank, Miss Kallir, and three members of the Bostion Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello; and James Stagilano, horn; will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn, Op. 46. Ara Berberian will sing several Schumann Lieder accompanied by Mr. Frank.

Thomas Schippers, the young American conductor, will be conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, according to Erich Leinsdorf, music director on Sunday afternoon, July 31. Mr. Schippers will conduct the Rossini Overture, "La Gazza Ladra," Mussorgsky-Ravel, "Pictures at an Exhibition," and the Schumann Piano Concerto for which Claude Frank will be soloist.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Open Rehearsal for pension fund will take place on Saturday morning at 10.30 a. m.

July 26 at 8 p. m. in the Tanglewood Theater the Boston Symphony Chamber Players will give their second concert in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series. Their program with Claude Frank at the piano will include Mozart's Flute Quartet, K. 478; the Variations for Four Drums and Viola by Colgrass; Haieff's Duo for Oboe and Bassoon; and the Trio for Piano, Violin, and Horn, Op. 40.

Two programs of chamber music and one by the Tanglewood Choir will be available for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The chamber music concerts will be given by the members of the Music Center's Fellowship program on July 27 at 8 p. m. and July 31 at 10 a. m. The Tanglewood Choir program will be in the Theatre on July 28 at 8 p. m. Membership in the Friends is open to those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Music Center's program.

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,378
JUL 28 1966

Works Of Robert Schumann Featured At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass.--Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at this weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist: Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano; and Joseph Silverstein, the Orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on Friday, July 29 and Saturday, July 30 with Thomas Schippers as Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 o'clock will begin with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride" followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Jules Eskin will then perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" Variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work on Saturday with Lilian Kallir then joining Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. Following the intermission Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist with Mr. Schippers and the Orchestra will be Claude Frank who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday at 7 p.m. will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann. Mr. Frank, Miss Kallir, and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello; and James Stagliano, horn; will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn, Op. 46. Ara Berberian, who will be heard the following week at Tanglewood in "The Magic Flute," will sing several Schumann Lieder accompanied by Mr. Frank.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund will take place on Saturday morning at 10:30.

A program of chamber music and one by the Tanglewood Choir will be available for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The chamber music concert will be given by the members of the Music Center's Fellowship program on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. The Tanglewood Choir program will be in the Theatre on Thursday at 8 p.m. Membership in the Friends is open to those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Music Center's program.

Tickets for the Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert, Arthur Fiedler conducting, are now available at the Festival Ticket Office. Stan Getz will be soloist in this annual Pension Fund program. General admission tickets to the Tanglewood lawns will be available at 4 p.m. on Wednesday, August 3, the afternoon of the concert. Ticket information on all events at Tanglewood may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

New England Newspaper Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 22 1966

At Tanglewood

Soloists to Perform Schuman

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schuman will be performed at next weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood.

The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist; Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano; and Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on Friday and Saturday evenings. Thomas Schippers will be Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 will begin with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride" followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Jules Eskin will then perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" Variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work on Saturday with Lilian Kallir then joining Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra.

Following the intermission Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra. The concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist with Mr. Schippers and the orchestra will be Claude Frank who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto.

Weekend Preludes

The Weekend Prelude on Friday at 7 p.m. will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann.

Mr. Frank, Miss Kallir and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello; and James Stagliano, horn will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn. Ara Berberian, who will be heard the following week at Tanglewood in "The Magic Flute", will sing several Schumann Lieder accompanied by Mr. Frank.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund will take place on Saturday morning at 10.30.

Tuesday evening at 8 in the Tanglewood Theater the Boston Symphony Chamber Players will give their second concert in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series.

Their program with Claude Frank at the piano will include Mozart's Flute Quartet, the Variations for Four Drums and Viola by Colgrass, Haieff's Due for Oboe and Bassoon, and the Trio for Piano, Violin, and Horn.

Two programs of chamber music and one by the Tanglewood Choir will be available for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The chamber music concerts will be given by the members of the music center's fellowship program on Wednesday evening at 8 and Sunday morning at 10.

THOMAS SCHIPPERS will conduct Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, July 31.

The Tanglewood Choir program will be in the Theater on Thursday at 8 p.m.

Membership in the friends is open to those who make voluntary contributions for the support of the Music Center's program.

Pops at Tanglewood

Tickets for the Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert, Arthur Fiedler conducting, are now available at the festival ticket office. Stan Getz will be soloist in this annual pension fund program.

General admission tickets to the Tanglewood lawns will be available at 4 p.m. on Wednesday Aug. 3, the afternoon of the concert.

Ticket information on all events at Tanglewood may be obtained from the festival ticket office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

Sunday, the American prize winners of the recent Tchaikovsky International Voice Competition will make their first United States appearances since returning from Moscow.

Jane Marsh, first prize winner and the first American to be so honored since 1958, will sing arias from "Eugene Onegin" and "Pique Dame" by Tchaikovsky.

Veronica Tyler, second prize winner, will be heard in Et incarnatus est from Mozart's Mass in C minor.

Simon Estes, third prize winner, will sing King Phillips' aria from the opera "Don Carlo" by Verdi.

Lilian Kallir will play the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor in the opening portion of the program.

TIGHT BINDING

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
JUL 28 1966

THOMAS SCHIPPERS, GUEST CONDUCTOR

TANGLEWOOD FEATURES SCHUMANN

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at this weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist; Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano; and Joseph Silverstein, the Orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on Friday and Saturday evenings with Thomas Schippers as Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 p.m. will begin with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to The Bartered Bride followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Jules Eskin will perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's Enigma Variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz will be the opening work on Saturday with Lilian Kallir then joining Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in C Major for piano and orchestra. Following the intermission Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C Major for violin and orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Overture to La Gazza Ladra by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist with Mr. Schippers and the Orchestra will be Claude Frank who will play Schumann's Cello Concerto, Op. 54.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday, July 29, at 7 p.m., will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann. Mr. Frank, Miss Kallir and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello; James Stagliano, horn; will perform the Andante and Variations for two pianos, two cellos and horn, Ara Berberian, who will be heard the following week at Tanglewood in The Magic Flute, will sing several Schumann Lieder accompanied by Mr. Frank.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Telegram
PORTLAND, Me.
Circ. 105,712
JUL 24 1966

Concert Schedule

AT TANGLEWOOD next Saturday Erich Leinsdorf leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program including Smetena's "Bartered Bride" overture, Three Nocturnes of Debussy, the Schumann Cello Concerto, too seldom brought to concert, and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite.

Next Sunday he will conduct Weber's "Freischutz" overture, the Schumann Concertstuck in G, Schumann's C Major Fantasy for violin (with Joseph Silverstein concertmaster of the BSO as soloist) concluding with Dvorak's rarely heard Symphony No. 8.

At Bowdoin College on Thursday in the Senior Center, the Summer Music School Chamber Orchestra conducted by Lawrence Smith will have Michael Rabin as violin soloist.

At the Hopkins Center in Hanover, N. H., Mario Di-Bonaventura will this evening direct the Dartmouth Symphony Orchestra in a program largely devoted to the works of Witold Lutosalwski, prominent Polish composer now "in-residence" at Hanover.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,378
JUL 28 1966

THOMAS SCHIPPERS, the young American conductor, will be conducting the Boston Symphony July 31. Mr. Schippers will conduct the Rossini Overture, "La Gazza Ladra," Mussorgsky-Ravel, "Pictures at an Exhibition," and the Schumann Piano Concerto for which Claude Frank will be soloist.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JULY 22 1966

Boston Symphony Plays At Tanglewood July 29-31

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed July 29 through 31 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Jules Eskin, solo cellist and first-chair player from the orchestra, will play the Schumann "Cello Concerto" in the Friday 9 p.m. program. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct. Other numbers on the program are the "Overture to the Bartered Bride," Smetana; "Three Nocturnes" by Debussy, and the Elgar "Enigma" Variations.

The Weekend Prelude, Friday at 7 p.m., will feature the "Andante and Variations for two pianos, two cellos, and horn, opus 46," Schumann. It will be performed by Frank with Lillian Kallir, pianist, and three members of the orchestra.

* * *

Miss Kallir will join Leinsdorf and the orchestra for a performance of Schumann's "Konzertstuck in G major for piano and orchestra" on Saturday at the 8:30 p.m. program. The program will also include Weber's "Overture to 'Der Freischutz,'" Joseph Silverstein as soloist in the Schumann "Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra" and the Dvoark "Symphony number 8."

THOMAS SCHIPPERS
Musical Conductor

Thomas Schippers will conduct the Sunday 2:30 p.m. program featuring Claude Frank as soloist in the Schumann's "Piano Concerto, opus 54." The program will also include the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel "Pictures at an Exhibition."

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's open rehearsal for the benefit of its pension fund will take place Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

* * *

Tickets for the Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert, Arthur Fiedler conducting, are now available at the Festival ticket office. Stan Getz will be soloist in the annual pension fund program. General admission tickets to the Tanglewood lawns will be available at 4 p.m. on Aug. 3, the afternoon of the concert. Ticket information on all events at Tanglewood may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600
JUL 24 1966

Tanglewood Featuring Works of Schumann

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at next week-end's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist; Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano, and Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs Friday and Saturday evenings with Thomas Schippers as next Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 will begin with Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride" followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Eskin then will perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" Variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work Saturday. Miss Kallir then will perform Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. Following the intermission Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

Sunday afternoon, Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel "Pictures at an Exhibition." Frank will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

The Week-end Prelude Friday at 7 p.m. also will be devoted to the music of Schumann. Frank, Miss Kallir, and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello, and James Stagliano, horn, will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn, Op. 46. Ara Berberian, who will be heard the following week at Tanglewood in "The Magic Flute," will sing several Schumann lieder accompanied by Frank.

Today at 2:30 the American prize winners of the recent Tchaikovsky International Voice Competition will make their first United States appearances since returning from Moscow. Jane Marth, first prize winner and the first American to be so honored since 1958, will sing arias from Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin" and Verdi's "Aida." Veronica Tyler, second prize winner, will be heard in "Et incarnatus est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor, K. 427, and Simon Estes, third prize winner, will sing King Phillips' aria from the opera "Don Carlo" by Verdi. Lilian Kallir will play the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor in the opening portion of the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 98,605
JUL 27 1966

This Week at Tanglewood

Young American conductor Thomas Schippers will conduct the Rossini Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood. Also on the Sunday program is Mussorgsky-Ravel's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct Smetana's "The Bartered Bride" Friday at 9 p. m., followed by three "Nocturnes" by Debussy. Jule Eskin will perform Schumann's "Cello Concerto."

Saturday night's concert, also under the baton of Mr. Leinsdorf will include Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" and Schumann's "Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra" with Lilian Kallir, pianist.

A chamber music concert will be given by the members of the Music Center's fellowship program tonight at 8 p. m., and the Tanglewood Choir will present a program tomorrow at 8.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's traditional "Open Rehearsal" for pension fund will take place Saturday morning at 10.30.

TIGHT BINDING

31

Schumann
Tanglewood

...agliano, horn; will ... Andante and Var... Two Pianos, Two ... Horn, Op. 46. Ara ... who will be heard ... week at Tangle... The Magic Flute," ... Schumann ...anied by Mr.

... Symphony Or... Rehearsal for ... the Orchestra's ... will take place ... morning at 10:30. ... of chamber mu... the Tanglewood ... available for the ... Berkshire Mu... chamber mu... will be given by ... of the Music ...ship program ... morning at 10 o'... Tanglewood Choir ... in the Theatre ... at 8 p.m. Mem... Friends is open ... make voluntary ... for the support ... Center's pro...

... for the Boston Pops ... concert, Arthur ...ting, are now ... Festival Tic... Getz will be ... Pension ... General ad... to the Tangle... will be available ... Wednesday, Aug... afternoon of the con... information on ... Tanglewood may ... from the Festival ... Tanglewood, ...01240.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587

JUL 28 1966

THOMAS SCHIPPERS, GUEST CONDUCTOR

TANGLEWOOD FEATURES SCHUMANN

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at this weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist; Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano; and Joseph Silverstein, the Orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on Friday and Saturday evenings with Thomas Schippers as Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 p.m. will begin with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to The Bartered Bride followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Jules Eskin will perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's Enigma Variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz will be the opening work on Saturday with Lilian Kallir then joining Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G Major for piano and orchestra. Following the intermission Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C Major for violin and orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Overture to La Gazza Ladra by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist with Mr. Schippers and the Orchestra will be Claude Frank who will play Schumann's ... Concerto, Op. 54.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday, July 29, at 7 p.m., will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann. Mr. Frank, Miss Kallir and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello; and James Stagliano, horn; will perform the Andante and Variations for two pianos, two cellos and horn, Ara Berberian, who will be heard the following week at Tanglewood in The Magic Flute, will sing several Schumann Lieder accompanied by Mr. Frank.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Telegram
PORTLAND, Me.
Circ. 105,712

JUL 24 1966

Concert Schedule

AT TANGLEWOOD next Saturday Erich Leinsdorf leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program including Smetena's "Bartered Bride" overture, Three Nocturnes of Debussy, the Schumann Cello' Concerto, too seldom brought to concert and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite.

Next Sunday he will conduct Weber's "Freischutz" overture, the Schumann Concertstuck in G, Schumann's C Major Fantasy for violin (with Joseph Silverstein concertmaster of the BSO as soloist) concluding with Dvorak's rarely heard Symphony No. 8.

At Bowdoin College on Thursday in the Senior Center, the Summer Music School Chamber Orchestra conducted by Lawrence Smith will have Michael Rabin as violin soloist.

At the Hopkins Center in Hanover, N. H., Mario Di-Bonaventura will this evening direct the Dartmouth Symphony Orchestra in a program largely devoted to the works of Witold Lutosalwski, prominent Polish composer now "in-residence" at Hanover.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,378

JUL 28 1966

THOMAS SCHIPPERS, the young American conductor, will be conducting the Boston Symphony July 31. Mr. Schippers will conduct the Rossini Overture, "La Gazza Ladra," Mussorgsky-Ravel, "Pictures at an Exhibition," and the Schumann Piano Concerto for which Claude Frank will be soloist.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766

JULY 22 1966

Boston Symphony Plays At Tanglewood July 29-31

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed July 29 through 31 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

Jules Eskin, solo cellist and first-chair player from the orchestra, will play the Schumann "Cello Concerto" in the Friday 9 p.m. program. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct. Other numbers on the program are the "Overture to the Bartered Bride," Smetana; "Three Nocturnes" by Debussy, and the Elgar "Enigma" Variations.

The Weekend Prelude, Friday at 7 p.m., will feature the "Andante and Variations for two pianos, two cellos and horn, opus 46," Schumann. It will be performed by Frank with Lillian Kallir, pianist, and three members of the orchestra.

* * *

Miss Kallir will join Leinsdorf and the orchestra for a performance of Schumann's "Konzertstuck in G major for piano and orchestra" on Saturday at the 8:30 p.m. program. The program will also include Weber's "Overture to 'Der Freischutz,'" Joseph Silverstein as soloist in the Schumann

THOMAS SCHIPPERS
Musical Conductor

"Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra" and the Dvoark "Symphony number 8."

Thomas Schippers will conduct the Sunday 2:30 p.m. program featuring Claude Frank as soloist in the Schumann's "Piano Concerto, opus 54." The program will also include the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel "Pictures at an Exhibition."

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's open rehearsal for the benefit of its pension fund will take place Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

* * *

Tickets for the Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert, Arthur Fiedler conducting, are now available at the Festival ticket office. Stan Getz will be soloist in the annual pension fund program. General admission tickets to the Tanglewood lawns will be available at 4 p.m. on Aug. 3, the afternoon of the concert. Ticket information on all events at Tanglewood may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600

JUL 24 1966

Tanglewood Featuring Works of Schumann

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at next week-end's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist; Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano, and Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs Friday and Saturday evenings with Thomas Schippers as next Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 will begin with Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride" followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Eskin then will perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" Variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work Saturday. Miss Kallir then will perform Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. Following the intermission Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

Sunday afternoon, Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel "Pictures at an Exhibition." Frank will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

The Week-end Prelude Friday at 7 p.m. also will be devoted to the music of Schumann. Frank, Miss Kallir, and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello, and James Stagliano, horn, will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn, Op. 46. Ara Berberian, who will be heard the following week at Tanglewood in "The Magic Flute," will sing several Schumann lieder accompanied by Frank.

Today at 2:30 the American prize winners of the recent Tchaikovsky International Voice Competition will make their first United States appearances since returning from Moscow. Jane Marth, first prize winner and the first American to be so honored since 1958, will sing arias from Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin" and Verdi's "Aida." Veronica Tyler, second prize winner, will be heard in "Et incarnatus est" from Mozart's Mass in C minor, K. 427, and Simon Estes, third prize winner, will sing King Phillips' aria from the opera "Don Carlo" by Verdi. Lilian Kallir will play the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor in the opening portion of the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 98,605

JUL 27 1966

This Week at Tanglewood

Young American conductor Thomas Schippers will conduct the Rossini Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood. Also on the Sunday program is Mussorgsky-Ravel's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct Smetana's "The Bartered Bride" Friday at 9 p. m., followed by three "Nocturnes" by Debussy. Jule Eskin will perform Schumann's "Cello Concerto."

Saturday night's concert, also under the baton of Mr. Leinsdorf will include Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" and Schumann's "Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra" with Lilian Kallir, pianist.

A chamber music concert will be given by the members of the Music Center's fellowship program tonight at 8 p. m., and the Tanglewood Choir will present a program tomorrow at 8.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's traditional "Open Rehearsal" for pension fund will take place Saturday morning at 10.30.

SYRACUSE HERALD JOURNAL
Tuesday, July 26, 1966

Symphony feature 4 soloists

LENOX, Mass. — Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at next weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist; Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano; and Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on Friday and Saturday evenings with Thomas Schippers as next Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 will begin with Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride" followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Eskin will then perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" Variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work on Saturday with Lilian Kallir then joining Leinsdorf and the Orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. Following the intermission, Joseph Siverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra. The concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist will be Claude Frank, who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

The weekend prelude on Friday at 7 p.m. will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann. Frank, Miss Kallir, and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello; and James Stagliano, horn; will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn, Op. 46. Ara Berberian, who will be heard the following week at Tanglewood in "The Magic Flute" will sing several Schumann Lieder accompanied by Frank.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund will be 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Tuesday evening at 8 in the Tanglewood Theatre, the Boston Symphony Chamber Players will give their second concert at the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series. Their program, with Frank at the piano, will include Mozart's Flute Quartet, K. 478; the Variations for Four Drums and Viola by Colgrass; Haieff's Duo for Oboe and Bassoon; and the Trio for Piano, Violin, and Horn, Op. 40.

Two programs of chamber music and one by the Tanglewood Choir will be available for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 25 1966

Schumann To Be Featured In Concerts at Tanglewood

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at next weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist; Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano; and Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on Friday and Saturday evenings, with Thomas Schippers as Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 will begin with Smetana's overture to "The Bartered Bride," followed by three Nocturnes by Debussy. Eskin will then perform Schumann's cello concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" variations.

Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work on Saturday. Lilian Kallir will then join Leinsdorf and the orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G Major for Piano and Orchestra. Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C Major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel "Pictures at an Exhibition." The soloist will be Claude Frank, who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Opus 54.

The weekend prelude Friday at 7 p.m. will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann, Frank, Miss Kallir, and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra—Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello; and James Stagliano, horn—will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn, Opus 46. Ara Berberian, who will be heard the following week at Tanglewood in "The Magic Flute," will sing several Schumann Lieder, accompanied by Frank.

The BSO's open rehearsal will take place on Saturday morning at 10:30.

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,615
JULY 29 1966

WAMC to Air Varied Tanglewood Program

ALBANY — The coming week holds much in store for music lovers as WAMC-FM, 90.7 mc, continues its exclusive live coverage of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Thomas Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rossini's Overture "La Gazza Ladra," Schumann's Piano Concerto with Claude Frank as soloist and the Ravel orchestration of Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

On Monday beginning at 8 p.m. members of the Berkshire Music Center will perform a program of chamber music. Another progam of chamber music will be given Tuesday at the same hour and featuring soprano Phyllis Curtin as guest soloist.

The Boston Pops Orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Fiedler, will give its annual "Tanglewood" concert on Wednesday at 8 p.m. The concert will feature the World premiere of "The Tanglewood Concerto of Sauter" which is dedicated to Fiedler and the guest soloist, tenor saxophonist Stan Getz. Also included in the concert will be Rossini's Overture to William Tell, the Final Dance from Ginastera's Estancia, and selections from "My Fair Lady."

The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will perform a concert on Thursday night beginning at 8 p.m.

Starting at 9 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 5, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet, 2nd suite; Saint-Saens Cello Concerto featuring guest soloist Leslie Parnas, and Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony in a performance of Mozart's Magic Flute on Saturday, Aug. 6, beginning at 8 p.m. Soloists will be Ara Berberian, bass; Joanne Simon, mezzosoprano, and George Shirley, tenor.

News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Bi-Weekly Circ. 1,200
JUL 28 1966

This Weekend at Tanglewood

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at next weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist: Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano; and Joseph Silverstein, the Orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on tomorrow (Friday) and Saturday evenings with Thomas Schippers as Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9:00 p.m. will begin with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride" followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Jules Eskin will then perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work on Saturday with Lilian Kallir then joining Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. Following the intermission Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist with Mr. Schippers and the Orchestra will be Claude Frank who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

The Weekend Prelude tomorrow at 7:00 p.m. will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann. Mr. Frank, Miss Kallir, and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello; and James Stagliano, horn, will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn, Op. 46. Ara Berberian who will be heard the following week at Tanglewood in "The Magic Flute" will sing several Schumann Lieder accompanied by Mr. Frank.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 26,024
JUL 25 1966

Tanglewood Will Present Schumann Works

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. — Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at next weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood.

The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist: Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano, and Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on Friday and Saturday evenings, with Thomas Schippers as Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 p.m. will begin with Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride," followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Jules Eskin will then perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" Variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work on Saturday, with Lilian Kallir then joining Leinsdorf and the orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra.

Following the intermission Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist with Schippers and the orchestra will be Claude Frank who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday at 7 p.m. will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann.

The Herald-News
PASSAIC, N. J.
D. 78,641
JULY 25 1966

Berkshire Festival Concerts Next Week

Thomas Schippers will be the guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Claude Frank, piano soloist Sunday at the Berkshire Music Festival concert at Tanglewood.

Phyllis Curtin, who is a member of the center's faculty, will be heard Tuesday evening, Aug. 2, in her only full-length recital of the season.

The sixth week of the festival opening next Monday will feature a chamber music concert at 8 p.m. that day; the third Berkshire Music Center Orchestra concert at 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 4, and a baroque concert Sunday morning Aug. 7, at 10 o'clock.

Journal & Press
SOMERVILLE, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 12,594
JUL 21 1966

Five Concerts Aired Live from Tanglewood

WGBH-FM's complete coverage of the 1966 Berkshire Festival continues with six more full-length concerts broadcast live from the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home in Lenox, [illegible]

On Sunday, July 24, at 2:30 [illegible] Erich Leinsdorf conducts [illegible]ven's "Coriolanus" Over[illegible] Tchaikovsky's Symphony [illegible] and Chopin's Piano Con[illegible] in F Minor with soloist Lil[illegible] Kallir.

[illegible] days later, Tuesday, July [illegible] 8 p.m., the Boston Sym[illegible] Chamber players with [illegible] pianist Claude Frank per[illegible] Mozart's Flute Quartet, K. [illegible] Variations for Four Drums [illegible] Viola by Colgrass; Haieff's [illegible] for Oboe and Bassoon; and [illegible]ns; Trio for Piano, Violin [illegible] Horn, Op. 40.

Wednesday at the same hour more chamber music will be [illegible] and on Thursday, July 28, WGBH-FM presents a concert by the [illegible]

The [illegible] the week [illegible] Boston Sym[illegible] Erich [illegible] Friday, [illegible] p.m., Mr. Leinsdorf has chosen Smetana's overture to "The Bartered Bride," Three Nocturnes by Debussy; Schumann's Cello Concerto (Jules Eskin, soloist); and "Enigma" Variations by Elgar.

On Saturday he will conduct Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz," Schumann's Konzertstuck in G with pianist Lilian Kallir.

The only recorded concert of the week takes place Monday, July 25, at 8 p.m., when a program of Baroque Music taped the preceding morning will be heard.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JULY 26 1966

Boston Symphony programs this weekend at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will feature Erich Leinsdorf as conductor on Friday at 9 p.m. and Saturday at 8 p.m. with Thomas Schippers as guest conductor at the Sunday 2:30 p.m. program. Soloists include Jules Eskin on Friday night; Lillian Kallir and concertmaster Joseph Silverstein on Saturday and Claude Frank on Sunday.

SYRACUSE HERALD JOURNAL
Tuesday, July 26, 1966

Symphony feature 4 soloists

LENOX, Mass. — Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at next weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist; Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano; and Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on Friday and Saturday evenings with Thomas Schippers as next Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 will begin with Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride" followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Eskin will then perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" Variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work on Saturday with Lilian Kallir then joining Leinsdorf and the Orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. Following the intermission, Joseph Siverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra. The concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist will be Claude Frank, who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

The weekend prelude on Friday at 7 p.m. will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann. Frank, Miss Kallir, and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello; and James Stagliano, horn; will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn, Op. 46. Ara Berberian who will be heard the following week at Tanglewood in "The Magic Flute" will sing several Schumann Lieder accompanied by Frank.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's open rehearsal for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund will be 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Tuesday evening at 8 in the Tanglewood Theatre, the Boston Symphony Chamber Players will give their second concert at the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series. Their program, with Frank at the piano, will include Mozart's Flute Quartet, K. 478; the Variations for Four Drums and Viola by Colgrass; Haieff's Duo for Oboe and Bassoon; and the Trio for Piano, Violin, and Horn, Op. 40.

Two programs of chamber music and one by the Tanglewood Choir will be available for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 25 1966

Schumann To Be Featured In Concerts at Tanglewood

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at next weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist; Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano; and Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on Friday and Saturday evenings, with Thomas Schippers as Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 will begin with Smetana's overture to "The Bartered Bride," followed by three Nocturnes by Debussy. Eskin will then perform Schumann's cello concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" variations.

Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work on Saturday. Lilian Kallir will then join Leinsdorf and the orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G Major for Piano and Orchestra. Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C Major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel "Pictures at an Exhibition." The soloist will be Claude Frank, who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Opus 54.

The weekend prelude Friday at 7 p.m. will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann, Frank, Miss Kallir, and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra—Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello; and James Stagliano, horn—will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn, Opus 46. Ara Berbarian, who will be heard the following week at Tanglewood in "The Magic Flute," will sing several Schumann lieder, accompanied by Frank.

The BSO's open rehearsal will take place on Saturday morning at 10:30.

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,615
JULY 29 1966

WAMC to Air Varied Tanglewood Program

ALBANY — The coming week holds much in store for music lovers as WAMC-FM, 90.3 mc, continues its exclusive live coverage of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Thomas Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Rossini's overture "La Gazza Ladra," Schumann's Piano Concerto with Claude Frank as soloist and the Ravel orchestration of Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

On Monday beginning at 8 p.m. members of the Berkshire Music Center will perform a program of chamber music. Another progam of chamber music will be given Tuesday at the same hour and featuring soprano Phyllis Curtin as guest soloist.

The Boston Pops Orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Fiedler, will give its annual Tanglewood concert on Wednesday at 8 p.m. The concert will feature the World premiere of "The Tanglewood Concerto of Sauter" which is dedicated to Fiedler and the guest soloist, tenor saxophonist Stan Getz. Also included in the concert will be Rossini's Overture to William Tell, the Final Dance from Ginastera's Estancia and selections from "My Fair Lady."

The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will perform a concert on Thursday night beginning at 8 p.m.

Starting at 9 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 5, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet, 2nd suite; Saint-Saen's Cello Concerto featuring guest soloist Leslie Parnas, and Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony in a performance of Mozart's Magic Flute on Saturday, Aug. 6, beginning at 8 p.m. Soloists will be Ara Berberian, bass; Joanne Simion, mezzosoprano, and George Shirley, tenor.

News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Bi-Weekly Circ. 1,200
JUL 28 1966

This Weekend at Tanglewood

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at next weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist: Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano; and Joseph Silverstein, the Orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on tomorrow (Friday) and Saturday evenings with Thomas Schippers as Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9:00 p.m. will begin with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride" followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Jules Eskin will then perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz," will be the opening work on Saturday with Lilian Kallir then joining Mr. Leinsdorf and the Orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. Following the intermission Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist with Mr. Schippers and the Orchestra will be Claude Frank who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

The Weekend Prelude tomorrow at 7:00 p.m. will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann. Mr. Frank, Miss Kallir, and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello; Mischa Nieland, cello; and James Stagliano, horn; will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn, Op. 46. Ara Berberian who will be heard the following week at Tanglewood in "The Magic Flute" will sing several Schumann Lieder accompanied by Mr. Frank.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 26,024
JUL 25 1966

Tanglewood Will Present Schumann Works

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. — Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed at next weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood.

The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist: Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Claude Frank, piano, and Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on Friday and Saturday evenings, with Thomas Schippers as Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday evening's concert at 9 p.m. will begin with Leinsforf conducting Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride," followed by Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Jules Eskin will then perform Schumann's Cello Concerto. The closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" Variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work on Saturday, with Lilian Kallir then joining Leinsdorf and the orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra.

Following the intermission Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

On Sunday afternoon, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky - Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist with Schippers and the orchestra will be Claude Frank who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday at 7 p.m. will also be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann.

The Herald-News
PASSAIC, N. J.
D. 78,641
JULY 25 1966

Berkshire Festival Concerts Next Week

Thomas Schippers will be the guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Claude Frank, piano solist Sunday at the Berkshire Music Festival concert at Tanglewood.

Phyllis Curtin, who is a member of the center's faculty, will be heard Tuesday evening, Aug. 2, in her only full-length recital of the season.

The sixth week of the festival opening next Monday will feature a chamber music concert at 8 p.m. that day; the third Berkshire Music Center Orchestra concert at 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 4, and a baroque concert Sunday morning Aug. 7, at 10 o'clock.

Journal & Press
SOMERVILLE, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 12,594
JUL 21 1966

Five Concerts Aired Live from Tanglewood

WGBH-FM's complete coverage of the 1966 Berkshire Festival continues with six more full-length concerts broadcast live from the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home in Lenox, Mass.

On Sunday, July 24, at 2:30 p.m. Erich Leinsdorf conducts Beethoven's "Coriolanus" Overture, Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 5, and Chopin's Piano Concerto in F Minor with soloist Lilian Kallir.

Three days later, Tuesday, July 26, at 8 p.m. the Boston Symphony Chamber players with guest pianist Claude Frank perform Mozart's Flute Quartet, K. 478; Variations for Four Drums and Viola by Colgrass; Haloff's Duo for Oboe and Bassoon; and Brahms' Trio for Piano, Violin and Horn, Op. 40.

Wednesday at the same hour more chamber music will be broadcast, and on Thursday, July 28, WGBH-FM presents a concert by the Tanglewood Choir.

The two final concerts of the week again bring the Boston Symphony under Erich Leinsdorf [illegible] Friday, July 29, [illegible] p.m., Mr. Leinsdorf has chosen Smetana's overture to "The Bartered Bride," Three Nocturnes by Debussy; Schumann's Cello Concerto (Jules Eskin, soloist); and "Enigma" Variations by Elgar.

On Saturday he will conduct Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz," Schumann's Konzertstuck in G with pianist Lilian Kallir.

The only recorded concert of the week takes place Monday, July 25, at 8 p.m., when a program of Baroque Music taped the preceding morning will be heard.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JULY 26 1966

Boston Symphony programs this weekend at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will feature Erich Leinsdorf as conductor on Friday at 9 p.m. and Saturday at 8 p.m. with Thomas Schippers as guest conductor at the Sunday 2:30 p.m. program. Soloists include Jules Eskin on Friday night; Lillian Kallir and concertmaster Joseph Silverstein on Saturday and Claude Frank on Sunday.

93

Poughkeepsie Journal
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
D. 34,306 SUN. 37,584
JULY 2 4 1966

Tanglewood Program Listed

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed in next weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist, Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphonoy Orchestra, Claude Frank, pianist, and Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on Friday and Saturday nights, with Thomas Schippers as Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday night's concert at 9 o'clock will begin with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride," then Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Mr. Eskin will perforom Schumann's Cello Concerto and the closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" Variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work on Saturday, with Miss Kallir then joining Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. After the intermission, Mr. Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

Next Sunday afternoon, Mr. Schippers will conoduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist with Mr. Schippers and the orchestra will be Mr. Frank who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

The weekend prelude at 7 o'clock Friday night also will be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann. Mr. Frank, Miss Kallir and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello, Mischa Nieland, cello, and James Stagliano, horn, will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos and Horn, Op. 46. Ara Berberian, who will be heard the next week at Tanglewood in "The Magic Flute," will sing several Schumann Lieder accompanied by Mr. Frank.

At 8 o'clock Tuesday night in the Tanglewood Theater the Boston Symphony Chamber Players will give their second concert in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series. The program, with Mr. Frank at the piano, will include Mozart's Flute Quartet, the Variations for Four Drums and Viola by Colgrass, Haieff's Duo for Oboe and Bassoon and the Trio for Piano, Violin and Horn, Op. 40.

This afternoon, the American prize winners of the recent Tchaikovsky International Voice Competition will make their first United States appearances since returning from Moscow. Jane Marsh, first prize winner and the first American to be so honored since 1958, will sing arias from "Eugene Onegin" and "Pique Dame" by Tchaikovsky. Veronica Tyler, second prize winner, will be heard in Et incarnatus est from Mozart's Mass in C minor, and Simon Estes, third prize winner, will sing King Phillips' aria from the opera "Don Carlo" by Verdi. Miss Kallir will play the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor in the opening portion of the program.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, July 24, 1966

Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 2:30 this afternoon in a performance of Beethoven's Overture "Coriolanus," Tchaikowsky's Symphony No. 6 and Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor with Lilian Kalir as soloist, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Friday evening at 9:00 Leinsdorf conducts the orchestra in works by Smetana, Debussy and Elgar as well as the Schumann Cello Concerto with guest soloist Jules Eskin. On Saturday evening at 8:00 Leinsdorf again conducts the orchestra including the Schumann Konzertstuck in G major, Lillian Kallir, piano soloist, and the Fantasy in C major, also by Schumann, Joseph Silverstein, violin soloist. The Berkshire Music Center will present a performance of Baroque music today at 10:00 a.m. in the theatre and a chamber music concert Wednesday evening at 8:00 in the Chamber Music Hall. The Tanglewood Choir will perform in the theatre at 8:00 Thursday evening. The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will be featured in the fifth week of the Berkshire Chamber Music Festival in the theatre at 8:00 Tuesday evening. Pianist Claude Frank will join them.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 2 4 1966

FM Music for This Week

ERICH LEINSDORF will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in works by Weber, Schumann and Dvorak on Saturday night's broadcast from the Berkshire Music Festival at 8 on WCRQ-FM. Weber's Overture to Der Freischutz will be the opening work with Lillian Kallir then joining Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

Thomas Dunn will conduct the New York Festival Orchestra in works by Handel, Shostakovich and Mozart, Friday at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 2.

Francesco Molinari-Pradelli will conduct the chorus and orchestra of L'Accademia Di Santa Cecilia, Rome, in a recording of Verdi's La Forza Del Destino on WFJB-FM's At the Opera, Friday at 7 p.m. Soloists include Mario Del Monaco, Renata Tebaldi, Ettore Bastianini, Cesare Siepi and others.

Brahm's Piano Concerto No. 1, with Claude Frank as soloist, Nielsen's Symphony No. 6 and Dawn and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from Gotterdammerung by Wagner, will be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf, tonight at 8 on Channel 2.

Record-American (m) (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 411,789
JUL 2 5 1966

Current, Upcoming Attractions

THIS WEEK

BEVERLY — "BRIGADOON," starring Robert Peterson and Freshy Marker in the Lerner-Loewe musical, at North Shore Music Theater Mon. at 8:45 p. m. through Sat. Wed. at 2 o'clock.

CAMBRIDGE — "MAN FOR ALL SEASONS," Tues. and Sat.; "Arms and the Man," Thurs.; "The Breasts of Tiresias" and "The Lesson," Mon., Wed. and Fri.

COHASSET — "CAMELOT" at South Shore Music Circus Mon. through Sat.

FRAMINGHAM — "THE KING FAMILY" at Frank Connelly's Carousel Theater Mon. through Sat.

AT OTHER N. E. SUMMER THEATERS

BRUNSWICK (Me.) — "GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES" at Playhouse Mon.
CHATHAM — "LIFE WITH FATHER" at Monomoy Theater. "THE SUBJECT WAS ROSES," with Maureen O'Sullivan at Cape Playhouse Mon.
FALMOUTH — GILBERT AND SULLIVAN PLAYERS of Guilin College at Highland Theater Mon.
FITCHBURG — "HOW TO SUCCEED IN BUSINESS . . ." at Lake Whalom Playhouse Mon.
HARRISON (Me.) — "PICNIC" at Deetree Theater Thurs.
HYANNIS — "HOW TO SUCCEED . . ." with Lanny Ross at Cape Cod Melody Tent Mon.
KENNEBUNKPORT (Me.) — "LATE LOVE" at Playhouse Mon.
LEE — MARIA ALBA'S Spanish Dance Company at Jacob's Dance Festival Tues., Wed., Fri. and Sat. at 8:40 p. m. and Thurs., Fri. and Sat. at 2.
LENOX — BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA concerts at Berkshire Music Festival with Leinsdorf conducting Smetana, Debussy, Schumann, Elgar, Fri. at 9 p. m.; Leinsdorf conducting Weber, Schumann, Dvorak, Sat. at 8; and Schippers conducting Rossini, Schumann, Mussorgsky, Sun. at 2:30.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 55,425
JULY 2 9 1966

TANGLEWOOD — Weekend prelude, with Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir at the piano in Schumann's Andante and Variations for Two Pianos and Horn, Op. 46 and Lieder with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 7 p.m. today, followed by the Symphony, under Erich Leinsdorf's direction, Jules Eskin at the cello, in Semetana's Overture to the Bartered Bride, Debussy's Three Nocturnes, Schumann's Cello Concerto and Elgar's Enigma Variations at 9 p.m. today, both at Tanglewood, the Music Shed, Lenox, Mass.

VALATIE ROUGH NOTES
Friday, August 5, 1966

—Col. and Mrs. Carl A. Foss with their guest Mrs. Harriet Bickford on Saturday attended the rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 7,764
JUL 3 0 1966

Weekend Concert Schedule Set For Tanglewood

The works of three composers will be heard tonight at Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Erich Leinsdorf, music director, will lead the orchestra tonight in Weber's Overture Ded Freischutz, Schumann's Koncertstuck in G Major and Fantasy in C Major, and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8. Lilian Kallir will be the featured pianist and Joseph Silverstein the featured violinist.

Tomorrow afternoon's program includes Rossini's Overture to La Gazza Ladra, Schumann's Piano Concerto, with Claude Frank as the featured pianist, and Mussorgsky-Ravel: Pictures at an Exhibition.

The orchestra also holds each Saturday at 10:30 a.m. open rehearsals, the proceeds of which go to the orchestra's pension fund.

The Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert, an annual event, will be held next Sunday, with Arthur Fiedler conducting.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 3 1 1966

Berkshire Native Likes Music – Luckily

LENOX—The Berkshire Music Festival Friday night played to an unexpected (and unwelcome) guest.

Eludes Gateman

According to the Tanglewood staff, a skunk apparently entered from the left side of the music shed and made his way unseen along the last three rows, which were empty. He progressed to the right side of the shed before he was spotted.

Mike Delizia, 23, of 8 Washington St., Springfield, an usher, saw the animal and rushed to report it to staff director, Harry Steadman.

"Mr. Steadman," Delizia said, "there's a skunk in section four."

"And you let him in without a ticket!" Steadman replied.

Waiting Game

Delizia went back to his post to keep an eye on the skunk. "I had no intention of trying to eject him," he said.

The skunk's odyssey came while the Boston Symphony was playing Debussey's "Three Nocturnes," a placid piece of music which demands absolute quiet. And, to complicate matters, the staff of "The Bell Telephone Hour" was filming the concert.

"I could just see that skunk wandering into the front section and upsetting everything," Delizia said.

But after a few minutes between the empty rows, the animal exited from the right side of the shed.

"Actually there are about three of them living on the grounds," Steadman explained. "They're really very small and have probably grown used to the activity here."

Steadman was relieved by the fact that the skunk had not employed his customary means of defense against anyone.

"Probably a music lover," Delizia said.

Poughkeepsie Journal
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
D. 34,306 SUN. 37,534
JULY 24 1966

Tanglewood Program Listed

Four works for orchestra and solo instruments by Robert Schumann will be performed in next weekend's Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The soloists will include Lilian Kallir, pianist, Jules Eskin, principal cellist of the Boston Symphonoy Orchestra, Claude Frank, pianist, and Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the programs on Friday and Saturday nights, with Thomas Schippers as Sunday's guest conductor.

Friday night's concert at 9 o'clock will begin with Mr. Leinsdorf conducting Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride," then Three Nocturnes by Debussy. Mr. Eskin will perforom Schumann's Cello Concerto and the closing work will be Elgar's "Enigma" Variations.

Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" will be the opening work on Saturday, with Miss Kallir then joining Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzertstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. After the intermission, Mr. Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

Next Sunday afternoon, Mr. Schippers will conoduct the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" by Rossini and the Mussorgsky-Ravel Pictures at an Exhibition. The soloist with Mr. Schippers and the orchestra will be Mr. Frank who will play Schumann's Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

The weekend prelude at 7 o'clock Friday night also will be devoted to the music of Robert Schumann. Mr. Frank, Miss Kallir and three members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Martin Hoherman, cello, Mischa Nieland, cello, and James Stagliano, horn, will perform the Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos and Horn, Op. 46. Ara Berberian, who will be heard the next week at Tanglewood in "The Magic Flute," will sing several Schumann Lieder accompanied by Mr. Frank.

At 8 o'clock Tuesday night in the Tanglewood Theater the Boston Symphony Chamber Players will give their second concert in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series. The program, with Mr. Frank at the piano, will include Mozart's Flute Quartet, the Variations for Four Drums and Viola by Colgrass, Haieff's Duo for Oboe and Bassoon and the Trio for Piano, Violin and Horn, Op. 40.

This afternoon, the American prize winners of the recent Tchaikovsky International Voice Competition will make their first United States appearances since returning from Moscow. Jane Marsh, first prize winner and the first American to be so honored since 1958, will sing arias from "Eugene Onegin" and "Pique Dame" by Tchaikovsky. Veronica Tyler, second prize winner, will be heard in Et incarnatus est from Mozart's Mass in C minor, and Simon Estes, third prize winner, will sing King Phillips' aria from the opera "Don Carlo" by Verdi. Miss Kallir will play the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor in the opening portion of the program.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, July 24, 1966

Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 2:30 this afternoon in a performance of Beethoven's Overture "Coriolanus," Tchaikowsky's Symphony No. 6 and Chopin's Piano Concerto in F minor with Lilian Kalir as soloist, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Friday evening at 9:00 Leinsdorf conducts the orchestra in works by Smetana, Debussy and Elgar as well as the Schumann Cello Concerto with guest soloist Jules Eskin. On Saturday evening at 8:00 Leinsdorf again conducts the orchestra including the Schumann Konzertstuck in G major, Lillian Kallir, piano soloist, and the Fantasy in C major, also by Schumann, Joseph Silverstein, violin soloist. The Berkshire Music Center will present a performance of Baroque music today at 10:00 a.m. in the theatre and a chamber music concert Wednesday evening at 8:00 in the Chamber Music Hall. The Tanglewood Choir will perform in the theatre at 8:00 Thursday evening. The Boston Symphony Chamber Players will be featured in the fifth week of the Berkshire Chamber Music Festival in the theatre at 8:00 Tuesday evening. Pianist Claude Frank will join them.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 24 1966

93

FM Music for This Week

ERICH LEINSDORF will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in works by Weber, Schumann and Dvorak on Saturday night's broadcast from the Berkshire Music Festival at 8 on WCRQ-FM. Weber's Overture to Der Freischutz will be the opening work with Lillian Kallir then joining Mr. Leinsdorf and the orchestra for a performance of Schumann's Konzerstuck in G major for Piano and Orchestra. Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in the Schumann Fantasy in C major for Violin and Orchestra, and the concert will conclude with Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

Thomas Dunn will conduct the New York Festival Orchestra in works by Handel, Shostakovich and Mozart, Friday at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 2.

Francesco Molinari-Pradelli will conduct the chorus and orchestra of L'Accademia Di Santa Cecilia, Rome, in a recording of Verdi's La Forza Del Destino on WPJB-FM's At the Opera, Friday at 7 p.m. Soloists include Mario Del Monaco, Renata Tebaldi, Ettore Bastianini, Cesare Siepi and others.

Brahm's Piano Concerto No. 1, with Claude Frank as soloist, Nielsen's Symphony No. 6 and Dawn and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from Gotterdammerung by Wagner, will be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf, tonight at 8 on Channel 2.

Record-American (m) (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 411,789
JUL 25 1966

Current, Upcoming Attractions

THIS WEEK

BEVERLY — "BRIGADOON," starring Robert Peterson and Preshy Marker in the Lerner-Loewe musical, at North Shore Music-Theater Mon. at 8:15 p. m. through Sat. Wed. at 2 o'clock.

CAMBRIDGE — "MAN FOR ALL SEASONS," Tues. and Sat.; "Arms and the Man," Thurs.; "The Breasts of Tiresias" and "The Lesson," Mon., Wed. and Fri.

COHASSET — "CAMELOT" at South Shore Music Circus Mon. through Sat.

FRAMINGHAM—THE KING FAMILY at Frank Connelly's Carousel Theater Mon. through Sat.

AT OTHER N. E. SUMMER THEATERS

BRUNSWICK (Me.)—"GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES" at Playhouse Mon.
CHATHAM—"LIFE WITH FATHER" at Monomoy Theater Wed.
DENNIS —"THE SUBJECT WAS ROSES." with Maureen O'Sullivan at Cape Playhouse Mon.
FALMOUTH—GILBERT AND SULLIVAN PLAYERS of Guerlin College at Highland Theater Mon.
FITCHBURG—"HOW TO SUCCEED IN BUSINESS . . ." at Lake Whalom Playhouse Mon.
HARRISON (Me.) —"PICNIC" at Deetrees Theater Thurs.
HYANNIS—"HOW TO SUCCEED . . ." with Lanny Ross at Cape Cod Melody Tent Mon.
KENNEBUNKPORT (Me.) — "LATE LOVE" at Playhouse Mon.
LEE—MARIA ALBA'S Spanish Dance Company at Jacob's Dance Festival Tues., Wed., Fri. and Sat. at 8:40 p. m. and Thurs. Fri. and Sat. at 3.
LENOX—BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA concerts at Berkshire Music Festival with Leinsdorf conducting Smetana, Debussy, Schumann, Elgar, Fri. at 9 p. m.; Leinsdorf conducting Weber, Schumann, Dvorak, Sat. at 8 and Schippers conducting Rossini, Schumann, Mussorgsky, Sun. at 2:30.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 55,425
JULY 29 1966

TANGLEWOOD — Weekend prelude, with Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir at the piano in Schumann's Andante and Variations for Two Pianos and Horn, Op. 46 and Lieder with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 7 p.m. today, followed by the Symphony, under Erich Leinsdorf's direction, Jules Eskin at the cello, in Semetana's Overture to the Bartered Bride, Debussy's Three Nocturnes, Schumann's Cello Concerto and Elgar's Enigma Variations at 9 p.m. today, both at Tanglewood, the Music Shed, Lenox, Mass.

VALLEY ROUGH NOTES
Friday, August 5, 1966

—Col. and Mrs. Carl A. Foss with their guest Mrs. Harriet Bickford on Saturday attended the rehearsal NE the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 7,764
JUL 30 1966

Weekend Concert Schedule Set For Tanglewood

The works of three composers will be heard tonight at Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Erich Leinsdorf, music director, will lead the orchestra tonight in Weber's Overture Ded Freischutz, Schumann's Koncertstuck in G Major and Fantasy in C Major, and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8. Lilian Kallir will be the featured pianist and Joseph Silverstein the featured violinist.

Tomorrow afternoon's program includes Rossini's Overture to La Gazza Ladra, Schumann's Piano Concerto, with Claude Frank as the featured pianist, and Mussorgsky-Ravel: Pictures at an Exhibition.

The orchestra also holds each Saturday at 10:30 a.m. open rehearsals, the proceeds of which go to the orchestra's pension fund.

The Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert, an annual event, will be held next Wednesday, with Arthur Fiedler conducting.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 31 1966

Berkshire Native Likes Music – Luckily

LENOX—The Berkshire Music Festival Friday night played to an unexpected (and unwelcome) guest.

Eludes Gateman

According to the Tanglewood staff, a skunk apparently entered from the left side of the music shed and made his way unseen along the last three rows, which were empty. He progressed to the right side of the shed before he was spotted.

Mike Delizia, 23, of 8 Washington St., Springfield, an usher, saw the animal and rushed to report it to staff director, Harry Steadman.

"Mr. Steadman," Delizia said, "there's a skunk in section four."

"And you let him in without a ticket!" Steadman replied.

Waiting Game

Delizia went back to his post to keep an eye on the skunk. "I had no intention of trying to eject him," he said.

The skunk's odyssey came while the Boston Symphony was playing Debussey's "Three Nocturnes," a placid piece of music which demands absolute quiet. And, to complicate matters, the staff of "The Bell Telephone Hour" was filming the concert.

"I could just see that skunk wandering into the front section and upsetting everything," Delizia said.

But after a few minutes between the empty rows, the animal exited from the right side of the shed.

"Actually there are about three of them living on the grounds," Steadman explained. "They're really very small and have probably grown used to the activity here."

Steadman was relieved by the fact that the skunk had not employed his customary means of defense against anyone.

"Probably a music lover," Delizia said.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
AUG 1 1966

7,778 at Tanglewood For Boston Orchestra

By D. E. RITZ

Thomas Schippers, the 36-year-old American-born conductor, appeared yesterday afternoon as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Claude Frank as soloist in the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A minor, opus 54."

* * *

The program, attended by 7,778 persons, also included the Rossini "Overture to 'La Gazza Ladra'" in a first performance at the Festival concerts and the Moussorgsky "Pictures at an Exhibition" in the Maurice Ravel orchestral arrangement.

Frank, a long-time favorite with Schenectadians, stemming from an early residence here when he first came over from Nuremberg, has become a favorite with Boston Symphony Orchestra audiences as well.

His performance of the Schumann "Concerto" was not only masterly but fluid and sympathetic with a fine freedom in the beautiful solo cadenza.

Frank's work with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players during the past two years has also given him a rapport with the first chair members of the various sections and one noticed yesterday in particular his modulation of both tone and tempo in passages with the solo flute. The "Intermezzo" and "Andantino grazioso" feature a more singing style of orchestration and the "Allegro vivace" is faster and gayer and written with true Schumann sparkle.

* * *

The Moussorgsky "Pictures at an Exhibition" with orchestration by Ravel is one of the numbers in which one can luxuriate in orchestral color and is one of the few orchestral "program" pieces in which we've ever been able to find the proper "program." Being "ear-minded" we usually find patterns and rhythms much more evident.

The Ravel orchestration was first presented at a "Koussevitzky Concert" in Paris on May 9, 1923, and the suite was first presented by the Boston Symphony under Koussevitzky in November, 1924.

Under the baton of Schippers the orchestration came out in its full glory from the lopsided rhythms of the "Gnomus" section to the heavy pulse on the first and fourth beats of the "Bydlo," in which one can practically see the lumbering Polish farm wagon coming down the road. Then there is the pompous and ostentatious "Goldberg" as opposed to the fidgity and ridiculous "Schmulye," portrayed by the piccolo; or the heavy "Hut on Fowls Legs" and finally the "Great Gate of Kiev."

Music charms in various ways and we had to smile as we watched the man on the lawn who used the entire concert as a pleasant background for his Sunday paper.

* * *

It was during the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra," the opening number yesterday, that we had out best opportunity to observe Schippers' conducting. After that we were to engrossed in the music and in listening.

Schippers has a decisive and precise baton which he uses in the manner of those trained at the Berkshire Center in 1948, when he studied there. He has conuducted the New York City Opera (1950-1955); and first conducted at the Metropolitan Opera in 1955. His career as conductor opened when he led the Philadelphia Orchestra in 1948. A favorite with the Boston Symphony he has guest conducted it in 1958, 1959 and 1961. He has also conducted the New York Philharmonic.

Total attendance figures for the past week at Tanglewood were 24,219. In addition to yesterday's 7,778 persons the figures included an audience Tuesday of 1347; 4931 on Friday, open rehearsal on Saturday, 2-856; and Saturday night audience of 7,307.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 30 1966

Music Review

Concert at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

ERICH LEINSDORF, the musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, made his solo sorties of the season into the music of France and England on his program in the Shed at Tanglewood last night. He played the "Nocturnes" of Debussy and the "Enigma" variations of Elgar along with the Smetana overture to "The Bartered Bride" and the Schumann cello concerto with the orchestra's principal cellist, Jules Eskin, as soloist.

The Nocturnes consist of three distinct sketches. The first, "Clouds," is a transparent pastel in which Debussy achieves his tone colors by the inspired use of only strings and reeds, in the main, and the musicians played for Leinsdorf with poignant restraint. In the "Fetes," however, they released all the accumulated verve and the rhythm rolled forward several feet off the ground. The varied meter sustains a perfect flight for the carnival spirit, and the virtuoso performance was entranging.

THE "SIRENES" employ 16 female voices in wordless chorus and here the result was not as happy. Leinsdorf placed the young ladies just behind the front-rows of musicians instead of placing them to the rear of the orchestra as is more usual. And he did not restrain their voices as much as might have been required. Then, too, the intense lights installed for the benefit of television cameras seemed to deprive the sirens of a degree of discrimination, and their vocal tone, used as an orchestral ingredient, missed the potential delicacy which Debussy can possess when played with observance of other goals.

Eskin's tone in the slow movement of his concerto was sublimely warm. He seemed to be singing to a fair maid, "du bist wie eine blume" and he cast a spell of awe over his audience. Leinsdorf's accompaniment was highly discreet here as well as in the surrounding sections. The soloist has a remarkably vibrant tone and he used it with taste and expression.

* * *

THE PROGRAM opened with the Smetana overture. The swift-moving fugue was developed with exceptional clarity and precision and when the infectious syncopation was reached Leinsdorf shifted into overdrive which conveyed the orchestra, and the audience, to sublunar orbits. The Elgar was scheduled to be played after the intermission.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
AUG 1 1966

At Tanglewood

Schippers Baton Creates Vivid Variety, Contrast

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX—Thomas Schippers, matinee idol of the podium, led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a brightly illuminated, frequently theatrical performance of Ravel's arrangement of Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition" Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood.

Borders Exaggeration

Every detail of this famous, popular musical reproduction of an exhibition of Victor Hartmann's paintings was as if under a spotlight.

An unkind listener might say the piece was unusually exaggerated. It was offered with, at least, a rare amount of emphasis on its already colorful and dramatic variety.

Everything seemed a little bit faster, slower, louder, softer than usual. And sometimes the accents, surges of volume, changes of pace were so noticeable they drew attention away from the music and toward the technique.

Loose, Deliberate

Generally, the pace was slow and deliberate. Specifically, the organization was loose, always a danger with a work made up of a collection of short pieces connected almost solely by an idea.

Also specifically, the most successful pieces seemed to be "Bydlo," "Catacombs," which was nicely dank and ominous even though slowed almost to halting, and the "Ballet of Chicks in Their Shells," whose very light quickness brought chuckles from the listeners.

The final "Great Gate at Kiev" was massive and, surprisingly, somewhat ragged, but it ended the piece in a big, ponderous manner, and the audience applauded mightily, of course, as it always does when a work is especially dramatic.

Picture-Book Style

Schippers is a young, 36, unusually handsome conductor who once studied at the Berkshire Music Center. He is best known in New York where he has been leader of the New York City Center Opera Company, guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic and frequent conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

He displayed a picture-book baton technique Sunday with wide-sweeping, dramatic gestures and an imperial manner. His motions were less pace-setting than they were graphic reflections of changes in the musical direction.

Before intermission, Claude Frank played the solo part for Schumann's "Piano Concerto in A Minor, Op. 54," with a gentle modesty quite appropriate to the unassuming character of the piece.

Moves to Fore

His style was warmly romantic, smoothly fluid, and, Schippers, subdued in his role as accompanist, kept the orchestra conservatively behind the piano.

There were moments when orchestra and piano were slightly out of time, but the concerto was undamaged.

The concert began with the overture to Rossini's "La Gazza Ladra," a glittering, capricious piece of much entertainment. Schippers made the most of it.

Attendance for the weekend was 24,219—4931 Friday night, 2856 at open rehearsal Saturday morning, 7307 Saturday night and 7778 Sunday afternoon.

Sunglasses Are Big Help at Tanglewood

Off to Tanglewood?

Let's see now — pillows, blankets, sweaters, raincoats, stoles, ponchos, car robes, berets and caps, maybe?

And, oh, yes, take along a pair of colored glasses — just in case.

There actually were people wearing sunglasses in the big shed Saturday night as television cameras recorded some of the program for later reproduction on the Bell Telephone Hour.

Floodlights were trained so that part of the shed audience had difficulty seeing the orchestra unless they shielded their eyes. Those lucky enough to have sunglasses put them on; others used the printed programs as shields, or just closed their eyes.

One ticketholder protested the strong lights to an usher without avail. Then during intermission he buttonholed a member of the orchestra on the stage. At least he relieved his own feelings.

After intermission the TV cameramen had departed and the floodlights were doused. Everyone settled back to really enjoy the concert.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
JUL 30 1966

Choir Provides 'Angelic' Assist At Tanglewood

Orchestral Color, Virtuosity Dominate Schumann Concerto

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Orchestral color and virtuosity again dominated the program at Tanglewood Friday night, overshadowing the theme of the season, the romantic concerto, and the composer of the weekend, Robert Schumann.

No Rest for Soloist

Four of Schumann's romantic concertos are scheduled. The first, played Friday with the orchestra's first cellist, Julius Eskin, as soloist, was his Concerto for Cello and Orchestra in A Minor, Op. 129.

It is a piece that gives no rest to the soloist. He is kept busy from the start and is overworked in the third movement. The orchestra has it easy. Its contribution is almost entirely reduced to mere accompaniment for cello.

The best part is in the middle and Eskin played these floating, lyrical melodies with a warm sympathy. They were engaging without being heavy with sentiment.

But it was the orchestra, with an angelic assist from about 35 members of the Tanglewood Choir, that provided the most arresting moments of the evening.

Debussy Nocturnes

The assist from the female choir members came during the third section, "Sirenes," of Debussy's "Three Nocturnes." It is a piece that conjures moods of the sea, and the girls' assignment is to sing wordless, indefinable, formless melodies as if they were sirens in the sea.

Erich Leinsdorf, conductor, had the girls seated obscurely among the orchestra players, and their voices seemed to well up from unseen depths.

It was the high point of the first half of the program because of the dramatic appropriateness of the vocal-instrumental pairing.

Smetana Overture

The concert opened with a brisk, crisp performance of the overture to Smetana's "Bartered Bride" and ended with Elgar's "Variations on an Original Theme," Op. 36, commonly known as the "Enigma" variations.

The variations are sound portraits of, according to the composer, "the idiosyncrasies of 14 of my friends," and they posed a guessing game for many years among the music lovers of England.

Now the identity of the friends is no longer an enigma and the audience is free to listen to the wealth of orchestral variety abstractly.

Prelude Program

The prelude program at 7 rather lugubrious mood. Schumann's "Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos and Horn" (Op. 46) is not the happiest piece for chamber group, and its was followed by nine melancholy lieder sung by Ara Berberian, bass.

The "Andante" was rescored by Schumann for two pianos shortly after he worte it for the quintet, and it is better known in the duet form.

It kept the pianists (Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir) busy enough, but there wasn't much for the horn and cellos to do. The cellos couldn't be heard, anyway, in the great shed.

Ringing Bass Voice

Some of the piece was interesting, and it was good to hear music that is seldom played in live performances.

The leider, sung by Berberian with a youthful, rich and ringing bass voice, were full of grief and sadness. They set a subdued atmosphere for the hour intermission until Smetana's overture started the regular program at 9.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766

AUG 1 1966

7,778 at Tanglewood For Boston Orchestra

By D. E. RITZ

Thomas Schippers, the 36-year-old American-born conductor, appeared yesterday afternoon as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with Claude Frank as soloist in the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A minor, opus 54."

* * *

The program, attended by 7,778 persons, also included the Rossini "Overture to 'La Gazza Ladra' " in a first performance at the Festival concerts and the Moussorgsky "Pictures at an Exhibition" in the Maurice Ravel orchestral arrangement.

Frank, a long-time favorite with Schenectadians, stemming from an early residence here when he first came over from Nuremberg, has become a favorite with Boston Symphony Orchestra audiences as well.

His perfromance of the Schumann "Concerto" was not only masterly but fluid and sympathetic with a fine freedom in the beautiful solo cadenza.

Frank's work with the Boston Symphony Chamber Players during the past two years has also given him a rapport with the first chair members of the various sections and one noticed yesterday in particular his modulation of both tone and tempo in passages with the solo flute. The "Intermezzo" and "Andantino grazioso" feature a more singing style of orchestration and the "Allegro vivace" is faster and gayer and written with true Schumann' sparkle.

* * *

The Moussorgsky "Pictures at an Exhibition" with orchestration by Ravel is one of the numbers in which one can luxuriate in orchestral color and is one of the few orchestral "program" pieces in which we've ever been able to find the proper "program." Being "earminded" we usually find patterns and rhythms much more evident.

The Ravel orchestration was first presented at a "Koussevitzky Concert" in Paris on May 3, 1923, and the suite was first presented by the Boston Symphony under Koussevitzky in November, 1924.

Under the baton of Schippers the orchestration came out in its full glory from the lopsided rhythms of the "Gnomus" section to the heavy pulse on the first and fourth beats of the "Bydlo," in which one can practically see the lumbering Polish farm wagon coming down the road. Then there is the pompous and ostentatious "Goldberg" as opposed to the fidgity and ridiculous "Schmulye," portrayed by the piccolo; or the heavy "Hut on Fowls Legs" and finally the "Great Gate of Kiev."

Music charms in various ways and we had to smile as we watched the man on the lawn who used the entire concert as a pleasant background for his Sunday paper.

* * *

It was during the Overture to "La Gazza Ladra," the opening number yesterday, that we had out best opportunity to observe Schippers' conducting. After that we were to engrossed in the music and in listening.

Schippers has a decisive and precise baton which he uses in the manner of those trained at the Berkshire Center in 1948, when he studied there. He has conuducted the New York City Opera (1950-1955); and first conducted at the Metropolitan Opera in 1955. His career as conductor opened when he led the Philadelphia Orchestra in 1948. A favorite with the Boston Symphony he has guest conducted it in 1958, 1959 and 1961. He has also conducted the New York Philharmonic.

Total attendance figures for the past week at Tanglewood were 24,219. In addition to yesterday's 7,778 persons the figures included an audience Tuesday of 1347; 4931 on Friday, open rehearsal on Saturday, 2-856; and Saturday night audience of 7,307.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 30 1966

Music Review

Concert at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

ERICH LEINSDORF, the musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, made his solo sorties of the season into the music of France and England on his program in the Shed at Tanglewood last night. He played the "Nocturnes" of Debussy and the "Enigma" variations of Elgar along with the Smetana overture to "The Bartered Bride" and the Schumann cello concerto with the orchestra's principal cellist, Jules Eskin, as soloist.

The Nocturnes consist of three distinct sketches. The first, "Clouds," is a transparent pastel in which Debussy achieves his tone colors by the inspired use of only strings and reeds, in the main, and the musicians played for Leinsdorf with poignant restraint. In the "Fetes," however, they released all the accumulated verve and the rhythm rolled forward several feet off the ground. The varied meter sustains a perfect flight for the carnival spirit, and the virtuoso performance was entrancing.

THE "SIRENES" employ 16 female voices in wordless chorus and here the result was not as happy. Leinsdorf placed the young ladies just behind the front-rows of musicians instead of placing them to the rear of the orchestra as is more usual. And he did not restrain their voices as much as might have been required. Then, too, the intense lights installed for the benefit of television cameras seemed to deprive the sirens of a degree of discrimination, and their vocal tone, used as an orchestral ingredient, missed the potential delicacy which Debussy can possess when played with observance of other goals.

Eskin's tone in the slow movement of his concerto was sublimely warm. He seemed to be singing to a fair maid, "du bist wie eine blume" and he cast a spell of awe over his audience. Leinsdorf's accompaniment was highly discreet here as well as in the surrounding sections. The soloist has a remarkably vibrant tone and he used it with taste and expression.

* * *

THE PROGRAM opened with the Smetana overture. The swift-moving fugue was developed with exceptional clarity and precision and when the infectious syncopation was reached Leinsdorf shifted into overdrive which conveyed the orchestra, and the audience, to sublunar orbits. The Elgar was scheduled to be played after the intermission.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
AUG 1 1966

At Tanglewood

Schippers Baton Creates Vivid Variety, Contrast

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX—Thomas Schippers, matinee idol of the podium, led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a brightly illuminated, frequently theatrical performance of Ravel's arrangement of Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition" Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood.

Borders Exaggeration

Every detail of this famous, popular musical reproduction of an exhibition of Victor Hartmann's paintings was as if under a spotlight.

An unkind listener might say the piece was unusually exaggerated. It was offered with, at least, a rare amount of emphasis on its already colorful and dramatic variety.

Everything seemed a little bit faster, slower, louder, softer than usual. And sometimes the accents, surges of volume, changes of pace were so noticeable they drew attention away from the music and toward the technique.

Loose, Deliberate

Generally, the pace was slow and deliberate. Specifically, the organization was loose, always a danger with a work made up of a collection of short pieces connected almost solely by an idea.

Also specifically, the most successful pieces seemed to be "Bydlo," "Catacombs," which was nicely dank and ominous even though slowed almost to halting, and the "Ballet of Chicks in Their Shells," whose very light quickness brought chuckles from the listeners.

The final "Great Gate at Kiev" was massive and, surprisingly, somewhat ragged, but it ended the piece in a big, ponderous manner, and the audience applauded mightily, of course, as it always does when a work is especially dramatic.

Picture-Book Style

Schippers is a young, 36, unusually handsome conductor who once studied at the Berkshire Music Center. He is best known in New York where he has been leader of the New York City Center Opera Company, guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic and frequent conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

He displayed a picture-book baton technique Sunday with wide-sweeping, dramatic gestures and an imperial manner. His motions were less pace-setting than they were graphic reflections of changes in the musical direction.

Before intermission, Claude Frank played the solo part for Schumann's "Piano Concerto in A Minor, Op. 54," with a gentle modesty quite appropriate to the unassuming character of the piece.

Moves to Fore

His style was warmly romantic, smoothly fluid, and, Schippers, subdued in his role as accompanist, kept the orchestra conservatively behind the piano.

There were moments when orchestra and piano were slightly out of time, but the concerto was undamaged.

The concert began with the overture to Rossini's "La Gazza Ladra," a glittering, capricious piece of much entertainment. Schippers made the most of it.

Attendance for the weekend was 24,219—4931 Friday night, 2856 at open rehearsal Saturday morning, 7307 Saturday night and 7778 Sunday afternoon.

Sunglasses Are Big Help at Tanglewood

Off to Tanglewood?

Let's see now — pillows, blankets, sweaters, raincoats, stoles, ponchos, car robes, berets and caps, maybe?

And, oh, yes, take along a pair of colored glasses — just in case.

There actually were people wearing sunglasses in the big shed Saturday night as television cameras recorded some of the program for later reproduction on the Bell Telephone Hour.

Floodlights were trained so that part of the shed audience had difficulty seeing the orchestra unless they shielded their eyes. Those lucky enough to have sunglasses put them on; others used the printed programs as shields, or just closed their eyes.

One ticketholder protested the strong lights to an usher without avail. Then during intermission he buttonholed a member of the orchestra on the stage. At least he relieved his own feelings.

After intermission the TV cameramen had departed and the floodlights were doused. Everyone settled back to really enjoy the concert.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
JUL 30 1966

Choir Provides 'Angelic' Assist At Tanglewood

Orchestral Color, Virtuosity Dominate Schumann Concerto

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Orchestral color and virtuosity again dominated the program at Tanglewood Friday night, overshadowing the theme of the season, the romantic concerto, and the composer of the weekend, Robert Schumann.

No Rest for Soloist

Four of Schumann's romantic concertos are scheduled. The first, played Friday with the orchestra's first cellist, Julius Eskin, as soloist, was his Concerto for Cello and Orchestra in A Minor, Op. 129.

It is a piece that gives no rest to the soloist. He is kept busy from the start and is overworked in the third movement. The orchestra has it easy. Its contribution is almost entirely reduced to mere accompaniment for cello.

The best part is in the middle and Eskin played these floating, lyrical melodies with a warm sympathy. They were engaging without being heavy with sentiment.

But it was the orchestra, with an angelic assist from about 35 members of the Tanglewood Choir, that provided the most arresting moments of the evening.

Debussy Nocturnes

The assist from the female choir members came during the third section, "Sirenes," of Debussy's "Three Noctures." It is a piece that conjures moods of the sea, and the girls' assignment is to sing wordless, indefinable, formless melodies as if they were sirens in the sea.

Erich Leinsdorf, conductor, had the girls seated obscurely among the orchestra players, and their voices seemed to well up from unseen depths.

It was the high point of the first half of the program because of the dramatic appropriateness of the vocal-instrumental pairing.

Smetana Overture

The concert opened with a brisk, crisp performance of the overture to Smetana's "Bartered Bride" and ended with Elgar's "Variations on an Original Theme," Op. 36, commonly known as the "Enigma" variations.

The variations are sound portraits of, according to the composer, "the idiosyncrasies of 14 of my friends," and they posed a guessing game for many years among the music lovers of England.

Now the identity of the friends is no longer an enigma and the audience is free to listen to the wealth of orchestral variety abstractly.

Prelude Program

The prelude program at 7 rather lugubrious mood. Schumann's "Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos and Horn" (Op. 46) is not the happiest piece for chamber group, and its was followed by nine melancholy lieder sung by Ara Berberian, bass.

The "Andante" was rescored by Schumann for two pianos shortly after he worte it for the quintet, and it is better known in the duet form.

It kept the pianists (Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir) busy enough, but there wasn't much for the horn and cellos to do. The cellos couldn't be heard, anyway, in the great shed.

Ringing Bass Voice

Some of the piece was interesting, and it was good to hear music that is seldom played in live performances.

The leider, sung by Berberian with a youthful, rich and ringing bass voice, were full of grief and sadness. They set the subdued atmosphere for the hour intermission until Smetana's overture started the regular program at 9.

Choir Provides Angelic Assist At Tanglewood

Orchestral Color, Virtuosity Dominate Schumann Concerto

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Orchestral color and virtuosity again dominated the program at Tanglewood Friday night, overshadowing the rest of the season, the romantic concerto, and the composer of the weekend, Robert Schumann.

No Rest for Soloist

Four of Schumann's romantic concertos are scheduled. The one played Friday with the orchestra's first cellist, Julius Ernst, as soloist, was his Concerto for Cello and Orchestra in A minor, Op. 129.

It is a piece that gives no rest to the soloist. He is kept busy from the start and is overtaxed in the third movement. The orchestra has it easy. Its contribution is almost entirely reduced to mere accompaniment for cello.

The best part is in the middle movement played these floating, lyric melodies with a warm beauty. They were engaging without being heavy with sentiment.

It was the orchestra, with angelic assist from about 35 members of the Tanglewood choir that provided the most striking moments of the evening.

Debussy Nocturnes

The assist from the female choir members came during the second selection, "Sirenes," of Debussy's "Three Noctures." It is a piece that conjures moods of the sea, and the girls' assignment is to sing wordless, indefinite, formless melodies as if they were sirens in the sea.

Leinsdorf, conductor, had the girls seated obscurely behind the orchestra players, their voices seemed to well up from unseen depths.

This was the high point of the evening. The first half of the program belonged to the dramatic approach of the vocal-instrumental pairing.

Smetana Overture

The concert opened with a crisp performance of the overture to Smetana's "Bartered Bride" and ended with Elgar's "Variations on an Original Theme," Op. 36, commonly known as the "Enigma" Variations.

These variations are sound portraits according to the composer of the idiosyncrasies of 14 friends," and they posed a fine game for many among the music lovers present.

Until the identity of the enigma is no longer an enigma the audience is free to enjoy the wealth of orchestral color abstractly.

Prelude Program

The prelude program at 7 was in lugubrious mood. Schumann's "Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos and Horn" (Op. 46) is the happiest piece for chamber music, and its was followed by a melancholy lieder sung by Berberian, bass.

The "Andante" was rescored by Schumann for two pianos after he worte it for quintet, and it is better in the duet form.

Let the pianists (Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir) busy themselves but there wasn't much for the horn and cellos to do. The cellos couldn't be heard, even in the great shed.

Singing Bass Voice

The voice of the piece was interesting and it was good to hear what is seldom played in performances.

The lieder, sung by Berberian, the youthful, rich and ringing voice, were full of joy and sadness. They set the atmosphere for the intermission until Smetana's overture started the regular program at 9.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 145,838

AUG 1 1966

Schumann Themes Off

By MICHAEL STEINBERG
Globe Critic

Schumann's Piano Concerto is the most popular of his large works, and while it is not subtle, it is of course a very good one as well. All his other compositions for solo instrument with orchestra are, however, highly problematic at best. They include, in chronologic order, the Concert Piece for four Horns, the Concert Piece or Introduction and Allegro Appassionato in G for Piano, the Cello Concerto, the C major Fantasy for Violin, the D minor Introduction and Allegro for Piano, and the Violin Concerto.

In the Piano Concerto, Schumann's idea of solo-orchestra dialogue is naive, but it is workable; and, in the second movement, poetic, too. All the other works in the list were written from four to eight years later, and the most perplexing thing about them is that Schumann's grasp of the concerto principle, instead of maturing, became feebler. It is not merely a matter of his writing clumsily for orchestra, which he is apt to do, but rather that he seems often to have no idea of why he is writing for orchestra.

Several of Schumann's works were performed at Tanglewood during the past week-end, the beautiful Andante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Horns, and Cello, at the Friday Prelude; the Cello Concerto with Jules Eskin at the Friday Boston Symphony concert; the G major Piano Concert Piece and the Violin Fantasy at Saturday's Symphony concert with Lilian Kallir and Joseph Silverstein respectively; and the Piano Concerto on Sunday afternoon with Claude Frank.

Unable to go to Tanglewood, but curious to hear the Concert Piece again and the Violin Fantasy for the first time, I took advantage of the live broadcasts WGBH offers this year. Let me, before anything else, praise WGBH for its civilized policy of leaving listeners alone during the concert intermission and not force-feeding them with interviews and parlor games that oblige one to turn the radio off, thus running the risk of missing the start of the second half.

The G major-minor Concert Piece is a work full of attractive material and with lively and inventive writing for the piano. The difficulty with it is the weakness of Schumann's ideas about what his orchestra is for. The frustrating presence of this relationship that never comes to anything strikes me as an organic rather than a cosmetic fault. Lilian Kallir's tasteful playing was especially good in its phrasing of lyric melody, but some of the chordal writing and passagework seemed so under-articulated that its effect was to weaken the piece by suggesting that little was happening between the downbeats.

But if the Concert Piece is an enjoyable, though flawed, work, the Violin Fantasy is hopeless, possibly the most preposterous piece of non-composition the Symphony hsa played since that unbelievable Viola Bassoon Concerto they inflicted on us last Winter. Its themes seem so forced and are so characterless and the violin virtuosity for all of the vigorous scrubbing so mechanical, that one is often hard put to remember what was being played two bars earlier. The orchestra is merely an expensive accompaniment. Silverstein's playing seemed excessively mannered, and it was not as clean technically as I had expected from him. The broadcast with its extremely close pickup of the solo coarsened his tone uncharacteristically.

Claude Frank's playing of the Piano Concerto was strong and unmannered. There were moments of exciting energy and some of delightful grace, but the sound tended toward the cold and dry. While it was obviously the playing of a very good pianist, there was not the momentum and the radiantly vital intelligence one was so aware of in his playing of the Mozart K.503 Concerto three weeks earlier. Thomas Schippers, who had begun with a brilliant "Gazza Ladra" Overture (Rossini), conducted generally adequately, but he failed to get the woodwinds to make sense of the first theme and he vulgarized the second movement cello theme extremely.

Erich Leinsdorf provided the unobtrusive background for the Piano Concert Piece and the Violin Fantasy. He also conducted a shapeless and inert "Freischuetz" Overture (Weber) and an thoroughly attractive and relaxed performance of Dvorak's Symphony No. 8 in G (old No. 4).

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607

AUG 1 1966

Schippers Scores in Tanglewood Debut with Boston Symphony

By JOAN SIMMONS

An air of jubilance marked Sunday afternoon's concert at Tanglewood as Thomas Schippers appeared as guest conductor before the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The "La Gazza Ladra" overture by Rossini set the tone with its lively, intriguing melodies which seem to bode special things to come. The overture is a favorite thematic piece with radio programs as well as concerts because of this quality.

The highlight of the afternoon was undoubtedly the Mussorgsky-Ravel "Pictures at an Exhibition." Written by Mussorgsky, the work was orchestrated by Ravel and received its first performance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1929 during Serge Koussevitzky's first year as music director of the Symphony.

The work is a series of brief pieces inspired by a collection of paintings. The pieces are exquisitely descriptive, employing all of the distinctions and nuances available in a symphony orchestra. The Boston Symphony conveyed the illusion of traveling through a museum, effortlessly making the trasnition from resounding trumpets to the stress of violins as the imaginary tour continued. Labeled with such titles as "Medieval Castle," the pieces are interspersed with the "Promenade," a beautiful theme which is kept from becoming monotonous by the interpretive ability of the orchestra following the score, adapting it to blend with the "pictures."

Thomas Schippers is a young conductor who made his debut in 1948 at 18 before the Philadelphia Orchestra, the same year he studied at the Berkshire Center. He will appear with the Philadelphia as guest concuctor at Saratoga later this season.

Claude Frank a frequent guest with the Boston Symphony, made his second appearance of the season at Tanglewood Sunday as soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto. The concerto contains some spectacular passages, opening with a brief and compelling crash and concluding with the grand finale of clashing cymbals of the final, allegro-vivace movement. Frank is an intense pianist whose personal feeling about each note seems to be expressed in his face and attitude as he plays.

He has the ability to master the spectacular without sacrificing the serious musical value of his work, giving it the depth and character to make it more than momentarily memorable.

Music: Berkshire Festival Features Schumann

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Music of Robert Schumann dominated the two programs at Tanglewood last night, opening the 5th weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival. The audience numbered 4,931.

Main event was the 9 o'clock concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Erich Leinsdorf. Program: Overture to Smetana's opera, "The Bartered Bride," Three Nocturnes by Debussy, and "Enigma," Variations by Sir Edward Elgar. Jules Eskin of the orchestra was soloist in the Schumann Cello Concerto.

At 7 o'clock, a preliminary program of chamber music was also given in the Music Shed. This Friday night bonus program was initiated this summer as entertainment for early comers. Tickets include admission to both events.

The weekend prelude was Schumann's Anddante and Variations for Two Pianos, Two Cellos and Horn, Opus 46. Performers were Claude Frank, and Lilian Kallir, pianos; Martin Hoherman and Mischa Mieland, cellos; James Sagliano, horn.

Ara Berberian, bass of the New York City Opera Cmpany, was heard in Schumann's "Lieder," accompanied at the piano by Frank.

For 2 Pianos Only

Most interesting, if not rewarding item of all this was Schumann's Andante and Variations. It is rarely heard as it was last night in its original form. Even Schumann despaired of its effectiveness and rewrote it for two pianos only.

Last night's performance certainly will not spearhead a return to the original version. It is music of light texture in which cellos and horns merely fill in the gaps. The horn sounded loud and unnecessary, and Stagliano also contributed a few obvious clinkers.

The duo pianists fostered the work's inherent charm, and did little to disguise its naive simplicity. The music was generally euphonious despite the unlikely combination of instruments.

Berberian brought artistry, splendid voice, and intelligence to the Schumann "Lieder."

He wasn't merely content to sing them with technique, but enhanced them with ardent personal feeling. Frank's piano backgrounds had beauty and balance.

Moods ranged from the touches of "Wood Myrtle and Roses," and "Sunday on the Rhine" to a vigorous, yet sensitive reading of "The Two Grenadiers." The only conspicuous flaw was a slight weakness in the low range passing tones.

Following all this quietude, Smetana's "The Bartered Bride," by the full orchestra was a shift into high gear. The performance was a technical ultimate. Leinsdorf cued the rapid, nervous fingers like clockwork as they darted through strings and woodwinds.

Rarely Promoted

Actually, such propelling drive and glamor are rarely promoted in an operatic or even a concert performance.

There was none of this amalgamated brilliance in the Debussy nocturnes.

Here was gorgeously-hued studies in instrumental timbres. 'Couds" was an achievement in orchestral control, and tonal richness. The energetic but unhurried tempo of "Festivals" was steadfast and cast in luminous sounds.

In "Sirens," the soprano voices, singing a wordless chant, were unusually prominent. Instead of the usual eight voices, some 35 young women had been trailed for the performance by Iva Dee Hiatt. The vocal score was deftly balanced with instrumental coloration.

Schumann's Cello Concerto is not particularly well disposed toward the soloist. The mood is generally mournful and the soloist is engaged most of the time in a groaning, low range.

Eskin and the orchestra were agreed on elegance of phrasing, although the work seemed to progress in episodes rather than smooth continuity. The soloist played with a generally reliable left hand, and he put his richly vibrant tone to good use without throbbing.

Tonight's program by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leinsdorf, includes Weber's "Freichutz" Overture and Dvorak's Eighth Symphony.

Miss Kallir will be piano soloist in Schumann's "Konzertstuck," and concertmaster Joseph Silverstein will be soloist in Schumann's Fantasy in C Major for Violin and Orchestra, Opus 131.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 61,129

JUL 30 1966

96

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
207 Boston 02106 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
AUG 1 1966

Music Review

Fifth Weekend of Berkshire Festival

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIFTH weekend of the Berkshire Festival was the occasion of a Tanglewood debut for a conductor who had been a student of the Berkshire Music Center 18 years ago, when he himself was 18 years old. Thomas Schippers conducted yesterday afternoon's program, in which Claude Frank was the soloist for the Schumann piano concerto.

Schippers played the overture to Rossini's opera "La Gazza Ladra," and also Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition." There is style to Schippers' podium manner. He is a personable gentleman, and very little that he does on stage is calculated to lessen any impact his natural dramatic flair may convey to his audience. The Rossini overture was full of spice and gaiety. It is a work, in fact, in which the Boston Symphony can be shown to its superlative advantage.

The "Pictures," as orchestrated by Ravel from Moussorgsky's original piano composition, is a natural for a conductor who is desirous of showing all the facets of his competence. There are innumerable contrasts of every kind, and Schippers was in easy but obvious command of his forces at every turn.

Whitestone

Thomas Schippers

IT WAS Koussevitzky over two score years ago who suggested to Ravel that he transpose the Russian's music for orchestra, and it was also Koussevitzky who gave the piece both its world premiere, in Paris in 1923, and its American premiere, in Boston in 1926. Moussorgsky's 10 sketches were his way of expressing in music his estimate of 10 canvases of his friend, the painter Victor Hartman. (There is a similar contemporary composition to be heard two weeks hence on this same stage when the seven pictures of Paul Klee, as transposed in musical thought by Gunther Schuller, will also be heard.) Hartman's pictures are not mysterious and lend themselves to translation into music quite literally.

Frank's Schumann was the playing of an artist of conviction. He gave character to the many changing phrases of Schumann which have made it one of the most favored solos for the instrument. The second subject of the intermezzo, which is given first to the cellos and then the violins, is one of the most bewitchingly lovely turns of melody ever written. Schippers let the Boston cello section soar and swell aloft on their own air currents, and Frank had the artistic good sense to keep the piano embellishments as decorative rather than assertive comments.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT the orchestra's regular director, Erich Leinsdorf, was in command. He enclosed two more Schumann solos with the overture to Weber's "Der Freischuetz" and Dvorak's 8th Symphony in G Major, Opus 88.

Extremely powerful and annoying lights were beamed on the audience for television purposes during the first half of the program. It was of varying degrees of irritation to members of the audience, and distracted them so that many could not give complete attention to the music on stage.

This was a pity, as Leinsdorf's "Freischuetz" was played with remarkably spacious articulation. The melodic passages were "sung" with humble affection. There is a common bond between the nostalgic tunes of Dvorak and such a theme as that of Agatha in the Rossini overture, which has a deeply appealing loveliness. Leinsdorf had clarinet soloist Gino Cioffi stand, as did the four horns for their assignment shortly after the opening of the overture.

* * *

THERE ARE few symphonies more transparent than this one by Dvorak. One can actually see the craftsman erecting his first framework, subsequently rearranging the timbers into fugal and cononic shapes, and altering them rhythmically and in their texture to achieve other moods and colors. What can be more adorable than the third movement, allegretto grazioso, and more felicitously placed in timbre?

Saturday's soloists were Lilian Kallir and Joseph Silverstein respectively, in more Schuman: the concert piece for piano and orchestra, Opus 92, "Introduction and Allegro Appassionato" and the Fantasy for Violin in C Major Opus 131.

Miss Kallir's playing impresses her audiences unfailingly. Her success Saturday was predominantely personal rather than based upon the content of the music. The violin fantasy starts out like some Sarasate or Enesco, in a bold display of bravura, but it soon subsides to small figures on a contracted background, and the artist's agility is more the object of interest, rather than the message of the music.

At Tanglewood

Monday, August 1, 1966.

Boston Symphony Reassuring

By ERIC McLEAN

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 1 — It does a body good to listen to three concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in quick succession. There is something very healing in all that rich sound and easy precision. It sets the world in order, and the experience leaves the listener with the firm conviction that the standard symphony repertoire is safe for a long time to come as long as the Boston Symphony is around to play it.

During the last three days in Tanglewood, the summer court of this princely orchestra, I have heard the musicians play twice under their regular conductor, Erich Leinsdorf, and once under Thomas Schippers.

There was nothing particularly adventurous about the programs — the theme this year is "The Romantic Concerto" — but then the adventurous side of the Berkshire Festival has always been concentrated in the music centre, and in the series of concerts devoted to contemporary American music sponsored by Chicago's Fromm Foundation.

The Boston Symphony spends its Tanglewood months re-examining the classics on the weekends, and teaching aspiring young musicians at the Berkshire music centre during the week.

Superb Acoustics

On the weekend, all attention is focussed on the huge music shed which dominates one end of this beautiful 200-acre estate. The hordes descend on Tanglewood from New York, Boston, Albany, the surrounding New England communities, and even from Canada. They fill the 6,000-seat shed, and they spill across the surrounding lawns in vast numbers and various garb.

Tanglewood's shed is one of those rare phenomena that are blessed with acoustics so good as to be almost inexplicable. For a building of this sort, they were remarkable to begin with but they were much improved by the new ceiling and sound baffles installed by Bolt, Beranek and Newman about six years ago. The performance is projected with such clarity that very little is lost even on the lawns, a distance of more than a city block away.

There was nothing particularly memorable about the interpretations over the past weekend — just good music, well enunciated. Leindorf was at his best in the overture to Smetana's "Bartered Bride," and, oddly enough, in the "Sirens" section of Debussy's "Nocturnes." The latter is so often a bore that it came as a surprise to find the music taking on real significance. By underlining the colors and by integrating the singers within the body of the orchestra, Leinsdorf managed to disguise Debussy's flagging inspiration.

Great Enthusiasm

There were parts of Dvorak's G Major Symphony, too, which were played with great enthusiasm — I recall particularly the beautiful allegretto and the middle section of the adagio. But the concerto works—Schumann's Cello Concerto with Jules Eskin, and in the Introduction and Allegro of Schumann with Lillian Kallir at the piano—there seemed to be an uneasy truce between Leinsdorf and his soloists.

These things are relative, of course; even under par the Boston Symphony is an orchestra of champions.

Thomas Schippers chose his program for yesterday's concert very wisely.

The overture to Rossini's "La Gazza Ladra" is one of those things he can bring off with enormous flair, and Claude Frank could be counted upon for an intelligent and very musical performance of Schumann's Piano Concerto in which, it must be said, he was supported with greater sympathy than the soloists who played under Leindsdorf.

To end his concert Schippers gave us a splashy reading of the Ravel setting of Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

The Boston Orchestra pulled out all the stops and threatened to undo B. B. & N.'s careful work on the ceiling.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 31 1966

At Tanglewood

Schumann Concertos Provide Musical Pivot

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Two Schumann "concertos" provided the pivot for the Tanglewood concert to turn on Saturday night. One was for piano, the other for violin. They sounded similar.

Kallir Soloist

Lilian Kallir played the solo part for the "Introduction and Allegro Appassionato, Concert Piece for Piano and Orchestra," Op. 92 commonly known as "Konzertstuck."

Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster for the accompanying Boston Symphony Orchestra, played the solo part for the "Fantasy for Violin," Op. 131.

The festival theme this year is "Romantic Concerto," and this is Schumann's weekend, which accounts for why his cello concerto was played Friday, and the violin and piano pieces Saturday night. Scheduled this afternoon is the A Minor Piano Concerto, Op. 54.

19th Century Music

It may be too much Schumann for some listeners. His music isn't the most exciting to be found in the middle of the 19th century. And the pieces chosen for Saturday certainly aren't the best of Schumann.

Miss Kallir's piano was gracious and charming enough for the gracious and charming passages of the "Konzertstuck," but it lacked fire during the impassioned parts.

The piece was written for Schumann's wife, Clara, a first-class pianist, and when she first saw it, she said, in a letter to a friend, "It is very passionate and I shall certainly play it that way."

Was Pleasant

It wasn't that way Saturday ...it was pleasant, though.

The "Fantasy," for which Silverstein played the solo part, sounded similar because there's no excitement written into it, and Silverstein played a mild violin.

It was mercifully brief, and the way was opened for Dvorak's Symphony No. 8, Op. 88, which has a first movement of happy melodies with a flashing finish.

The whole work, for that matter, has many happy, folk-tunish melodies and dancing rhythms and is solidly orchestrated.

Once again Erich Leinsdorf's virtuosic orchestra stole the attention from the soloists. But in this instance they shouldn't be blamed. They were given less interesting parts to play.

TIGHT BINDING

97

Springfield Herald
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Bi-Weekly
Circ. 111,573
AUG 4 1966

047

Last Friday at 7:00 P.M., the prelude concert included wo pieces by Schumann: the Andante and Variations or 2 Pianos, 2 Cellos and Horn, and "The Lieder" featurning Ara Berberian, Bass, and Claude Frank, Piano. chumann's Andante and Variations was composed at a me when he was suffering from exhaustion following he tremendous years of creation, 1840-42. Schumann aid: "It has something of an elegy; I think I was rather melancholy when I composed it." The french horn nd cellos were predominantly supporting the pianos. here was an interesting short movement of the two ianos beating lyrical heart beats with the cellos adding eloncholic refrains in the background, while the french orn blasted periodic phrases of discontent.

JULES ESKIN
(photo byline)

Born in Philadelphia. ttended Curtis. Studied ith Leonard Rose. Prinpal cellist of the Clevelnd Orchestra in 1961. resently principal cellist f Boston Symphony Orhestra since 1964.

he "Lieder" was romansongs of unrequited love suffering. Highlights e the boisterous, rollick"clown's song", and the folk tale of "Poor Petbeginning in tongue-inek gay waltz time, but ing in a sad lament.

VENING CONCERT

he Evening Concert at P.M. included Smetana, ussy, Schumann, and El, Smetana's Overture to e Bartered Bride", a folk ra both in music and y, was performed at glewood for the first e.

he opera opens with a ge festival in Bohemia. retty peasant girl, Maka Krusina is sad bese her lover Jenik is a r unknown orphan, and village matchmaker is nging her marriage with son of a rich peasant, ha Tobias. Tobias meets enka and tries to make to her without realizthat she is his future bride. Marenka, however guesses his identity and tries to "lead him on" to his self-destruction.

The Overture is based upon the themes of the Opera. It began briskly with perpetual rhythm between the violins and double basses. A sad refrain between the oboe and tympani conversed at the middle, and a steady martial beat rolled to a stirring finale.

Debussy's Three Nocturnes ("Clouds", "Festivals", and critical praise in its Paris premiere. It set up a new style of harmonic and modulatory liberation. "Clouds" render the aspect of the sky and the slow, solemn motion of grey softly touched with white. "Festivals" gives us the vibrating atmosphere with sudden flashes of light. "Sirens" depict the mysterious sea and rhythms amongset its waves.

The Women—only Chorus, sitting unseen throughout the orchestra, magically gave enchanting illusions of wailing as if arising from different sections of the music shed.

HIGHLIGHT OF THE EVENING

Next on the program was Schumann's Concerto for Violincello and Orchestra in A Minor, Op. 129, with cello soloist, Jules Eskin. Schumann wrote this concerto two months after he moved to Dusseldorf. Schumann, unequal tot he requirements of the position, mishandled himself resulting in his forced recognition and eventual mental breakdown and confinement.

Jules Eskin maintained this popular cello concerto as a slow lament, lyrical yet sad, but interpreted its vicissitudes of rhythmic themes with a heart-rending expressive vibrato toward a feverish melodramatic "garment-rending" oratoria and brilliant finale. Eskin proudly "lamented" an almost flawless technique in the second and third movements, (the first we'll blame on the chilly evening) even charming a passing skunk nonchalantly passing through the middle aisle without any odoriferous "comment". A thunderous ovation helped warm an otherwise windy, chilly arctic evening.

Journal
LANSVILLE, Conn.
Circ. 3,587
AUG 4 1966

TANGLEWOOD REVIEWED

TANGLEWOOD
Friday — By R. H.

It was, for the most part, a well-played concert; but there was too much Schumann, in this listener's opinion, for one evening. By intermission of the second round he wished he had been among those who stayed away.

The opening number of the first program was the Schumann Andante for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn (Opus 46), a rambling, desultory kind of piece that was, within its own limitations, performed well. Lilian Kallir, the pianist, was the outstanding instrumentalist of the group.

Asa Berberian, bass, appeared next, singing nine Schumann lieder. The last was the well-known Die beiden Grenadiere, which the audience ate up. The cries of "Bravo!" were more numerous than usual; but even if deserved, they seemed strangely out of place at a recital of lieder. One wishes there were not quite so many of those types around who feel it their duty to show the rest of us how to take our culture seriously.

Part II began with Smetana's Overture to The Bartered Bride. Leinsdorf took it at break-neck speed; and that was good because he got it over with very quickly. The next work was the Schumann A Minor Concerto for Cello. It was the high point of the evening, played superbly by Jules Eskin of the Boston Symphony.

The Debussy Nocturnes — Fetes, Nuages, and Sirenes — were very precise, but not very interesting, except for the last. In it the women's voices, beautifully trained by Iva Dee Hiatt, were light and wonderfully Gallic in character.

Saturday — By D. D.

Weber's Freischutz Overture opened this evening's concert, devoted entirely to works by Romantic composers.

The two short compositions by Schumann, Introduction and Allegro Appassionato, with piano soloist Lilian Kallir, and Fantasia for Violin in C Major, with Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concert master, are curious examples of the composer's ventures during his depression.

Miss Kallir's playing, more than competent, succeeded at moments in achieving a fine intensity in music which any artist would find difficult to project. The Fantasia, much more dramatic in style and conception, was given a splendid performance by Mr. Silverstein. Here the solo instrument stands out indisputably as a virtuoso factor, the orchestra merely furnishing a kind of drab fill-in. His beautiful phrasing of complex rhythmic patterns, his superlative tone, focused complete attention on his solo part. It is regrettable that Schumann did not produce more for the violin.

If the first part of the program, except for Mr. Silverstein's work, failed to cause much of a stir, the evening was redeemed by a lusty reading of Dvorak's Symphony No. 8. Mr. Leinsdorf brought the orchestra to life in a welter of breathtaking sound, if a bit unrestrained, conveying nevertheless, in his own way, all the joy and melancholy of this great symphony.

Sunday — By A. C. S.

Thomas Schippers made his first appearance as a guest conductor at Tanglewood this afternoon. Although he has led the orchestra in other locales, this was a triumphant debut in the Berkshires. He began his program with a songful (if sometimes boisterous) reading of Rossini's Overture to "La Gazza Ladra."

Next came the Schumann Piano Concerto with Claude Frank as soloist. It was a fascinating performance, much more "romantic" in approach than one often hears. The orchestra was held back, sometimes almost too much. But the piano was certainly given the fore and Mr. Frank made the most of it. The endless figurations had clarity as well as sweep; the vocal lines really sang.

The highlight of the afternoon was Moussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition as orchestrated by Ravel. From start to finish, through every coloration and change of scene, Mr. Schippers had the orchestra and the audience in the palm of his hand. Little touches that are sometimes glossed over stood out with brilliant detail; most effective were the readings of Samuel Goldenburg, Limoges and the Hut on Fowl's Legs.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
AUG 1 1966

At Tanglewood

Schumann's Works Feature Program Set for Telecast

Tanglewood, Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Erich Leinsdorf and Thomas Schippers conducting.

FRANK N. PATTERSON

Music planned for summer days seems geared to brains in neutral. Whether this is due to the programmer's doubts of his audience's vitality, or perhaps to some such lack on his own, offers little if any solace. The listerner is bored, the composer eroded, the works debilitated.

Friday's weekend Prelude was entirely Schumann's. There were nine beautiful lieder sung velvet smooth by bass, Ara Berberian. These was a dreary Opus 46 for two cellos, two pianos and a French Horn. Of this Schumann observed: "It was something of the spirit of elegy. I think I was rather melancholy when I composed it." While this seemed an understatement, so went the weekend ironically seldom marshalling emotion deeper than dew.

There was Schumann's Concerto for Cello under Jules Eskin's bow, at its best. And near its best was Schumann's Introduction and Allegro appassionato for Piano and Orchestra with Lilian Kallir soloist, pumping sweet nuances, but little power into its themes. There was a fine performance by the Orchestra's concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, of Schomann's Fantasy for Violin and Orchestra. And before the weekend closed, conductor Thomas Schippers and piano soloist, Claude Frank, came to grips with Schumann's famous Concerto in A.

But by now, due to excessive use, the composer appears immodest. The irritating humming of Frank exasperates; lack of orchestral balance aggravates; the piece, despite its singular charm, has become exposed to an ear charged with boredom. An ear that hears the plaintive themes as lethargic; lament as naivete; and construction weaknesses as composition in need of glue. What all this doesn't do for entertainment, it does in injustice to Schumann.

Though Schumann was more than a thread through Tanglewood's disappointing program this weekend, the fault was not wholly his. There was some comparison, but little contrast, with Elgar's Varistions on an Original Theme and Moussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition. There were some glad moments with Smetana's Bartered Bride and a fair impression was produced by the orchestra laced with a lusty bevy of Tanglewood's Sirenes for the third of Debussy's Three Nocturnes.

But when the fresh romantic aroma of such a work as Dvorak's 8th Symphony becomes smogged by the rich incense of his equally romantic colleague's, the program is bound to be dull.

Otherwise, this week might be noted for the cameras peeking through walls at performers and its self-conscious audience, both in the bath of bright light. Explanation was found in leafing through the program (one tended to do much of this). The Bell Telephone Hour will telecast scenes over N.B.C. This should be most exciting; moths came from as far off as Connecticut.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
AUG 6 1966

They Pay for Music

In the world of entertainment and the arts, it is basic that the man who pays for a seat should be permitted to enjoy himself undisturbed. This cardinal rule was violated July 30 at a performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the great shed at Tanglewood, when the Bell Telephone Co. arranged for the performance to be televised in color.

The details of the grievances of a good number of the patrons are set forth in a letter from a Globe reader on this page today. His point is well made.

Everyone is grateful to the Bell Telephone Co. for the high quality of the programs it has brought as oases in the wasteland of television. The company's public relations suffered badly, however, so far as the patrons of the Boston Symphony in this instance were concerned.

Surely it would not be much of an additional cost to an already astronomical bill to buy out the house or refund the ticket money of the seat holders most affected or, in the future, to announce the days on which telecasts are to be made and so forewarn those who would prefer not to attend under the conditions created July 30 at Tanglewood.

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 5,168
AUG 1 1966

Sunglasses at Tanglewood Concert

LENOX — People who brought their sunglasses along to a concert at Tanglewood Saturday night were the most comfortable, as television cameras recorded part of the program for later reproduction on the Bell Telephone Hour. Camera floodlights were trained on the performers in such a way that part of the shed audience had difficulty seeing the orchestra without shielding their eyes. Those lucky enough to have sunglasses put them on; others used the printed programs as shields or just closed their eyes. After intermission, however, the TV cameramen had finished shooting and departed and things settled back to normal.

TIGHT BINDING

Springfield Herald
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Bi-Weekly
Circ. 111,573
AUG 4 1966

047

Last Friday at 7:00 P.M., the prelude concert included two pieces by Schumann: the Andante and Variations for 2 Pianos, 2 Cellos and Horn, and "The Lieders" featuring Ara Berberian, Bass, and Claude Frank, Piano. Schumann's Andante and Variations was composed at a time when he was suffering from exhaustion following the tremendous years of creation, 1840-42. Schumann said: "It has something of an elegy; I think I was rather melancholy when I composed it." The french horn and cellos were predominantly supporting the pianos. There was an interesting short movement of the two pianos beating lyrical heart beats with the cellos adding melancholic refrains in the background, while the french horn blasted periodic phrases of discontent.

JULES ESKIN
(photo byline)

Born in Philadelphia. Attended Curtis. Studied with Leonard Rose. Principal cellist of the Cleveland Orchestra in 1961. Presently principal cellist of Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1964.

The "Lieder" was romantic songs of unrequited love and suffering. Highlights were the boisterous, rollicking "clown's song", and the old folk tale of "Poor Peter", beginning in tongue-in-cheek gay waltz time, but ending in a sad lament.

EVENING CONCERT

The Evening Concert at 8:00 P.M. included Smetana, Debussy, Schumann, and Elgar. Smetana's Overture to "The Bartered Bride", a folk opera both in music and story, was performed at Tanglewood for the first time.

The opera opens with a village festival in Bohemia. A pretty peasant girl, Marenka Krusina is sad because her lover Jenik is a poor unknown orphan, and the village matchmaker is arranging her marriage with the son of a rich peasant, Micha Tobias. Tobias meets Marenka and tries to make love to her without realizing that she is his future bride. Marenka, however, guesses his identity and tries to "lead him on" to his self-destruction.

The Overture is based upon the themes of the Opera. It began briskly with perpetual rhythm between the violins and double basses. A sad refrain between the oboe and tympami conversed at the middle, and a steady martial beat rolled to a stirring finale.

Debussy's Three Nocturnes ("Clouds", "Festivals", and critical praise in its Paris premiere. It set up a new style of harmonic and modulatory liberation. "Clouds" render the aspect of the sky and the slow, solemn motion of grey softly touched with white. "Festivals" gives us the vibrating atmosphere with sudden flashes of light. "Sirens" depict the mysterious sea and rhythms amongst its waves.

The Women—only Chorus, sitting unseen throughout the orchestra, magically gave enchanting illusions of wailing as if arising from different sections of the music shed.

HIGHLIGHT OF THE EVENING

Next on the program was Schumann's Concerto for Violincello and Orchestra in A Minor, Op. 129, with cello soloist, Jules Eskin. Schumann wrote this concerto two months after he moved to Dusseldorf. Schumann, unequal tot he requirements of the position, mishandled himself resulting in his forced recognition and eventual mental breakdown and confinement.

Jules Eskin maintained this popular cello concerto as a slow lament, lyrical yet sad, but interpreted its vicissitudes of rhythmic themes with a heart-rending expressive vibrato toward a feverish melodramatic ::garment-rending" oratoria and brilliant finale. Eskin proudly "lamented" an almost flawless technique in the second and third movements, (the first we'll blame on the chilly evening) even charming a passing skunk nonchalantly passing through the middle aisle without any odoriferous "comment". A thunderous ovation helped warm an otherwise windy, chilly arctic evening.

has many happy, folk-tuned melodies and dancing rhythms and is solidly orchestrated.

Once again Erich Leinsdorf's Boston orchestra stole the attention from the soloists. But in this instance they shouldn't be blamed. They were given the interesting parts to play.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
AUG 4 1966

TANGLEWOOD REVIEWED

TANGLEWOOD
Friday — By R. H.

It was, for the most part, a well-played concert; but there was too much Schumann, in this listener's opinion, for one evening. By intermission of the second round he wished he had been among those who stayed away.

The opening number of the first program was the Schumann Andante for Two Pianos, Two Cellos, and Horn (Opus 46), a rambling, desultory kind of piece that was, within its own limitations, performed well. Lilian Kallir, the pianist, was the outstanding instrumentalist of the group.

Asa Berberian, bass, appeared next, singing nine Schumann lieder. The last was the well-known Die beiden Grenadiere, which the audience ate up. The cries of "Bravo!" were more numerous than usual; but even if deserved, they seemed strangely out of place at a recital of lieder. One wishes there were not quite so many of those types around who feel it their duty to show the rest of us how to take our culture seriously.

Part II began with Smetana's Overture to The Bartered Bride. Leinsdorf took it at break-neck speed; and that was good because it got it over with very quickly. The next work was the Schumann A Minor Concerto for Cello. It was the high point of the evening, played superbly by Jules Eskin of the Boston Symphony.

The Debussy Nocturnes — Fetes, Nuages, and Sirenes — were very precise, but not very interesting, except for the last. In it the women's voices, beautifully trained by Iva Dee Hiatt, were light and wonderfully Gallic in character.

Saturday — By D. D.

Weber's Freischutz Overture opened this evening's concert, devoted entirely to works by Romantic composers.

The two short compositions by Schumann, Introduction and Allegro Appassionato, with piano soloist Lilian Kallir, and Fantasia for Violin in C Major, with Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concert master, are curious examples of the composer's ventures during his depression.

Miss Kallir's playing, more than competent, succeeded at moments in achieving a fine intensity in music which any artist would find difficult to project. The Fantasia, much more dramatic in style and conception, was given a splendid performance by Mr. Silverstein. Here the solo instrument stands out indisputably as a virtuoso factor, the orchestra merely furnishing a kind of drab fill-in. His beautiful phrasing of complex rhythmic patterns, his superlative tone, focused complete attention on his solo part. It is regrettable that Schumann did not produce more for the violin.

If the first part of the program, except for Mr. Silverstein's work, failed to cause much of a stir, the evening was redeemed by a lusty reading of Dvorak's Symphony No. 8. Mr. Leinsdorf brought the orchestra to life in a welter of breathtaking sound, if a bit unrestrained, conveying nevertheless, in his own way, all the joy and melancholy of this great symphony.

Sunday — By A. C. S.

Thomas Schippers made his first appearance as a guest conductor at Tanglewood this afternoon. Although he has led the orchestra in other locales, this was a triumphant debut in the Berkshires. He began his program with a songful (if sometimes boisterous) reading of Rossini's Overture to "La Gazza Ladra."

Next came the Schumann Piano Concerto with Claude Frank as soloist. It was a fascinating performance, much more "romantic" in approach than one often hears. The orchestra was held back, sometimes almost too much. But the piano was certainly given the fore and Mr. Frank made the most of it. The endless figurations had clarity as well as sweep; the vocal lines really sang.

The highlight of the afternoon was Moussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition as orchestrated by Ravel. From start to finish, through every coloration and change of scene, Mr. Schippers had the orchestra and the audience in the palm of his hand. Little touches that are sometimes glossed over stood out with brilliant detail; most effective were the readings of Samuel Goldenburg, Limoges and the Hut on Fowl's Legs.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
AUG 1 1966

At Tanglewood

Schumann's Works Feature Program Set for Telecast

Tanglewood, Boston Symphony Orchestra with Erich Leinsdorf and Thomas Schippees conducting.

FRANK N. PATTERSON

Music planned summer days seems geared to brains in neutral. Whether this is due to the programmer's doubts, of his audience's vitality, or perhaps to some such lack on his own, offers little if any solace. The listerner is bored, the composer eroded, the works debilitated.

Friday's weekend Prelude was entirely Schumann's. There were nine beautiful lieder sung velvet smooth by bass, Ara Berberian. These was a dreary Opus 46 for two cellos, two pianos and a French Horn. Of this Schumann observed; "It was something of the spirit of elegy. I think I was rather melancholy wnen I composed it." While this seemed an understatement, so went the weekend ironically seldom marshalling emotion deeper than dew.

There was Schumann's Concerto for Cello under Jules Eskin's bow, at its best. And near its best was Schumann's Introduction and Allegro appassionato for Piano and Orchestra with Lilian Kallir soloist, pumping sweet nuances, but little power into its themes. There was a fine performance by the Orchestra's concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, of Schomann's Fantasy for Violin and Orchestra. And before the weekend closed, conductor Thomas Schippers and piano soloist, Claude Frank, came to grips with Schumann's famous Concerto in A.

But by now, due to excessive use, the composer appears immodest. The irritating humming of Frank exasperates; lack of orchestral balance aggravates; the piece, despite its singular charm, has become exposed to an ear charged with boredom. An ear that hears the plaintive themes as lethargic; lament as naivete; and construction weaknesses as composition in need of glue. What all this doesn't do for entertainment, it does in injustice to Schumann.

Though Schumann was more than a thread through Tanglewood's disappointing program this weekend, the fault was not wholly his. There was some comparison, but little contrast, with Elgar's Variations on an Original Theme and Moussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition. There were some glad moments with Smetana's Bartered Bride and a fair impression was produced by the orchestra laced with a lusty bevy of Tanglewood's Sirenes for the third of Debussy's Three Nocturnes.

But when the fresh romantic aroma of such a work as Dvorak's 8th Symphony becomes smogged by the rich incense of his equally romantic colleague's, the program is bound to be dull.

Otherwise, this week might be noted for the cameras peeking through walls at performers and its selfconscious audience, both in the bath of bright light. Explanation was found in leafing through the program (one tended to do much of this). The Bell Telephone Hour will telecast scenes over N.B.C. This should be most exciting, moths came from as far off as Connecticut.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
AUG 6 1966

They Pay for Music

In the world of entertainment and the arts, it is basic that the man who pays for a seat should be permitted to enjoy himself undisturbed. This cardinal rule was violated July 30 at a performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the great shed at Tanglewood, when the Bell Telephone Co. arranged for the performance to be televised in color.

The details of the grievances of a good number of the patrons are set forth in a letter from a Globe reader on this page today. His point is well made.

Everyone is grateful to the Bell Telephone Co. for the high quality of the programs it has brought as oases in the wasteland of television. The company's public relations suffered badly, however, so far as the patrons of the Boston Symphony in this instance were concerned.

Surely it would not be much of an additional cost to an already astronomical bill to buy out the house or refund the ticket money of the seat holders most affected or, in the future, to announce the days on which telecasts are to be made and so forewarn those who would prefer not to attend under the conditions created July 30 at Tanglewood.

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 5,168
AUG 1 1966

Sunglasses at Tanglewood Concert

LENOX — People who brought their sunglasses along to a concert at Tanglewood Saturday night were the most comfortable, as television cameras recorded part of the program for later reproduction on the Bell Telephone Hour. Camera floodlights were trained on the performers in such a way that part of the shed audience had difficulty seeing the orchestra without shielding their eyes. Those lucky enough to have sunglasses put them on; others used the printed programs as shields or just closed their eyes. After intermission, however, the TV cameramen had finished shooting and departed and things settled back to normal.

98

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Circ. 15,399

AUG 3 1966

Berkshire Festival Losing Some Of Its Initial Spark

By ESTHER WATSTEIN

It is too bad that the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood has lost that quality of experiment which characterized it years ago. It would be more than welcome to pick up a weekend program and find, among the familiar names and scores a new work, an initial performance, a new composer. It just doesn't seem to happen anymore. And neither, by the way, does the Festival audience seem to attract the young people anymore. It's too bad but there we were with another weekend of Schumann and Dvorak, the closest to anything remotely contemporary was Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition" (written in 1874) and Sunday's young conductor Thomas Schippers who seems to be pretty much of a classicist in spite of his 35 years.

Even the Boston Symphony seemed ever so slightly weary of it all. One would be hard put to claim that Saturday evening's performance oozed with excitement. Erich Leinsdorf conducted a very correct Weber overture to "Der Freischutz." Lillian Kallir played the Schumann introduction and Allegro appassionato piece for piano and orchestra in a very lady - like manner. She is a feminine pianist; graceful and delicate but dull. Then Joseph Silverstein, the concert master for the Symphony, performed Schumann's Fantasy for Violin in C Major. Again one wished Mr. Silverstein had a new work to perform. Mr. Leinsdorf pulled everything together somewhat with the closing offering of Dvorak's Symphony No. 8. This is an interesting work with lovely melodies and was performed with spirit. It saved the evening from the total boredom which was fast developing.

Sunday afternoon one hoped that Thomas Schippers would grab hold of this fine body of musicians and come through with something even slightly electrifying. Of course, Mr. Schippers is young and will no doubt be a fine conductor. As of now, he does extremely well with what is obvious but looses nuances of rhythm and melodic intent. Rossini's Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" opened the concert, then onto Schumann's piano concerto in A Minor performed by Claude Frank. Mr. Frank is an adequate pianist but one missed the brilliance which is in the work and Mr. Schippers slid over the fine rhythmic patterns which are in the orchestral body of the concerto. It was a very ordinary rendition.

Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition" is a fine, familiar orchestral fantasy and everyone had a good time. Mr. Schippers seemed more at home with this one and roused both orchestra and audience to a smashing climax with the "Great Gate at Kiev." It was full and rich and as said before Mr. Schippers does well with the obvious and "Pictures at an Exhibition" while a delightful impressionistic work is certainly an obvious one.

The Boston Symphony is a great orchestra, Tanglewood is one of the most advantageous settings in which to hear music. Mr. Leinsdorf is a proper, if academic conductor. All they need is a little spirit of adventure in programming to breathe some excitement into the Festival.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 61,129

AUG 1 1966

Music: Schippers Makes Berkshire Debut

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The most exciting concert we have heard at Tanglewood so far this summer was given yesterday afternoon with Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

It was a splendid program: Rossini's "La Gazza Ladra" Overture, Schumann's Paino Concerto in A minor, Opus 54, Claude Frank, soloist; Ravel's transcription of Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

The audience of 7,778 made a weekend total of 24,219. This was the closing concert of the Berkshire Music Festival's fifth week.

Schippers made his Tanglewood debut yeaterday as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony. He conducted the orchestra in Boston in 1958, 1959 and 1961. Tanglewood was familiar territory to Schippers. He was a student at the Berkshire Music Center 18 years ago. He is 36 years of age.

Energetic School

It required no more than the Rossini Overture to establish that Schippers belongs to the highly energetic school of young conductors. This in no sense depreciated his clarity of thought, complete lucidity of direction, and undeniable dedication to task.

It is not a disparaging comment that Schippers put on a great podium show yesterday. The orchestra went along with it, seemingly with more grace than at the rehearsal with Schippers on Saturday morning.;

No one who has heard the Boston Symphony play under Monteux, Leinsdorf, Ormandy or Munch was deceived into believing that some of the more elabcrate Schippers directives were necessary to produce maximum volume or technical brilliance.

Yet, Schippers' methods are not to be relegated to the flamboyant school that specializes in histrionics, exhortations, and superfluous gesture.

Schippers made everything look interesting, and difficult. The results justified it.

The orchestra gave a sound-glittering "Gazza Ladra." The opening snare-drum rolls were virtually a call to arms. The Rossini sparkle was there. Drive was president and excitement aplenty.

Piano Concerto

Conductor and orchestra gave Frank beautiful cooperation in the Shumann Piano Concerto. Best of all, it was not treated as a razzle-dazzle piece, but rather as a fount of poetry, periodically supplied with brilliance.

Frank made the Concerto sound more interesting than it looked. He exercised fruitful concern over singing melody, especially in the second movement.

There was close communion between soloist and orchestra in tonal properties, volume, design of phrases — and character of the work as a musical experience.

Although he is no virtuoso (evidenced in the competent but unglamorous playing of the first movement cadenza) his performance yesterday identified him with the sound, musicianly young pianists.

Wednesday

Schippers extracted all the vitality to be had from Moussorgsky's "Pictures."

The 'Gnomes" exuded deviltry, "Catacombs" was super-lugubrious, "Baba-Yaga" carried on with nefarious mischief, and the "Great Gate of Kiev" was a huge edifice of stentorean, brassy sound.

Applause at the end was the only comparable volume.

Wednesday night, Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops at Tanglewood. Highlight is the premiere of "Tanglewood Concerto" by Sauter with Stan Getz as saxophone soloist.

The Berkshire Festival resumes Friday night. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct the Boston Symphony in the second "Romeo and Juliet" Suite by Prokofieff, and Schumann's Fourth Symphony. Soloist for the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto will be Leslie Parnas.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771

AUG 1 1966

Schumann Concertos Highlight Tanglewood's Weekend Program

Four Schumann concertos were played by various soloists at Tanglewood this past weekend in the fifth week of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival.

Attendance for the Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts and the open rehearsal Saturday morning totaled 24,219. The Festival continues to be blessed with fine weather and those armed with covers to ward off the evening dew of the Berkshires find listening from the lawn to be rewarding. On Sunday afternoons, of course, the lawns are apt to be filled.

On Friday night Erich Leinsdorf led the orchestra in a romantic program highlighted by the Schumann Concerto for Cello and Orchestra, with first cellist Julius Eskin as soloist. The Tanglewood Choir, a splendid choral group, appeared in Debussey's "Three Nocturnes," inconspicuously seated among the musicians and contributing girls' voices to "Sirenes." Smetana's overture to "The Bartered Bride" and the "Enigma" variations of Elgar completed the program.

In contrast to the familiar music of the main concert, the evening prelude offered Schumann's Andante and Variation for two pianos, two cellos and horn, with Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir at the pianos and a group of songs by Schumann sung by Ara Berberian, bass.

Saturday evening Leinsdorf again conducted, with Miss Kallir joining with the orchestra for Concert Piece for Piano and Orchestra by Schumann, and Joseph Silverstein appearing as violin soloist in "Fantasy for Violin" by the same composer. Weber's overture to "Die Freischutz" opened the concert. The climax was the final presentation, Dvorak's brilliant Symphony No. 8.

Thomas Schippers, leader of the New York City Center Opera Company, was guest conductor on Sunday afternoon. The Shumann Concerto for Piano in A Minor, played by Claude Frank, was quietly sandwiched in between two flashy showpieces, Rossini's "La Gazza Ladra", and "Pictures at an Exhibition", by Mossorgsky, arranged by Ravel. Young Mr. Schippers brought out all the color in both pieces.

The coming week at Tanglewood wil include the annual Pops concert on Wednesday night, with Arthur Fiedler on the podium and Stan Goetz, saxaphonist, as guest artist. The following Wednesday the Tanglewood gala program will be staged, with fireworks and a narration by Sen. Ted Kennedy added to the concert by the Boston Symphony for extra attractions.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 61,129

AUG 1 1966

Music: Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

Reprinted from the final edition of the Sunday Telegram

by RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Those who protest familiar programs of "old chestnuts" were somewhat appeased at Tanglewood last night. The Berkshire Music Festival audience numbered 7,307.

Erich Leinsdorf conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Weber's "Der Freischutz" Overture, and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8 in G Major, Opus 88, sometimes programmed as Symphony No. 4, also as the "English Symphony."

Lilian Kallir was soloist in Schumann's Concert Piece for Piano and Orchestra, Opus 92. Schumann's Fantasy for Violin in C Major, Opus 131, had concertmaster Joseph Silverstein for soloist.

Last night there were complaints over glaring lights that were turned on the audience and remained so for about 45 minutes of concert time. The audience was being televised for the Bell Telephone Hour. When they were finally turned off, there was no mistaking audience approval.

The "Freischutz" was presented as much more than the attention-getter that it is. It received a well-integrated performance. Horns and low strings played the introductory measures, clearly and securely.

Main body of the Overture arrived loudly. Thereafter, the "good versus evil" theme was followed through with dispatch and impact. Leinsdorf developed the Overture as well-prepared drama with little moderation in emotion, stateliness or brilliance.

Sweet-sounding and occasionally substantial as Schumann's Concert Piece sounded, Miss Kallir did little more than just play the notes. Her lightness of touch was perfectly suited to the introduction, reminiscent of Mendelssohn's lighter vein.

The pianist's technique was sufficient to cover some of Schumann's more energetic sequences. It was neat playing but plunged to no depth. Leinsdorf saw to it that the orchestra did not intrude on the soloist's surfaceful tone.

Although some brass passages were out of focus with the pianist's dainty style, Leinsdorf apparently tried to introduce added stamina wherever the orchestral score permitted.

Violin Fantasy, Opus 131 is also a lesser item in the Shcumann repertory. We assume it was included last night to help carry out this festival's romantic concerto theme.

Beyond that, it served little additional purpose than to confirm that Silverstein has enough artistic integrity to play the work with security and honesty.

For Silverstein, the work was of comparatively minor technical demand. He played the florid passages with agility, a secure bow, and occasinal wrong notes. His sense of phrase was excellent.

The orchestral background was sketchy, but served its purpose in punctuating the soloist's technical sprees and giving them a sense of continuity.

99

Berkshire Debut

Monteux, Leinsdorf, Ormandy or Munch was deceived into believing that some of the more elabcrate Schippers directives were necessary to produce maximum volume or technical brilliance.

Yet, Schippers' methods are not to be relegated to the flamboyant school that specializes in histrionics, exhortations, and superfluous gesture.

Schippers made everything look interesting, and difficult. The results justified it.

The orchestra gave a sound-glittering "Gazza Ladra." The opening snare-drum rolls were virtually a call to arms. The Rossini sparkle was there. Drive was president and excitement aplenty.

Piano Concerto

Conductor and orchestra gave Frank beautiful cooperation in the Schumann Piano Concerto. Best of all, it was not treated as a razzle-dazzle piece, but rather as a fount of poetry, periodically supplied with brilliance.

Frank made the Concerto sound more interesting than it looked. He exercised fruitful concern over singing melody, especially in the second movement.

There was close communion between soloist and orchestra in tonal properties, volume, design of phrases — and character of the work as a musical experience.

Although he is no virtuoso (evidenced in the competent but unglamorous playing of the first movement cadenza) his performance yesterday identified him with the sound, musicianly young pianists.

Wednesday

Schippers extracted all the vitality to be had from Moussorgsky's "Pictures."

The "Gnomes" exuded devilry. "Catacombs" was super-lugubrious. "Baba-Yaga" carried on with nefarious mischief, and the "Great Gate of Kiev" was a huge edifice of stentorean, brassy sound.

Applause at the end was the only comparable volume.

Wednesday night, Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops at Tanglewood. Highlight is the premiere of "Tanglewood Concerto" by Sauter with Stan Getz as saxophone soloist.

The Berkshire Festival resumes Friday night. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct the Boston Symphony in the second "Romeo and Juliet" Suite by Prokofieff, and Schumann's Fourth Symphony. Soloist for the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto will be Leslie Parnas.

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 25,302

AUG 3 1966

Tanglewood Hails Boston Orchestra

In keeping with Erich Leinsdorf's theme of the "Romantic Concerto" this season, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's performances last weekend at Tanglewood featured mainly the works of Robert Schumann.

His famous Cello Concerto highlighted Friday evening's concert, with Jules Eskin as the soloist. Smetana's Overture to the "Bartered Bride" started the program and was the first performance of this work at the Festival.

Saturday evening's concert featured two of Schumann's lesser known concertos, with Lillian Kallir playing the Introduction and Allegro Appassionato for piano and orchestra, Op. 92, generally known as "Konzenstuck." Miss Kallien is a gifted and sensitive artist, whose performance was gracious and charming enough, but the music to this reviewer seemed hardly worth the efforts of both orchestra and soloist.

Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of Boston, was the soloist in Schumann's Fantasy for Violin in C major, Op. 131, and this music while well-performed seemed inconsequential. Silverstein's rendition was mild and not too moving. This was also a "first" performance for the Festival. Saturday's concert started with a spirited Overture to "Der Freischutz" by Weber. The last half of the concert was devoted to Dvorak's Symphony No. 9 in G major, Op. 88. This was a welcome and delightful experience with its lilting folk tunes and country dances orchestrated in the grand, full style of Dvorak, brilliantly performed by Leinsdorf and his virtuoso musicians.

Although a little of Schumann goes a long way for this reviewer, Sunday afternoon's performance of the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor, Op. 54, as performed by Claude Frank was the highlight of the weekend. Frank performed with great sensitivity and lyricism, poetic and brilliant. It was a poignant and moving performance of Schumann's most popular concerto. The cello accompaniment of the orchestra was memorable.

Rare Treat

Thomas Schippers was guest conductor at Sunday's concert which began with another first performance at Tanglewood of Rossini's Overture to "La Gazza Ladra," which was a rare treat. It was also an elperience hearing and seeing Schippers conduct the Boston Symphony, as he is one of the talented young men who has had a remarkable career as a conductor. He is only 36 years old and began his conducting career in 1948 when he conducted the Philadelphia Orchestra. He has a very sensitive and graceful style, is very handsome and a delight to watch. He has conducted the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, also the New York City Opera and the Metropolitan Opera orchestra. He also accompanied Leonard Bernstein with the New York Philharmonic on tour abroad. He is quite familiar with the Boston Symphony as he has conducted them numerous times.

The last half of the concert was devoted to the monumental "Pictures at an Exhibition" by Moussorgsky, as arranged for orchestra by Maurice Ravel, which is the most popular and lasting of the orchestrations for these pieces that were originally composed by Moussorgsky for the piano, in June, 1874. Maurice Ravel made his orchestral setting of them in 1923 and the first performance of this orchestration was at a "Koussevitzky Concert" in Paris, May 3rd, 1923. Serge Koussevitzky first played the suite at the Boston Symphony concerts on Nov. 7, 1924.

Four Concerts

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours, Friday at 9 p.m. (with the special Prelude concert at 7 p.m.), Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood, Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. with Arthur Fiedler conducting, and the famous saxophonist, Stan Getz as the featured soloist.

The noted music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will make his first appearance at Tanglewood and Friday evening's program will begin with Prokofieff's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Skrowaczewski and the orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Seans Cello Concerto.

Saturday evening's concert, to be conducted by Erich Leinsdorf, will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include Jane Marsh, recent 1st prize winner at the Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow, also Jeanne Simon, Batyah Godfrey, John Reardon, Beverly Sills, Mordecai Rollin, Judith Raskin, Robert Jones, Ara Berberian, Ezio Flagello and Anne Elgar.

For Sunday afternoon's concert Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint - Sens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint - Seans to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. The program will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethovan's Symphony No. 3.

An amusing sidelight of the Festival is the unwelcome attendance of a skunk who apparently is a music enthusiast. He made his appearance quite unobtrusively the night Van Cliburn was performing two weeks ago, and reappeared last Friday night. According to the staff, there are actually three skunks living on the grounds, and they have decided that one of them is a music lover and probably used to the activity at Tanglewood. He quitely entered into the shed and just as quietly slinked away, harming no one.

The perfect weather last weekend was most conductive to the enjoyment of the musical fresco, as there were hundreds of people on the grounds surrounding the shed, and many picnickers. SCM

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 94,357

AUG 1 1966

The Evening Gazette

Schumann Featured at Tanglewood

By JOHN F. KYES
Gazette Music Critic

LENOX — The weekend at Tanglewood did not produce any record-sized audiences, though the fare was attractive in its field. Prominence was given to the music of Schumann. Soloists from within the orchestra were Joseph Silverstein, concert master and Jules Eskin, cello, and guest artists were Lilian Kallir and Claude Frank, pianists. Many others were heard in the Weekend Prelude on Friday, and the Tanglewood Choir trained by Iva Dee Hiatt took part that night in the main concert.

Erich Leinsdorf, conductor Friday and Saturday, also presented music of Smetana, Debussy, Elgar, Weber, and Dvorak.

The Sunday concert brought as conductor Thomas Schippers, who despite his youthful appearance has gone far since he led at the Berkshire Music Center in 1946. He at once made a favorable impression in Rossini's Overture to "The Thieving Magpie," the Boston Symphony's sonorities of brasses and drums being spectacular in the opening and closing portions, with effective handling of woodwind and string delicacies in the mid-section.

Magnificent Climax

Schippers' other orchestral choice was the set of "Pictures at an Exhibition," Moussorgsky's piano lore pieces as transcribed for orchestra by Ravel. These have been heard often and take exceptional handling to avoid an occasional letdown. Truly magnificent was the climax reached in the final "The Great Gate of Kiev," and the preceding "The Hut on Fowls' Legs" was replete with exotic excitement, subsiding at times into mystic depths. I liked also "The Catacombs" and the women scolding in the marketplace of Limoges.

The children playing in the Tuilleries did not seem to have their wonted light-heartedness. The explosive music of "The Gnome" was sometimes confusing in intent. Some other familiar bits had an approach differing from the usual.

Schippers did his most perfect work with the orchestra in seconding the fine playing of Claude Frank in the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor. The opening movement had considerable drive in both the piano and the orchestra, with its sentimental aspects under a pleasant degree of control. The Intermezzo's "Andantino grazioso" at once opened the door into a different world, of exquisite sound. The concluding "Allegro vivace" had both elasticity and élan. This well-known concerto was made to sound in its best estate, warm and direct with a wealth of detailed beauties and no small degree of cooperative skill.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404

AUG 11 1966

Unkindly Light

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

As a lifetime advertising man, I suggest that Bell Telephone and the BSO July 30 gave a horrible example of disregard of public interest.

Especially as I am a 25-year purchaser of season tickets to the Berkshire Festival, I feel I was cheated for the purpose of a few possible moments "background" in the Bell Telephone Hour.

My seat was in an area flooded with overhead lighting (which, while annoying, was endurable), but this letter is due to the fact that from the left corner of the stage and from the high central TV platform came blinding light directly at me and hundreds of other paying "patrons," from two big searchlights. In spite of general complaint these stayed on through the first two numbers, nearly half the whole program. Only about five minutes of this agony was used.

BSO and Bell lost a lot of good will. The orchestra and poor soloist for the first two numbers might as well have been from a couple of junior high schools. Leinsdorf's meticulous training and conducting were utterly wasted. The players could hardly even be seen, without careful shading of eyes; the effect of the music for which I'd traveled and paid was nil, or worse.

It is ironic that the Festival program says, "Members of the audience who must leave before the end of concerts are earnestly requested to do so between numbers, not during the performance . . ." in order not to disturb a fraction of the audience. ". . . The management of the BSO kindly requests that . . . patrons attend the concerts in appropriate concert dress," in order, I suppose, not to offend Boston sensibilities.

Even more ironic is the fact that Bell Telephone is advertising how sorry they are that phone patrons get occasional unsolicited phone calls from salesmen or auto [illegible].

ARTHUR E. HOBBS
Prospect Hill,
Stockbridge

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,259

AUG 17 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,221

AUG 18 1966

Letter by Hobbs Stirs the Editors Of Boston Globe

Arthur E. Hobbs, advertising manager and vice president of this paper just came back from a few weeks at his summer cottage in Stockbridge, where, he attended performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

At the July 30 performance he was horrified to find himself in an area flooded with overhead lighting, and, as he said in a letter to The Boston Globe:

"from the left corner of the stage and from the high central TV platform came blinding light directly at me and hundreds of other paying patrons, from two big searchlights. In spite of general complaint these stayed on through the first two numbers, nearly half the whole program." The Bell Telephone company, which was televising this evening at Tanglewood, used only about five minutes of this footage in its show.

"BSO and Bell lost a lot of good will . . . Leinsdorf's meticulous training and conducting were utterly wasted . . . the effect of the music for which I'd traveled and paid for was nil, or worse. . . .

"In justice you should . . . pay for our being unwilling actors on your program; compensate for invasion of rights without due legal release; and more important, apologize generally and promise never to do it again. . . ."

On Saturday, Aug. 6, The Globe not only published the letter by Mr. Hobbs but agreed with it heartily, beginning with "In the world of entertainment and the arts, it is basic that the man who pays for a seat should be permitted to enjoy himself undisturbed. This cardinal rule was violated July 30 at a performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, when the Bell Telephone Company arranged for the performance to be televised in color.

"Th details of the greivances of a good number of the patrons are set forth in a letter from a Globe reader on this page today. His point is well made. . . .

"Surely it would not be much of an additional cost to an already astronomical bill to buy out the house or refund the ticket money of the seat holders most affected, or, in the future to announce the days on which telecasts are to be made, and so forewarn those who would prefer not to attend under the conditions created July 30 at Tanglewood."

99

s Berkshire Debut

59 Monteux, Leinsdorf, Ormandy or Munch was deceived into be, lieving that some of the more elabcrate Schippers directives were necessary to produce maximum volume or technical brilliance.

Yet, Schippers' methods are not to be relegated to the flamboyant school that special- izes in histrionics, exhortations, and superfluous gesture.

Schippers made everything look interesting, and difficult. The results justified it.

The orchestra gave a sound- glittering "Gazza Ladra." The opening snare-drum rolls were virtually a call to arms. The Rossini sparkle was there. Drive was president and ex- citement aplenty.

Piano Concerto

Conductor and orchestra gave Frank beautiful cooperation in the Shumann Piano Concerto. Best of all, it was not treated as a razzle-dazzle piece, but rather as a fount of poetry, period- ically supplied with brilliance.

Frank made the Concerto sound more interesting than it looked. He exercised fruitful concern over singing melody, especially in the second move- ment.

There was close communion between soloist and orchestra in tonal properties, volume, design of phrases — and character of the work as a musical ex- perience.

Although he is no virtuoso (evidenced in the competent but unglamorous playing of the first movement cadenza) his per- formance yesterday identified him with the sound, musicianly young pianists.

Wednesday

Schippers extracted all the vi- tality to be had from Moussorgsky's "Pictures."

The "Gnomes" exuded deviltry, "Catacombs" was su- per-lugubrious, "Baba-Yaga" carried on with nefarious mis- chief, and the "Great Gate of Kiev" was a huge edifice of stentorean, brassy sound.

Applause at the end was the only comparable volume.

Wednesday night, Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops at Tanglewood. Highlight is the premiere of "Tanglewood Concerto" by Sauter with Stan Getz as saxophone soloist.

The Berkshire Festival re- sumes Friday night, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct the Boston Symphony in the second "Romeo and Juliet" Suite by Prokofieff, and Schumann's Fourth Symphony. Soloist for the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto will be Leslie Parnas.

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 25,302
AUG 3 1966

Tanglewood Hails Boston Orchestra

In keeping with Erich Leins- dorf's theme of the "Romantic Concerto" this season, the Bos- ton Symphony Orchestra's per- formances last weekend at Tan- glewood featured mainly the works of Robert Schumann.

His famous Cello Concerto highlighted Friday evening's concert, with Jules Eskin as the soloist. Smetana's Overture to the "Bartered Bride" started the program and was the first performance of this work at the Festival.

Saturday evening's concert featured two of Schumann's les- ser known concertos, with Lil- ian Kallir playing the Introduc- tion and Allegro Appassion- ato for piano and orchestra, Op. 92, generally known as "Konzen- stuck." Miss Kallien is a gifted and sensitive artist, whose per- formance was gracious and charming enough, but the music to this reviewer seemed hardly worth the efforts of both orches- tra and soloist.

Joseph Silverstein, concert- master of Boston, was the soloist in Schumann's Fantasy for Violin in C major, Op. 131, and this music while well-per- formed seemed inconsequential. Silverstein's rendition was mild and not too moving. This was also a "first" performance for the Festival. Saturday's concert started with a spirited Over- ture to "Der Freischutz" by We- ber. The last half of the concert was devoted to Dvorak's Sym- phony No. 9 in G major, Op. 88. This was a welcome and de- lightful experience with its lilt- ing folk tunes and country dances orchestrated in the grand, full style of Dvorak, brilliantly performed by Leins- dorf and his virtuoso musicians.

Although a little of Schumann goes a long way for this review- er, Sunday afternoon's perform- ance of the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor, Op. 54, as performed by Claude Frank was the highlight of the weekend. Frank performed with great sensitivity and lyricism, poetic and brilliant. It was a poignant and moving performance of Schumann's most popular con- certo. The cello accompaniment of the orchestra was memora- ble.

Rare Treat

Thomas Schippers was guest conductor at Sunday's concert which began with another first performance at Tanglewood of Rossini's Overture to "La Gaz- za Ladra," which was a rare treat. It was also an elperi- ence hearing and seeing Schip- pers conduct the Boston Symp- hony, as he is one of the talent- ed young men who has had a remarkable career as a con- ductor. He is only 36 years old and began his conducting car- eer in 1948 when he conducted the Philadelphia Orchestra. He has a very sensitive and grace- ful style, is very handsome and a delight to watch. He has con- ducted the New York Philharm- onic Orchestra, also the New York City Opera and the Met- ropolitan Opera orchestra. He also accompanied Leonard Ber- stein with the New York Phil- harmonic on tour abroad. He is quite familiar with the Boston Symphony as he has conducted them numerous times.

The last half of the concert was devoted to the monumental "Pictures at an Exhibition" by Moussorgsky, as arranged for orchestra by Maurice Ravel, which is the most popular and lasting of the orchestrations for these pieces that were original- ly composed by Moussorgsky for the piano, in June, 1874. Maurice Ravel made his or- chestral setting of them in 1923 and the first performance of this orchestration was at a "Koussevitzky Concert" in Par- is, May 3rd, 1923. Serge Kous- sevitzky first played the suite at the Boston Symphony con- certs on Nov. 7, 1924.

Four Concerts

Four major orchestral con- certs will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Fes- tival at Tanglewood. Three Bos- ton Symphony Orchestra pro- grams will be given at the reg- ular weekend hours, Friday at 9 p.m. (with the special Pre- lude concert at 7 p.m.), Satur- day at 8 p.m. and Sunday after- noon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the an- nual Boston Pops at Tangle- wood, Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. with Arthur Fiedler con- ducting, and the famous sax- ophonist, Stan Getz, as the fea- tured solist.

The noted music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, will be the guest conductor at Tan- glewood for the Friday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. This is his first appearance at Tanglewood and Friday eve- ning's program will begin with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Les- lie Parnas will then join Skrow- aczewski and the orchestra for a performance of the Saint- Seans Cello Concerto.

Saturday evening's concert, to be conducted by Erich Leins- dorf, will be devoted complete- ly to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include: Jane Marsh, recent 1st prize winner at the Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow, also Joanna Simon, Batyah Godfrey, John Reardon, Beverly Sills, Mordecai Sha- dith Raskin, Robert Jones, Ara Berberian, Ezio Flagello and Anne Elgar.

For Sunday afternoon's con- cert Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint - Sens Piano Concer- to No. 4. The two concerti by Saint - Seans to be performed this week continue the sum- mer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. The program will also include Me- dea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethovan's Symphony No. 3.

An amusing sidelight of the Festival is the unwelcome at- tendance of a skunk who ap- parently is a music enthusiast. He made his appearance quite unobtrusively the night Van Cli- burn was performing two weeks ago, and reappeared last Fri- day night. According to the staff, there are actually three skunks living on the grounds, and they have decided that one of them is a music lover and probably used to the activity at Tanglewood. He quitely en- tered into the shed and just as quietly slinked away, harming no one.

The perfect weather last week- end was most conductive to the enjoyment of the musical fresco, as there were hundreds of peo- ple on the grounds surrounding the shed, and many picnickers. SCM

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 94,357
AUG 1 1966

Schumann Featured at Tanglewood

By JOHN F. KYES
Gazette Music Critic

LENOX — The weekend at Tanglewood did not produce any record-sized audiences, though the fare was attractive in its field. Prominence was given to the music of Schumann. Soloists from within the orchestra were Joseph Silverstein, concert mas- ter and Jules Eskin, cello, and guest artists were Lilian Kallir and Claude Frank, pianists. Many others were heard in the Weekend Prelude on Friday, and the Tanglewood Choir trained by Iva Dee Hiatt took part that night in the main con- cert.

Erich Leinsdorf, conductor Friday and Saturday, also pre- sented music of Smetana, De- bussy, Elgar, Weber, and Dvo- rak.

The Sunday concert brought as conductor Thomas Schippers, who despite his youthful appear- ance has gone far since he stud- ied at the Berkshire Music Cen- ter in 1948. He at once made a favorable impression in Ros- sini's Overture to "The Thiev- ing Magpie," the Boston Sym- phonys' sonorities of brasses and drums being spectacular in the opening and closing por- tions, with effective handling of woodwind and string delicacies in the mid-section.

Magnificent Climax

Schippers' other orchestral choice was the set of "Pictures at an Exhibition," Moussorgsky's pianoforte pieces as transcribed for orchestra by Ravel. These have been heard often and take exceptional han- dling to avoid an occasional let- down. Truly magnificent was the climax reached in the final "The Great Gate of Kiev," and the preceding "The Hut on Fowls' Legs" was replete with exotic excitement, subsiding at times into mystic depths. I liked also "The Catacombs" and the women scolding in the market- place of Limoges.

The children playing in the Tuilleries did not seem to have their wonted light-heartedness. The explosive music of "The Gnome" was sometimes confus- ing in intent. Some other famil- iar bits had an approach differ- ing from the usual.

Schippers did his most perfect work with the orchestra in sec- onding the fine playing of Claude Frank in the Schumann Piano Concerto in A minor. The opening movement had consid- erable drive in both the piano and the orchestra, with its sen- timental aspects under a pleas- ant degree of control. The Inter- mezzo's "Andantino grazioso" at once opened the door into a different world, of exquisite sound. The concluding "Allegro vivace" had both elasticity and elan. This well-known concerto was made to sound in its best estate, warm and direct with a wealth of detailed beauties and no small degree of cooperative skill.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
AUG 11 1966

Unkindly Light

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

As a lifetime advertising man I suggest that Bell Telephone and the BSO July 30 gave a hor- rible example of disregard of public interest.

Especially as I am a 25-year purchaser of season tickets to the Berkshire Festival, I feel I was cheated for the purpose of a few possible moments "back- ground" in the Bell Telephone Hour.

My seat was in an area flood- ed with overhead lighting (which, while annoying, was en- durable), but this letter is due to the fact that from the left cor- ner of the stage and from the high central TV platform came blinding light directly at me and hundreds of other paying "pa- trons," from two big search- lights. In spite of general com- plaint these stayed on through the first two numbers, nearly half the whole program. Only about five minutes of this agony was used.

BSO and Bell lost a lot of good will. The orchestra and poor soloist for the first two numbers might as well have been from a couple of junior high schools. Leinsdorf's meti- culous training and conducting were utterly wasted. The play- ers could hardly even be seen, without careful shading of eyes; the effect of the music for which I'd traveled and paid was nil, or worse.

It is ironic that the Festival program says, "Members of the audience who must leave before the end of concerts are earnest- ly requested to do so between numbers, not during the perfor- mance . . . " in order not to disturb a fraction of the au- dience. ". . . The management of the BSO kindly requests that . . . patrons attend the concerts in appropriate concert dress," in order, I suppose, not to of- fend Boston sensibilities.

Even more ironic is the fact that Bell Telephone is advertis- ing how sorry they are that phone patrons get occasional unsolicited phone calls from salesmen or nuts.

ARTHUR E. HOBBS
Prospect Hill,
Stockbridge

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,259
AUG 17 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,221
AUG 18 1966

Letter by Hobbs Stirs the Editors Of Boston Globe

Arthur E. Hobbs, advertising manager and vice president of this paper just came back from a few weeks at his sum- mer cottage in Stockbridge, where, he attended perform- ances of the Boston Sym- phony Orchestra at Tangle- wood.

At the July 30 performance he was horrified to find him- self in an area flooded with overhead lighting, and, as he said in a letter to The Boston Globe:

"from the left corner of the stage and from the high cen- tral TV platform came blind- ing light directly at me and hundreds of other paying patrons, from two big search- lights. In spite of general complaint these stayed on through the first two numbers, nearly half the whole pro- gram." The Bell Telephone company, which was televising this evening at Tanglewood, used only about five minutes of this footage in its show.

"BSO and Bell lost a lot of good will . . . Leinsdorf's meticulous training and con- ducting were utterly wasted . . . the effect of the music for which I'd traveled and paid for was nil, or worse. . . .

"In justice you should . . . pay for our being unwilling actors on your program; com- pensate for invasion of rights without due legal release; and more important, apologize generally and promise never to do it again. . . ."

On Saturday, Aug. 6, The Globe not only published the letter by Mr. Hobbs but agreed with it heartily, beginning with "In the world of enter- tainment and the arts, it is basic that the man who pays for a seat should be permitted to enjoy himself undisturbed. This cardinal rule was vio- lated July 30 at a performance of the Boston Symphony Or- chestra, when the Bell Tele- phone Company arranged for the performance to be tele- vised in color.

"Th details of the greivances of a good number of the patrons are set forth in a let- ter from a Globe reader on this page today. His point is well made. . . .

"Surely it would not be much of an additional cost to an already astronomical bill to buy out the house or refund the ticket money of the seat holders most affected, or, in the future, to announce the days on which telecasts are to be made, and so fore- warn those who would prefer not to attend under the con- ditions created July 30 at Tanglewood."

100

SIXTH WEEK - AUGUST 5, 6, AND 7

AMSTERDAM, N. Y.
RECORDER & DEMOCRAT
D. 13,500

JUL 25 1966

Tanglewood's Busiest Week Features Pops, Symphony

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Aug. 1-7. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program, conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

The program for Friday, Aug. 5, conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will begin with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet." Cellist Leslie Parnas will join the orchestra for Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woltach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608, by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's (Aug. 6) concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Wednesday (Aug. 3) Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. As always, Fiedler will surprise the audience with several encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The two and a half hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will begin at 10:30 on the morning of Aug. 6.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will be heard in the chamber music program on Tuesday (Aug. 2) evening. Miss Curtin is making several appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer, but Tuesday's concert will be her only full length recital.

The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be invited by Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Batyah Godfrey, Joanna Simon and Miss Marsh, and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Rico Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday (Aug. 7) afternoon's concert Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's theme of the romantic concerto. This concert will also include Medek's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on August 3 Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. As always, Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The two and a half hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will begin at 10:30 on the morning of Aug. 6.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will be heard in the chamber music program on Tuesday (Aug. 2) evening. Miss Curtin is making several appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer, but Tuesday's concert will be her only full length recital.

The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be invited by Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Batyah Godfrey, Joanna Simon and Miss Marsh, and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Rico Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday (Aug. 7) afternoon's concert Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's theme of the romantic concerto. This concert will also include Medek's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on August 3 Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. As always, Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The two and a half hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will begin at 10:30 on the morning of Aug. 6.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will be heard in the chamber music program on Tuesday (Aug. 2) evening. Miss Curtin is making several appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer, but Tuesday's concert will be her only full length recital.

The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be invited by Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Batyah Godfrey, Joanna Simon and Miss Marsh, and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Rico Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday (Aug. 7) afternoon's concert Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's theme of the romantic concerto. This concert will also include Medek's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on August 3 Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. As always, Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

Minneapolis Tribune
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
D. 230,485 SUN. 666,874

JUL 17 1966

Skrowaczewski Highly Praised by Critics in South America

Conductor Stanislaw Skrowaczewski charmed a number of the critics on his recent concert tour of South America with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

"La Nacion" in Buenos Aires, Argentina, called him "one of the most brilliant conductors of his generation. He knows how to give colorful and distinctive interpretations and he is scrupulous in his attention to details."

Said La Prensa, "With Skrowaczewski the orchestra sounded different than when Ormandy conducted . . . more precise and ordered."

El Mercurio in Santiago, Chile, reported that Skrowaczewski "took advantage of the exemplary educational labor of Ormandy with the orchestra and did whatever he wanted with the ensemble. The strength of the maestro (Skrowaczewski), his many hues and power of synthesis, were shown in all the pieces of the program."

Skrowaczewski will be guest conductor with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Aug. 5 and 7 and has been invited to conduct the Philadelphia Orchestra at its first summer festival next summer at Saratoga, N.Y.

Music Notes

News and Comment by Allan Holbert, the Minneapolis Tribune music critic.

The Ann Arbor News
ANN ARBOR, MICH.
D. 33,162

JULY 20 1966

Pianist Johannesen To Play Monday

Grant Johannesen, American pianist, will give the concluding program in the Summer Concert Series of four piano recitals at the University at 8:30 p.m. Monday in Rackham Auditorium, under the auspices of the University Musical Society.

The program will be: Sonata No. 3 in B-flat by Paul Hindemith; "Gaspard de la Nuit" by Ravel; and "Les Preludes, Opus 22 (complete) by Chopin.

This is Johannesen's first recital in Ann Arbor. He previously appeared here performing concertos with the Philadelphia Orchestra at the Ann Arbor May Festivals of 1955 and 1963.

Johannesen is a native of Salt Lake City. His early training took place in his native town. A precocious [illegible] at seven years of age, he began [illegible] neighborhood teacher when he was six.

At 18 he continued his work in New York, then went to Europe for scholarship at Osnabrück, Belgium. He has also been recipient of the Harriet Cohen International Award given annually in London for "outstanding artistry in performance."

Since his New York debut Johannesen has appeared with all the top orchestras in this country and is frequently engaged by the major symphonic organizations of Europe and South America.

He has played at such recognized music festivals as Aix-en-Provence, Amsterdam, Bergen, Helsinki and Oslo. For the last five seasons he has been artist-in-residence at Colorado's Aspen Festival. He has also played at the Hollywood Bowl, Ravinia and other U.S. summer festivals.

He will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Aug. 7 at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

His current season was launched with another of his frequent appearances on The Bell Telephone Hour. In addition, his schedule includes three performances with the New York Philharmonic, three with the Buffalo Philharmonic and two with the Music Aeterna Orchestra, as part of the Metropolitan Museum of Art series.

For ticket information, contact the office of the University Musical Society in Burton Tower.

News-Advertiser
WESTFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 3,577

JUL 28 1966

Tanglewood Will Offer Variety Of Specialties During Week

Tanglewood — Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday, August 5 at 9 p.m., Saturday, August 6 at 8 p.m., and Sunday, August 7 afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday, August 3. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" on Saturday evening, Aug. 6.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin August 5's program with Prokofiev's [illegible] from "Romeo and Juliet." Cellist Leslie Parnas will join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The weekend prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woltach, and Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

August 6's concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey, and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Rico Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For August 7's afternoon's concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medek's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on August 3 Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. As always, Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,105

JUL 27 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,221

JUL 28 1966

BEVERLY SILLS, soprano with the New York City Opera Company, has established her reputation singing entirely in the United States. She will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich [illegible] Music Director, at Tanglewood in the role of "Queen of the Night" in Mozart's Opera, "The Magic Flute" on Saturday evening, Aug. 6, Erich Leinsdorff, conducting.

100

SIXTH WEEK - AUGUST 5, 6, AND 7

AMSTERDAM, N. Y.
RECORDER & DEMOCRAT
D. 13,500

JUL 25 1966

Tanglewood's Busiest Week Features Pops, Symphony

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Aug. 1-7. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program, conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

The program for Friday, Aug. 5, conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will begin with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet." Cellist Leslie Parnas will join the orchestra for Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608, by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's (Aug. 6) concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Wednesday (Aug. 3) Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. As always, Fiedler will surprise the audience with several encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The two and a half hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will begin at 10:30 on the morning of Aug. 6.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will be heard in the chamber music program on Tuesday (Aug. 2) evening. Miss Curtin is making several appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer but Tuesday's concert will be her only full length recital.

The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be invited to Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday (Aug. 7) afternoon's concert Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's theme of the romantic concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

three programs during the Festival's sixth week. On Monday (Aug. 1) evening there will be a program of chamber music performed by members of the Center's fellowship program in the Chamber Music Hall at 8 p.m. The third Center Orchestra concert will take place on Thursday (Aug. 4) evening at 8 in the theatre and consists of a concerto program. Finally, a Baroque concert under the direction of Igor Kipnis will be on Sunday (Aug. 7) morning at 10 in the theatre.

Minneapolis Tribune
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
D. 230,485 SUN. 666,874

JUL 17 1966

Skrowaczewski Highly Praised by Critics in South America

Music Notes

News and Comment by Allan Holbert, the Minneapolis Tribune music critic.

Conductor Stanislaw Skrowaczewski charmed a number of the critics on his recent concert tour of South America with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

"La Nacion" in Buenos Aires, Argentina, called him "one of the most brilliant conductors of his generation. He knows how to give colorful and distinctive interpretations and he is scrupulous in his attention to details."

Said La Prensa, "With Skrowaczewski the orchestra sounded different than when Ormandy conducted . . . more precise and ordered."

El Mercurio in Santiago, Chile, reported that Skrowaczewski "took advantage of the exemplary educational labor of Ormandy with the orchestra and did whatever he wanted with the ensemble. The strength of the maestro (Skrowaczewski), his many hues and power of synthesis, were shown in all the pieces of the program."

Skrowaczewski will be guest conductor with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Aug. 5 and 7 and has been invited to conduct the Philadelphia Orchestra at its first summer festival next summer at Saratoga, N.Y.

The Ann Arbor News
ANN ARBOR, MICH.
D. 33,162

JULY 20 1966

Pianist Johannesen To Play Monday

Grant Johannesen, American pianist, will give the concluding program in the Summer Concert Series of four piano recitals at the University at 8:30 p.m. Monday in Rackham Auditorium, under the auspices of the University Musical Society.

The program will be: Sonata No. 3 in B-flat by Paul Hindemith; "Gaspard de la Nuit" by Ravel; and "Les Preludes, Opus 82 (complete) by Chopin.

This is Johannesen's first recital in Ann Arbor. He previously appeared here performing concertos with the Philadelphia Orchestra at the Ann Arbor May Festivals of 1955 and 1963.

Johannesen is a native of Salt Lake City. His early training took place in his home town. A predilection for piano having manifested itself at an early date, he began lessons with a neighborhood teacher when he was six.

At 18 he continued his work in New York, then went to Europe for scholarship at Ostend, Belgium. He has also been recipient of the Harriet Cohen International Award given annually in London for "outstanding artistry in performance."

Since his New York debut, Johannesen has appeared with all the top orchestras in this country and is frequently reengaged by the major symphonic organizations of Europe and South America.

He has played at such recognized music festivals as Aix-en-Provence, Amsterdam, Bergen, Helsinki and Oslo. For the last five seasons he has been artist-in-residence at Colorado's Aspen Festival. He has also played at the Hollywood Bowl, Ravinia and other U.S. summer festivals.

He will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Aug. 7 at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

His current season was launched with another of his frequent appearances on The Bell Telephone Hour. In addition, his schedule includes three performances with the New York Philharmonic, three with the Buffalo Philharmonic and two with the Music Aeterna Orchestra, as part of the Metropolitan Museum of Art series.

For ticket information, contact the office of the University Musical Society in Burton Tower.

News-Advertiser
WESTFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 3,577

JUL 28 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,221

JUL 28 1966

Tanglewood Will Offer Variety Of Specialties During Week

Tanglewood — Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday, August 5 at 9 p.m., Saturday, August 6 at 8 p.m., and Sunday, August 7 afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday, August 3. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" on Saturday evening, Aug. 6.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin August 5's program with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet." Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The weekend prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

August 6's concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills at the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For August 7's afternoon's concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concert No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on August 3 Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. As always, Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,105

JUL 27 1966

BEVERLY SILLS, soprano with the New York City Opera Company, has established her reputation by singing entirely in the United States. She will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, at Tanglewood in the role of "Queen of the Night" in Mozart's Opera, "The Magic Flute" on Saturday evening, Aug. 6, Erich Leinsdorff, conducting.

101

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUL 28 1966

Four Major Concerts to Highlight First August Week at Tanglewood

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday, Aug.5, at 9 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 6, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 7, at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday, Aug. 3. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute Saturday evening, Aug. 6.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin the

JUDITH RASKIN

Aug. 5 program with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the Orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

The Aug. 6 concert will be devoted completely to The Magic Flute. The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For the Aug. 7, afternoon concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed will continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Aug. 3, Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund. As always Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The two and a half hour Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will begin at 10:30 a.m. on Aug. 6.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Eagle (e)
CLAREMONT, N. H.
Circ. 7,036
JUL 28 1966

Four Major Concerts Set for Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. — Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. [illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra programs [illegible] (August 5) at 9:00 [illegible] Sunday (August 7) afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday (August 3). Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute Saturday evening (August 6).

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's (August 5) program with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the Orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's (August 6) concert will be devoted completely to The Magic Flute. The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday (August 7) afternoon's concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Wednesday (August 3) Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund. As always Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The two and a half hour Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will begin at 10:30 on Saturday (August 6) morning.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center Faculty, will be heard in the Chamber Festival Chamber Music program on Tuesday (August 2). Miss Curtin is making several appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer but Tuesday's concert will be her only full length recital. The proceeds of the chamber music series benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be invited to three programs during the Festival's sixth week. On Monday (August 1) evening there will be a program of chamber music performed by members of the Center's Fellowship program in the Chamber Music Hall at 8:00 p.m. The third Berkshire Music Center Orchestra concert will take place on Thursday (August 4) evening at 8:00 p.m. in the Theatre and consists of a concerto program with members of the Music Center as the soloists. The final Berkshire Music Center concert this week, a Baroque concert under the direction of Igor Kipnis, will be on Sunday (August 7) morning at 10:00 in the Theatre.

VACATIONEER

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JULY 2 9 1966

Tanglewood Schedules Four Major Concerts

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood opening Wednesday with the "Boston Pops at Tanglewood" program at 8 p.m.

* * *

Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. Several favorite encores will be presented for the special occasion.

Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday and Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday evening.

The Friday 9 p.m. program will open with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet" and cellist Leslie Parnas will perform the Saint-Saens "Cello Concerto" with the orchestra. The Friday evening concert will close with Schumann's "Symphony number 4." Skrowaczewski will make his first appearance at Tanglewood on Friday.

* * *

The Weekend Prelude program on Friday at 7 p.m. will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach and the "Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608," Mozart, with John Ferris as organist.

The cast for the Saturday 8 p.m. performance of "The Magic Flute" includes George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey with the Priests sung by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena and Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

* * *

Grant Johannesen will be soloist in the Saint-Saens "Piano Concerto number 4" Sunday in the 2:30 p.m. program. This concert will also include Medea's "Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's "Symphony number 3."

The two and a half hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Syhphony Orchestra's pension fund will be held Saturday, opening at 10:30 a.m.

AT TANGLEWOOD — Leslie Parnas, cellist, will be the soloist in the Saint-Saens 'Cello Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for the 9 p.m. program on Friday. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct the performance.

New York Post
D. 324,256 SUN. 243,637
JULY 2 9 1966

Four Concerts Highlight Tanglewood's 6th Week

Four major orchestral concerts highlight next week's program of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. On August 3, the annual Boston Pops program will be heard with Arthur Fiedler conducting and Stan Getz as guest artist. On Aug. 6 at 8 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute."

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Aug. 5 at 9 p.m. and on Aug. 7 at 2 p.m. The evening concert includes the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto with Leslie Parnas as soloist; Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet," and Schumann's Fourth Symphony. The Aug. 7 matinee continues in the Festival's theme of the Romantic Concerto with a program including Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4 with Grant Johannesen sola[illegible]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,221
JUL 28 1966

[illegible]ERLY SILLS, soprano [illegible] the New York City [illegible]ra Company, has estab[illegible]ed her reputation by [illegible]ing entirely in the United [illegible]tes. She will appear with [illegible] Boston Symphony Or[illegible]estra, Erich Leinsdorf, [illegible]ic Director, at Tangle[illegible]od in the role of "Queen [illegible] the Night" in Mozart's [illegible]pera, "The Magic Flute" [illegible] Saturday evening, Aug. [illegible] Erich Leinsdorff, conduct-

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
JUL 28 1966

Four Major Concerts to Highlight First August Week at Tanglewood

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday, Aug.5, at 9 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 6, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 7, at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday, Aug. 3. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute Saturday evening, Aug. 6.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin the

JUDITH RASKIN

Aug. 5 program with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the Orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

The Aug. 6 concert will be devoted completely to The Magic Flute. The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For the Aug. 7, afternoon concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed will continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Aug. 3. Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund. As always Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The two and a half hour Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will begin at 10:30 a.m. on Aug. 6.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Eagle (e)
CLAREMONT, N. H.
Circ. 7,036
JUL 29 1966

Four Major Concerts Set for Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. — Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday (August 5) at 9:00 p.m., Saturday (August 6) at 8:00 p.m. and Sunday, (August 7) afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minneapolis Symphony, wil lbe the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday (August 3). Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute Saturday evening (August 6).

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's (August 5) program with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the Orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's (August 6) concert will be devoted completely to The Magic Flute. The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday (August 7) afternoon's concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Wednesday (August 3) Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund. As always Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The two and a half hour Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will begin at 10:30 on Saturday (August 6) morning.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will be heard in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music program on Tuesday (August 2) evening. Miss Curtin is making her Boston Symphony Orchestra's several appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer but Tuesday's concert will be her only full length recital. The proceeds of the chamber music series benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be invited to three programs during the Festival's sixth week. On Monday (August 1) evening there will be a program of chamber music performed by members of the Center's Fellowship program in the Chamber Music Hall at 8:00 p.m. The third Berkshire Music Center Orchestra concert will take place on Thursday (August 4) evening at 8:00 p.m. in the Theatre and consists of a concerto program with members of the Music Center as the soloists. The final Berkshire Music Center concert this week, a Baroque concert under the direction of Igor Kipnis, will be on Sunday (August 7) morning at 10:00 in the Theatre.

VACATIONEER

New York Post
D. 324,256 SUN. 243,637
JULY 29 1966

Four Concerts Highlight Tanglewood's 6th Week

Four major orchestral concerts highlight next week's program of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. On August 3, the annual Boston Pops program will be heard with Arthur Fiedler conducting and Stan Getz as guest artist. On Aug. 6 at 8 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute."

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Aug. 5 at 9 p.m. and on Aug. 7 at 2 p.m. The evening concert includes the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto with Leslie Parnas as soloist; Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet," and Schumann's Fourth Symphony. The Aug. 7 matinee continues in the Festival's theme of the Romantic Concerto with a program including Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4 with Grant Johannesen soloist.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
JULY 29 1966

Tanglewood Schedules Four Major Concerts

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood opening Wednesday with the "Boston Pops at Tanglewood" program at 8 p.m.

* * *

Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. Several favorite encores will be presented for the special occasion.

Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday and Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday evening.

The Friday 9 p.m. program will open with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet" and "cellist Leslie Parnas will perform the Saint-Saens "Cello Concerto" with the orchestra. The Friday evening concert will close with Schumann's "Symphony number 4." Skrowaczewski will make his first appearance at Tanglewood on Friday.

* * *

The Weekend Prelude program on Friday at 7 p.m. will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach and the "Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608," Mozart, with John Ferris as organist.

The cast for the Saturday 8 p.m. performance of "The Magic Flute" includes George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh,

AT TANGLEWOOD — Leslie Parnas, 'cellist, will be the soloist in the Saint-Saens 'Cello Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for the 9 p.m. program on Friday. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct the performance.

Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey with the Priests sung by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena and Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

* * *

Grant Johannesen will be soloist in the Saint-Saens "Piano Concerto number 4" Sunday in the 2:30 p.m. program. This concert will also include Medea's "Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's "Symphony number 3."

The two and a half hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Syhphony Orchestra's pension fund will be held Saturday, opening at 10:30 a.m.

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,221
JUL 28 1966

...VERLY SILLS, soprano ...h the New York City ...era Company, has established her reputation by ...ing entirely in the United ...tes. She will appear with ... Boston Symphony Or...estra, Erich Leinsdorf, ...ic Director, at Tangle...od in the role of "Queen ... the Night" in Mozart's ...era, "The Magic Flute" ... Saturday evening, Aug. ... Erich Leinsdorff, conduct...g.

102

Tanglewood Lists 'Magic Flute'

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday at 9 p.m., Saturday at 8 and Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday evening.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet."

Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto.

Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

Grant Johannesen, Soloist

For Sunday afternoon's concert, Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4.

The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto.

This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

The two and a half hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will begin at 10.30 Saturday morning.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will be heard in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music program Tuesday evening.

Miss Curtin is making severe' appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer but Tuesday's concert will be her only full length recital.

The proceeds of the chamber music series benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be invited to three programs during the Festival's sixth week.

On Monday evening there will be a program of chamber music performed by members of the center's fellowship program in the Chamber Music Hall at 8. The Third Berkshire Music Center Orchestra concert will take place on Thursday evening at 8 in the theater and consists of a concerto program with members of the music center as the soloists.

BEVERLY SILLS, soprano with the New York City Opera Company, will sing role of "Queen of the Night" in Mozart's "Magic Flute" to be performed at Tanglewood next Saturday evening.

. . . Pops Concert Thursday

Arthur Fiedler has announced the program he will conduct at the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert Thursday.

Saxophone soloist Stan Getz will join the celebrated Pops conductor and the orchestra for the world premiere of Sauter's Tanglewood Concerto, dedicated to the soloist and conductor.

The Aug. 3 concert will begin with Sousa's Washington Post March followed by the Overture to "William Tell" by Rossini.

In addition to the Tanglewood Concerto the first half on the concert will also include the Final Dance from Ginastera's "Estancia."

Following the intermission Mr. Fiedler will conduct the Waltzes from Strauss' Tales of the Vienna Woods with Toni Noichl as the zither soloist.

Stan Getz will then perform five compositions for saxophone and orchestra.

Mr. Fiedler will conclude the Pops concert with selections from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe.

The annual appearance of Mr. Fiedler and the Pops Orchestra at Tanglewood is for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund.

The three concerts since 1963 have been heard by more than 40,000 persons.

Tickets for the Pops concert are now available at the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox.

General admision tickets to the lawns will be available at 4 the day of the performance.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 29 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 51,098
JUL 30 1966

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.
Two guest conductors take over for Boston Symphony Orchestra leader Erich Leinsdorf [illegible] weekend concerts continue in the Tanglewood Music Shed. The schedule:

Sun. at 2:30:
Thomas Schippers conducts a program that includes Rossini's Overture, "La Gazza Ladra;" Schumann's Piano Concerto, with Claude Frank as soloist, and Mussorgsky-Ravel's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

Fri. at 9:
The [illegible] guest conductor, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski leads the BSO [illegible] "Romeo and Juliet," second [illegible] Cello Concerto with soloist Leslie Parnas, and Schumann's Symphony No. 4. The 7 p.m. weekend prelude features the music of Mozart.

Sat. at 8:
Mozart's "The Magic Flute," conducted by Leinsdorf, takes up the evening. Soloists include Ara Berberian, Montserrat Cabelle and the Tanglewood Choir.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
JUL 30 1966

Tanglewood Guest Will Be Minneapolis Director

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday (Aug. 5) at 9 p.m., Saturday (Aug. 6) at 8 p.m., and Sunday (Aug. 7) afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday (Aug. 3). Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute Saturday evening (Aug. 6).

Mr. Skrowaczewski will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join the orchestra for the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. The concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to The Magic Flute. The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday afternoon's concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops program Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund. As always Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The open rehearsal for the benefit of the Pension Fund will begin at 10:30 on Saturday morning.

Buffalo Evening News
D. 279,780 SAT. 292,741
JULY 30 1966

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL program next Saturday evening at 8:30 will be a concert version of the Mozart "Magic Flute," Erich Leonsdorf conducting, soloists Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, George Shirley, Batyah Godfrey, John Reardon, Beverly Sills and Ezio Flagello.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 31 1966

FM Music for This Week

WPJB-FM's Concert Hall, Tuesday at 9 p.m., will feature Beethoven's Leonore II Overture, played by the Berlin Philharmonic under the direction of Eugen Jochum, and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 in F minor, played by the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra and conducted by Evgeni Mravinski.

Saturday's concert by the Berkshire Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, broadcast at 8 p.m. on WCRQ-FM, will be devoted completely to Mozart's The Magic Flute. The cast will include George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno, and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186
JUL 29 1966

Major Concerts At Tanglewood

JUDITH RASKIN

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday (Aug. 5) at 9 p.m., Saturady (Aug. 6) at 8 p.m., and Sunday (Aug. 7) afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute Saturday evening.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's (Aug. 5) program with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to The Magic Flute. The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian, Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro, Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor. Miss Raskin is a Smith College graduate.

For Sunday afternoon's concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, July 31, 1966

In Music—

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood concludes its fifth week this afternoon with Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 2:30. They will be joined by Claude Frank as piano soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto. On Tuesday evening, soprano Phylis Curtin will be featured in the Chamber Music series at 8:00, in the Theater. The annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert under Arthur Fiedler will be presented at 8:00 Wednesday evening. The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will present a concerto program in the theater at 8:00 Thursday evening. The Lenox, Mass., music festival enters its sixth week on Friday evening at 8:00 with Stanislaw Skrowaczewski as guest conductor in a program that includes Saint-Saens Cello Concerto, [illegible] soloist. Erich Leinsdorf conducts the orchestra [illegible] of soloists Saturday evening at 8:00 in a concert performance of Mozart's opera, "The Magic Flute."

102

Tanglewood Lists 'Magic Flute'

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday at 9 p.m., Saturday at 8 and Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday evening.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet."

Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto.

Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

Grant Johannesen, Soloist

For Sunday afternoon's concert, Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4.

The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto.

This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

The two and a half hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will begin at 10.30 Saturday morning.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will be heard in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music program Tuesday evening.

Miss Curtin is making several appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer but Tuesday's concert will be her only full length recital.

The proceeds of the chamber music series benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be invited to three programs during the Festival's sixth week.

On Monday evening there will be a program of chamber music performed by members of the center's fellowship program in the Chamber Music Hall at 8. The Third Berkshire Music Center Orchestra concert will take place on Thursday evening at 8 in the theater and consists of a concerto program with members of the music center as the soloists.

BEVERLY SILLS, soprano with the New York City Opera Company, will sing role of "Queen of the Night" in Mozart's "Magic Flute" to be performed at Tanglewood next Saturday evening.

. . . Pops Concert Thursday

Arthur Fiedler has announced the program he will conduct at the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert Thursday.

Saxophone soloist Stan Getz will join the celebrated Pops conductor and the orchestra for the world premiere of Sauter's Tanglewood Concerto, dedicated to the soloist and conductor.

The Aug. 3 concert will begin with Sousa's Washington Post March followed by the Overture to "William Tell" by Rossini.

In addition to the Tanglewood Concerto the first half on the concert will also include the Final Dance from Ginastera's "Estancia."

Following the intermission Mr. Fiedler will conduct the Waltzes from Strauss' Tales of the Vienna Woods with Toni Noichl as the zither soloist.

Stan Getz will then perform five compositions for saxophone and orchestra.

Mr. Fiedler will conclude the Pops concert with selections from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe.

The annual appearance of Mr. Fiedler and the Pops Orchestra at Tanglewood is for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund.

The three concerts since 1963 have been heard by more than 40,000 persons.

Tickets for the Pops concert are now available at the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox.

General admision tickets to the lawns will be available at 4 the day of the performance.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
JUL 29 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 51,098
JUL 30 1966

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Two guest conductors take over for Boston Symphony Orchestra leader Erich Leinsdorf as weekend concerts continue in the Tanglewood Music Shed. The schedule:

Sun. at 2:30:

Thomas Schippers conducts a program that includes Rossini's Overture, "La Gazza Ladra;" Schumann's Piano Concerto, with Claude Frank as soloist, and Mussorgsky-Ravel's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

Fri. at 8:

The week's second guest conductor, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, leads the BSO in Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet," second suite; Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto with soloist Leslie Parnas, and Schumann's Symphony No. 4. The 7 p.m. weekend prelude features the music of Mozart.

Sat. at 8:

Mozart's "The Magic Flute," conducted by Leinsdorf, takes up the evening. Soloists include Ara Berberian, Montserrat Cabelle and the Tanglewood Choir.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
JUL 30 1966

Tanglewood Guest Will Be Minneapolis Director

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday (Aug. 5) at 9 p.m., Saturday (Aug. 6) at 8 p.m., and Sunday (Aug. 7) afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday (Aug. 3). Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute Saturday evening (Aug. 6).

Mr. Skrowaczewski will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join the orchestra for the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. The concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to The Magic Flute. The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian, Montserrat Cabelle and the Tanglewood Choir.

For Sunday afternoon's concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops program Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund. As always Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The open rehearsal for the benefit of the Pension Fund will begin at 10:30 on Saturday morning.

Buffalo Evening News
D. 279,780 SAT. 292,741
JULY 30 1966

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL program next Saturday evening at 8:30 will be a concert version of the Mozart "Magic Flute," Erich Leonsdorf conducting, soloists Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, George Shirley, Batyah Godfrey, John Reardon, Beverly Sills and Ezio Flagello.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 31 1966

FM Music for This Week

WPJB-FM's Concert Hall, Tuesday at 9 p.m., will feature Beethoven's Leonore II Overture, played by the Berlin Philharmonic under the direction of Eugen Jochum, and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 in F minor, played by the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra and conducted by Eugene Mravinski.

Saturday's concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, broadcast at 8 p.m. on WCRQ-FM, will be devoted completely to Mozart's The Magic Flute. The cast will include George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno, and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian,

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186
JUL 29 1966

Major Concerts At Tanglewood

JUDITH RASKIN

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday (Aug. 5) at 9 p.m., Saturady (Aug. 6) at 8 p.m., and Sunday (Aug. 7) afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute Saturday evening.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's (Aug. 5) program with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to The Magic Flute. The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor. Miss Raskin is a Smith College graduate.

For Sunday afternoon's concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, July 31, 1966

In Music—

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood concludes its fifth week this afternoon with Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 2:30. They will be joined by Claude Frank as piano soloist in Schumann's Piano Concerto. On Tuesday evening, soprano Phylis Curtin will be featured in the Chamber Music series at 8:00, in the Theater. The annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert under Arthur Fiedler will be presented at 8:00 Wednesday evening. The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will present a concerto program in the Theater at 8:00 Thursday evening. The Lenox, Mass. music festival enters its sixth week on Friday evening at 8:00 with Stanislaw Skrowaczewski as guest conductor in a program that includes Saint-Saens Cello Concerto, Leslie Parnas soloist. Erich Leinsdorf conducts the orchestra and a host of soloists Saturday evening at 8:00 in a concert performance of Mozart's opera, "The Magic Flute."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
JUL 31 1966

Four Major Orchestral Concerts Highlighted This Week at Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday at 9 p. m., Saturday at 8 p. m., and Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

Annual Pops Program

Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday evening.

Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Skrowaczewski and the orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

"The Magic Flute"

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and Mozart's Organ Fantasia. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute". The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night.

ROBERT JONES

ARA BERBERIAN

JUDITH RASKIN

Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

Several Encores

For Sunday afternoon's concert Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Wednesday Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. As always Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The two and a half hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will begin at 10.30 on Saturday morning.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire music center's faculty, will be heard in the Berkshire Festival chamber music program on Tuesday evening.

Miss Curtin is making several appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer but Tuesday's concert will be her only full length recital. The proceeds of the chamber music series benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

The friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be invited to three programs during the festival's sixth week.

Baroque Featured

On Monday there will be a program of chamber music performed by members of the center's fellowship program in the chamber music hall at 8 p. m.

The third Berkshire Music Center orchestra concert will take place on Thursday at 8 p. m. in the theater and consists of a concerto program with members of the music center as the soloists.

The final Berkshire Music Center concert this week, a Baroque concert under the direction of Igor Kipnis, will be Sunday morning at 10 in the theatre.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 30 1966

'Magic Flute,' Stan Getz, Highlight Sixth BMF Week

TANGLEWOOD — Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the sixth week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday, Aug. 5, at 9:00 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 6, at 8:00 p.m., and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7 at 2:30.

Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program with Saxophonist Stangetz. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday, Aug. 3. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday.

Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofieff's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet." Cellist Leslie Parnas will join Skrowaczewski and the orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. The concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena and Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday afternoon's concert Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
FLATBUSH LIFE
W. 15,500
JUL 30 1966

JUL 30 1966
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
KINGS COURIER
W. 15,000

JUL 30 1966
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
BAY NEWS
W. 14,500

JUL 30 1966

JOANNA SIMON, mezzo-soprano, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., as one of the Three Ladies in this season's performance of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" on Sat. evening, Aug. 6.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 517,080
JUL 31 1966

Mozart Opera, 3 Concerts This Week at Tanglewood

A concert performance of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and the Boston Pops annual appearance at Tanglewood will be among the events this week at the Berkshire Festival. The Boston Symphony also will have a guest conductor, Minneapolis' Stanislaw Skrowaczeski, at concerts Friday evening at 9 and next Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanklewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet." Leslie Parnas then will perform the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude Friday at 7 p.m. will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to "The magic Flute." The cast will include George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena. Jones and Berberian also will be the two men in armor. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct.

For next Sunday afternoon's concert Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johnnesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the Summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert also will include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program Wednesday Arthur Fielder has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. As always Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The 2½ hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston symphony Ochestra's pension fund will begin at 10:30 Saturday morning.

Phillis Curtin, who is again this Summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will be heard in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music program Tuesday evening.

This afternoon at Tanglewood, Thomas Schippers will be the guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Claude Frank will be the soloist performing Schumann's Piano Concerto. Schippers also conduct Rossini's Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" and "Pictures at an Exhibition" by Moussorgsky-Ravel.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607
JULY 31 1966

TAMANO — George Shirley, tenor with the Metropolitan Opera Association, will appear as Tamano in the concert presentation of Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute" at Tanglewood Saturday evening with Erich Leinsdorf conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737
JUL 31 1966

MUSIC

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX (Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood)—Friday, 9 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet; Saint-Saens Cello Concerto (Leslie Parnas, soloist), and Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

Saturday, 8 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute. Soloists will be George Shirley, Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, Batyah Godfrey, John Reardon, Beverly Sills, Nico Castel and Judith Raskin.

Sunday, 2:30 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,188
JUL 29 1966

Major Concerts At Tanglewood

JUDITH RASKIN

...major orchestral con-
...will highlight the busiest
...of the 1966 Berkshire
...at Tanglewood. Three
...Symphony Orchestra pro
...will be given at the regu-
...ekend hours Friday (Aug.
...p.m., Saturady (Aug. 6)
...., and Sunday (Aug. 7)
...n at 2:30. Added to this
...concerts will be the an-
...sion Pops at Tangle-
...gram. Stanislaw Skrow-
... music director of the
...lis Symphony, will be
... conductor on Friday
...day, and Arthur Fiedler
...duct the Pops concert
...day. Erich Leinsdorf will
..., concert version of ... The Magic Flute Sat-
...ening.
...rowaczewski, who is
...s first appearance at
..., will begin Friday's
... program with Proko-
...ond suite from Romeo
... Cellist Leslie Parnas
...join Mr. Skrowaczew-
... orchestra for a per-
... of the Saint-Saens
...certo. Friday's concert
... with Schumann's
...y No. 4.
...eekend Prelude on Fri-
... consist of songs by
... for soprano and piano
...d by Phyllis Curtin and
... Woitach, and the Organ
... F minor, K. 608 by
...John Ferris will be the
...
...'s concert will be de-
...pletely to The Magic
... cast will include:
...rley as Tamino; Jane
...nna Simon and Bat-
...y as the three ladies;
...don as Papageno; and
...lls as the Queen of
... Monostatos will be
...ico Castel and Pam-
...th Raskin. The Three
...l be sung by Miss
...s Simon and Miss
...d the Priests by Rob-
... and Ara Berberian.
...llo will be Sarastro.
...t will sing Papagena,
...s. Jones and Berber-
... the two men in arm-
... Raskin is a Smith Col-
...duate.
...nday afternoon's con-
... Skrowaczewski will
...nt Johannesen as solo-
... Saint-Saens Piano Con-
... 4. The two concerti by
...ns to be performed this
...ntinue the summer's
...e Festival theme of the
...c Concerto. This concert
... include Medea's Medi-
...nd Dance of Vengeance
...uel Barber and Beetho-
...mphony No. 3.

...Music Festival at
...el ... its fifth
... conducting the
... will be joined
... Piano Con-
...Curtin will be
...:00, in the The-
...d concert under
... Wednesday eve-
...tra will present
...o Thursday eve-
...enters its sixth
...Skrowaczew-
...includes Saint-
... Erich Leinsdorf
...ts Saturday eve-
... Mozart's opera

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966

JUL 31 1966

Four Major Orchestral Concerts Highlighted This Week at Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday at 9 p. m., Saturday at 8 p. m., and Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

Annual Pops Program

Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday evening.

Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Skrowaczewski and the orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

"The Magic Flute"

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and Mozart's Organ Fantasia. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute". The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Rearden as Papageno; and Beverly

ROBERT JONES

ARA BERBERIAN

JUDITH RASKIN

Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

Several Encores

For Sunday afternoon's concert Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Wednesday Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. As always Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The two and a half hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will begin at 10.30 on Saturday morning.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire music center's faculty, will be heard in the Berkshire Festival chamber music program on Tuesday evening.

Miss Curtin is making several appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer but Tuesday's concert will be her only full length recital. The proceeds of the chamber music series benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

The friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be invited to three programs during the festival's sixth week.

Baroque Featured

On Monday there will be a program of chamber music performed by members of the center's fellowship program in the chamber music hall at 8 p. m.

The third Berkshire Music Center orchestra concert will take place on Thursday at 8 p. m. in the theater and consists of a concerto program with members of the music center as the soloists.

The final Berkshire Music Center concert this week, a Baroque concert under the direction of Igor Kipnis, will be Sunday morning at 10 in the theatre.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404

JUL 30 1966

'Magic Flute,' Stan Getz, Highlight Sixth BMF Week

TANGLEWOOD — Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the sixth week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday, Aug. 5, at 9:00 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 6, at 8:00 p.m., and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7 at 2:30.

Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program with Saxophonist Stangetz. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday, Aug. 3. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday.

Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofieff's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet." Cellist Leslie Parnas will join Skrowaczewski and the orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. The concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include: George Shirley as Timino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena and Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday afternoon's concert Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
FLATBUSH LIFE
W. 15,500

JUL 30 1966

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
KINGS COURIER
W. 15,000

JUL 30 1966

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
BAY NEWS
W. 14,500

JUL 30 1966

JOANNA SIMON, mezzo-soprano, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., as one of the Three Ladies in this season's performance of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" on Sat. evening, Aug. 6.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 517,080

JUL 31 1966

Mozart Opera, 3 Concerts This Week at Tanglewood

A concert performance of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and the Boston Pops annual appearance at Tanglewood will be among the events this week at the Berkshire Festival. The Boston Symphony also will have a guest conductor, Minneapolis' Stanislaw Skrowaczeski, at concerts Friday evening at 9 and next Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanklewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet." Leslie Parnas then will perform the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude Friday at 7 p.m. will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to "The magic Flute." The cast will include George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena. Jones and Berberian also will be the two men in armor. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct.

For next Sunday afternoon's concert Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johnnesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the Summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert also will include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program Wednesday Arthur Fielder has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. As always Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The 2½ hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston symphony Ochestra's pension fund will begin at 10:30 Saturday morning.

Phillis Curtin, who is again this Summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will be heard in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music program Tuesday evening.

This afternoon at Tanglewood, Thomas Schippers will be the guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Claude Frank will be the soloist performing Schumann's Piano Concerto. Schippers also conduct Rossini's Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" and "Pictures at an Exhibition" by Moussorgsky-Ravel.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 SUN. 122,607

JULY 31 1966

TAMANO — George Shirley, tenor with the Metropolitan Opera Association, will appear as Tamano in the concert presentation of Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute" at Tanglewood Saturday evening with Erich Leinsdorf conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 197,737

JUL 31 1966

MUSIC

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX (Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood)—Friday, 9 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet; Saint-Saens Cello Concerto (Leslie Parnas, soloist), and Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

Saturday, 8 p.m., Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute. Soloists will be George Shirley, Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, Batyah Godfrey, John Reardon, Beverly Sills, Nico Castel and Judith Raskin.

Sunday, 2:30 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

104

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099

4 Major Concerts Due at Tanglewood

LENOX — Four major orchestral concerts will make up the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours — Friday at 9 p.m., Saturday at 8:00 and Sunday at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops program.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday evening.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet." Cellist Leslie Parnas will then be featured in a performance of the Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto. The concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

SATURDAY'S concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel, and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

JUDITH RASKIN

STANISLAW SKROWACZEWSKI

For Sunday afternoon's concert Grant Johannesen will be soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethovens' Symphony No. 3 are also on the program.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Circ. 15,399
AUG 2 1966

1966 Berkshire Festival Is Now In Sixth Week

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday at 9 p.m., Saturday at 8 p.m., and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute Saturday evening.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the Orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to The Magic Flute. The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday afternoon's concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto NoN. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto.

This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Wednesday, Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund. As always, Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The two and half hour Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the fund will begin at 10:30 on Saturday morning.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Center's faculty, will be heard in the Chamber Music program this evening. Miss Curtin is making several appearances with the orchestra at Tanglewood this summer, but tonight's concert will be her only full length recital. The proceeds of the chamber music series benefit the Center.

The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be invited to three programs during the festival's sixth week. The third Center Orchestra concert will take place on Thursday evening at 8 in the theatre and consists of a concerto program with members of the Music Center as the soloists. The final concert this week, a Baroque concert under the direction of Igor Kipnis, will be on Sunday morning at 10 in the theatre.

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,615
AUG 2 1966

Tanglewood To Have Guest Conductor

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of Minneapolis Symphony, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday night at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Numbers to be played include Prokofieff's second "Romeo and Juliet" suite, the Saint-Saen's "Cello Concerto" with Leslie Parnas as soloist and Schumann's "Symphony No. 4."

The Weedend Prelude Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano, performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and Mozart's "Organ Fantasia in F Minor, K. 608," played by John Ferris.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Saturday night program which will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast for this concert version of the Mozart work will include George Shirley, Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, Batyah Godfrey, John Reardon, Beverly Sills, Nico Castel, Judith Raskin, Robert Jones, Ara Berberian, Ezio Flagello and Anne Elgar.

Appearing again as guest conductor, Skrowaczewski will conduct the Sunday afternoon program. Grant Johannesen will be soloist in Saint-Saens' "Piano Concerto No. 4." Other numbers will be Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 3."

The Boston Pops will present its annual program at Tanglewood tomorrow under the direction of Arthur Fiedler. Saxophonist Stan Getz will be soloist and the program will include favorite encores.

There will be an open rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Saturday morning.

SYRACUSE
Herald Journal
D. 133,303
AUG 1 1966

4 major concerts highlight Tanglewood music festival

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS. — Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday at 9 p.m., Saturday at 8 p.m., and Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislow Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops concert Wednesday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday evening.

First Appearance

Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet." Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join them for a performance of the Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto. The concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The weekend prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will inlude: George Shirley as "Tamino"; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as "Papageno;" and Beverly Sills as the "Queen of the Night." "Monostatos" will be sung by Nico Castel and "Pamina" by Judith Raskin. The three spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be "Sarastro." Anne Elgar will sing "Papagena," and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

Johannesen Soloist

For Sunday afternoon's concert, Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Wednesday, Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra pension fund.

The two and a half hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will begin at 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will be heard in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music program on Tuesday evening. Miss Curtin is making several appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer but Tuesday's concert will be her only full-length recital. The proceeds of the chamber music series benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

CHATHAM COURIER
Thursday, August 4, 1966

A Calendar of Events

MUSIC

TANGLEWOOD—Friday, Aug. 5: BSO conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski in Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet," 2nd Suite; Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto (Leslie Parnas); Schumann's Symphony No. 4, 9 p.m., Shed . . . Weekend prelude to Tchaikovsky's Trio for Piano, Violin and Cello, 7 p.m., Shed . . . Saturday, Aug. 6: BSO conducted by Leinsdorf in Mozart's "The Magic Flute," 8 p.m., Shed . . . Sunday, Aug. 7: BSO conducted by Skrowaczewski in Barber's Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance, Saint-Saens' Piano Concerto No. 4 (Grant Johannesen); Beethoven's Symphony No. 3; 2:30 p.m., Shed.

VALATIE, N. Y.
ROUGH NOTES
W. 1,500
AUG 5 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Bi-Weekly Circ. 1,200
AUG 4 1966

Tanglewood

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday at 9:00 p.m., Saturday at 8:00 p.m., and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute Saturday evening.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 49,343
AUG 3 1965

Tanglewood concerts of Friday and Saturday night will be conducted by Jean Martinon and the Sunday afternoon program by Erich Leinsdorf. Pianist Ruold Serkin will be the guest with the orchestra for Sunday aft

GREENVILLE LOCAL
Wednesday, August 3, 1966

104

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099

4 Major Concerts Due at Tanglewood

LENOX — Four major orchestral concerts will make up the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours — Friday at 9 p.m., Saturday at 8:00 and Sunday at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops program.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday evening.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet." Cellist Leslie Parnas will then be featured in a performance of the Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto. The concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

SATURDAY'S concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel, and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

JUDITH RASKIN

STANISLAW SKROWACZEWSKI

For Sunday afternoon's concert Grant Johannesen will be soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethovens' Symphony No. 3 are also on the program.

CHATHAM COURIER
Thursday, August 4, 1966

A Calendar of Events

MUSIC

TANGLEWOOD—Friday, Aug. 5: BSO conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski in Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet," 2nd Suite; Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto (Leslie Parnas); Schumann's Symphony No. 4, 8 p.m., Shed . . . Weekend prelude to Tchaikovsky's Trio for Piano, Violin and Cello, 7 p.m., Shed . . . Saturday, Aug. 6: BSO conducted by Leinsdorf in Mozart's "The Magic Flute", 8 p.m., Shed . . . Sunday, Aug. 7: BSO conducted by Skrowaczewski in Barber's Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance; Saint-Saen's Piano Concerto No. 4 (Grant Johannesen); Beethoven's Symphony No. 3; 2:30 p.m., Shed.

VALATIE, N. Y.
ROUGH NOTES
W. 1,500
AUG 5 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Bi-Weekly Circ. 1,200
AUG 4 1966

Tanglewood

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday at 9:00 p.m., Saturday at 8:00 p.m., and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute Saturday evening.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Circ. 15,399
AUG 2 1966

1966 Berkshire Festival Is Now In Sixth Week

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday at 9 p.m., Saturday at 8 p.m., and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute Saturday evening.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the Orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The Weekend Prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to The Magic Flute. The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino, Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday afternoon's concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto NoN. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto.

This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Wednesday, Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund. As always, Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

The two and half hour Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the fund will begin at 10:30 on Saturday morning.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Center's faculty, will be heard in the Chamber Music program this evening. Miss Curtin is making several appearances with the orchestra at Tanglewood this summer, but tonight's concert will be her only full length recital. The proceeds of the chamber music series benefit the Center.

The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be invited to three programs during the festival's sixth week. The third Center Orchestra concert will take place on Thursday evening at 8 in the theatre and consists of a concerto program with members of the Music Center as the soloists. The final concert this week, a Baroque concert under the direction of Igor Kipnis, will be on Sunday morning at 10 in the theatre.

Schenectady Union-Star
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 30,615
AUG 2 1966

Tanglewood To Have Guest Conductor

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of Minneapolis Symphony, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday night at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Numbers to be played include Prokofieff's second "Romeo and Juliet" suite, the Saint-Saen's "Cello Concerto" with Leslie Parnas as soloist and Schumann's "Symphony No. 4."

The Weedend Prelude Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano, performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and Mozart's "Organ Fantasia in F Minor, K. 608," played by John Ferris.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Saturday night program which will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast for this concert version of the Mozart work will include George Shirley, Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, Batyah Godfrey, John Reardon, Beverly Sills, Nico Castel, Judith Raskin, Robert Jones, Ara Berberian, Ezio Flagello and Anne Elgar.

Appearing again as guest conductor, Skrowaczewski will conduct the Sunday afternoon program. Grant Johannesen will be soloist in Saint-Saens' "Piano Concerto No. 4." Other numbers will be Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 3."

The Boston Pops will present its annual program at Tanglewood tomorrow under the direction of Arthur Fiedler. Saxophonist Stan Getz will be soloist and the program will include favorite encores.

There will be an open rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Saturday morning.

SYRACUSE
Herald Journal
D. 133,303
AUG 1 1966

4 major concerts highlight Tanglewood music festival

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS. — Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday at 9 p.m., Saturday at 8 p.m., and Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislow Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops concert Wednesday. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday evening.

First Appearance

Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's program with Prokofiev's second suite from "Romeo and Juliet." Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join them for a performance of the Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto. The concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The weekend prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K. 608 by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to "The Magic Flute." The cast will include: George Shirley as "Tamino"; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as "Papageno;" and Beverly Sills as the "Queen of the Night." "Monostatos" will be sung by Nico Castel and "Pamina" by Judith Raskin. The three spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be "Sarastro." Anne Elgar will sing "Papagena," and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

Johannesen Soloist

For Sunday afternoon's concert, Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the summer's Berkshire Festival theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Wednesday, Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund.

The two and a half hour open rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund will begin at 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will be heard in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music program on Tuesday evening. Miss Curtin is making several appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer but Tuesday's concert will be her only full-length recital. The proceeds of the chamber music series benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 49,343
AUG 3 1965

Tanglewood concerts of Friday and Saturday night will be conducted by Jean Martinon and the Sunday afternoon program by Erich Leinsdorf. Pianist Ruold Serkin will be the guest with the orchestra for Sunday afternoon.

GREENVILLE LOCAL
Wednesday, August 3, 1966

105

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
AUG 4 1966

Magic Flute at Tanglewood

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday, Aug. 5, at 9 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 6 at 8 p.m., and Sunday, Aug. 7, at 2:30 p.m. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert on Wednesday, August 3. Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's The Magic Flute on Saturday evening.

JUDITH RASKIN

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood, will begin Friday's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the Orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The weekend prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K 608, by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to The Magic Flute. The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey, and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday afternoon's concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Wednesday (Aug. 3), Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund. As always Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

GEORGE SHIRLEY

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
AUG 6 1966

JOHN REARDON, baritone, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight in a performance of Mozart's "The Magic Flute."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Circ. 21,114
AUG 5 1966

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS. — GRANT JOHANNESEN, pianist, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, playing the Saint-Saen's Piano Concerto No. 4. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conducting, thus continuing this summer's theme of "the Romantic Concerto."

Preceding one of the busiest weeks at Tanglewood, the summer music festival home of the Boston Symphony orchestra, the past weekend highlighted a distinguished presentation of the Schumann concerto, featuring Claude Frank who gave a matchless performance, together with an inclusion in this year's newest feature "Week-end Prelude" of the Andante and Variations for two pianos, two cellos and horn, in which Mr. Frank was assisted by Lillian Kallir, Martin Hoperman, Mischa Nieland and James Stagliano. This 7 P. M. feature, which lasts about an hour, and which also included a program of Schuman Lieder, with Ara Berberian, Bass, and Claude Frank at the piano is suitably titled, and sets a lovely opening for a weekend packed with reams of beautiful music. Including the Saturday morning's rehearsal, open to the public, it now makes possible a weekend of five concerts in all. The later Friday program, beginning at 9 (the hour between permitting a delightful time of refreshment or stroll about the grounds or browsing in the music store,) was heady with a diversified program including Smetana's overture to the Bartered Bride, three nocturnes of Debussy, as variant from the opening, as were the "variations on an original theme of Elgar" which concluded the program. The Schumann cello concerto soloed Jules Eskin, first chair in the orchestra, and his rendition of this romantic vivacious and fresh approach, and the interweaving of cello and orches-tral body was a memorable experience.

The Sunday afternoon orchestra's program, opening with Rossini's Overture to La Gazza Ladra, was equally exhuberant in its presentation of Moussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition, orchestrated by Maurice Ravel and the Schumann Piano Concerto, again featuring Claude Frank as solo artist at the keyboard. Excellence of performance, both orchestral and solo was proven by the thunderous applause and the continued re-call of both Frank, and Thomas Schippers, who was guest conductor for Sunday afternoon. Schippers, by his presence and noble bearing, kept the orchestra under strict command and the result of his able and beautiful hand and direction was electrifying, and magnificant.

It will long go down as one of the top experiences for both orchestra and audience.

Tanglewood on Parade, this week Wed. will be added to the weekend concerts, with Arthur Fiedler conducting Wednesday, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, who will conduct, as guest, on Friday and Sunday.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
AUG 5 1966

WAMC-FM Schedules Tanglewood Coverage

Exclusive "live" coverage of the 1966 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood will continue to be the schedule highlight next week on WAMC-FM, 90.5 mc.

On Sunday, at 2:30 p.m. the distinguished American pianist Grant Johannesen will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Saint-Saen's Fourth Piano Concerto. Also on the program, to be conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, is Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No.

The following night at 8 p.m. a program of chamber music by Berkshire Music Center performers will be featured. On Tuesday at the same hour, more chamber music will be performed by the Lenox quartet.

Wednesday, the annual "Tanglewood Gala Evening" will be heard live from the Music Shed beginning at 8 p.m. Thursday's concert will begin at the same hour and will feature a performance by the Tanglewood Choir.

For the Friday night program at 9 p.m. Sixten Ehrling has been invited to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two works: Symphony No. 1 by Sibelius and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4.

Erich Leinsdorf returns to the podium on Saturday at 8 to direct the Boston Symphony in Hindemith's Mathis der Maler and Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations. A Tchaikovsky piano concerto will also be performed with a winner of the Tchaikovsky Competition [illegible]

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
W. 500
AUG 4 1966

Tanglewood In Its Busiest Week

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood when Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday (August 5) at 9:00 p. m., Saturday (August 6) at 8:00 p. m. and Sunday (August 7).) afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday (August 3). Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday evening (August 6).

The two and a half hour Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will begin at 10:30 on Saturday (August 6) morning.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, will be [illegible] Berkshire Festival [illegible] recital program on August 2) evening. [illegible] making appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer but Tuesday's concert will be her only full length recital. The proceeds of the chamber music will benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center has been invited to three programs during the Festival's sixth week. Last evening there was a program of chamber music performed by members of the Center's Fellowship program. The third Berkshire Music Center Orchestra concert will take place on Thursday (August 4) evening at 8:00 p. m. in the Theatre and consists of a concerto program with members of the Music Center as the soloists. The final Berkshire Music Center concert this week, a Baroque concert under the direction of Igor Kipnis will be on Sunday (August 7) morning at 10:00 in the Theatre.

ATHENS HERALD
Thursday, August 4, 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
AUG 4 1966

Magic Flute at Tanglewood

Four [illegible] concerts wi[illegible] week of [illegible] Festival at [illegible] ton Sy[illegible] grams [illegible] regular [illegible] Aug. 5, a[illegible] 6 at 8 p.[illegible] at 2:30 [illegible] concer[illegible] Boston [illegible] program[illegible] czewski[illegible] Sympho[illegible] conduct[illegible] day, an[illegible] conduct[illegible] Wednesd[illegible] Leinsdo[illegible] cert ve[illegible] The Magic Flute on Saturday evening.

JUDITH RASKIN

Mr. Skrowaczewski, who is making his first appearance at Tanglewood will begin Friday's second suite from Romeo and Juliet. Cellist Leslie Parnas will then join Mr. Skrowaczewski and the Orchestra for a performance of the Saint-Saens Cello Concerto. Friday's concert will close with Schumann's Symphony No. 4.

The weekend prelude on Friday will consist of songs by Mozart for soprano and piano performed by Phyllis Curtin and Richard Woitach, and the Organ Fantasia in F minor, K 608, by Mozart. John Ferris will be the organist.

Saturday's concert will be devoted completely to The Magic Flute. The cast will include: George Shirley as Tamino; Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey as the three ladies; John Reardon as Papageno; and Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night. Monostatos will be sung by Nico Castel and Pamina by Judith Raskin. The Three Spirits will be sung by Miss Marsh, Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey and the Priests by Robert Jones and Ara Berberian. Ezio Flagello will be Sarastro. Anne Elgar will sing Papagena, and Messrs. Jones and Berberian will be the two men in armor.

For Sunday afternoon's concert Mr. Skrowaczewski will have Grant Johannesen as soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The two concerti by Saint-Saens to be performed this week continue the theme of the Romantic Concerto. This concert will also include Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

For the Boston Pops at Tanglewood program on Wednesday (Aug. 3), Arthur Fiedler has invited saxophonist Stan Getz to be soloist in this annual program for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund. As always Mr. Fiedler will surprise the audience with several favorite encores that make a Boston Pops concert a special occasion.

GEORGE SHIRLEY

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
AUG 6 1966

JOHN REARDON, baritone, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight in a performance of Mozart's "The Magic Flute."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Circ. 21,114
AUG 5 1966

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS. — GRANT JOHANNESEN, pianist, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director, at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, playing the Saint-Saen's Piano Concerto No. 4, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conducting, thus continuing this summer's theme of "the Romantic Concerto."

Preceding one of the busiest weeks at Tanglewood, the summer music festival home of the Boston Symphony orchestra, the past weekend highlighted a distinguished presentation of the Schumann concerto, featuring Claude Frank who gave a matchless performance, together with an inclusion in this year's newest feature "Week-end Prelude" of the Andante and Variations for two pianos, two cellos and horn, in which Mr. Frank was assisted by Lillian Kallir, Martin Hoperman, Mischa Nieland and James Stagliano. This 7 P. M. feature, which lasts about an hour, and which also included a program of Schuman Lieder, with Ara Berberlain, Bass, and Claude Frank at the piano is suitably titled, and sets a lovely opening for a weekend packed with reams of beautiful music. Including the Saturday morning's rehearsal, open to the public, it now makes possible a weekend of five concerts in all. The later Friday program, beginning at 9 (the hour between permitting a delightful time of refreshment or stroll about the grounds or browsing in the music store,) was heady with a diversified program including Smetana's overture to the Bartered Bride, three nocturnes of Debussy, as variant from the opening, as were the "variations on an original theme of Elgar" which concluded the program. The Schumann cello concerto soloed Jules Eskin, first chair in the orchestra, and his rendition of this romantic vivacious and fresh approach, and the interweaving of cello and orchestral body was a memorable experience.

The Sunday afternoon orchestra's program, opening with Rossini's Overture to La Gazza Ladra, was equally exhuberant in its presentation of Moussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition, orchestrated by Maurice Ravel and the Schumann Piano Concerto, again featuring Claude Frank as solo artist at the keyboard. Excellence of performance, both orchestral and solo was proven by the thunderous applause and the continued re-call of both Frank, and Thomas Schippers, who was guest conductor for Sunday afternoon. Schippers, by his presence and noble bearing, kept the orchestra under strict command and the result of his able and beautiful hand and direction was electrifying, and magnificant.

It will long go down as one of the top experiences for both orchestra and audience.

Tanglewood on Parade, this week Wed. will be added to the weekend concerts, with Arthur Fiedler conducting Wednesday, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minneapolis Symphony, who will conduct, as guest, on Friday and Sunday.

ATHENS HERALD
Thursday, August 4, 1966

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766
AUG 5 1966

105 7

WAMC-FM Schedules Tanglewood Coverage

Exclusive "live" coverage of the 1966 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood will continue to be the schedule highlight next week on WAMC-FM, 90.3 mc.

* * *

On Sunday, at 2:30 p.m., the distinguished American pianist Grant Johannesen will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Saint-Saen's Fourth Piano Concerto. Also on the program, to be conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, in Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance by Samuel Barber and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

The following night at 8 p.m., a program of chamber music by Berkshire Music Center performers will be featured. On Tuesday at the same hour, more chamber music will be performed by the Lenox quartet.

Wednesday, the annual "Tanglewood Gala Evening" will be heard live from the Music Shed beginning at 8 p.m. Thursday's concert will begin at the same hour and will feature a performance by the Tanglewood Choir.

* * *

For the Friday night program at 9 p.m. Sixten Erling has been invited to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two works: Symphony No. 1 by Sibelius and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4.

Erich Leinsdorf returns to the podium on Saturday at 8 p.m. to direct the Boston Symphony in Hindemith's Mathis der Maler and Tchaikovsky's Rococo variations. A Tchaikovsky piano concerto will also be performed, with a winner of the Tchaikovsky Competition as soloist.

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
W. 500
AUG 4 1966

Tanglewood In Its Busiest Week

Four major orchestral concerts will highlight the busiest week of the 1966 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Three Boston Symphony Orchestra programs will be given at the regular weekend hours Friday (August 5) at 9:00 p. m., Saturday (August 6) at 8:00 p. m., and Sunday (August 7)) afternoon at 2:30. Added to this week's concerts will be the annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood program. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minneapolis Symphony, will be the guest conductor on Friday and Sunday, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Pops concert Wednesday (August 3). Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" Saturday evening (August 6).

The two and a half hour Open Rehearsal for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund will begin at 10:30 on Saturday (August 6) morning.

Phyllis Curtin, who is again this summer a member of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, will be heard in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music program on Tuesday (August 2) evening. Miss Curtin is making appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer but Tuesday's concert will be her only full length recital. The proceeds of the chamber music series benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center has been invited to three programs during the Festival's sixth week. Last evening there was a program of chamber music performed by members of the Center's Fellowship program. The third Berkshire Music Center Orchestra concert will take place on Thursday (August 4) evening at 8:00 p. m. in the Theatre and consists of a concerto program with members of the Music Center as the soloists. The final Berkshire Music Center concert this week, a Baroque concert under the direction of Igor Kipnis will be on Sunday (August 7) morning at 10:00 in the Theatre.

Music:

Skrowaczewski In Berkshire Debut

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The efficient, methodical style of Stanislaw Skrowaczewski gave an uncommon experience last night to a Tanglewood audience of 4,951. It was his debut conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

He appeared in Worcester last season at the Auditorium, conducting his own Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

Last night's events were the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m., and Symphony Concert at 9 p.m. This was the start of the Berkshire Music Festival's sixth weekend.

Solist for theater concert was Leslie Parnas in Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto No. 1 in A Minor, Opus 33. Orchestral works were the Second "Romeo and Juliet" Suite by Prokofieff, and Schumann's Symphony No. 4, in D Minor, Opus 120.

The preliminary program was Mozart's Songs for Soprano, sung by Phyllis Curtin, admirably accompanied at the piano by Richard Woitach, and Mozart's Fantasia in F Minor, for Organ, K.608, played by John Ferris.

Not since the great Gregor Piatigorski, and Pablo Casals, have we heard such cello playing as was done by Parnas last night.

His performance of the Saint-Saens' Concerto was a joy to the ear and dazzling to the senses. Skrowaczewski drew a straight but unyielding line of communication between soloist and orchestra. It was mared only by an occasionally overbrassy sound.

Parnas has an agile technique that borders on the virtuosic. His bowing was decisive. He produces a big tone, and his gentle sounds had rich hues. The man was thoroughly involved with instrument and music.

The Concerto's final sections were well stable rhythmically and all of the hazardous harmonics did not come out true to pitch. But these were actually small factors in an otherwise brilliant performance.

It is pure speculation to see for Romeo and Juliet in the Prokofieff Suite. It might as well be Frankie and Johnnie, so far as musical matters are concerned.

Orchestra and conductor gave the music an excellent abstract performance. There was marvelous organization of orchestral mechanics well-played solos and a wealth of rich orchestral color.

Skrowaczewski was lucidly clear and expansive with gestures without waste. The orchestra played with unusual glitter. In some stretches, interest was sustained with sound rather than impetus or strength of form.

At the earlier concert, Miss Curtin sang five Mozart songs in German, one in French. Her pronunciation of the German was more articulate.

She lent lovely voice to these Mozart gems. Her style was musicianly and her interpretations discerning.

Some like "Contentment Reposes," and 'It is Evening" were sung without vocal strain, producing a gentle, lyrical quality. Others "Begotten by Warm Imagination," "God's Angels Weep," encompassed a wider dramatic scope. "When Love Looks" and "In a Dark and lonely Wood," the singer utilized graceful communication although not always spot-center of pitch.

Ferris' performance of the Mozart Fantasia was less fortunate.

The introduction was pompous, but somewhat smudged. Ensuing counterpoint became neater, moderate in tempo, and mounting toward an impressive climax with some rhythmic irregularity.

There was a considerable pause en route, when the instrument jammed. When this was rectified, with a quiet chorale, happy, somewhat rocky, and Ferris brought the work in for a loud landing.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 61,129
AUG 6 1966

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
AUG 6 1966

Music Review

A Debut in the Shed

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

A CONDUCTOR new to Tanglewood made his appearance at last night's concert in the Shed. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, the director of the Minneapolis orchestra, was the guest for the first program of the Berkshire Festival's sixth weekend. He will also conduct tomorrow afternoon's concert. Tonight the orchestra's regular director, Erich Leinsdorf, will play the entire opera of Mozart "The Magic Flute" in concert form.

The Prokofieff second suite from his "Romeo and Juliet" consists of seven sketches in which Skrowaczewski gave each one its proper frame. There was abundant ingenuity in his depiction of the malicious gaiety and even mischief the composer inserts in all his music. After a graphic introduction (one can imagine the Montagues being presented to the Capulets) in which harsh dissonants are ground in viciously, there follows a far-leaping schottische. "Juliet" is surely a reference to Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream."

* * *

PROKOFIEFF'S skill here shows up in many ways, but he gives the solo cellist (Eskin) a lovely solo which surreptitiously is taken over by a French horn in almost the same timbre. He plays the same trick in the first episode where he lets the violas appear to slide upwards an octave but the steps are articulated really by the flute. In the "Dance" there are the violent jumps and departures from traditional harmony which are typical of his style. The romantic viola solo in "The Parting" was well played by the orchestra's principal, Burton Fine.

It became apparent only after the fact that all these details were due to the skill of the conductor in maintaining a balance which let the various lines appear in their own light without clouding or shading from the other sections.

* * *

THE SOLOIST of the evening was Leslie Parnas in the Saint-Saens A minor cello concerto. Skrowaczewski was continuingly discreet and effective in his accompanying here, although Parnas' tone was capable of carrying with ease and more than ordinary power. He played with conviction and exceptional taste.

Saint-Saens does not exactly plumb emotional depths but the concerto is one long song. It is a remarkable coincidence that the opening phrase of the concerto is nearly a carbon copy of the graph that the analogous idiom in Schumann's 4th symphony, which was to close the program would pursue.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 115,966
AUG 7 1966

At Tanglewood

'Magic Flute' Combines Enchantment, Spectacle

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Mozart's "Magic Flute" at Tanglewood Saturday night was part enchantment, part spectacle.

100-Member Choir

High at the back of the stage was a platform along which 13 soloists ranged, materializing from behind three strategically placed panels whenever their characterizations led them into the action.

Seated in front of the platform were a few more than 100 members of the Tanglewood Choir and in front of them was the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

At far right was a podium for Mac Morgan who read sections of narration written by Erich Leinsdorf, conductor.

On his podium Leinsdorf directed the vast, complex operation without reference to a score.

Enchantment of Music

The enchantment came with the music.

"Magic Flute" is a fairy tale made up from mixed sources. It is a child's story about a prince who tries to save a princess with the dubious help of a comic friend and the great help of a flute with magic powers.

There are political and philosophical and moral messages, also symbolism, but it is Mozart's unifying score that has kept up interest in this opera through the years.

And it is a score of great variety which never loses its flexible, amiable optimism even though it was composed during the last months of Mozart's sad last year.

Greeted by Chuckles

The performance Saturday was enthusiastically received by the 9952 customers. It was repeatedly greeted by chuckles over its buffoonery, smiles for its lighthearted, sparkling melodies, and repeatedly interrupted by applause for its soloists.

Leading the cast were George Shirley, Tamino; Judith Raskin, Pamina; John Reardon, Papageno; Ezio Flagello, Sarastro; Beverly Sills, Queen of the Night; and Anne Elgar, Papagena.

The three ladies in attendance on the Queen of the Night, who are required to sing some delightful ensembles, were Jane Marsh, JoAnna Simon and Batyah Godfrey.

Nico Castel was Monostatos; Ara Berberian sang three minor parts, and Veronica Tyler joined Misses Simon and Godfrey to become three genii.

Touch for Comedy

Shirley was heroic—his tone was pure and fre; John Reardon was a Papageno with a fine touch for comedy; Judith Raskin sang sweetly, as all good princesses do; Beverly Sills was strong in her first big aria, inaccurate in her seond ("Der Holle Rache"), but they are two of the most difficult coloratura arias in the business; Nico Castel needed more power and nastiness for the villainous Monostatos; and Flagello was a regal high priest with a deep, full basso.

It was a "Magic Flute" with a few flaws Saturday night, but it was a production of entertaining scope which ran about an hour past the usual Saturday-night limits, and the flaws mere minor.

It is still one of Mozart's great scores. The audience applauded it mightily.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099
AUG 7 1966

Soloist Saves Day

Elaborate Body Work Trips Up Orchestra

By McClaren Harris

LENOX — Minneapolis Conductor Stanislaw Skrowaczewski was a guest of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday night at Tanglewood for a program of Prokofiev, Saint-Saens and Schumann.

The evening revealed some fine solo playing, uneven orchestral work and defeatist conducting.

Mr. Skorwaczewski appears broad-shouldered and long-armed on the podium. Perpetually active, he conducts with his hands, his elbows and his shoulders, the right rapping out meter with decisive strokes—always sharp, occasionally savage—the left leading the expression.

THERE IS A SIGN for everything: indications for rhythm, grand gestures for every alteration of tempo, each cue and nuance of style.

He even inserts eighth-notes with little flicks of the wrist. By so doing, Mr. Skorwaczewski strangled the orchestra with over-direction.

As if he were afraid of losing his players he tried to explain everything to them in exact motions and they, who are eminently capable of handling most matters by themselves, were confused.

If one treats his performances as second-rate they will play second-rate; and in Prokoofiev's "Romeo and Juliet" second suite, they did.

Rhythms staggered, entrances were limp, phrases were choppy and seemed full of hesitation and pauses between sections were too long, making the "Romeo" suite appear much longer than it really is.

THERE WERE ALSO faults not traceable to the conductor; poor intonation and tone quality in the winds and low strings, plus one contrabass which buzzed like a Krummhorn.

Technical considerations aside the same conditions, alas, prevailed in Schumanns' symphony number four. Mr. Skrowaczewski showed us each tree, each sapling but nowhere could we find the forest. It was as if he were taking a breath between every phrase and saying, "and now this: . . ."

The musical clauses were individually curved and alive of themselves but unrelated in progression; as a whole the four movements churned in an esthetic limbo, making very little sense at all.

THE INTERVENING work was Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto in A minor, for which Leslie Parnas of the Boston University faculty was soloist. The concerto is sort of an airy composition, simple and direct, giving way to pure bravura in the first movement, but Mr. Parnas acquitted himself right honorably.

Technically forging his way through the concerto's trials with dispatch. He also proved to be a fine melodist, delivering Saint-Saens rhapsodic swirls with sensitivity and secure tone. This was the evening's only really successful effort.

Saturday night Erich Leinsdorf conducted a concert performance of Mozart's "Magic Flute" and on Sunday afternoon Mr. Skrowaczewski returns to lead a program of Barber, Saint-Saens and Beethoven.

TIGHT BINDING

107 7

...ate when the intro... ...jammed. When this was

...py, somewhat rocky, and ...landing.

Body Work Orchestra

...thetic limbo, making very little sense at all.

THE INTERVENING work was Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto in A minor, for which Leslie Parnas of the Boston University faculty was soloist. The concerto is sort of an airy composition, simple and direct, giving way to pure bravura in the final movement, but Mr. Parnas acquitted himself right honorably.

Technically forging his way through the concerto's trials with dispatch. He also proved to be a fine melodist, delivering Saint-Saens rhapsodic swirls with sensitivity and secure tone. This was the evening's only really successful effort.

Saturday night Erich Leinsdorf conducted a concert performance of Mozart's "Magic Flute" and on Sunday afternoon, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski returns to lead a program of Barber, Saint-Saens and Beethoven.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,910
AUG 7 1966

Music: Mozart Comic Opera At Berkshire Festival

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Last night at Tanglewood the entire program was devoted to a concert performance of Mozart's two-part comic opera, "The Magic Flute." The audience numbered 9,952.

Erich Leinsdorf conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The 18 principal and secondary roles were sung by 13 soloists. The ensemble of priests, slaves and people was performed by the Tanglewood Choir of 125 mixed voices.

Although no scenery or props or special costumes were used, occasional action was. The illusions were also emphasized by having principals on stage when it coincided only with their participation in the actual drama.

They appeared from behind panels on an elevated platform behind the orchestra and chorus. In some instances this proved a detriment. Most of the time, Leinsdorf insisted on enough orchestral suppression to allow voices and German text to remain clear and dominant.

The libretto by Giesecke and Schikaneber borders so on the ridiculous that Mozart's music would seem to be self-sufficient. Naturally, a well-directed stage production can be good theater.

Even a sketchy knowledge of the plot was sufficient for last night's audience to follow the gist of proceedings.

Mac Morgan was narrator. It was somehwat incongruous to hear an English narration along with German enactment. But Morgan spoke clearly, slowly enough for understanding and appeared to relish his important role. Morgan recounted what had happend, filled in the missing sections (considerable deletion was made) and led impending action.

In some instances, such first aid was not needed. A classic example was the superlative singing and carrying - on of the role of Papageno, the birdcatcher, by John Reardon.

Here is a baritone voice with light texture, but sensitivity, backed up with intelligence and dramatic flair. In his opening aria, "I Am a Man of Widespread Fame," and his comic scene in which his lips are figuratively sealed with a padlock (he sings 'Hm, Hm, Hm,"), he was hilariously frustrated.

Egyptian Prince

Another superlative performance was that of George Shirley as Tamino, Egyptian prince. Shirley has ringingly clear, cool tenor voice that brought luster and stamina to such arias as 'O Image Angel-Like and Fair" and "How Strong Your Tone With Magic Spell."

Beverly Sills was one of the principals whose voice suffered in articulation because of distance from the audience — or perhaps it was the necessity to literally sing through orchestral sound. She was nevertheless vivacious and dramatically persuasive as the "Queen of the Night."

In "Oh, Tremble Not," she negotiated coloratura passages with ease and tonal purity.

The queen's ladies were a lyrical and vocally compatible trio in the voices of Jane Marsh, Joanne Simon and Batyah Godfrey. Just as effective were Veronica Tyler, and Misses Simon and Godfrey as the three spirits.

Nico Castrel was vocally and dramatically effective as Monostatos the Moor. Judith Raskin was somewhat insecure, but still displayed a pleasing lyrical voice as Pamina, the queen's daughter.

The rolling bass and effortless singing of Ezio Flagello were valuable assets to the role of the High Priest Sarastro. He was a bit stilted in appearance, but compensated with a particularly rich, low range.

The chorus sang with verve and precision and an awareness of its function. The orchestra was in top form as an instrument of support, euphony and sustainer of vitality and unwavering cheer.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra this afternoon in Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditations," and "Dance of Third or "Eroica" Symphony.

Grant Johannesen ULL BE soloist in Saint-Saens' Fourth Piano Concerto.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 132,266
AUG 8 1966

Tanglewood Has 'Flute' On Program

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Bruno Walter once called "The Magic Flute" Mozart's spiritual testament. Certainly this enchanting score cast its familiar spell when the opera was given in concert form at Tanglewood Saturday night.

In fact I could not overlook one prominent contemporary composer in the audience who wept unashamedly after one of Tamino's arias in Act One Erich Leinsdorf, with a wealth of operatic experience, conducted an excellent cast with obvious dedication and warm affection.

George Shirley, the Tamino of Saturday night's performance, was in superb form and shaped the music with an elegance and vocal control tsat were exemplary. And Judith Raskin, the Pamina, after a somewhat pedestrian beginning, sang like an angel when she reached the familiar "Ach, Ich Fuhl's" and from that point was an unassailable Mozartean.

* * *

As Sarastro Ezio Flagello used his huge voice with telling effect, particularly in the aria "In diesen heiligen Hallen," although he lacked resonance in some of the lower notes and his German diction left something to be desired. John Reardon's Papageno was somewhat short on voice and carrying power and he further vitiated the characterization with too much "stage busisess," something hardly called for in a concert version.

Beverly Sills was the Queen of the Night and she proved her musicianship in the taxing "Der Hoelle Rache," which naturally brought down the house.

Among those taking smaller roles were Jane Marsh and Veronica Tyle, the Tchaikowsky Competition winners, who were respectively one of the Three Ladies and one of the Three Genii. The ensemble work was one of the highlights of this performance under Mr. Leinsdorf.

* * *

Joanna Simon, Batyah Godfrey, Nico Castel, Ara Berberian, Robert Jones, and Anne Elgar were part of the large cast. The chorus, which had been prepared by Iva Dee Hiatt, did an admirable job, much better than is ordinarily encountered at this summer festival. And the Boston Symphony was in its usual suave form all evening.

Mac Morgan was the narrator for the performance, using a text that had been prepared by Mr. Leinsdorf for the occasion. Except for the spoken dialogue, this version seemed to be substantially complete and was warmly applauded by an audience of close to 10,000 persons in the Shed and on the surrounding lawns.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 55,425
AUG 6 1966

CHAMBER CONCERT — The Philadelphia Woodwind Quintet presents a chamber concert in the Casino at Congress Park, Saratoga Springs, sponsored by the Saratoga Performing Arts Center at 8:30 p.m. Maonday.

TANGLEWOOD —Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Mozart's Magic Flute with the Tanglewood Choir at 8 p.m. today;

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducts in Barber's Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance, Saint-Saen's Piano Concerto No. 4 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow; Lenox Quartet in Haydn's Quartet in G minor, Bartok's Quartet No. 5 and Beethoven's Quartet in E minor, Op. 59, No. 2 at 8 p.m. Tuesday; Weekend Prelude of Tchaikovsky's Trio for Piano, Violin and Cello at 7 p.m. Friday, followed by Sixten Ehrling conducting Sibelius' Symphony No. 1 and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 at 9 p.m. Friday, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 26,771
AUG 8 1966

Guest Conductor At Tanglewood Directs Colorful Programs

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, director of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, was guest conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra for two concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this past weekend. There was good attendance for the colorful programs he led: nearly 10,000 on Friday night and 7000 for the warm Sunday afternoon.

On Friday the program was preceded by a prelude in which Willis Curtain presented six Mozart songs in a delightful soprano voice. This was followed by Mozart's Fantasia in F minor for organ, played by John Ferris but unfortunately interruptd by a technical breakdown of the instrument. The main program with Mr. Skrowczewski in charge opened with Prokofief's Romeo and Juliet suite No. 2, the Saint-Saens cello Concerto No. 1, with Leslie Parnas as soloist, and Symphony No. 4 by Schumann.

Sunday afternoon, the great Third Symphony (Eroica) of Beethoven was given a dramatic performance under the guest conductor's hand. The concerto chosen for this program (there is one in each program this season) was the Saint-Saens piano concerto No. 4 with Grant Johannesen as soloist. It was preceded by Barber's Op. 23-A, taken from the ballet "Medea."

Saturday night Boston Symphony director Erich Leinsdorf thrilled an audience of more than 10,000 with a great production of Mozart's "The Magic Flute." The orchstra was joined by 100 voices of the Tanglewood Choir, 13 soloists, anda narrator, Mac Morgan.

This week the annual Tanglewood Gala will be held on Wednesday night for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Aaron Copland will share conducting duties with Erich Leinsdorf, the Berkshire Music Center orchestra will be heard with the Boston Symphony, there will be real cannons for the 1812 Overture of Tchaikovsky, and Sen. Ted Kennedy will narrate Copland's "Lincoln Portrait." Prizes will be awarded during intermission, and fireworks will conclude the evening.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 93,709
AUG 8 1966

Leinsdorf Conducts 'The Magic Flute'

By JOHN F. KYES
Gazette Music Critic

LENOX — A high point in the season at Tanglewood came Saturday, when Erich Leinsdorf presented a concert version (in German) of Mozart's opera, "The Magic Flute."

Gazette Review

The event, which drew nearly 10,000, was placed between two programs conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, who made a deep impression at Worcester a few months ago as leader of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

On Friday and Sunday he offered works of Saint-Saens, Leslie Parnas as soloist in the Vioncello Concerto No. 1 in A minor, Grant Johannesen in the Piano Concerto No. 4 in C minor, also music of Prokofiev, Schumann, Barber and Beethoven.

Streamlining

Leinsdorf's streamlined novelty was the successor to his massive "Lohengrin" experiment of last year. Instead of an uncut opera occupying three evenings, the "Flute" was condensed into three hours, with narration written by Leinsdorf to bridge the gaps) tellingly declaimed by Mac Morgan.

The absurd, but highly amusing story, fine cast, large chorus and Mozartean contingent of the Boston Symphony Orchestra held the audience until the final standing ovations.

The Tanglewood Choir of about 125 voices prepared by Iva Dee Hiatt was alert and eloquent in the role of priests, slaves, etc.

Leinsdorf, conducting without a score, drew forth orchestral beauties with the operatic skill developed in years at the Met."

The management made a hit by handing out complete free librettos in German and English, with ample light to read them.

A high favorite was John Reardon as Papageno, the birdcatcher. He will repeat his success in "Carmina Burana" at Worcester this fall.

George Shirley's rich, unstrained tenor was magnificent as Tamino, the prince, Judith Raskin's soprano was of rare beauty as Pamina, and Beverly Sills contributed flashing and skilled coloratura, after a light-voiced start, as Queen of the Night.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
AUG 6 1966

Skrowaczewski Conducts BSO At Tanglewood

Program Combines Stern Power and Romantic Warmth

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX—Stanislaw Skrowaczewski is a technician with a taste for melody. He conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Friday with precision as well as grace.

To open the program at 9 he filled Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet Suite No. 2 with stern power. To close it he infused Schumann's Symphony No. 4, Op. 120, with romantic warmth.

Cello Soloist

In the middle, before intermission, he was a strong and secure provider of stable accompaniment for Leslie Parnas, cellist, soloist for Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto No. 1, Op. 33.

Skrowaczewski (pronunced, approximately, Skrovachevski) was born in Poland, studied at Krakow and Paris and became conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra in 1960.

At Tanglewood Friday he displayed a businesslike podium style that had a touch of pedantic professor in it. His manner was exact, almost fussy, his gestures graceful, his instructions clear, his music clean, clear and beautiful.

Prokofiev Suite

The Prokofiev suite is a colorful work of wide variety, and the conductor presented it with an intelligent restraint.

The colors remained bright, but there was no hint of garishness.

Parnas, the cellist, has won a few prizes (Moscow included) and is first cellist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

He played Saint-Saens' concerto with a highly agile hand on the fingerboard, but there were many slightly off-pitch notes during the high-speed passages.

There was an excitement in his music, however, and the middle, slow section of the concerto was fluid and lyrical.

He played, for the most part, with a clean, strong, well-defined tone that was enlivened by a short, fast vibrato.

Schumann Symphony

The Schumann Symphony No. 4 was a beauty. Skrowaczewski seemed well aware that the composer was exuberant with love for his bride when he wrote it and helped the tender melodies radiate joy.

The prelude program at 7 offered a couple of performances of surprising contrast.

Phyllis Curtin, soprano, sang six of Mozart's songs with a voice of purity and a musicianship of taste and elegance.

Her tones rang when the message called for declaration and glowed when it called for expression of love. Her voice soared and floated, and even though the fine details of her artistry were unavoidably lost in the great shed, she captivated her audience and was called back several times by insistent applause.

She offered no encores, however, and the rest of the prelude was taken up by John Ferris and a performance of Mozart's Fantasia in F Minor for Organ, K. 608.

Technical Problem

The organ stopped in the middle of the piece ("jammed," he said), and a technician was summoned to the stage to set it straight.

The Fantasia was composed for a mechanical organ operated by a revolving cylinder propelled by a spring.

The piece is too good for such a contrivance, but Mozart could hardly have written a mediocre piece.

The performance Friday at Tanglewood didn't display the piece at its best. Runs and fast figures were blurred, and the rubato was exaggerated in 19th Century florid style.

It was a disappointment, especially following the superb performance by Miss Curtin.

Tonight 13 soloists will sing 18 parts of Mozart's "Magic Flute" with the Tanglewood Choir and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 79,331
AUG 8 1966

Exaggeration Fails to Diminish Beethoven

Personalized 'Eroica' Conducted Sunday By Skrowaczewski

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX—Usually a universally great work of art such as Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony can withstand a little personalizing.

Deliberate, Expansive

Such was the case at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, regular conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony, was guest leader of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as he was Friday night.

He presented an "Eroica" that was deliberate, expansive, and somewhat overemphasized. Apparently he wanted to make it dramatic. The result was that some of its key sequences tended to become exaggerated.

The first movement was brisk and well shaped, but the second ("Marcia funebre") began and ended at a dreadfully slow pace, much slower than was necessary (or is customary) to establish its melancholy mood.

Dramatization

The colorful "transitional" passages ending the third movement and beginning the fourth were, also, dramatized more than is usual, and the last movement was either sleepy or relaxing depending upon the point of view.

It shouldn't have been either.

By and large, however, Beethoven's masterpiece shone through with great strength and beauty.

Johannesen Plays

Before intermission the orchestra accompanied pianist Grant Johannesen for a performance of Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4, Op. 44.

This concerto, if we may quote a friend, "is a gooey, chewy marshmallow," and there was evidence Sunday that both conductor and pianist were trying to diminish its lush sweetness.

But neither Skrowaczewski's pedantic precision nor Johannesen's muscular strength seemed to reduce it enough.

Formidable Technique

Johannesen is a big, hulking man with a formidable technique. He seems always in command of giant, crashing, bunches of notes and cascading runs.

He is a technician of high order, but Sunday his touch was variable—sensitive during a few sweet, quietly flowing passages, hard and brittle when it should have been strong.

The concerto, like Barber's Op. 23-A which preceded it, had its pleasing moments, but it never really jelled.

Barber Op. 23-A

Barber's Op. 23-A is a full orchestration of an excerpt from his ballet "Medea," written about 1946. "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance."

It is intended, according to the composer, to reflect Medea's emotions of pathological jealousy and revenge. It can lead a listener through a build-up of tension to a satisfying sonic shock, but it didn't do it Sunday.

The week's attendance was 40,975: — nearly 900 Tuesday night, [illegible],258 at Wednesday's Pops, 4951 Friday, 3658 at Saturday morning's open rehearsal, 10,194 Saturday night and 7016 Sunday afternoon.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
AUG 6 1966

Music Review

Mozart's 'Magic Flute'

By JAY ROSENFELD

STANISLAW Skrowaczewski, musical director of the Minneapolis symphony, yesterday afternoon conducted the second of the two programs he had been invited to conduct at Tanglewood. The Beethoven "Eroica" symphony, with which he closed his program, was a well-organized performance with a slight leaning to the dramatic side. He opened the afternoon with one of the few contemporary and American works that will have been heard on the Berkshire Festival season's schedule: Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance."

Barber wrote "Medea" as a ballet and these are two excerpts. The Meditation is a filmy and diaphanously-textured mood piece which conveys the spirit of the lament very clearly. The grief-stricken Medea utters her wails and an invisible chorus in the instruments of the orchestra confirm her despair. Whether danced or played, indoors or out, in the original Greek of Euripides or in a translation to a language limited scholars understand, it is a powerful story. Barber's music could well have been used to support a performance of the tragedy such as it is sometimes played in one end of the elliptical Olympic Stadium at Athens.

* * *

THE DANCE OF Vengeance is a more violent expression of the abandoned woman's reaction. Barber's language is graphic but happily he does not depart from the musical style he inherited from his elders. The Boston orchestra's tone and depth under Skrowaczewski's baton was vivid.

The soloist of the afternoon was Grant Johannesen playing the C minor piano concerto of Saint-Saens. His command of the keyboard was brilliant, although he seemed worthy of a more substantial vehicle. The first movement is outmoded; only in the last and final allegro does the vivacity of the tempo and the youthful gaiety of the spirit give a pianist such as Johannesen an opportunity to show his capabilities. There were sparks flying from the fireworks of his fingers. His tone in the statements the first movement requires was bold and virile, although the conductor kept his nose pretty close to the score of the accompaniment and did not allow the soloist the complete emergence his playing warranted.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT was a day to mark in the Tanglewood record book. Erich Leinsdorf, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute" in concert form with a platoon of superior soloists and an excellently trained chorus. He not only retained every note to the last repeat but, using no score, was in confident poise and masterful command of every detail of a huge stageful of performers.

The libretto is a strangely illogical sequence of episodes and Leinsdorf himself wrote a dozen or more explanatory links which were narrated with exceedingly meaningful articulation by Mac Morgan. They were not only amusing and illuminating but served to an unexpected degree to clarify what a stage presentation might have made apparent.

* * *

THE LONG LIST of vocal soloists included singers in the main roles who were all outstanding. Tenor George Shirley as Tamino established, from his first "Oh help me," a plane of vocal involvement which persisted throughout the whole opera. John Reardon as the bird-catcher, Papageno, was the most graphic among the singers and injected just enough of the clowning antics of his role to enliven the action.

Beverly Sills as the Queen of the Night sang her "Wrath of Hell" with startling vocal venom and magnificent encompassment of the range. Judith Raskin as Pamina sang with ravishing quality and her voice and its use made her role most credible. Ezio Flagello as Sarastro was menacingly dominant and vocally impressive. Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, Batyah Godfrey, Veronica Tyler, Ara Berbarian, Anne Elgar and Nico Castel were all of such satisfying rank that it was a pity the work did not provide them greater opportunities.

* * *

THE LARGE CAST which the librettist, Schickaneder, provided was treated by Mozart as a flower bed in which each blossom had to be given ample sunlight and rich soil in which to thrive. He distributed his arias and duets and trios with lavish extravagance and so contrasted them in their sequence that interest is kept unfailingly high and live.

Leinsdorf used only parts of the string sections in many of the solos and the quality of the tone and alacrity of the support were consistent joys. But it was the pervading vitality of the performance which made it so memorable. The conductor proved that opera without a stage production can be as rewarding and attention-riveting as one which involves the huge impedimenta of the stage.

* * *

THE CHORUS prepared by Iva Dee Hiatt was alert and confident. The orchestra, in addition to the superlative accompaniments, was magnificent in the overture and then in the calm overture of the second act. Leinsdorf tried to hold off applause until the end of the acts but the audience of but two score less than 10,000 would not be denied the privilege, and their assumed right, to express their delight with the individual arias.

The soloists sang from a level behind and above the chorus which was ranged behind the orchestra. By "entering" and going "off stage" as the story unfolded the action was focussed on the pertinent episode. Furthermore their voices carried with the most effectiveness from that level. The opera took nearly an hour longer than the conventional symphony program but I can attest that one listener only became aware of it afterward when looking at his watch.

INCORRECT PAGINATION

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
AUG 8 1966

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 145,838
AUG 8 1966

Singers, Yes — Orchestra, No

'Flute' Loses Its Magic

By MICHAEL STEINBERG
Globe Critic

LENOX—Whether because of the intrinsic difficulty of the piece, because of Erich Leinsdorf's generally unsure hand with Mozart, or because of circumstances of a more localized sort, the "Magic Flute" performance at Tanglewood on Saturday evening was disappointing.

Not that it was all bad: some of the singing was excellent and so, too, was much of the Boston Symphony's playing, but taken all together, the performance was of low vitality, undistinguished in style, and without magic.

The range in "The Magic Flute" from the most sublime moments to the earthiest is immense. Schikaneder's libretto made paradoxical and highly original demands. As John N. Burk rightly says in the program notes, "The true magic of The Magic Flute is its stylistic integration," but it must have been an extremely hard piece to compose and it is for the same reasons such a hard one to perform.

This performance was unexpressive, not so much in the singing as in the playing. In "Ach, ich fuehl's" it is not enough for the heartbreak to be in Pamina's voice: there must be anguish in the very first chord in the strings. The two measures that begin Tamino's portrait aria are sighs that tell us before the words do, and better, that he has fallen in love. When Tamino and Pamina first come face to face their words are few and simple, but the violins take flight in a breathless broken chord figure.

But Pamina's heartbeat was a common clunk executed by bored string players. Of course the playing was deft and beautiful in the Overture and in the Monostatos aria and the chorale-prelude because anybody could see that something was going on in that music. The point is that in Mozart the meanest oom-pah says something and is part of an organic, living, breathing continuity. All that is something Leinsdorf fails to convey with his perpetual patting smooth of the music and hanging up the Do Not Disturb sign.

Along with chloroforming much of the music, Leinsdorf often embarrassed it with slow tempi. More disconcerting yet, the tempi were sometimes unsteady; the Pamina-Papageno duet must have had a 20 percent speed drop in the first four bars; "Ach, ich fuehl's," too slow to begin with, got slower and slower; the second Queen of Night aria jounced forward violently where the triplets begin in the voice. In the slower pieces, rhythms were apt to be vague producing soggy, shapeless masses of sound.

Inevitably this took its toll on the effectiveness even of the very good singers in the cast. The finest singing was done by Judith Raskin and George Shirley, the Pamina and Tamino. Raskin was especially wonderful, to begin with fo rthe soprano that remains so delicate while sounding so ample, and then for the exquisite musical and dramatic artistry with which she uses it. Shirley sounded a bit forced near the beginning, but the voice rang brilliantly in the scene with the Speaker and was very beautiful in the duet with Pamina; he, too, is a first-rate musician who, when technically at ease, sings with elegance, imagination, and intensity.

Beverly Sills sang the Queen of Night arias with dazzling fluency and accuracy and thoroughly musically, but without the dramatic force I expected after her Konstanze and Donna Anna. Her voice sounded a bit small and lustreless, and it never got to be quite steady. Ezio Flagello, the Sarastro, is another distinguished singer who, in spite of his customary nobility of phrasing and style, was disappointing, mainly because the crucial low notes sounded so hollow.

John Reardon, the Papageno, underdid the singing and overdid the camping rather. Ara Berberian, good enough as one of the Priests and one of the Men in Armor, with his awkward German and musically wooden declamation utterly bungled the great scene of the Speaker (a passage that Leinsdorf paced effectively and conducted forcefully).

The Three Ladies were Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Batyah Godfrey, vocally excellent, but excessively bland. The less subtle music of the three Genii was very well done by Veronica Tyler with Simon and Godfrey. Anne Elgar was too slow of tongue to manage Papagena effectively, and Nico Castel trivialized the part of Monostatos. Robert Jones did well with his brief assignments as a Priest and a Man in Armor. The Tanglewood Chorus had been prepared by Iva Dee Hiatt and sang very well.

The very slight suggestions of staging and costuming worked convincingly. "The Magic Flute" was sung in German. The dialogue was omitted, but the necessary space between musical numbers was provided by a narration written by Leinsdorf, a mixture of intelligence and corn that was appropriate, and a touch of condescension that was not. It was read by Mac Morgan with suitable effect.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 61,129
AUG 8 1966

Music: Johannesen Plays at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The sound piano artistry of Grant Johannesen and podium acumen of Stanislaw Skrowaczewski had a highly compatible influence on the Boston Symphony concert at the Berkshire Music Festival yesterday afternoon.

Johannesen

The 7,016 persons who attended brought the weekend total to 40,975.

As with Skrowaczewski's Friday night Tanglewood program, yesterday's historical order was in reverse - modern, romantic, classic.

It opened with Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance." Johannesen was soloist in Saint-Saens' Piano Concerto No 4 in C minor, Opus 44. Closing work was Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 in E flat major, "Eroica," Opus 55.

Johannesen proved to be both a keyboard poet and exponent of drama. The Saint-Saens gave him complete leeway in both areas. It's loaded with sugar content and flossy passages. Some of it is a pale sample of Lisztian viruosity.

No Mannerisms

Common incentives between pianist and conductor brought about a coherent performance, even through passages of tricky coordination. Johannesen obtained full sonorities without resorting to banging or mannerisms.

The opening conversation indicated that mutual objectives were to make this a straight-from-the-shoulder performance. Skrowaczewski attended to the pianist's every need.

Tempos were steadfast, blances favored the soloist, orchestral tone was rich. The orchestra confirmed the pianist's impulses and style.

Johannesen has all the techniques he needs to make his instrument speak brilliantly. The energetic finale had all the sparkle that one could ask for. Flowing arpeggio passages were clean but didn't intrude on the orchestra's rich harmonic patterns.

The brief "andante" had singing piano tone and a feeling of personal communication.

Johannesen is one of the more impressive young performers - a fine musician who expresses himself with distinction through the piano.

Barber's "Medea" music was an orchestral "tour-de-force," thanks to Skrowaczewski's detailed analysis. The work describes the emotionally turbulent Medea from the point of her motherly concern over her children to her vengeful dance as their murderess.

Each strand of tone was treated as an indispensable support of the musical and dramatic structure. The orchestra played magnificently—first as a sensitive instrument, then with sumptous display.

Beethoven's "Eroica" was by far the most difficult orchestral language. So far as we're concerned, the stringent test was the second movement, or "Funeral March."

It can either be one of the finest threnodies in music, or a prolonged bore. We have had the latter experience at Tanglewood, and elsewhere.

Its mournful character was lessened by an active tempo. Strings, oboe, flute and the rest were tonally engaging. The huge figure didn't impress as thick padding. And the end didn't sound like a despairing last gasp.

The other three movements were as effectual in concept, except that it takes a died-in-the-wool Beethoven devotee to put up gleefully with the interminable finale.

There were tightly-laced emotional values, ranging from tenderness to hunting calls and hymns of triumph.

Audience response was ecstatic.

Next on the Tanglewood agenda is the "Gala" on Wednesday night.

The Boston Symphony will play under Leinsdorf and Aaron Copland. Berkshire Center Orchestra will join the Boston Symphony.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy will narrate Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait" with the composer conducting. Both orchestras will play Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture," to which cannon and salute guns will be added.

We expect that the neighboring communities and Civilian Defense have been forewarned.

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 145,838
AUG 8 1966

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 234,733
AUG 8 1966

Tangle wood Soloist Projects Minimal Sensitivity

By GEOFFREY P. HELLMAN
Globe Critic

On Friday evening and Sunday afternoon the Boston Symphony was host at Tanglewood to Guest Conductor Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, presently with the Minneapolis Symphony.

Friday's program included Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet Suite No. 2, Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto No. 1 with Leslie Parnas, and Schumann's Symphony No. 4. On Sunday's program appeared barber's Ballet Transcription, "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," Saint-Saens' Piano Concerto No. 4, with Grant Johannesen, and Beethoven's "Eroica."

The only first-rate piece of music on either program was the Beethoven, the others ranging anywhere from second-rate, e.g. the Schumann, to eighth or ninth-rate, e.g. the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto. Why such program selection actually came to pass raises questions of bureaucratization and politics beyond the scope of this review. Suffice it to say it shouldn't have, despite the fact that most of the audience cheered as wildly as usual. Both the Prokofiev and the Barber are specimens of "program" music at its worst, relying heavily on sound effects and elevating the obvious. Prokofiev said that he strove for "simplicity" in his orchestral suite. The piece is "simple" only in the most pejorative sense, wholly traditional harmonically except where a glaring major seventh or minor second could be excused as necessary to inform the listener that, in love, all is not bliss. The Barber, somewhat more interesting in its use of concise rhythmic patterns, has, above all, brevity on its side. It does deal a little more abstractly with its literary theme, but is thematically rather insubstantial.

Ae to Saint-Saens, the Cello Concerto is clearly superior to the piano concerto, and while it is not really very good, its performance in understandable given the paucity of solo cello repertoire. But the Fourth Piano Concerto is bombastic, insipid, and trite, and worthy neither of a great orchestra nor of another word. The Schumann has some excellent moments, especially the voice-leading in the first movement, yet the Scherzo is repetitive, the imitation in strings and woodwinds of the last movement is a bit contrived, and throughout, the thematic material given to the first violins seemed more appropriate for a solo instrument. Still this symphony was a relief after the first two items Friday evening.

It is difficult to judge a guest conductor who may have insufficient time to work with a strange orchestra or who may be ill-understood by it. Yet the paramount impression conveyed in both programs was that the Boston Symphony is a sloppy group. Skrowaczewski has a wide beat which becomes increasingly nervous as the music accelerates or grows louder. Partly due to this agitation, numerous entrances were awkward and inaccurate, especially in the woodwinds. But even when the music was delicate and where the conductor could easily be followed, the orchestra sounded amateurish in its ensembly, or lack thereof. In the Prokofiev and in the Schumann, the violins had serious intonation problems. This was not the conductor's fault. The players ought to take their business a little more conscientiously.

The performance of the Saint-Saens' Cello Concerto was quite commendable. Parnas has fine control of his instrument and made very pleasant sounds, given what he had to work with. This piece is technically very demanding and Parnas met all but very few challenges with proper enthusiasm and skill. At moments, his instrument seemed to whine under the strain, but this is most difficult to avoid, in the higher ranges of the instrument. The rapport between cello and orchestra was better than average.

On Sunday, the orchestra seemed in better shape, though elements of slough were by no means absent. Unfortunately, the soloist had nowhere near the stature of Parnas. Thus, the playing of Johannesen coupled with the Jejune composing of Saint-Saens proved the nadir of the weekend. Sitting hunched over his instrument and cringing with affectation at every phrase, Johannesen displayed himself as a finger automation with minimal sensitivity. Whenever the music bid provide an opportuity for phrasing, as did the second theme of the third section and the alma mater type opening of the last section, this pianist pounded each note utterly without direction. The rest of the time, he indulged in one technical nicety after another, projecting the image of a half-polished, under-paid cocktail musician. Ironic as it might seem, here was too much pedal, the octaves were not really clean, and there was an abundance of clinkers.

After all this, the "Eroica" was indeed a welcome change. The orchestra knows and respects this piece too well to be sloppy. Skrowaczewski was thus clearly able to get across some of his interpretative ideas, many of which were quiet sound, though not start-

Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 177,755
AUG 8 1966

Weekend at Tanglewood

Musical sowing and reaping

By Richard J. Cattani

Lenox, Mass.

ARTS
ENTERTAINMENT

In Stanislaw Skrowaczewski's chief evocative gesture, he seems to reach into a sack of grain and, with aplomb, cast out handfuls to his players. He encourages his musicians to sow likewise for often exhilarating performances.

The young Minneapolis Symphony conductor led the Boston Symphony twice this weekend, on Friday evening and again Sunday afternoon, with Erich Leinsdorf commanding Mozart's "The Magic Flute" on Saturday evening.

Mr. Skrowaczewski opened with the shuddering compilations of Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet." The Montagues and Capulets were delineated as extraordinarily dramatic personages. The score offered little of substance in the next three movements as in turn Juliet showed herself as a soulless, scintillating frill and Friar Tuck expatiated briefly. The hoary loud passages of the young lovers' parting summoned good wind instrument playing, and the fine arcs and scrollwork of the Dance of the Maids were clearly described. The emotional impact of the final scene at Juliet's grave was searing.

The total player

Mr. Skrowaczewski was joined by Leslie Parnas as cello soloist in the Saint-Saëns Concerto in A minor. The work's sense of motion was given full measure by both conductor and cellist. Mr. Parnas projected with admirable gusto. He had about him the sense of the total player—there was scarcely an uninterpreted note.

Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor concluded the Friday program, with the conductor showing his understanding of arch-Romantic phrasing. With a superb response from the Boston Symphony, he swept through its billowing amplitudes.

The Sunday fare was not so uniformly good. It opened with the cool ruminations and cataclysmic spasms of "Medea's Meditation and Death of Vengeance" by Barber. Orchestra and conductor were equal to the superdynamics of the composer's orchestration (the original ballet was composed in 1946 for Martha Graham and rescored in 1955 by Mr. Barber for full orchestra). Then followed a piece of super-pops—Saint-Saëns' Piano Concerto No. 4 in C minor. Though valiantly played by Grant Johannesen (who showed at least athletic looseness, particularly in the Allegro vivace), the work is largely variational, with few genuine musical ideas.

Fire and dominion

The audience was given new life with Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 in E-flat major. Although the "Eroica" quickly floated away the difficult fudge of the Saint-Saëns, it did not seem to find its own backbone until the fourth movement. Then the conductor brought out a full-bodied response and showed fire and dominion indeed.

Mr. Leinsdorf geared his reading of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" to a too-forgiving Saturday night audience that simply had to be entertained. In a shortened version, it has a narrative written by Mr. Leinsdorf (and read with élan by Mac Morgan) that explained omitted portions.

The conductor played the good host throughout. Beginning with a slick opening overture, he touched with geniality all that followed, although he might well have given at least a scolding glance at the horde of latecomers who noised their way to their seats for a full five minutes after the overture.

Caught by surprise

Of the principals, George Shirley as Tamino sang with a strong voice, a highly musical flair. A more lyrical sense of phrasing took hold as the opera progressed. John Reardon's Papageno was an exemplary portrayal of the willow-spined bird-catcher. His half-acting and wincing mimicry was without any of the abject foolery so often brought to the role.

In Judith Raskin's Pamina we had another well-voiced, white-faced princess who touched only the more shallowly placed strings of the heart. Her musical marriage nearly got off in a bad way when, in her final duet with Tamino, she came into the last phrases fortissimo, catching the more gently singing Mr. Shirley by surprise. But, glancing at her quickly, he opened his vocal carburetors molto fortissimo to more than catch her. It was ironic that the daughter should lapse into the fault of the mother, the Queen of the Night, and show an unseemly ambition to upstage the newest member of the brotherhood.

Joanna Simon

. . . appeared in the recent performance of Mozart's 'The Magic Flute' at Tanglewood.

There were other fine voices in the fairly good summer cast, including basses Ara Berberian (the Orator) and Ezio Flagello (Sarastro), and sopranos Beverly Sills (Queen of the Night) and Anne Elgar (Pamina). The rich voiced Mr. Flagello and the at times inaccurate coloraturist Miss Sills received strong support from Maestro Leinsdorf, who took great care to help them with their phrasing.

In all it was a successful musical evening. When love, purity, and wisdom lead to marriage, and the music remains so genial withal, what could better temper the midsummer matrimonial mind?

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 55,425
AUG 8 1966

Magnificence at Tanglewood

By LORRAINE DUSKY

It would be possible to write a one-word review of what went on at Tanglewood Saturday night: "Magnificent!"

Specifically, "The Magic Flute" is what filled the shed, the surrounding countryside and the ears of the more than 8,000 persons who came to hear the late 18th century opera by Mozart.

Erich Leinsdorf conducted the Boston Symphony, the Tanglewood Choir and an array of the best opera singers in a two-act concert version of the whimsical opera.

It was all magnificent.

Leinsdorf handled the musicians and singers superbly, making unified balance between the two complement each other perfectly. If the soloists were whispering, the orchestra was below them. If the choir was resounding with rich, full tones, so was the music.

So excellently correlated were the music and singing that when baritone John Reardon as Papageno mouthed the pipes of Pan, it seemed as if he were playing another orchestra's piccolo.

Reardon and tenor Nico Castel were delightful to watch as well as hear for the two kept the audience aware that this was opera. Both used volatile facial expressions and gestures throughtout their performances.

Others in the cast were George Shirley, who sang in Albany last fall, and Beverly Sills. Each was outstanding, tenor Shirley in his major role, and Miss Sills in her short part as the Queen of the Night. The lovely soprano became a crowd favorite as soon as she sang a few notes in the first act.

Emanuel Schikaneder's libretto for the opera is somewhat involved with spirits and people not actually turning out to be what they are at first portrayed as. But at the finale, the opera ends happily when the lovers are united.

"The Magic Flute" is a pleasant, light opera, and it is hard to imagine that a work so delightful could have been written by a moribund Mozart a year before he died.

The concert version of the opera was greatly abbreviated from the original score. Mac Morgan narrated he scenes and provided the bridge by which much of the original was eliminated to keep the program to three hours.

JOHN REARDON

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 51,098

AUG 9 1966

The Sound of Music

That Berkshire Belief In Magic

By Peter M. Knapp

LENOX — Mozart's "The Magic Flute," second of the major Tanglewood productions this season, attracted a gathering of 10,194 in ideal weather Saturday night.

Erich Leinsdorf, who conducted platoons of soloists, the Boston Symphony and the Tanglewood Choir, collected another credit as well: he wrote an English narration (effectively delivered by Mac Morgan) explaining the action and taking the place of the dialogue.

For Leinsdorf, a "concerto version" doesn't mean an array of soloists congregating around music stands in front of the orchestra. Leinsdorf put his soloists at the rear of the stage, where they made their entrances and exits by way of five screens. (One began guessing where the next soloist would materialize.)

Stage Attire

He used simple lighting and symbolic "costuming" — white for the heroes, black for the villains. The errant birdcatcher, Papageno, had a blue jacket, which put him appropriately somewhere in between. The sum of it was an effective way to suggest the stage action without going into full costumes, sets and acting.

Some may be bothered by the placement of the narrative portions; latecomers complained that the first seating break came not after the overture, but after the Queen of the Night's first aria. And it is possible to quibble over the half-acting: some of the soloists (notably Jon Reardon as Papageno) did, and others didn't. But the presentation made an agreeable and imaginative compromise.

Unfortunately, Leinsdorf broke his spell through eccentric conducting. There were some brilliant touches, but too often the drama sagged from limp tempos, odd rubatos and retards that interrupted the flow of several arias and made much of the action lifeless.

For example, the first arias of Papageno, Tamino and the Queen of the Night suffered from tempos with insufficient thrust. And it didn't stop there. Why did the two men in armor sing their duet about the trials by fire and water in such a slack, soft and unaccented manner? Or why did Leinsdorf shackle the Queen of the Night's recitative in "O Zitt' re Nicht" in such an unsingably slow motion?

Fast In Gear

When the speed was right, however, sparks flew. The introduction to Tamino's entrance never sounded better. The accompaniment to Monostatos' aria ("Alles Guehlt Der Iebe Freuden") was brilliantly quick and light. The choruses closing both acts resounded splendidly, and with the liveliness missed elsewhere.

The case was distinguished by the magnificent ensemble singing of the three ladies (Jane March, Joanna Simon, Batyah Godfrey). Their trios can often be a bore in operatic productions, but not in the stylish delivery, fine blend and excellent proportions of the Tanglewood singers. They set a standard for Mozartian ensemble that the three genii (in which Verohica Tyler joined Miss Simon and Miss Godfrey) could not quite reach.

The two lovers, George Shirley (Tamino) and Judith Raskin (Pamina) vocalized in fine style, though both had quavery moments of pitch. Miss Raskin brought more of an interpretive insight to her part, carefully shaping phrases and getting better as she went along. Shirley's robust tenor serves him well; he seems to be one of those artists who rarely gives a poor performance.

Face Is Familiar

Reardon is an accomplished actor-singer welcome on any stage in a variety of roles. His mugging perhaps tended to upstage the others but it was amusing and added spice when the performance tended to drag. The baritone's vocalism was easy and natural, though less pointed than desirable. His duet with Papagena (Anne Elgar) was one of the production's brightest moments, with sprightly accompaniment by Leinsdorf.

In the high reaches of the Queen of the Night's arias, Beverly Sills flitted through the coloratura with impressive articulation. The part lies a little high for her (up to D and F above high C), but who can reach it anyhow without strain? If her recitatives were less successful, she was hobbled with too slow a tempo. This reviewer has never heard the allegro of "O Zitt' re Nicht" sung better.

Ezio Flagello's stolid Sarastro lacked much personality and needed more cutting power, though it was sonorous enough. Ara Berberian contributed a commanding part as the orator, and he was joined by tenor Robert Jones in the duets of the priests and men in armor. Nico Castel (Monastatos) looked like a waiter in his black tuxedo and did nothing to advance the quality of the opera.

Guest Director

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony, was on the podium for Sunday afternoon's concert, attended by 7,016. He led the Boston Symphony in works by Samuel Barber, Saint-Saens and Beethoven.

Skrowaczewski, tall and trim, leads with tight and nervous strokes and cares a great deal for detail. His leadership was at its best in Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 in E-flat, the "Eroica," in which the Bostonians gave him generally noble playing.

This was a taut reading, propelled by decisive accents yet yielding in the conductor's fondness for fully rounded-off phrases. Skrowaczewski evoked clean and clear lines and sharp attacks from his men, though he has a tendency to plunge onward to the next phrase in some passages before the preceding one is fully over.

The first movement of the Beethoven in particular was honest and hearty. The second seemed to let down slightly in tension though the fugal section was notably expansive. And the last two movements continued on a more or less rousing plant (even if there were some occasional loose ends) to complete a satisfying performance.

Thumbs Down

Less can be said, however, for the playing of Saint-Saens' Piano Concerto No. 4 in C minor, another in the series of romantic concerti that forms a theme for this summer's Berkshire Festival. The American pianist, Grant Johannesen, was the soloist.

Though Saint-Saens' musical style is out of vogue today, his Fourth Concerto still is an attractive showpiece. The last movement especially is a test of sheer endurance and virtuosity for the soloist with its scampering scales and bushels of arpeggios.

This requires clarity if it's to work at all. But Johannesen muddied his work with excessive pedaling, and his rhythm at certain points was off the mark. So while there were elements of the big style to be heard, the concerto did not come off with the brisk lucidity the work needs.

The concert opened with Samuel Barber's "Meadea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance", a score that seems to translate Freudian psychology into sound. The "Mediation" was nearly constructed by Skrowaczewski, nicely sustained and apprehensive. And one can hardly miss in that frantic dance that follows.

GEORGE SHIRLEY
... tenor at Tanglewood

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 50,766

AUG 9 1966

* * *

The Boston Symphony Orchestra playing at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this weekend will feature Sixten Ehrling, director of the Detroit Symphony 9 p.m. program in the Sibelius as conductor for the Friday "Symphony number 1" and the Tchaikovsky "Symphony number 4." The 7 p.m. Friday prelude program will feature the Tchaikovsky "Trio for Piano, Violin and Cello."

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct the Saturday 8 p.m. and the Sunday 2:30 p.m. concerts at which winners in the Moscow Tchaikovsky Competition have been invited to be soloists.

The soloists are Misha Dichter, pianist; Stephen Kates, cellist, and Masuko Ushioda, violinist. Dichter will play the Tchaikovsky "Piano Concerto number 1 in B-flat minor." Kates will play the Shostakovitch "Concerto for Violincello and Orchestra, opus 107" on Aug. 13; Miss Ushioda will play the Prokofiev "Violin Concerto number 2 in G minor" on Aug. 14.

* * *

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 14,186

AUG 9 1966

Smith College Influence Noted At Tanglewood

Mozart's grand opera "Die Zauberflote, or Magic Flute" is considered by many to be his greatest achievement in uniting both comic and religious elements, with the highest dramatic expression, into an incomparable syntheses. Certainly the majority of 9952 listeners, who attended Saturday evening's concert presentation of the composer's last opera, at Tanglewood's Berkshire Festival weekend, were in perfect agreement, with a steadily increasing vocal and manual approval.

With an orchestra like the Boston Symphony, a highly select group of vocal performers, and his own distinguished operatic background, Erich Leinsdorf couldn't, and didn't, miss a supremely outstanding and cohesive performance. The cohesion came within each section, rather than through the whole, (minus recitatives, replaced by narration), separated by spontaneous applause for the arias, duets, terzets, quintets, etc.

Known also locally, as well as internationally, is Smith's Iva Dee Hiatt, choral director at Tanglewood this season, and responsible for the noticeably disciplined musical preparation of the large Tanglewood Choir, as the chorus of priests, slaves and people, in good control and balance.

There were so many moments of musical magnificence, one can only sum it all up as a quite sublime evening of dramatic, and instrumental superlatives, beginning with the brilliantly proportioned overture. One disliked having the catchy tunes as well as the more classic melodies disappear so quickly into the night air. Leinsdorf seemed unusually gracious and happy with the whole performance. — M. del B.

Conducting without score, Leinsdorf seemed more an integral part of the whole production than it has been this person's privilege to perceive at previous concerts. We felt this borne out when the orchestra men stood in obvious tribute at his reappearance for the second act.

The plot of "The Magic Flute," according to the libretto written by a Masonic friend, Achikaneder, based on a fairy-tale "Lulu, or the Magic Flute" and text by Giesecke was changed many times, good and evil being reversed, as not fitting for freemasonry background. It is a curious hodge-podge, (Not musically) of political satire, masonic symbolism, and the fact that human morality is only relative, with unknown mysterious forces of the universe working out their own destiny, set against an Egyptian background.

Perhaps the opera was more thoroughly appreciated and enjoyed because of the lack of setting, costume, and elaborate dramatics. Concentration could be on the bewitching music, and Mozart's incomparable style, realized with exceptional delicacy and purity by the distinctive talents of the principal participants.

As Tamino, the prince who must undergo many trials before he is accepted by Sarastro, (high priest of Isis and Osiris), into the Temple of Wisdom, George Shirley, appearing first (all singers were above the orchestra, with screens strategically placed for exits and entrances, immediately impressed one with his uniquely full-voiced tenor and musical understanding. Sharing dramatic honors, and with a freely flexible baritone equal to the comically interpretative role of Papageno, Tamino's rather simple companion, was John Reardon, who almost "stole the show."

Among the three Ladies in Waiting to the Queen of Night was Jane Marsh, winner of last month's winner of the Tschaikowsky International Vocal Competition in Moscow. With her, Joanne Simon Batyah Godfrey, and later mezzo-soprano Veronnica Tyler, alternated and blended their resonant soprano voices with perhaps better vocal than dramatic style.

As the Queen, Beverly Sills presented a magnificent figure, but not an awesome character; her excellent soprano rose to the demanding coloratura flights with admirable ease and tonal clarity.

Judith Raskin, heroine of the opera, and of the evening, as daughter of the Queen, who goes through the final trial and purification by Fire and Water, with her lover Tamino, (protected by the magic flute), was heard by those who have followed her career from Smith College to the Metropolitan, (her past and present teacher Anna Hamlin included) with especial interest and delight. Her youthful character belies a most mature vocal talent, in this instance a firm yet delicate delivery, the melodic lines unwaveringly clear and cleanly shaped, pianissinos pure and breathless.

As Monastatos, servant of Sarastro, Nico Castel, played and sang his part with great fervor. Ezio Flagello; a profound Sarastro, displayed a splendid bass voice, open and distinct, with superior projection.

Another superb bass, but in a speaking role, the well-known Mac Morgan, who narrated an explanatory text written with sympathetic understanding by Erich Leinsdorf, covering the happenings between arias, etc., and pointing up the inherent morals. Mr. Morgan delivered it with just the right mixture of humor and seriousness, from a podium draped with the Masonic emblem. Worthy also of mention are Robert Jones and Ara Berberian, tenor and bass as the two priests and men in armor, who excelled in the exultant trio with Tamino.

Compared to the many appearances of other characters, Anne Elgar, the lovely red-headed Papagena, finally given to the disobedient Papageno, was all too short, their duet, utterly enchanting and lightheartted, prelude to the quick and fateful finale.

Record (m)
MERIDEN, Conn.
Circ. 19,993
AUG 9 1966

Atop West Peak

Midsummer Excitement At Tanglewood Festival

By MARJORIE C. TOWER

What Salzburg is to Austria and Bayreuth is to Germany, such is Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., to New England. The summer house of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is a true mecca for music-lovers and out-and-out musicians. This is music at its best in idyllic surroundings.

Before the concert, Sunday afternoon we strolled over the lush green grass, under wide-armed beeches which had also shaded Emerson and Hawthorne in their day. A youthful companion said, "I see why people like to come here for music, it's so peaceful." Even the picnic baskets spelled leisure.

At 2:30 we entered the huge, simple shed which seats 6000 people yet permits every one to hear perfectly without amplification. The flying, black kites over the stage must help this process. Many lawn and summer-chair sitters, for $2, stretched at ease under the sky. They maintained that they heard very well for this generous shed is open-ended. But most listeners are thankful that they can sit inside for from $3.50 to $6.50.

The Concert

With Stanislaw Skrowaczewski as conductor and Grant Johnnesen, soloist in Saint-Saens' Piano Concerto No. 4, in a program to include also Samuel Barber and Beethoven, the afternoon promised to keep interest high. The fulfillment brought the conductor to the podium seven times to acknowledge the echoing bravos and applause, and to share the acclaim with the orchestra members he beckoned to their feet.

Scurrying through the program one found that this tall, youngish conductor had been born and education in Poland, had studied in Paris, and is now conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony. From the first phrase in the Barber, "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" it was apparent that Mr. Skrowazcewski would be infinitely careful and would inspire with classically styled direction minus gymastics. As the music evolved, the audience grew increasingly fond of this man who shaped every phrase and crescendo to fit his ideal without fussiness or concern for himself.

A Tangy Condiment

It was a pleasure to see the renowed Boston Symphony Orchestra all in white, and informally without jackets. Only the flautist and the harpist were women, and it fell to the harpist to be the first center of attention. In the Barber piece, against a background of muted strings the harpist plinked liquidly two of the oddest notes, perhaps a high diminished pinth. Whether or not this repeated interval represented Medea's sadness, at any rate it was the birth of a fascinating idea. The incomparable wood-winds led with a swirl into the dance. A boogie-woogie type piano accompaniment, a rhythmic goading of strings, near-explosions from the trumpets, a shattering of cymbals and vengeance was finally complete with a drum crash. This spirited work by Samuel Barber proved a tangy condiment to those long accustomed to Santi-Saens and Beethoven.

Extra Devotion

Undoubtedly Mr. Johannesen is also in this category, so he freshened his awareness of the lengthy, florid French masterpiece, the Saint-Saens Concerto, by extra devotion. The enunciation of the first theme could not have been mor precise nor charming than as the strings delivered it and Mr. Johannesen returned it. Over a discreet accompaniment, the pianist's technical flourishes and intimacies of interpretation could always be heard. The sustained string tone and expressivity of the piano in the Andante sostenuto gave great pleasure. The final vigorous assertion, a horrendous piano cadenze with swift octave display, even in odd surprise, the melody played stoutly with one finger by the soloist, all were parts of a major concerto magnificently set forth by one of our leading virtuosos. The audience loudly acclaimed Mr. Johannesen.

The Moving "Eroica"

One forgets how movingly beautiful Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, the "Eroica" can be. How gorgeous the 'cello tone was in the first Allegro, how shocking the repeated massive discords, though less startling than 160 years ago. The Boston string sections lived up to their reputation in the very fast spiccato passages of the Scherzo with notes as fine, fast and exact as a Swiss watch. The sonorous, stately anguish of the Funeral March will linger in the memory, even to its closing hushed trumpet fanfare.

It is one of the blessings of our age that this concert and others like it may be heard, second best, by way of the radio and sometimes on TV.

Sidelight At Tanglewoood

At a slack moment I asked a darling usher, correctly clad in a rose afternoon dress, one hand in a white glove, "Are you a student here?" "No," she replied.

"Are you very fond of music?" I pressed. "Some of it," she countered.

Unsatisfied, I asked again, "Which do you like best, old or new music?"

Squelching me for good she answered," I don't like the Beatles last record a bit!"

When Ars The Cncerts?

Until August 24 the regular Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts will take place Friday nights at 9 p.m., Saturday nights at 8, and Sunday afternoons at 2:30. If one likes to see the wheels go round, the 10:30 a.m. Saturday rehearsal of the Sunday concert is a priceless bargain at $2. The money goes for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. There are also chamber music concerts of great interest on Wednesday and Thursday evenings at 8 and on Sunday morning at 10. A "week-end prelude" is offered on Friday nights at 7 before the main concert.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,635 S. 122,607
AUG 8 1966

'Magic Flute' in Concert Form Delights Tanglewood Audience

BY JOAN SIMMONS

Erich Leinsdorf conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a host of soloists Saturday evening in a concert version of Mozart's "Magic Flute." Mozart himself labeled the opera, Grosse Oper, implying that it was a work of depth and grandeur and that it was at Tanglewood.

George Shirley as Tamion the prince was magnificient as was Judith Raskin as Pamina, daughter of the evil Queen of Night. John Reardon delightfully enacted the role of Papageno, a creature part bird and part man, injectiong an extra measure of humor into the comic opera.

Although done in concert form and employing only excerpts from the work, the Tanglewood production was not lacking in drama. A most fitting narration, written by Leinsdorf and related by MacMorgan cleverly coveyed the soloists moved back and forth from behind screens on a platform at the back of the stage creating just an illusion of action, relieving the stagnant air which often accompanies opera when done in concert.

The Tanglewood Choir, prepared by Iva Dee Hiatt, powerfully backed up by the soloists, particularly in the finale of the first act which drew exceptionally long and enthusiastic applause.

"The Magic Flute" is the second of two German operas composed by Mozart in an effort to establish national German opers. The plot takes several unexplainable turns and amply employs Masonic symbols makeing it semi-political in nature, But the music of Mozart transcends the inconsistencies and dated motif making the score a miracle of integrity.

Also in the weekend fare at Tanglewood, Stanislaw Skrowaczwski conducted the corchestra on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon. Each program featured a Saint-Saens concerto. The first presented Leslie Parnas as soloist in the Violloncello concerto No. 1. On Sunday afternoon Grant Johannesen joined the orchestra in the Piano Concerto No. 4.

The "Magic Flute" performance was taped for later broadcast over National Educational television.

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Circ. 15,399
AUG 9 1966

Skrowaczewski, Johannesen Pair At Tanglewood

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski was guest conductor at Sunday afternoon's Tanglewood concert. A native of Poland, he is conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony as well as an accomplished pianist, violinist, and composer.

His virtuosity as a musician was evident in his handling of the Boston Symphony Sunday. A contained, undramatic conductor, he succeeded more more than ably with a program which required competence and skill.

Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" opened the concert. This piece was originally composed as dance music for Martha Graham and was performed by her company in 1946. In 1955 Barber rescored the piece for full orchestra. It is a strong, brooding composition unlike most ballet music we are classically familiar with. It seems to borrow heavily from Stravinsky rhythm patterns and overtones, but it is original enough melodically and is most interesting.

Grant Johannesen performed the Saint-Saens "Piano Concerto No. 4 in C Minor," and this was a very happy occasion. Johannesen and Skrowaczewsky combined to provide an unusual degree of understanding of the musical idiom of the piece. The concerto is beautifully developed and seems almost symphonic in nature. It is altogether lovely.

Johannesen is a brilliant, very strong pianist. He is clear and precise, with great tonal understanding. He has unusual ability not only as a soloist, but also as a part of the body of the orchestra, making the fabric of the music all of a piece. It was a fine performance of a very beautiful piece.

Beethoven's "Third Symphony in E Flat Major" concluded the concert. It was a terribly hot afternoon, and maybe that is why the "Eroica" did not come through clear and sharp as the gem that it is. The ending of the second movement was particularly haphazard, and the full, rich abandon of the Finale was definitely missing.

One looks forward to hearing more of Skrowaczewski, who seems to understand contemporary music so well, and of Johannesen, one of the best pianists heard in a long time.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 4,828
AUG 11 1966

Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Anderson and daughter Bettina of Sherman joined Mr. and Mrs. Edwin R. Meiss on Saturday and attended a musical program at Tanglewood. The Anderson family drove to Shelbourne Falls, Mass. on Sunday where they attended a family reunion at which about 60 people were present. It was held at the home of Mrs. Anderson's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Allen R. Lowell.

CAPITAL CITY NEWS BUREAU
ALBANY, N.Y.
NEWSPAPER CLIPPINGS
COMPLETE NEW YORK STATE SERVICE
TRUMANSBURG FREE PRESS
Thursday, August 11, 1966

Mr. and Mrs. Royal Colle and children have returned home after vacationing at Martha's Vineyard. On their homeward journey, they visited Tanglewood in the Berkshires, where the Boston Symphony Orchestra was playing; Thomas Schippers, conducting.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503
AUG 8 1966

Music Review

Mozart Magic Flute Concert Version Dominates Sixth Week at Tanglewood

By FRANK N. PATTERSON

While Saturday's concert version of Mozart's Magic Flute dominated the sixth week program at Tanglewood, the result was far from a total eclipse of the other music to be heard.

In part this was due to the natural choice of Prelude music to the weekend which was Mozart songs sung by Phyllis Curtin, soprano, with Richard Woitach, piano. Though the songs as always display the distinct flavor and character of the composer's music, it is in performance such as this with the reliability of Miss Curtin's voice and intelligence that one hears them as works of outstanding beauty. The second half of the Weekend Prelude was taken up with a performance by John Ferris of the Fantasia in F minor, for Organ.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski's (conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony) handling of the B.S.O. Friday left something to be desired. Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet Suite No. 2 provided one good example of the problem, but likely the performance of Schumann's 4th Symphony or Saint-Saens Violoncello Concerto No. 1 would also have provided an adequate example.

In none of these pieces, outside of occasional moments, did the Symphony and Mr. Skrowaczewski seem to be on the same wavelength. This appeared mainly to be due to a conducting style that ranges from an intense almost inarticulate beat to a style that is so subjective, or self-styled, as to be devoid of any beat what-so-ever. Thus, while Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet displayed some dramatic glamor, more frequently one was aware of a rather poor performance, technically speaking.

That the libretto of the Magic Flute almost gets by without derision is largely due to the fact that it is meant to be more slapstick and burlesque than wit and wisdom. There are, however, those who regard the opera as Zauberflote and multiply its symbolism and allegory to fairly heady altitudes. Happily it was not readily observable Saturday that any performer from Leinsdorf on down, took the opera as much more than an exquisite collection of musical forms connected by a slim track of logic.

The star of the performance was with little question, Judith Raskin. If one was not immediately taken by the brilliance and control of Miss Raskin's voice, it is quite likely he had been distracted by her extraordinary presence and grace. Generally speaking, the ladies provided more sparkle than did the men. George Shirley's voice, as Tamino, seemed unaccountably tight and thin most of the time. The voice of John Reardon as Papageno was often too light and, at least as important, was the impression that he actively brought to the role, which was a bit too cute even for a birdman. Ezio Flagello's voice has the unfortunate habit of disappearing in the lower register, a fault that marred much of his otherwise level performance.

Though the audience was provided with a complete libretto of the opera, Mac Morgan served an impressive speaker for a mirth-provoking narration prepared by none other than Erich Leinsdorf himself.

* * *

By LOUIS S. CUCCINELLO

Sunday's guest conductor Stanislaw Skrowaczewski chose as his program Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," "Piano Concerto No. 4" by Saint-Saens and Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony.

One outstanding feature of the program was the full and well balanced sonority of the orchestra. The acoustics were perfect — each of the sections audible, in proper dosage. Perhaps the absence of the portable screen behind the orchestra was significant for this reviewer has noted a deterioration of the tonal balance whenever the screen was used.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony, is a scholarly looking figure who stands stationary on the podium conducting with mechanical gestures. At times his baton does not seem synchronized with the orchestra. However, in spite of these petty concerns the orchestra executed the most difficult rhythmic passages with excellent precision.

"Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" is an excerpt from the ballet "Medea," taken from the tragedy by Euripides, which depicts the timeless emotion of "man and woman caught in the nets of jealousy and destructive love."

Grant Johannesen, soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto, is a well seasoned performer with an excellent touch who is capable of a wide variance of dynamic level. He possesses a strong left hand and a mellifluous tone that is never harsh. Most notable was the excellent balance of tone and the good rapport between soloist, orchestra and conductor which provided an aesthetically satisfying experience.

OPERA NEWS
NEW YORK, N.Y.
23 TI. A YR. 70,700
SEPT 1 0 1966

LENOX, MASS.

Tanglewood's venture into opera this season consisted of a concert performance of Die Zauberflöte on August 6, with Erich Leinsdorf leading the Boston Symphony and a glittering array of soloists. One went to see whether the beauty of the natural setting, plus first-rate musical forces, could atone for the absence of settings and action.

One found that though the soloists sang from an eminence at the rear of the great orchestra, neither they nor Mozart could manage it. This was a rich, romantic Magic Flute, with spacious tempos and ritards. While Judith Raskin (Pamina) and Ezio Flagello (Sarastro) projected this concept with ease, George Shirley made Tamino something of an over-achiever and Beverly Sills's Queen of Night was less than diabolical. John Reardon offered his winning Papageno, and the Three Ladies/Genii were in the capable hands of Jane Marsh/Veronica Tyler, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey. Anne Elgar, Ara Berberian, Nico Castel and Robert Jones rounded out the cast.

In place of the dialogue, Mac Morgan read a narration prepared by Maestro Leinsdorf. It was well done, though there was none where it was most needed—in the two long finales. Still, this was certainly the right occasion to perform the work in German, and it was refreshing to hear the choruses sung by the youthful choir. F. M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Star
WINCHESTER, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 5,415
SEP 8 1966

Back to Radio and TV

Summer concert going is over, live winter music still ahead. But there'll be many hours of fine music on WGBH-FM this week, starting Sunday at 9 p.m. with Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" by the Royal Opera in the Covent Garden Chorus and Orchestra. Monday brings "A Tribute to Kodaly" at 8:30, Tuesday works by Colegrass, Schoenburg and Luening, and Wednesday the N. E. Conservatory Orchestra in Berg's "Violin Concerto." On Channel 2 Sunday Leinsdorf conducts the BSO and Tanglewood Choir in Mozart's "The Magic Flute," and for jazz lovers televised a week from tonight at 8 p.m. will be six great jazz trumpeters in "Newport Jazz Festival Trumpet Workshop."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508
AUG 8 1966

'Magic Flute' of Mozart A Tanglewood Highlight

By McCLAREN HARRIS

Next weekend's appearance of the Moscow Tchaikovsky winners notwithstanding, Saturday night's concert performance of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" was the undoubted highlight of this summer's Tanglewood season.

Performing opera in concert can be a tesky procedure for both musicians and audience, for subtracting the dramatized portion sometimes makes the musical sound dull and overly long. In the Mozart-Leinsdorf case, however, two things were revealed: the composer's genius, which is the opera's prime sustaining force; and the imagination which can turn a straight stand-up, sing, sit-down presentation into a dynamic experience.

Geographic Plan

The geographic arrangement was the same as in staged opera: orchestra in front, singers behind. But as the orchestra had no pit to hide in and the soloists were marooned on a platform at the very rear, one would look for an imbalance.

Well, there was; but though audible it was by no means ruinous for those in the music shed, though I might be skeptical about the results obtained on WGBH-TV's videotape.

The singers in considerable numbers emerged from portals at their appointed time in the staged version and departed likewise, so there was no great crowd on the platform. They were permitted small gestures and facial expression to signify their intents, though always facing the audience when singing. And the devices were effective: Nico Castel's rubbing of hands hinted at Monostatos' greedy treachery and John Reardon carried Papageno's panpipes with him, which he actually played.

Apt Narration

"The Magic Flute" is a singspiel, a German operatic genre containing spoken dialogue; to take care of these sections Erich Leinsdorf wrote a narration, spoken by Mac Morgan, which was apt, brief and occasionally humorous ("Is it a bird, or a man?" the narration asks at the appearance of Papageno. Is Mr. Leinsdorf familiar with Superman?)

The soloists were nearly all securely in character: George Shirley's Tamino was both dramatic and lyric, though he lacks the power of heroic tenors; John Reardon's bass was adequately light and chiding for Papageno's role. Judith Raskin's Pamina was a romantic, light-toned lyric delight; Beverly Sills was mostly on target for her roulades in the Queen of the Night's first aria, only slightly less so for the second, "Der Hoelle Tache."

Nico Castel had the right idea about Monostatos' character, but his tenor was a notch below adequate volume for the conditions, while Ezio Flagello's robust bass made a distinguished, yet not pompous Sarastro. The trio of Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey was nicely resonant; that of Misses Simon, Godfrey and Veronica Tyler was strangely weaker.

Hand of a Master

The Boston Symphony and Tanglewood choir were obviously well-rehearsed and up to their duties, and Mr. Leinsdorf's conducting was simply the leading hand of a master.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski returned to conduct Sunday's afternoon's concert, and though I still think his baton work is far too busy, the orchestra was willing to do as he wished.

Mr. Skrowaczewski has some fine, strong ideas about Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and succeeded in communicating most of them. He applied considerable contrast to the work, particularly in the funeral march, often abrupt in juxtaposed fortes and pianos, and often emphasized them with retards or minute hesitations. It was very effective. The orchestra occasionally acted as if it was a trifle new, and though the players were not always in agreement, they followed him well.

Powerful Thrust

Grant Johannesen gave a powerful thrust to Saint-Saens' Piano Concerto No. 4, laying a heroic outline to the glittering pianism and majestic climax of the finale.

He does his best work where the material gives him time to prepare; elsewhere his efforts are more obvious and lost some clarity, partly through overpedaling. But in the andantes his chords, melodies and embellishments were sheer poetic eloquence.

The opening Medea's meditation and dance of vengeance of Samuel Barber showed Skrowaczewski again in command. The texture was clear, whether in the hushed beginning largo or the abando of the finale, the orchestra was apparently on its toes.

Form

udience

...wski conducted the cor-
...a on Friday evening and
...y afternoon. Each pro-
... featured a Saint-Saens
...rto. The first presented
... Parnas as soloist in the ...ncello concerto No. 1. On
...y afternoon Grant Johan-
... joined the orchestra in the ... Concerto No. 4.

"Magic Flute" perfor-
... was taped for later
...cast over National Educa-
...television.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,503

AUG 8 1966

Music Review

Mozart Magic Flute Concert Version Dominates Sixth Week at Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Erich Leinsdorf and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting.

By FRANK N. PATTERSON

While Saturday's concert version of Mozart's Magic Flute dominated the sixth week program at Tanglewood, the result was far from a total eclipse of the other music to be heard.

In part this was due to the natural choice of Prelude music to the weekend which was Mozart songs sung by Phyllis Curtin, soprano, with Richard Woitach, piano. Though the songs as always display the distinct flavor and character of the composer's music, it is in performance such as this with the reliability of Miss Curtin's voice and intelligence that one hears them as works of outstanding beauty. The second half of the Weekend Prelude was taken up with a performance by John Ferris of the Fantasia in F minor, for Organ.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski's (conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony) handling of the B.S.O. Friday left something to be desired. Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet Suite No. 2 provided one good example of the problem, but likely the performance of Schumann's 4th Symphony or Saint-Saens Violoncello Concerto No. 1 would also have provided an adequate example.

In none of these pieces, outside of occasional moments, did the Symphony and Mr. Skrowaczewski seem to be on the same wavelength. This appeared mainly to be due to a conducting style that ranges from an intense almost inarticulate beat to a style that is so subjective, or self-styled, as to be devoid of any beat what-so-ever. Thus, while Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet displayed some dramatic glamor, more frequently one was aware of a rather poor performance, technically speaking.

That the libretto of the Magic Flute almost gets by without derision is largely due to the fact that it is meant to be more slapstick and burlesque than wit and wisdom. There are, however, those who regard the opera as Zauberflote and multiply its symbolism and allegory to fairly heady altitudes. Happily it was not readily observable Saturday that any performer from Leinsdorf on down, took the opera as much more than an exquisite collection of musical forms connected by a slim track of logic.

The star of the performance was with little question, Judith Raskin. If one was not immediately taken by the brilliance and control of Miss Raskin's voice, it is quite likely he had been distracted by her extraordinary presence and grace. Generally speaking, the ladies provided more sparkle than did the men. George Shirley's voice, as Tamino, seemed unaccountably tight and thin most of the time. The voice of John Reardon as Papageno was often too light and, at least as important, was the impression that he actively brought to the role, which was a bit too cute even for a birdman. Ezio Flagello's voice has the unfortunate habit of disappearing in the lower register, a fault that marred much of his otherwise level performance.

Though the audience was provided with a complete libretto of the opera, Mac Morgan served an impressive speaker for a mirth-provoking narration prepared by none other than Erich Leinsdorf himself.

* * *

By LOUIS S. CUCCINELLO

Sunday's guest conductor Stanislaw Skrowaczewski chose as his program Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance," "Piano Concerto No. 4" by Saint-Saens and Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony.

One outstanding feature of the program was the full and well balanced sonority of the orchestra. The acoustics were perfect — each of the sections audible in proper dosage. Perhaps the absence of the portable screen behind the orchestra was significant for this reviewer has noted a deterioration of the tonal balance whenever the screen was used.

Mr. Skrowaczewski, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony, is a scholarly looking figure who stands stationary on the podium conducting with mechanical gestures. At times his baton does not seem synchronized with the orchestra. However, in spite of these petty concers the orchestra executed the most difficult rhythmic passages with excellent precision.

"Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" is an excerpt from the ballet "Medea," taken from the tragedy by Euripides, which depicts the timeless emotion of "man and woman caught in the nets of jealousy and desctructive love."

Grant Johannesen, soloist in the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto, is a well seasoned performer with an excellent touch who is capable of a wide variance of dynamic level. He possesses a strong left hand and a mellifluous tone that is never harsh. Most notable was the excellent balance of tone and the good rapport between soloist, orchestra and conductor which provided an aesthetically satisfying experience.

OPERA NEWS
NEW YORK, N.Y.
23 TI. A YR. 70,700

SEPT 1 0 1966

LENOX, MASS.

Tanglewood's venture into opera this season consisted of a concert performance of Die Zauberflöte on August 6, with Erich Leinsdorf leading the Boston Symphony and a glittering array of soloists. One went to see whether the beauty of the natural setting, plus first-rate musical forces, could atone for the absence of settings and action.

One found that though the soloists sang from an eminence at the rear of the great orchestra, neither they nor Mozart could upstage it. This was a rich, romantic Magic Flute, with spacious tempos and ritards. While Judith Raskin (Pamina) and Ezio Flagello (Sarastro) projected this concept with ease, George Shirley made Tamino something of an over-achiever and Beverly Sills's Queen of Night was less than diabolical. John Reardon offered his winning Papageno, and the Three Ladies/Genii were in the capable hands of Jane Marsh/Veronica Tyler, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey. Anne Elgar, Ara Berberian, Nico Castel and Robert Jones rounded out the cast.

In place of the dialogue, Mac Morgan read a narration prepared by Maestro Leinsdorf. It was well done, though there was none where it was most needed—in the two long finales. Still, this was certainly the right occasion to perform the work in German, and it was refreshing to hear the choruses sung by the youthful choir. F. M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Star
WINCHESTER, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 5,415

SEP 8 1966

Back to Radio and TV

Summer concert going is over, live winter music still ahead. But there'll be many hours of fine music on WGBH-FM this week, starting Sunday at 9 p.m. with Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" by the Royal Opera in the Covent Garden Chorus and Orchestra. Monday brings "A Tribute to Kodaly" at 8:30, Tuesday works by Colegrass, Schoenburg and Luening, and Wednesday the N. E. Conservatory Orchestra in Berg's "Violin Concerto." On Channel 2 Sunday Leinsdorf conducts the BSO and Tanglewood Choir in Mozart's "The Magic Flute," and for jazz lovers televised a week from tonight at 8 p.m. will be six great jazz trumpeters in "Newport Jazz Festival Trumpet Workshop."

113

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 159,508

AUG 8 1966

'Magic Flute' of Mozart A Tanglewood Highlight

By McCLAREN HARRIS

Next weekend's appearance of the Moscow Tchaikovsky winners notwithstanding, Saturday night's concert performance of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" was the undoubted highlight of this summer's Tanglewood season.

Performing opera in concert can be a testy procedure for both musicians and audience, for subtracting the dramatized portion sometimes makes the musical sound dull and overly long. In the Mozart-Leinsdorf case, however, two things were revealed: the composer's genius, which is the opera's prime sustaining force; and the imagination which can turn a straight stand-up, sing, sit-down presentation into a dynamic experience.

Geographic Plan

The geographic arrangement was the same as in staged opera: orchestra in front, singers behind. But as the orchestra had no pit to hide in and the soloists were marooned on a platform at the very rear, one would look for an imbalance.

Well, there was; but though audible it was by no means ruinous for those in the music shed, though I might be skeptical about the results obtained on WGBM-TV's videotape.

The singers, in considerable numbers, entered from portals at their appointed time in the staged version and departed likewise, so there was no great crowd on the platform. They were permitted small gestures and facial expression to signify their intents, though always facing the audience when singing. And the devices were effective: Nico Castel's rubbing of hands hinted at Monostatos' greedy treachery and John Reardon carried Papageno's panpipes with him, which he actually played.

Apt Narration

"The Magic Flute" is a singspiel, a German operatic genre containing spoken dialogue; to take care of these sections Erich Leinsdorf wrote a narration, spoken by Mac Morgan, which was apt, brief and occasionally humorous ("Is it a bird, or a man?" the narration asks at the appearance of Papageno. Is Mr. Leinsdorf familiar with Superman?)

The soloists were nearly all securely in character: George Shirley's Tamino was both dramatic and lyric, though he lacks the power of heroic tenors; John Reardon's bass was adequately light and chiding for Papageno's role. Judith Raskin's Pamina was a romantic, light-toned lyric delight; Beverly Sills was mostly on target for her roulades in the Queen of the Night's first aria, only slightly less so for the second, "Der Hoelle Tache."

Nico Castel had the right idea about Monostatos' character, but his tenor was a notch below adequate volume for the conditions, while Ezio Flagello's robust bass made a distinguished, yet not pompous Sarastro,. The trio of Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey was nicely resonant; that of Misses Simon, Godfrey and Veronica Tyler was strangely weaker.

Hand of a Master

The Boston Symphony and Tanglewood choir were obviously well-rehearsed and up to their duties, and Mr. Leinsdorf's conducting was simply the leading hand of a master.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski returned to conduct Sunday's afternoon's concert, and though I still think his baton work is far too busy, the orchestra was willing to do as he wished.

Mr. Skrowaczewski has some fine, strong ideas about Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and succeeded in communciating most of them. He applied considerable contrast to the work, particularly in the funeral march, often abrupt in juxtaposed fortes and pianos, and often emphasized them with retards or minute hesitations. It was very effective. The orchestra occasionally acted as if it was a trifle new, and though the players were not always in agreement, they followed him well.

Powerful Thrust

Grant Johannesen gave a powerful thrust to Saint-Saens' Piano Concerto No. 4, laying a heroic outline to the glittering pianism and majestic chorale of the finale.

He does his best work where the material gives him time to prepare; elsewhere his labors are more obvious and lost some clarity, partly through overpedaling. But in the andantes his chords, melodies and embellishments were sheer poetic eloquence.

The opening Medea's meditation and dance of vengeance of Samuel Barber showed Skrowaczewski again in command. The texture was clear, whether in the hushed beginning bars or the abando of the finish; the orchestra was apparently on its toes.

114

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
AUG 13 1966

As I Hear It

Caste of Characters

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

LAST WEEK at Tanglewood, Mozart's "The Magic Flute" was performed. Earlier in the season Stravinsky's ballet music "Petroushka" was heard. Over at the Berkshire Theatre Festival in Stockbridge, Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice" was staged.

It is very unlikely that Shakespeare in 1598, Mozart in 1791 or even Stravinsky in 1911 were concerned with equal rights and equal opportunities for all mankind. It is very doubtful that they were at all aware that such a problem existed; rather, they fell into step with the existing clichés and made their villains or their contemptible characters Negroes and Jews, respectively. The cold-blooded money-lender Shylock, of course, was a Jew; Monastatos, the gangster, kidnaper, and general assailant for King Sarastro, was a Negro; and the disdained and rejected suitor in the ballet was a Blackamoor.

* * *

THE RATIO of honorable men in any and every division of the citizenry is probably a fairly constant one. There are probably as many saints and sinners among the Anabaptists as there are among the Zorastrians or at any alphabetical stop along the creedal highway or the racial thoroughfare. Thus the number of men in any particular division of humanity who may bring dishonor and shame on their fellows is a predictable percentage.

The world in 1966 is going through a vast struggle and upheaval in its efforts to bring every man his due respect and dignity. As right as we all know it to be, there still exist factors and influences and plain human nature which slow and hold up the parade of progress. It was undoubtedly farthest from Mozart's thoughts that he was offending anyone by making Monastatos a Negro. On the other hand, as men thought at that time, it probably seemed appropriate that a character with such attributes should be one.

* * *

WE'LL GIVE Stravinsky the benefit of a doubt, too, and credit him with innocence on the subject of race relations. Shakespeare may have learned about Jews from Marlowe's "Jew of Malta," but he learned very little about them firsthand, for Britain had been Judenrein since 1290 when they were expelled from England.

It has become enlightened practice in journalism of all kinds not to mention certain distinctions among citizens, particularly when the news is of an unfavorable nature. A newspaper no longer identifies a man who comes into the hands of the police as a Negro porter, a Jewish junk dealer, or a Puerto Rican dishwasher. Yet in the case of the murder of the eight young nurses in Chicago recently, the news reports conspicuously stated that the police were looking for a white man of a certain description, probably to forestall the public's jumping to the conclusion that the assailant may have been a Negro, in a city where race relations are continually near the boiling point.

* * *

RIGHT AFTER World War I, when the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center was flourishing, Serge Koussevitzky, then the Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor and founder and director of the school, authorized Boris Goldovsky to assemble the best vocal students in the country and to stage operas each season. At one production, Koussevitzky beckoned for me to come speak to him. "Do you notice anything strange tonight?" he asked. I replied that I didn't. He pointed out to me that one of the roles was being sung by a Negro, the first time one had been picked solely on the basis of his vocal talent and the adequacy of his training. From then on, the choice of singers became broadened to include everyone who met artistic standards without regard for any other qualifications. The greatest evidence of this advanced policy could not possibly have been better proven than by the cast of characters which played the Mozart opera at Tanglewood last week.

* * *

A TANGENT on this subject appeared in the New York Times only 10 days ago when a story from London reported that a sequel to the popular children's book "Little Black Sambo" was soon to appear, but the heroine was to be Little White Squibba. Helen Bannerman, the author, died 20 years ago, but the manuscript and drawings for the new book have only recently been found. Sambo had been followed by Little Black Quibba, Little Black Quasha, Little Black Bobtail and Little Black Mingo. "None of these characters," the news story read, "has fallen victim to liberal sensibilities on racial issues here (London) as they have in the United States. They're classically innocent. Certainly there's nothing malicious about them."

No one has ever protested, to my knowledge, the production of either the Stravinsky ballet or the Mozart opera. I know of protests, of course, of the Shakespears play over the years.

* * *

I NEVER heard anyone try to drag others of their respective kinds into the abysses in which Lee Oswald, Richard Speck and Charles Whitman found themselves. Drama, opera, ballet and all works of art are far from the arena of crime and violence, but composers and authors today don't necessarily have to look for an Othello to embody a spirit of jealousy or any of the baser motives with which mankind is afflicted.

Springfield Herald
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Bi-Weekly
Circ. 111,573
AUG 11 1966

Last Friday at Tanglewood, the 7:00 prelude included two mozart pieces: Songs for Voice and Piano, and Fantasia in F minor for Organ.

The Songs with Piano was performed by Phyllis Curtin, soprano, and Richard Woitach, piano.

Mozart did not think that songs with piano accompaniment were important. He thought they should be mere presents to a host or hostess when he was at their home. Most of his songs were composed of 20 bars or so, and repeat each verse. The texts were usually concerned with the emotions of love.

At this performance six songs were sung. Phyllis Curtin sang them with a rich, broad range, from deep contralto to voluminous "Wagnerian" soprano. Her renditions of Mozart's Lieds were dramatized with sincere warmth.

The Fantasia in F minor for Organ, was performed by John Ferris. Mozart used a short prelude of Bachian chords to introduce each section and close the finale. A light fugue is present throughout the piece, building from a slow movement to a grand climax.

Organ Jammed

John Ferris' performance was enjoyed tremendously, especially his extraordinary presto finale with both hands and feet flying over the keys and pedals. Unfortunately, during the performance, the organ jammed, resulting in a five-minute delay for adjustments.

Masterful Performance Least Appreciated

The 9:00 concert included Prokofiev, Saint-Saens, and Schumann, with Stanislaw Skrowaczewski as guest conductor.

Prokofiev's Second Suite from the Ballet, "Romeo and Juliet", Op. 64, had seven movements:

I. Montagues and Capulets, II. Juliet, the maiden, III. Friar Laurence, IV. Dance, V. Romeo and Juliet before his departure, VI. Dance of the Maids from the Antilles, VII. Romeo at Juliet's grave.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in one of the finest, most sensitive interpretations of Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet", and yet the audience barely responded to a second curtain call. Evidently, the words of Galina Ulanova, who first danced the role of Juliet, still reflects the audience's opinion:

"We were badly hampered by the unusual orchestration and chamber quality of the music . . . to tell the truth, we were a little afraid of it."

Most Appreciated Highlight of the Evening

Saint-Saen's Concerto for Violincello in A Minor, was performed by Leslie Parnas, and played without pause with its three movements co-ordinated by the main theme, which was a vigorous, full-voiced F major theme changing to a triumphant A major in the finale.

Leslie Parnas performed the concerto with an almost flawless craftsmanship. Every note was brilliantly executed with dexterous definition and apparent ease of intonation. The audience enthusiastically applauded through four curtain calls.

LESLIE PARNAS
Cellist

Leslie Parnas from St. Louis, won the Second Prize in the widely-publicized Tchaikowsky competition in Moscow in 1962. Educated at Curtis under Gregor Piatigorsky. At 23 he became principal cellist of the St. Louis Symphony.

HIGH FIDELITY
MUSICAL AMERICA
GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS.
MONTHLY 114,100

NOV 1966

115

MAGIC FLUTE, ALMOST ALL-AMERICAN

TANGLEWOOD REPORT

BY WARREN B. SYER

SATURDAY, August 6, was almost "All-American Night" at Tanglewood: seventeen of the eighteen solo singers in that evening's Magic Flute were native born. And a splendid occasion of music making it was. The voices were fresh and young, and Erich Leinsdorf conducted a performance both grand in concept and meticulous in detail — just right in spirit for Mozart's opera.

There was, however, a stumbling block. The singing was in German; the soloists' spoken narratives were eliminated, and in their place an original text in English (attributed to Leinsdorf) was spoken by Mac Morgan. While the idea of this connective skein between arias and ensembles may have seemed a good one in advance, it didn't turn out that way. Through no fault of Mr. Morgan (who indeed delivered some pretty awkward lines with a splendid dash and élan), the chief effect was an ungainly break in the musical flow quite out of step with the grace of the performance itself. I can't for the life of me imagine why this mixture was attempted, particularly since the BSO went to the trouble and expense of supplying the audience with German-English librettos. But to the music.

Shirley, Reardon

George Shirley was a first-rate Tamino. I've worried about the way he seemed to be pushing the voice in some of his more recent Met performances, but my fears were laid aside by the fine legato line of his Egyptian Prince. He could become our top Mozart tenor. John Reardon, I was delighted to note, did not twist his characterization of Papageno to the extent of dehumanizing it, as is so often done. (Though The Magic Flute is a work of fantasy, I've always felt the need for a bridge to the "real" in the characters of Tamino and Pamina, Papageno and Papagena, as opposed to the fantasy figures of the Queen of the Night, Monostatos, and Sarastro.) Reardon sings extremely well—a good, solid, even baritone (though not overwhelmingly powerful) throughout.

Beauty in the Berkshires

Beverly Sills, as Queen of the Night, displayed an admirable musical accuracy and a pleasant "zing" of sound in her ultrahigh work; she also looked magnificent. (This is as good a moment as any to speak of the extraordinary attractiveness of all the women in the cast. When they swept on stage for their curtain calls, it looked for all the world like a Berkshire version of the Miss America Pageant.) Judith Raskin's intelligent and artful Pamina was a joy from start to finish. Everything this artist sings is done with the best musical taste, and she never fails to achieve a stirring effect.

Ezio Flagello's beautiful cantabile instrument does not reach comfortably into the cruel lower regions of Sarastro's noble music—but then, whose does, or has? Very few indeed.

A Startling Trio

The Ladies-in-Waiting to the Queen of the Night were Jane Marsh, Joanna Simon, and Betyah Godfrey, and a sterling trio they were. Veronica Tyler, Miss Simon, and Miss Godfrey were the three Genii. This was surely casting of a sumptuous order, and it was a pleasure to hear these four ladies in their six roles demonstrate some beauties in Mozart's ensemble harmonies not often heard.

Nico Castel was a more-musical-than-usual Monostatos, though he fell short in the kind of astringent characterization appropriate to the part. Ara Berberian's rich bass was another better-than-average choice for The Orator; he sounded superb in combination with Robert Jones's tenor in the music of the Two Priests and the Men in Armor.

The crisp, incisive, and youthful sounds of the Tanglewood Choir more than made up in verve what it lacked in vocal weight. The singers were very well drilled and extremely precise, a quality I have noted before in choirs trained by Iva Dee Hiatt.

A nonmusical note. It is a mistake for the Boston Symphony management to put the demands of the television people ahead of the reasonable rights of the paying seat-holders. The distracting placement of TV lights and the blocking off of complete aisles (causing some aisle-seat-holders to scramble over eleven bodies) shows a misplaced sense of proportion. Delighted as we may be to see Tanglewood further publicized, it should not be at the expense of its audiences. But I don't wish to end on a sour note. This was a stirring Magic Flute, with superb casting (in which I suspect Leinsdorf had a strong hand), an unparalleled orchestra, and a distinguished chorus. A pity it couldn't have been recorded commercially.

At ease after Flute rehearsal: Leinsdorf, Raskin, Flagello, Shirley, Reardon, Sills.

November 1966

Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Circ. 77,235

AUG 28 1966

Airwave Topics

—By Fred Russell

Four programs taped in Geneva, Switzerland, following the close of the World Conference on Church and Society, held there under auspices of the World Council of Churches, will be presented by NBC television's "Frontiers of Faith" on successive Sundays starting Sept. 4 (1:30-2 p.m.). The September series of "Frontiers of Faith" rounds out 15 years of continuous weekly presentations of the NBC television religious program. ("Frontiers of Faith" is on view 24 times during the program's 52-week annual schedule in the Sunday 1:30-2 p.m. slot. The program began as a regular weekly feature Oct. 7, 1951, with the telecast of a devotional service in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, New York City, for "Frontiers of Faith.") Donald Barnhouse, religious-news commentator, is host on the four September programs, made by the Television Religious Program Unit of NBC News in cooperation with the National Council of Churches. The programs are discussions stemming from Conference developments.

The Conference, held July 12-26, dealt with, among other topics, the political and economic dynamics of "newly-awakened" peoples and with economic relations between "developed" and "developing" nations.

Participants in the four TV sessions come from five continents — Europe (including East Germany), North and South America, Asia and Africa — and represent the fields of religion, economics, sociology and politics.

An evaluation of the Conference — "Why a Conference on Church and Society?" — is the introductory telecast Sept. 4. Panelists are Janet Lacey, director of Christian Aid of the British Council of Churches, and M. M. Thomas of the Christian Institute for the Study of Religion and Society, Bangalore, India.

An Indian economist and an African lawyer discuss ways in which the Church helps or hinders fulfillment in "The Developing Nations" Sept. 11. They are S. L. Parmar, professor of economics at the University of Allahabad, India, and Professor Z. K. Matthews, Secretary for Africa, Refugee and World Service of the World Council of Churches.

Two young clergymen talk about "Theology and Ethics" Sept. 18. Both are under 35 and are said to represent the "excitement of youthful thinking in the Church." They are the Rev. A. H. van den Heuvel, Youth Department, World Council of Churches, and the Rev. Gonzalo Cardenas, of Colombia, South America, who is Executive Secretary, Latin American Presbyterian Cooperation Committee.

In the final session Sept. 25 two laymen speak from situations in which the churches are thought of as having little influence, but they speak of the persistence and effect of the Christian faith where they work. The participants in this program, "The Role of the Church," are Elizabeth Adler, Study Director, Evangelical Academy, East Germany, and Beyers Naude, Director, Christian Institute of South Africa.

Program Extended

The importance of a major concert performance at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Massachusetts prompted WQXR officials to extend the Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcast on Saturday, Sept. 10, 45 minutes longer than the initial two hours regularly set aside for this series. On that date, a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute" will be heard over WQXR from 7:07 to approximately 9:45 p.m.

This version of "The Magic Flute" is one of the highlights of this season's Berkshire Festival. The opera will be sung in German but the spoken German dialogue has been replaced with spoken English narration written for this performance by Erich Leinsdorf, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The narration will be delivered by the baritone Mac Morgan.

Soloists in this performance will be Judith Raskin, Anne Elgar and Jane Marsh, sopranos; Ara Berberian and Ezio Flagello, bassos, and tenor Nico Castel. The Tanglewood Choir will be heard with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Erich Leinsdorf. WQXR's Martin Bookspan will be the commentator.

Nine Guest Stars

Nine guest stars, including Carol Lawrence, Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom and Billy Daniels, join series star Ben Gazzara who, as Paul Bryan, seeks to regain six months lost to amnesia in "The Day Time Stopped," a drama starting the second season "Run for Your Life" Monday, Sept. 12 (in color, 10-11 p.m.) on Channel 4.

Appearing in various cameo roles are Paul Lucas, Sheree North, Anne Helm, John Ireland, Robert Strauss and John Kerr.

Bryan returns to San Francisco from Switzerland, where Dr. Werner (Lukas) pointed out that his six-month blackout was only partially due to a ski accident. Trying to find the real cause, Paul retraces his steps of the night he left his fiancee, Kate (Miss Lawrence), and set out to cram a lifetime into the 18 months doctors had given him to survive a mysterious ailment.

The search brings him to Molly (Miss Helm), Kate's sister, and then to Tiger (Slapsie Maxie), bartender for Georgio (Strauss), and eventually to club-owner Eddie (Daniels). His former law partner Alex (Kerr), is of little help and it is not until he finds the "Red Head" (Miss North) that the trail leads to Dr. Mason (Ireland), who solves Bryan's amnesia riddle.

116

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
AUG 11 1966

TANGLEWOOD

TANGLEWOOD
Friday — By R. H.

Friday evening, August 5, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony, led the Boston Orchestra at Tanglewood; and an excellent job he did of it, too. The dry musical snobbery of Leinsdorf's conducting of romantic works was replaced by a kind of melodic grandness that was highly appropriate to the nature of two of the three works that appeared on the program.

Saint - Saens's Concerto for Violoncello in A Minor is a dreadful piece of music and Leslie Parnas, the solo cellist, did wonders for it. If I may be allowed a coinage, he "de-voluptuated" this bravura work with remarkable sensibility.

The Schumann Symphony in D Minor, No. 4, judging from the reaction of the audience (one much larger than that of the preceding Friday), was what they had come all the way from Queens to hear. Shouts and cheers vied with the concluding chords; some enthusiastic patrons jumped the gun and cheered too soon, forgetting that it's never quite the end in these romantic works. But the symchords; some enthusiastic pa-phony was beautifully performed, convincing evidence that standards are every bit as high in Minnesota as here.

The first work of the program was Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet, Suite No. 2. Although I prefer Shakespeare's version, of the seven episodes of this work. I found the third "Friar Laurence," and the last "Romeo at Juliet's Grave," engaging — and dated.

The Week End Prelude, which I did not hear, consisted of Mozart songs sung by Phyllis Curtin, accompanied by Richard Woitach at the piano, and the Mozart Fantasia in F Minor for Organ (K. 608) performed by John Ferris.

Saturday — By A. C. S.

They gave a Mozart opera in concert form at Tanglewood Saturday evening, and if a sold-out house attests to the management, they will program another for next season. Opera is not new to Berkshire Festivals. In years past they have presented staged works in the theater and concert versions in the Shed, but none could have surpassed this performance of Mozart's Magic Flute.

George Shirley was excellent a wonderfully amusing Papageno; Anne Elgar was an eye-as Tamino; John Reardon made catching Papageno; and Mac Morgan tied things together as narrator. Beverly Sills, as Queen of the Night, has a fine voice but just barely scraped the high notes. On the other hand, Ezio Flagello's lowest notes, (and Mozart wrote some very low ones for Sarastro) were hardly audible. These tiny flaws could not detract from the overall excellence of the evening.

Judith Raskin appeared as Pamino. She has a voice of great beauty: rich, full, evenly controlled in all registers. Her singing of Du, also bist mein Brautigam was breath-taking. Then again, the entire production was a joy. The Three Ladies, the Three Geniii, the Priests, the chorus — too [illegible] to mention individually — all sang with distinction.

The guiding hand was that of Erich Leinsdorf, selecting the proper tempo, shaping the phrase. It was a pleasure to watch and a delight to hear.

Sunday — By E. M.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon to present a dramatic and wholly satisfying program of romantic music. The concert began at a maximum of intensity with Samuel Barber's Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance. The orchestra once again revealed its virtuosity in a striking performance, moving from the haunting and ethereal introspection of Medea's brooding to the wild, emotional passion of her dance.

Grant Johannesen then joined Mr. Skrowaczewski for the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The simplicity of the patterns and their variations, the almost exercise-like solos and their contrapuntal orchestral answers, and the necessity of playing with as well as above the orchestra seemed to be perfect for Mr. Johannesen's strength and confidence. Essentially joyous and uncomplicated, the concerto finally announces a melodic line in the last movement; here soloist and brass choirs merged in what amounted to musical glee, and the audience responded with an ovation.

Beethoven's Eroica was almost too much at this point, but the great opening Allegro and driving Scherzo reminded one once again of the incredible mastery of orchestration in this monumental symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 482-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
AUG 11 1966

YOUR WORLD OF OPERA

By WILLIAM D. MIRANDA

TANGLEWOOD'S MAGIC FLUTE

If it takes two incidents to establish frequency, it is beginning to look as though we might expect an opera to be performed at Tanglewood every year. Last year's Lohengrin was certainly a success and this year's Magic Flute, given last Saturday night, was even more so. This evidence of Mr. Leinsdorf's "not-so-controlled nostalgia" about opera is certainly a big bonus for Bostonians.

It goes pretty much without saying that Leinsdorf's pre-eminence in Mozart would give us an orchestral reading as bright as a jewel, as crisp as a raw carrot and as clean as a pan pipe. This surely was the case. Clarity, precision and briskness are great virtues in Mozart interpretation and in Magic Flute especially; witness the dullness of Klemperer's recent reading for Angel with its ponderous tempi. The elimination of the spoken dialogue for this occasion was a wise choice. Dialogue in a foreign language has never been popular with opera audiences. The substitution of narration written by Mr. Leinsdorf and so amusingly read by Mac Morgan was not good but everyone was generously provided with a libretto and this was no children's matinee. The music could have and did stand on its own merits.

The soloists chosen were superior in their parts to the usual choices for these roles at the Met. Replacing the ex-[illegible] diva Caballe, Judith Raskin was the finest Pamina this reviewer has ever heard. Tender, [illegible], perfect control both at top and bottom, coupled with incredible smoothness of production earned her the evening's best ovations. George Shirley Tamino wasn't far behind. The role is perfect for him as he has mastered leggiero legato at its most delicate and can still be forceful during the dramatic moments. Another exciting reading was that of John Reardon as the irrepressible Papageno. In the first aria he sounded a bit too refined, but that refinement stood him in good stead for the Bei mannern duet and he didn't stint tasteful humor. He proved that Papageno can be sung by a rich baritone if artistry is applied to keep the touch light. A dry voice is not a necessity for the birdman.

Several artists shone in lesser roles. Ara Berberian brought dignity and gravity to the role of the Speaker and Anne Elgar was a pert Papagena. Moscow-prize winner Jane Marsh lead the three ladies with authority. The other two were Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey who doubled as genii joined by Veronica Tyler for their second stint and all performing quite well. Robert Jones and Mr. Berberian were both priests and armored men.

About three artists I have reservations. Beverly Sills was certainly not at her best. The opening aria was exciting with her persuasive interpretation of the cavatina and forcefully exultant in the finale, but always a little hesitant. The second aria was bad, coming cold as it did without the preparatory dialogue. Miss Sills can and has sung a thrilling Queen of the Night. This wasn't it. Nico Castel's insistence on the ultimate in a humorous Monastatos was not to my taste at all. Taken seriously this character can be much more distinctive. Mr. Flagello's Sarastro was a disaster. Give him buffo or cantante parts and he excells, but with legato singing he is unsteady and with profunda non-existent. The bottom five notes came out like a voice from a faulty speaker and all his singing was as if done under duress and totally without support.

With two new Flute recordings in the catalogue it doesn't seem likely that this one will be committed to record. It could be a great set with Hines as Sarastro, Sills on a better night and the use of English instead of the original German. Such a recording would be a fine addition to the catalogue, especially for R.C.A., but why should we be so lucky.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 3,587
AUG 11 1966

TANGLEWOOD

TANGLEWOOD
Friday — By R. H.

Friday evening, August 5, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony, led the Boston Orchestra at Tanglewood; and an excellent job he did of it, too. The dry musical snobbery of Leinsdorf's conducting of romantic works was replaced by a kind of melodic grandness that was highly appropriate to the nature of two of the three works that appeared on the program.

Saint - Saens's Concerto for Violoncello in A Minor is a dreadful piece of music; and Leslie Parnas, the solo cellist, did wonders for it. If I may be allowed a coinage, he "de-voluptuated" this bravura work with remarkable sensibility.

The Schumann Symphony in D Minor, No. 4, judging from the reaction of the audience (one much larger than that of the preceding Friday), was what they had come all the way from Queens to hear. Shouts and cheers vied with the concluding chords; some enthusiastic patrons jumped the gun and cheered too soon, forgetting that it's never quite the end in these romantic works. But the symchords; some enthusiastic paphony was beautifully performed, convincing evidence that standards are every bit as high in Minnesota as here.

The first work of the program was Prokofiev's Romeo and Juliet, Suite No. 2. Although I prefer Shakespeare's version, of the seven episodes of this work. I found the third, "Friar Laurence," and the last, "Romeo at Juliet's Grave," engaging — and dated.

The Week End Prelude, which I did not hear, consisted of Mozart songs sung by Phyllis Curtin, accompanied by Richard Woitach at the piano, and the Mozart Fantasia in F Minor for Organ (K. 608), performed by John Ferris.

Saturday — By A. C. S.

They gave a Mozart opera in concert form at Tanglewood Saturday evening, and, if a sold-out house appeals to the management, they will program another for next season. Opera is not new to Berkshire Festivals. In years past they have presented staged works in the theater and concert versions in the Shed, but none could have surpassed this performance of Mozart's Magic Flute.

George Shirley was excellent a wonderfully amusing Papageno; Anne Elgar was an eye-as Tamino; John Reardon made catching Papagena; and Mac Morgan tied things together as narrator. Beverly Sills, as Queen of the Night, has a fine voice but just barely scraped the high notes. On the other hand, Ezio Flagello's lowest notes, (and Mozart wrote some very low ones for Sarastro) were hardly audible. These tiny flaws could not detract from the overall excellence of the evening.

Judith Raskin appeared as Pamino. She has a voice of great beauty; rich, full, evenly controlled in all registers. Her singing of Du also bist mein Brautigam was breath-taking. Then again, the entire production was a joy. The Three Ladies, the Three Genii, the Priests, the chorus — too many to mention individually — all sang with distinction.

The guiding hand was that of Erich Leinsdorf, selecting the proper tempo, shaping the phrase. It was a pleasure to watch and a delight to hear.

Sunday — By E. M.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon to present a dramatic and wholly satisfying program of romantic music. The concert began at a maximum of intensity with Samuel Barber's Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance. The orchestra once again revealed its virtuosity in a striking performance, moving from the haunting and ethereal introspection of Medea's brooding to the wild, emotional passion of her dance.

Grant Johannesen then joined Mr. Skrowaczewski for the Saint-Saens Piano Concerto No. 4. The simplicity of the patterns and their variations, the almost exercise-like solos and their contrapuntal orchestral answers, and the necessity of playing with as well as above the orchestra seemed to be perfect for Mr. Johannesen's strength and confidence. Essentially joyous and uncomplicated, the concerto finally announces a melodic line in the last movement; here soloist and brass choirs merged in what amounted to musical glee, and the audience responded with an ovation.

Beethoven's Eroica was almost too much at this point, but the great opening Allegro and driving Scherzo reminded one once again of the incredible mastery of orchestration in this monumental symphony.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200
Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 35,304
AUG 11 1966

YOUR WORLD OF OPERA

By WILLIAM D. MIRANDA

TANGLEWOOD'S MAGIC FLUTE

If it takes two incidents to establish frequency, it is beginning to look as though we might expect an opera to be performed at Tanglewood every year. Last year's Lohengrin was certainly a success and this year's Magic Flute, given last Saturday night, was even more so. This evidence of Mr. Leinsdorf's "not-so-controlled nostalgia" about opera is certainly a big bonus for Bostonians.

It goes pretty much without saying that Leinsdorf's preeminence in Mozart would give us an orchestral reading as bright as a jewel, as crisp as a raw carrot and as clean as a pan pipe. This surely was the case. Clarity, precision and briskness are great virtues in Mozart interpretation and in Magic Flute especially; witness the dullness of Klemperer's recent reading for Angel with its ponderous tempi. The elimination of the spoken dialogue for this occasion was a wise choice. Dialogue in a foreign language has never been popular with opera audiences. The substitution of narration written by Mr. Leinsdorf and so amusingly read by Mac Morgan was not a good idea. Everyone was generously provided with a libretto and this was no children's matinee. The music could have and did stand on its own merits.

The soloists chosen were superior in their parts to the usual choices for these roles at the Met. Replacing the expecting Spanish diva Caballe Judith Raskin was the finest Pamina this reviewer has ever heard. Tenderness, pathos, perfect control both at top and bottom, coupled with incredible smoothness of production earned her the evening's best ovations. George Shirley's Tamino wasn't far behind. The role is perfect for him as he has mastered leggiero legato at its most delicate and can still be forceful during the dramatic moments. Another exciting reading was that of John Reardon as the irrepressible Papageno. In the first aria he sounded a bit too refined, but that refinement stood him in good stead for the Bei mannern duet and he didn't stint tasteful humor. He proved that Papageno can be sung by a rich baritone if artistry is applied to keep the touch light. A dry voice is not a necessity for the birdman.

Several artists shone in lesser roles. Ara Berberian brought dignity and gravity to the role of the Speaker and Anne Elgar was a pert Papagena. Moscow-prize winner Jane Marsh lead the three ladies with authority. The other two were Joanna Simon and Batyah Godfrey who doubled as genii joined by Veronica Tyler for their second stint and all performing quite well. Robert Jones and Mr. Berberian were both priests and armored men.

About three artists I have reservations. Beverly Sills was certainly not at her best. The opening aria was exciting with her persuasive interpretation of the cavatina and forcefully exultant in the finale, but always a little hesitant. The second aria was bad, coming cold as it did without the preparatory dialogue. Miss Sills can and has sung a thrilling Queen of the Night. This wasn't it. Nico Castel's insistence on the ultimate in a humorous Monastatos was not to my taste at all. Taken seriously this character can be much more distinctive. Mr. Flagello's Sarastro was a disaster. Give him buffo or cantante parts and he excells, but with legato singing he is unsteady and with profundo non-existent. The bottom five notes came out like a buzz from a faulty speaker and all his singing was as if done under duress and totally without support.

With two new Flute recordings in the catalogue it doesn't seem likely that this one will be committed to record. It could be a great set with Hines as Sarastro, Sills on a better night and the use of English instead of the original German. Such a recording would be a fine addition to the catelogue, especially for R.C.A., but why should we be so lucky.

SEVENTH WEEK - AUGUST 12, 13 AND 14

117

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099

AUG 7 1966

Tanglewood Offers 4 Prize Winners

LENOX — The seventh weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at its summer home, Tanglewood, will feature prize winners of the 1966 Tchaikovsky Music Competition.

Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the voice contest who has appeared on two previous occasions this summer at Tanglewood, and Stephen Kates, second prize winner in the cello contest, will perform at Tanglewood on Saturday.

Sunday afternoon the second prize winners in the violin and piano competitions, Masuko Ushioda of Japan and the American pianist Misha Dichter, will be soloists with Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Sixten Erhling, music director of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, will be guest conductor at Friday's Berkshire Festival concert.

Mr. Ehrling, who makes his Tanglewood debut at the Friday concert, will conduct the Symphony No. 1 by Jean Sibelius and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4.

Erich Leinsdorf will begin Saturday evening's program with Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis, and then present cellist Stephen Kates, who will perform the Shostakovich Cello Concerto. After the intermission Jane Marsh will perform Lisa's Scene and Arioso from Tchaikovsky's "The Queen of Spades." Miss Marsh will also be heard in Verdi's Introduction, Willow Song, and Ave Maria from "Otello." Mr. Leinsdorf will close the concert with Dawn and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

NEXT SUNDAY afternoon the concert will begin with two works played by the orchestra, the Prelude to Ace III of Wagner's "Lohengrin" and Brahms' Symphony No. 1. Masuko Ushioda will be heard in Prokofiev's Violin Concerto No. 2. Prior to the Tchaikovsky Piano Concerto No. 1, played by Misha Dichter, Mr. Leindorf will conduct "Little Blue Devil" and "The Twittering Machine" from Gunther Schuller's Seven Studies on Themes of Paul Klee.

Next Sunday afternoon's complete concert will be televised live and in color from Tanglewood by the National Broadcasting Company. This will mark the first occasion that a full length concert has been televised in color from the Berkshire Festival.

Friday evening's Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. will begin the Tchaikovsky weekend, with Paul Hersh, Peter Marsh and Donald McCall performing the Trio for Piano, Violin and Cello.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, August 7, 1966

Next Saturday, August 13, the Tanglewood audience will get to hear Jane Marsh, the lovely twenty-four year old California soprano who took first prize in the voice competition at Moscow's Third International Tchaikovsky Competition.

All reports indicate Miss Marsh is not only an earful but an eyeful as well. RCA Victor has just announced they have signed her to an exclusive contract, so her recording debut can't be far off.

It must be with considerable pride that Leinsdorf will present her at Tanglewood, for he gave the now famous young singer her first professional appearance when he presented her in the Beethoven Ninth in Boston last season.

For her Tanglewood debut, Miss Marsh has chosen some of the music she sang in the Tchaikovsky finals, the "Willow Song" and "Prayer" from Verdi's OTELLO. These selections are not easy to sing satisfactorily outside the frame of the opera for the are not display pieces as such. They lack the kind of socko dramatics to put them across and seriously challenge the artistic and musical mettle of a singer.

DAYTON DAILY NEWS
DAYTON, OHIO

JUL 23 1966

PRIZE WINNERS

Soloists Featured

NEW YORK, July 23—Two winners of the Third International Tchaikovsky competition, held last month in Moscow, will appear as soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "An Afternoon at Tanglewood," an NBC color special Aug. 14.

They are Misha Dichter, a 20-year-old pianist from Beverly Hills, Calif., and Miss Masuko Yushioda, a 19-year-old violinist from Japan.

Dichter will be soloist with the orchestra in Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 in B-flat, and Miss Yushioda will be soloist with the orchestra in Prokofiev's Violin Concerto No. 2 in G. The balance of the concert will be made up of the prelude to act 3 of Wagner's "Lohengrin," Brahms's Symphony No. 1, and Ravel's "Alborada del Gracioso."

Visitors Guidepost
BOSTON, Mass.
Bi-Weekly

AUG 5 1966

Tanglewood Festival

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox continues through Aug. 21. Jane Marsh, who won first prize in the Tchaikovsky competition, will perform in a concert version of "The Magic Flute" by Mozart on Aug. 6 and again on Aug. 13. Also performing on Aug. 13 will be Stephen Kates, second prize winner in the Tchaikovsky cello competition. Two other prize winners in Moscow, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist and second prize winner, and 20-year-old Misha Dichter, second prize winner in the piano competition, will be heard Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14.

The Aug. 5-7 program includes: Friday night, Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet," second suite, Saint-Saens Cello Concerto, and Schumann's Symphony No. 4; Saturday night, Mozart's "The Magic Flute"; and Sunday afternoon, Barber's Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance; Saint-Saen's Piano Concerto No. 4 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

The Aug. 12-14 program includes: Friday, 9 p.m., Sibelius' Symphony No. 1 and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4; Saturday at 8 p.m., Hindemith's Mathis der Maler, Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations and Piano Concerto; and Sunday, Prokofiev's Symphony No. 3, Tchaikovsky's Aria, and Violin concerto.

SCHENECTADY UNION STAR
Wednesday, July 13, 1966

Tchaikovsky Victor to Sing at Tanglewood

Jane Marsh, who returned to this country Monday after winning a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Competition, will make her first concert appearance in the United States at the Berkshire Festival on July 24. For that concert she will join Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra with whom she made her American professional debut last autumn in Symphony Hall, Boston.

As the only American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Music Contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, Miss Marsh received wide acclaim in the Soviet Union in concerts immediately after the competition. For the July 24 program at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home, Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., the 24-year-old soprano will sing two Tchaikovsky arias: Lisa's Scene and Arioso from "Pique Dame" and the Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin."

Veronica Tyler, second prize winner in Moscow, and Simon Estes, recipient of third prize, will also be heard at the July 24 Tanglewood concert. Miss Tyler will sing 'Et incarnatus est' from Mozart's Mass in C minor, and Mrs. Estes will be heard in King Philipp's aria from Verdi's "Don Carlo."

Miss Marsh will sing on two other occasions this summer with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. On August 6 she performs in a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," an appearance scheduled prior to her departure for Moscow, and again on August 13 she will be heard in a program which will also include Stephen Kates, second prize winner in the Tchaikovsky cello competition. Two other prize winners in Moscow, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist and second prize winner, and 20-year-old Misha Dichter, second prize in the piano competition, will be heard on, Sunday afternoon August 14. These engagements fulfill the invitation extended several months ago by the Orchestra to the Moscow Competition officials for appearances at Tanglewood by the prize winner. Messrs. Dichter and Kates were the highest ranking Americans in their respective competitions.

Looking Ahead!

By Linda A. Winslow

A big week for TV sports fans gets off to a flying start today when NBC presents a special telecast, via Early Bird satellite, of the final, deciding game in the World Cup soccer championship tournament. The culmination of many soccer matches held throughout the world through sectional playoffs, the game will be televised from Wembley Stadium in London, England, beginning at noon.

* * * *

Friday at 9 p.m., an ABC one-hour special takes a creative look at one week in the life of Grand Prix racing star Jim Clark. The unusual photographic special will center around the week of Clark's spectacular triumph in the Grand Prix of Germany, at the Nurburgring last year, a victory which clinched the world's driving championship for him. The program will immediately precede ABC's exclusive coverage of the College All-Star football game in Chicago.

* * * *

The first nationwide TV performance of Pablo Casals' religious oratorio "El Pessebre" will be conducted by the composer Friday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 17. The two-hour prgram was taped at an actual concert given in the hall of the United Nations General Assembly in 1963, marking the 18th anniversary of the creation of the UN.

* * * *

. . . and further ahead!

Two performers familiar to followers of the arts in this area will be spotlighted on ABC next season. Jane Marsh, winner of the recent Tchaikovsky international music contest in Moscow, who will be making her second Tanglewood appearance of the summer next Sunday, will make her television debut on the fall premiere of "The Hollywood Palace." One of America's foremost ballet stars, Edward Villella, who appeared at Jacob's Pillow earlier this season, has been cast in the role of Harry Beaton in ABC's 90-minute color production of "Brigadoon," scheduled for fall presentation by the network.

* * * *

NBC has announced that veteran actress Agnes Moorehead will replace the ailing Bette Davis in the role of the Red Queen in the network's color special, "Alice Through the Looking Glass." Miss Moorehead joins a cast of principals that includes Jimmy Durante as Humpty Dumpty, Nanette Fabray as the White Queen, Dick and Tom Smothers as Tweedledum and Tweedledee and Judi Rolin as Alice. The program will be presented in November.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404

JUL 30 1966

The New Haven Register
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
D. 102,218 SUN. 115,186

JUL 24 1966

Moscow Music Winners In Tanglewood Concert

Two winners of the Third International Tchaikovsky Competition, held last month in Moscow, will appear as soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "An Afternoon at Tanglewood," an NBC News color special on the NBC Television Network Sunday, Aug. 14 (2:30-5 p.m. NYT).

They are Misha Dichter, a 20-year-old pianist from Beverly Hills, Calif., and Miss Masuko Yushioda, a 19-year-old violinist from Japan. The two were among 240 young musicians from 37 countries who entered the month-long contest in hopes of launching professional careers with victories in the world-famous competition.

Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the 2½-hour Aug. 14 concert, which will be colorcast live direct from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, the orchestra's permanent Summer home at Lenox, Mass.

Dichter will be soloist with the orchestra in Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 in B-flat, and Miss Yushioda will be soloist with the orchestra in Prokofiev's Violin Concerto No. 2 in G. The balance of the concert will be made up of the Prelude to Act 3 of Wagner's "Lohengrin," Brahms'c Symphony No. 1, and Ravel's "Alborada del Gracioso."

SEVENTH WEEK - AUGUST 12, 13 AND 14

117

...t far behind. The ...ect for him as he ...leggiero legato at ...icate and can still ...during the dramatic ...another exciting ...s that of John ...the irrepressible ...in the first aria he ...bit too refined, but ...ent stood him in ...the Bei mannern ...didn't stint taste- ...He proved that ...be sung by a ...if artistry is ap- ...the touch light. ...is not a necessity ...man.

...ists shone in less- ...Berberian brought ...gravity to the role ...er and Anne Elgar ...Papagena. Moscow- ...Jane Marsh lead ...with authority. ...were Joanna ...Batyah Godfrey ...genii joined by ...for their second ...performing quite ...Jones and Mr. ...both priests ...men.

...artists I have ...Beverly Sills was ...at her best. The ...exciting with ...interpretation ...and forcefully ...finale, but al- ...hesitant. The sec- ...bad, coming cold ...the preparа- ...Miss Sills can ...thrilling Queen ...This wasn't it. ...insistence on the ...humorous Mon- ...to my taste at ...this char- ...much more dis- ...Rigello's Saras- ...er. Give him ...parts and he ...legato singing ...and with pro- ...ent. The bot- ...came out like a ...speaker and ...was as if done ...totally with-

...Flute record- ...logue it doesn't ...this one will ...to record. It ...set with ...Sills on a ...the use of ...the original ...recording ...dition to the ...specially for ...should we be

England Newsclip Agency Inc.
2078, Boston 02106 • 742-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 280,099

AUG 7 1966

Tanglewood Offers 4 Prize Winners

LENOX — The seventh weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at its summer home, Tanglewood, will feature prize winners of the 1966 Tchaikovsky Music Competition.

Jane Marsh, first prize winner in the voice contest who has appeared on two previous occasions this summer at Tanglewood, and Stephen Kates, second prize winner in the cello contest, will perform at Tanglewood on Saturday.

Sunday afternoon the second prize winners in the violin and piano competitions, Masuko Ushioda of Japan and the American pianist Misha Dichter, will be soloists with Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Sixten Erhling, music director of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, will be guest conductor at Friday's Berkshire Festival concert.

Mr. Ehrling, who makes his Tanglewood debut at the Friday concert, will conduct the Symphony No. 1 by Jean Sibelius and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4.

Erich Leinsdorf will begin Saturday evening's program with Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis, and then present cellist Stephen Kates, who will perform the Shostakovich Cello Concerto. After the intermission Jane Marsh will perform Lisa's Scene and Arioso from Tchaikovsky's "The Queen of Spades." Miss Marsh will also be heard in Verdi's Introduction, Willow Song, and Ave Maria from "Otello." Mr. Leinsdorf will close the concert with Dawn and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

NEXT SUNDAY afternoon the concert will begin with two works played by the orchestra, the Prelude to Ace III of Wagner's "Lohengrin" and Brahms' Symphony No. 1. Masuko Ushioda will be heard in Prokofiev's Violin Concerto No. 2. Prior to the Tchaikovsky Piano Concerto No. 1, played by Misha Dichter, Mr. Leindorf will conduct "Little Blue Devil" and "The Twittering Machine" from Gunther Schuller's Seven Studies on Themes of Paul Klee.

Next Sunday afternoon's complete concert will be televised live and in color from Tanglewood by the National Broadcasting Company. This will mark the first occasion that a full length concert has been televised in color from the Berkshire Festival.

Friday evening's Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. will begin the Tchaikovsky weekend, with Paul Hersh, Peter Marsh and Donald McCall performing the Trio for Piano, Violin and Cello.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Sunday, August

Next Saturday, August 13, the Tanglewood audience will get to hear Jane Marsh, the lovely twenty-four year old California soprano who took first prize in the voice competition at Moscow's Third International Tchaikovsky Competition.

All reports indicate Miss Marsh is not only an earful but an eyeful as well. RCA Victor has just announced they have signed her to an exclusive contract, so her recording debut can't be far off.

It must be with considerable pride that Leinsdorf will present her at Tanglewood, for he gave the now famous young singer her first professional appearance when he presented her in the Beethoven Ninth in Boston last season.

For her Tanglewood debut, Miss Marsh has chosen some of the music she sang in the Tchaikovsky finals, the "Willow Song" and "Prayer" from Verdi's OTELLO. These selections are not easy to sing satisfactorily outside the frame of the opera for the are not display pieces as such. They lack the kind of socko dramatics to put them across and seriously challenge the artistic and musical mettle of a singer.

DAYTON DAILY NEWS

JUL 23 1966

PRIZE WINNERS

Soloists Featured

NEW YORK, July 23—Two winners of the Third International Tchaikovsky competition, held last month in Moscow, will appear as soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "An Afternoon at Tanglewood," an NBC color special Aug. 14.

They are Misha Dichter, a 20-year-old pianist from Beverly Hills, Calif., and Miss Masuko Yushioda, a 19-year-old violinist from Japan.

Dichter will be soloist with the orchestra in Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 in B-flat, and Miss Yushioda will be soloist with the orchestra in Prokofiev's Violin Concerto No. 2 in G. The balance of the concert will be made up of the prelude to act 3 of Wagner's "Lohengrin," Brahms's Symphony No. 1, and Ravel's "Alborada del Gracioso."

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,404
JUL 30 1966

Visitors Guidepost
BOSTON, Mass.
Bi-Weekly

AUG 5 1966

Tanglewood Festival

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox continues through Aug. 21. Jane Marsh, who won first prize in the Tchaikovsky competition, will perform in a concert version of "The Magic Flute" by Mozart on Aug. 6 and again on Aug. 13. Also performing on Aug. 13 will be Stephen Kates, second prize winner in the Tchaikovsky cello competition. Two other prize winners in Moscow, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist and second prize winner, and 20-year-old Misha Dichter, second prize winner in the piano competition, will be heard Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14.

The Aug. 5-7 program includes: Friday night, Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet," second suite, Saint-Saens Cello Concerto, and Schumann's Symphony No. 4; Saturday night, Mozart's "The Magic Flute"; and Sunday afternoon, Barber's Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance; Saint-Saen's Piano Concerto No. 4 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

The Aug. 12-14 program includes: Friday, 9 p.m., Sibelius' Symphony No. 1 and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4; Saturday at 8 p.m., Hindemith's Mathis der Maler, Tchaikovsky's Rococo Variations and Piano Concerto; and Sunday, Prokofiev's Symphony No. 3, Tchaikovsky's Aria, and Violin concerto.

SCHENECTADY UNION STAR
Wednesday, July 13

Tchaikovsky Victor to Sing at Tanglewood

Jane Marsh, who returned to this country Monday after winning a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Competition, will make her first concert appearance in the United States at the Berkshire Festival on July 24. For that concert she will join Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra with whom she made her American professional debut last autumn in Symphony Hall, Boston.

As the only American to win a first prize in the Tchaikovsky Music Contest since Van Cliburn in 1958, Miss Marsh received wide acclaim in the Soviet Union in concerts immediately after the competition. For the July 24 program at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home, Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., the 24-year-old soprano will sing two Tchaikovsky arias: Lisa's Scene and Arioso from "Pique Dame" and the Letter Scene from "Eugene Onegin."

Veronica Tyler, second prize winner in Moscow, and Simon Estes, recipient of third prize, will also be heard at the July 24 Tanglewood concert. Miss Tyler will sing 'Et incarnatus est' from Mozart's Mass in C minor, and Mrs. Estes will be heard in King Philipp's aria from Verdi's "Don Carlo."

Miss Marsh will sing on two other occasions this summer with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. On August 6 she performs in a concert version of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," an appearance scheduled prior to her departure for Moscow, and again on August 13 she will be heard in a program which will also include Stephen Kates, second prize winner in the Tchaikovsky cello competition. Two other prize winners in Moscow, Masuko Ushioda, young Japanese violinist and second prize winner, and 20-year-old Misha Dichter, second prize in the piano competition, will be heard on, Sunday afternoon August 14. These engagements fulfill the invitation extended several months ago by the Orchestra to the Moscow Competition officials for appearances at Tanglewood by the prize winner. Messrs. Dichter and Kates were the highest ranking Americans in their respective competitions.

Looking Ahead!

By Linda A. Winslow

A big week for TV sports fans gets off to a flying start today when NBC presents a special telecast, via Early Bird satellite, of the final, deciding game in the World Cup soccer championship tournament. The culmination of many soccer matches held throughout the world through sectional playoffs, the game will be televised from Wembley Stadium in London, England, beginning at noon.

* * * *

Friday at 9 p.m., an ABC one-hour special takes a creative look at one week in the life of Grand Prix racing star Jim Clark. The unusual photographic special will center around the week of Clark's spectacular triumph in the Grand Prix of Germany, at the Nurburgring last year, a victory which clinched the world's driving championship for him. The program will immediately precede ABC's exclusive coverage of the College All-Star football game in Chicago.

* * * *

The first nationwide TV performance of Pablo Casals' religious oratorio "El Pessebre" will be conducted by the composer Friday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 17. The two-hour prgram was taped at an actual concert given in the hall of the United Nations General Assembly in 1963, marking the 18th anniversary of the creation of the UN.

* * * *

. . . and further ahead!

Two performers familiar to followers of the arts in this area will be spotlighted on ABC next season. Jane Marsh, winner of the recent Tchaikovsky international music contest in Moscow, who will be making her second Tanglewood appearance of the summer next Sunday, will make her television debut on the fall premiere of "The Hollywood Palace." One of America's foremost ballet stars, Edward Villella, who appeared at Jacob's Pillow earlier this season, has been cast in the role of Harry Beaton in ABC's 90-minute color production of "Brigadoon," scheduled for fall presentation by the network.

* * * *

NBC has announced that veteran actress Agnes Moorehead will replace the ailing Bette Davis in the role of the Red Queen in the network's color special, "Alice Through the Looking Glass." Miss Moorehead joins a cast of principals that includes Jimmy Durante as Humpty Dumpty, Nanette Fabray as the White Queen, Dick and Tom Smothers as Tweedledum and Tweedledee and Judi Rolin as Alice. The program will be presented in November.

The New Haven Register
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
D. 102,218 SUN. 115,186

JUL 24 1966

Moscow Music Winners In Tanglewood Concert

Two winners of the Third International Tchaikovsky Competition, held last month in Moscow, will appear as soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "An Afternoon at Tanglewood," an NBC News color special on the NBC Television Network Sunday, Aug. 14 (2:30-5 p.m. NYT).

They are Misha Dichter, a 20-year-old pianist from Beverly Hills, Calif., and Miss Masuko Yushioda, a 19-year-old violinist from Japan. The two were among 240 young musicians from 37 countries who entered the month-long contest in hopes of launching professional careers with victories in the world-famous competition.

Erich Leinsdorf, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the 2½-hour Aug. 14 concert, which will be colorcast live direct from the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, the orchestra's permanent Summer home at Lenox, Mass.

Dichter will be soloist with the orchestra in Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 in B-flat, and Miss Yushioda will be soloist with the orchestra in Prokofiev's Violin Concerto No. 2 in G. The balance of the concert will be made up of the Prelude to Act 3 of Wagner's "Lohengrin," Brahms'c Symphony No. 1, and Ravel's "Alborada del Gracioso."

118

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 532,600
AUG 7 1966

Tchaikovsky Competition Winners at Tanglewood

Prize winners from the 1966 Tchaikovsky Music Competition in Moscow will perform during the weekend's concerts at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood. They will be accompanied by the Boston Symphony, Erich Leinsdorf conducting.

The orchestra's invitation for the Tanglewood concerts originally had been extended to the winner in each division. When the Russians declined to send the contestants who took first in piano, violin, cello and male voice, the B.S.O. invited the runnersup.

Next Sunday's concert will be televised live and in color by NBC. Arias Saturday by soprano Jane Marsh will be recorded by RCA Victor.

Miss Marsh, first prize winner in the women's voice contest, who has appeared on two previous occasions this Summer at Tanglewood, and Stephen Kates, second prize winner in the cello contest, will perform at Tanglewood on Saturday. Next Sunday afternoon the second prize winners in the violin and piano competitions, Masuko Ushioda of Japan and the American pianist Misha Dichter, will be soloists with Erich Leinsdorf and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Sixten Ehrling, music director of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, will be guest conductor at Friday's Berkshire Festival concert.

Ehrling, who makes his Tanglewood debut at the Friday concert, will conduct two well known symphonies: Symphony No. 1 by Jean Sibelius to be followed by Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4.

Leinsdorf will begin Saturday evening's program with Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphosis, and then present to the Tanglewood audience cellist Stephen Kates, who will perform the Shostakovitch Cello Concert. After the intermission Jane Marsh will join the orchestra for a performance of Lisa's Scene and Arioso from Tchaikovsky's "The Queen of Spades." Miss Marsh will also be heard in Verdi's Introduction, Willow Song, and Ave Maria from "Otello." Leinsdorf will close the concert with Dawn and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from "Gotterdammerung."

On Sunday afternoon the concert will begin with two works played by the orchestra, the Prelude to Act III of Wagner's "Lohengrin" and Brahms' Symphony No. 1. Leinsdorf will then bring to the Music Shed stage Miss Ushioda, who will be heard in Prokofiev's Violin Concerto No. 2. Prior to the Tchaikovsky Piano Concerto No. 1, played by Misha Dichter, Leinsdorf will conduct "Little Blue Devil" and "The Twittering Machine" from Gunther Schuller's Seven Studies on Themes of Paul Klee.

Friday evening's Week-end Prelude at 7 p.m. will begin the Tchaikovsky weekend, with Paul Hersh, Peter Marsh and Donald McCall performing the Russian composer's Trio for Piano, Violin and Cello.

An innovation at this Summer's Festival, the Week-end Preludes have proved to be highly popular with Tanglewood patrons. The Preludes, provided at no extra cost to those holding tickets to the Friday Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts, have been attended each Friday by audiences of more than 2500 people.

The Lenox Quartet will give the sixth program in the Berkshire Festival Chamber Music series Tuesday evening in the theater. Formed in Lenox following several Summers of participation in various Berkshire Music Center activities, the quartet consists of Peter Marsh and Delmar Pettys, violins; Paul Hersh, viola, and Donald McCall, cello. Their program Tuesday includes Haydn's Quartet in G minor, Op. 20, No. 3; Quartet No. 5 by Bartok; Beethoven's Quartet in E minor, Op. 59, No. 2.

On Wednesday, the gala evening benefit program for the Berkshire Music Center will take place, beginning at 3:30 p.m., with continuous performances by the members of the Berkshire Music Center. At 8 there will be a gala concert in the Music Shed with the Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras, conducted by Erich Leinsdorf and Aaron Copland, with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy narrating Copland's Lincoln Portrait under the composer's direction.

